FROM the Denver branch of the Fox Film Corporation word comes to William Fox, the president of the concern, that last week on Curtis street, Denver's Great White Way, wherever one turned could be seen electric light signs and banners flashing the name of Theda Bara, "the vampire woman."

"Vampire week in Denver," is the way Field Carmichael, the manager of the Denver branch, heads his report. The Colonial, the Plaza and the Iris theatres are all playing William Fox features in which Theda Bara is starred.

The Colonial is playing a seven-days' return engagement of "A Fool There Was," and turning people away. One block down the street the big Iris theatre is playing "The Clemenceau Case" in which Miss Bara plays the star vampire part of Iza, and on the opening day, which was Saturday, Mr. Carmichael reports that the Iris was compelled to keep its doors open till ten minutes to one on Sunday morning in order to accommodate a crowd of eight hundred people who were standing outside at a quarter to twelve and who refused to leave until they had been admitted to the theatre to see "The Clemenceau Case."

A very clever advertising idea was made use of by DeWitt Weber, the wide-awake manager of the Iris, to boom business for "The Clemenceau Case." He sent out letters to every woman who had seen "A Fool There Was" and who had expressed a detestation for the Vampire of that picture advising her that, in "The Clemenceau Case," she could accomplish her expressed desire of seeing the Vampire Woman come to a terrible end. Undoubtedly this novel scheme worked well, for Mr. Weber reports greatly increased business at increased prices for "The Clemenceau Case."

Directly across the street from the Iris is the Plaza theatre where Manager Erb, who, not to be outdone by his brother exhibitors, is making a great display of Nance O'Neil in "Kreutzer Sonata," and featuring Miss Bara in support of the great emotional actress. "A Fool There Was," has run for a total of nineteen days at the Colonial theatre, including the return engagement. This is the longest run ever accorded a picture in Denver by more than twelve days.

Mr. Carmichael adds that an angry patron of the Iris theatre stood in front of it during the "stand out" on Saturday night and harangued the crowd to the effect that he "didn't like the theatre, because one could never get in the place."

Horsley Will Make Animal Pictures May 10

Four Companies Are to Begin Work Under the General Direction of Captain Jack Bonavita—Twelve V-Shaped Arenas Almost Ready

Los Angeles, April 25.

DAVID HORSLEY, Los Angeles-New York City commuter, is now using his ticket for the thirteenth continental trip made during the past ten months, in order that he may personally supervise the completion of his new Duplex double exposure camera, and aid his co-workers in having it ready for use at the Horsley MinA studio at Los Angeles by the early part of May, when the first motion pictures of this brand will be made here.

Mr. Horsley departed for the releasing metropolis Sunday after making all arrangements for the completion of the studio in connection with the Bostock animal jungle at Washington and Main streets.

The plans for the studio have all been made under the supervision of Mr. Horsley.

The stage will have a floor space of 70x170 feet, with structural steel diffusion supports, and canvas roof which may be rolled or unrolled at a minute's notice.

For the making of animal pictures there will be twelve V-shaped arenas, four of which will be 120 feet deep and eight 70 feet deep. Different sets will be erected in each with foliage grown in connection with each, and all will be maintained permanently.

This feature alone Mr. Horsley believes will add materially to the cutting down of lost time caused by waiting for settings to be changed, as is necessary where but one arena is maintained.

It is now planned that actual production will be commenced not later than May 10, and Mr. Horsley has announced that Milton H. Fahrney has been engaged for the position of director general of the producing plant, supervising the making of all exteriors and interiors where animals are not used.

Captain Jack Bonavita, who was induced to sell his animal show and take charge of the training of the Bostock animals for Mr. Horsley immediately following the purchase, will be in charge of the making of all animal scenes.

Two reasons are given by Mr. Horsley for making this division of the producing work: One is that it will protect the players and trainers from taking unnecessary risks when urged to do so by thoughtless directors, and second, that it will enable the producers to get the best results, as the trainer is in far better position to know what the animals can do.

Captain Bonavita is one of the best known trainers of the world, and has worked in arenas with as many as twenty-seven lions in an act at one time. At the present time the animals are being given special training for work that will equip them for picture scenes.

One has already been taught to feign death when a gun is shot, which will eliminate the expense of killing a lion every time the script calls for such a scene, and thus cut off the big expense for animal pictures! Another lion is now educated to pick up a man by his clothing and carry him out of the scene.

Four companies will begin work as soon as the studios are completed, but no announcement has been made as to who the directors will be or the personnel of the stock company.

One company will make one-reel comedies and the other three three-reel dramas.

In addition to the work on the producing studios, a number of additions are being added to the Zoo attractions. An airdome is being built where a five-reel program of one-reel subjects will be given nightly, and alongside of this will be a large structure resembling a barn where dancing will be made the principal attraction.

QUEBEC WANTS PICTURES MADE IN ITS LIMITS

The newspapers of Quebec are enthusiastic for the making of motion pictures in their picturesque, fortified city, of historic fame. Many of the scenes of the William Fox production of "A Woman's Resurrection," starring Betty Nansen, Edward Jose and William J. Kelly were made in Quebec, and now another company is hard at work in the Canadian capital, making the scenes of the new production which Herbert Brenon is directing and which to date, is tentatively called "The Hunchback."

In the Brenon company are William E. Shay, Theda Bara, Jean Southern, Gertrude Berkley, John Daly Murphy and E. L. Fernandez. Joe Leo, of the William Fox forces, is business manager of the company and very popular with the newspaper men of Quebec.

The treasurer's report showed that the organization is in a good financial condition.

Officers were elected at the closing session as follows: President, L. J. Dittmar, of Louisville; vice-president, J. H. Stamper, Jr., of Lexington; secretary, Fred J. Metro's Stride Pleases Officers of New Concern

Subjects of Dyreda and the Quality Corporation, Two Companies Recently Affiliated with the Releasing Organization, Expected to Cause Stir Among Patrons

THE Metro Pictures Corporation, now fully in its stride, makes many announcements of more than passing interest to the trade in general. The accomplishments and activities of the concern have become so far-reaching that General Manager Rowland was induced to uncover some of the future plans of his organization.

Within the past two weeks two new producing companies have joined the Metro body. The Dyreda Art Film Corporation, with J. Searle Dawley as director-general, will begin releasing through Metro upon completion of their next production, which will be Howard Estabrook in "Four Feathers," now in course of construction at the new Dyreda-Metro studio, Broadway and Sixty-first street.

The new Dyreda-Metro studios is one of the best-equipped of enterprises, and measures 208 feet by 90 feet wide.

The other producing company to cast its lot with Metro is the Quality Pictures Corporation, under the guidance of Fred J. Balshofer. They will release an average of ten pictures a year, in which Francis X. Bushman will make his appearance, supported by a specially selected cast.

For the first Quality-Metro release, "The Second in Command," one of Frohman's former military successes has been selected, and will be released July 5.

Emmet Corrigan, best remembered from his wonderful work in the revival of "Jim the Penman," and before that as Bill Lalock in "The Deep Purple," was signed by Metro last week for exclusive appearance.

From the Charles Frohman company were purchased: "The Royal Family," "The Mississippi Bubble," "My Wife," "Sky Farm" and "The Second in Command." The plays will be distributed by Metro to their various distributing allies for production.

Emily Stevens, former star of "Today," niece of Mrs. Fiske and recently seen in the star role of "The Garden of Paradise" at the Park theatre, is working at the Rolfe-Metro Los Angeles studio on "Cora," which will be released early in May.

Valli Valli in "The High Road" is this week's release, and "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" with Edmund Breese comes out next Monday.

The Popular Plays and Players Company, releasing on the Metro program, purchased, last week, from the Clyde Fitch estate, the following big plays: "Her Own Way," "Her Great Match," "The Girl with the Green Eyes" and "Barbara Fritchie." "Her Own Way" will be done at once with Florence Reed, one of the stars in "The Celebrated Case" in the leading role. Olga Petrova will also appear in their films every six weeks.

Rolfe will place William Faversham in "The Right of Way," and Ann Murdock will appear in a production of Charles Frohman's hit, "The Royal Family."

The Dyreda Art Film Corporation has arranged with the "Ladies' Home Journal" for a series of stories which will appear in that paper and be filmized simultaneously.

In addition to the above features, Metro contracted with Edward Connelly to appear in the Rolfe production of George Ade's great Southern story which will come to the public about June 10.

Max Figman and Lois Meredith in "My Best Girl," and Olive Wyndham and Orrin Johnson in "Fighting Bob" are two subjects now under way for early release by the Metro people.

"An Enemy to Society," "Once to Every Man," "The Bridge" and Otis Skinner's "Silent Voice" are also booked for early appearance through Metro.

MESTAYER CREATED IBSEN PART; NOW IN SELIG SPECIALS

Harry Mestayer, who assumes the leading role in the forthcoming Selig Spectacular Special, "The Millionaire Baby," is the only remaining representative in the theatre today of the oldest theatrical family in the United States.

Never in the history of the American stage has there been a Mestayer missing from the theatre. The Mestayer family included William A., Charles H., Louis,

HARRY MESTAYER

Henry and Emily Mestayer, as well as Charles and Edwin Thorn and Theresa Vaughn.

Besides starring in their own vehicles, the members of the family have been associated with many of the greatest actors of the world. In the support of Booth, Barrett, McCullough, Fanny Davenport, Thomas W. Keane and many others, the Mestayers have made themselves one of the most notable theatrical families.

Harry Mestayer has appeared in the New York production of "Mr. Potter of Texas," the New York production of W. S. Gilbert's "Sweethearts," he has played many parts in stock companies and has starred in the Middle West.

He also originated the part of Oswald in Ibsen's "Ghosts," which he speaks of as the greatest part in his career. He originated the star part in "The Penalty" and then joined Henry Savage in the production of "The Great Name."

After a season with James K. Hackett in repertoire he appeared in an all-star cast of "Love and Politics." He supported Margaret Illington and played leading roles later for Holbrook Blinn's Princess players. He was engaged for the cast of "On Trial" and was then engaged as a leading man by the Selig Polyscope Company.

DUEL SCENE IN "POVERTY FLAT" IMPRESSIVE

While the principal scenes in "The Lily of Poverty Flat," this month's feature release of the California Motion Picture Corporation, will naturally show the spirited scenes in the rough mountain mining camp, immortalized by Bret Harte, the story of the photo-play requires the filming of a brilliant ball in Paris, whither the heroine, the belle of the Sierra gold-seekers' settlement, was taken for her debut when her father "struck it rich."

For the duel scene between the titled lover of The Lily and the California gambler, her friend and guardian, a spot was selected in one of the beautiful estates of one of the millionaire residents of San Rafael, California, where the company has its studio. These wonderful gardens owned by wealthy Californians have been promised the use of the company whenever a photo-drama, filmed by the concern, calls for such scenery.

LAST KOMIC RELEASE IS "FLOOEY AND AXEL"

The latest Komic release, produced under the direction of Edward Dillon, features "Vic" Forsythe, creator of the "Flooey and Axel" series. This comedy is called "Flooey and Axel."

Vic, cartoonist of "The Daily Blizzard," has a hard time winning Margie's hand because of the activities of a grouchy father and a husky rival. Then he loses his job Discouraged and blue he goes to bed, and dreams that Flooey and Axel step down from one of his cartoons and teach him how to get back his job, make love and lick his rival.

When he awakes the following day he puts these instructions into practice with disastrous, but humorous, results.

INCE ASSEMBLING "SIGN OF THE ROSE"

Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, is superintending the cutting and assembling of "The Sign of the Rose," the elaborate combination of the silent and spoken drama, starring George Beban.

About 40,000 feet of film have been used in picturizing the great character actor's masterpiece, but this quantity will be reduced to about 10,000 feet.

While Mr. Ince is spending most of his time in the projecting room, Mr. Beban and his associate players are rehearsing the flower shop scene—the last act—in which they appear in the flesh.

KNICKERBOCKER FEATURES ADD RALPH STUART

Ralph Stuart, a long-time favorite and a star with a country-wide reputation has been secured by the Knickerbocker Star Features for three-reel dramas to be released on alternate Wednesdays on the regular program of the General Film company, starting early in May.

RALPH STUART

Mr. Stuart has completed his first picture, the "Kick-Out," under the direction of Robert T. Thornby, a former Vitagraph director. He is featured as the Mayor. Mr. Stuart's stage successes include his own play, "By Right of Sword," also leads in "Strongheart," "The Rainbow's End" and many other dramas of equal character and strength.

Knickerbocker Star Features are making most elaborate plans for their productions. A huge stage, augmenting their present productive capacity many times, has been completed and no money or efforts are being spared to make these features equal to the best and among the most thrilling dramas available on the General Film Program.

MOTHERS' CLUB PRAISES UNITED STANDARDS

The excellent work of the United Film Service in their fight to raise the standard of the short story picture was praised recently by Mrs. S. P. Woodward, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the Mothers' Club of the Horace Mann School, which is leading an active but quiet campaign for "better pictures for children" in New York City.

While the Horace Mann Mothers' Club is not ready as yet to announce its unique plans for encouraging the production of a distinct type of picture for children, its members have been working quietly to secure the co-operation in the output of high class films of educational and recreative value of producing companies, and the United Film Service has been among the first to respond to their call for assistance, feeling that the short one and two reel drama which they release will be especially attractive to children.

"June" Prize Winners May Form Women's Club

Reliance Company Makes Preliminary Arrangements to Organize the Forty-Eight Successful Contestants Into a Permanent Organization

PRELIMINARY steps were taken this week by the Reliance Motion Picture Corporation to organize into a permanent group of women the winners in the "Runaway June" Free-Trips to California Contest.

The forty-eight fortunate women—a winner from each State—will constitute an organization which will not be allowed to die.

They will have their own executive officers and permanent headquarters. Their work will be supplemented by that of experts in the employ of the Reliance Company.

Since the contest is held in order to determine what types of women are the most popular in the United States, the winners will be studied by the experts from every possible angle. For it is believed that the contest will show not merely the outward appearances of the typical woman, but her whole range of intellect, her likes and dislikes, her habitual moods, her favorite diversions and occupations and all the known facts of her existence.

While the finished contest will present the larger results it is felt that a study of the earlier entrants will be very much worth while. So a force of statisticians and experts is now at work studying the data furnished by entrants and exhibitors who are running "Runaway June" and the contest in their theatres.

Full-length photographs of the entrants, photo portraits and profile pictures are being carefully examined by the experts. These are filed away with the reports of the examiners, while the results as a whole are carefully tabulated.

At the same time other facts regarding the entrants are tabulated so that it can be seen at a glance whether the majority of them are tall or little, slender or full-figured, whether they are musicians, artists, writers or business women. So complete are the tabulations that it is entirely possible to tell at a glance whether blondes or brunettes are the most in favor.

These studies of the earlier contestants will reveal much concerning American women; yet the greatest value will result when the forty-eight typical American women (or girls) are assembled for the first time in the history of the country. Each winner in order to carry a State must have the endorsement of large numbers of men and women. So each will be an exceptional person—exceptional in beauty, charm, talents or other characteristics.

Using the forty-eight for material, those in charge of the contest will try to determine an average of the typical American woman.

Unreasonable Stand of Censors May Aid Exhibitors

Cincinnati Board Refuses to Grant Exhibition of an Educational Which It Confesses Is Held Back Merely Because Film Had Not Passed Local Scrutiny

Cincinnati, April 7.

CINCINNATI exhibitors are experiencing a change of heart on the censorship question. According to prominent film men it is probable that some concerted action will be taken in the near future to convince the state authorities that legal censorship is not a necessary evil in the state. During the past month the Ohio Board of Censorship has incurred the ill-will of nearly every exhibitor and film man in this city.

Films which had once been passed in several instances have been held up and new examinations ordered. Cut-outs have played havoc with these films, it is said, and impaired their value as drawing features. The recent action of the board in preventing the exhibition of the educational feature "Uncle Sam at Work," on scheduled time at the Lyric theatre, is said to have been the straw which will break the camel's back.

No objection was found to this film by the censor except that it had not passed their scrutiny. It was to have been exhibited for the first time on a Monday. Notwithstanding representations of the exhibitors and film men that the feature was purely educational, that it had already been passed by the National Board, the state arbiters decided that to uphold a principle it would not be exhibited until it had been officially censored.

As the result no show was given Monday and Tuesday and money paid for tickets on those nights had to be refunded. The film was passed Wednesday.

The coming of spring has seen the usual change in motion picture business here. Patronage is on the increase, exhibitors say, and several of the legitimate houses are being made over into screen theatres. The Grand will open next week, under the management of Weigel and Foster with "The Clemenceau Case," a Fox feature.

At the close of the vaudeville season B. F. Keith's will be devoted to motion pictures and summer vaudeville, it is announced. A number of airdomes are preparing to open in this vicinity within the next month.

SELIG BOOKLET FOR CALIFORNIA TRIP

"We Want You with Us in California" is the name of an artistic booklet issued by the Selig Polyscope Company. The booklet consists of sixteen pages, is beautifully bound in two colors.

The booklet is printed on plate paper and is profusely illustrated with scenes in California and elsewhere in the Golden West. The booklet is sent free to all interested in the forthcoming tour of the Selig Exposition flyer, which will leave Chicago on July 8 for a seventeen days' tour of the Golden West.

The booklet is said to be one of the most attractive pieces of publicity matter ever issued by a motion picture company. Copies are going fast, according to the Selig company.

WORK BEGUN ON "UP FROM THE DEPTHS"

Work of filming "Up from the Depths" for the Mutual Master Pictures program has been taken up by Director Paul Powell, at the Majestic studio, Los Angeles. For the principals for this subject, an adaptation from the play by Charles Battell Loomis and Robert Stodard, Courteney Foote and Thomas Jefferson have been selected for the leading male parts and Gladys Brockwell cast for the important part of "Daire."

Ray Myers, who for the past two years has been with coast companies, and for the past five months has been a member of the Reliance-Majestic stock company, has been selected to direct a company and will begin on his first subject within the next few days.

Stella Adams, who for the past year has been character woman for the Universal Nestor Company, left last week for New York City, where she will be the leading woman. Miss Adams is Mrs. James Whittendale in private life, and Mr. Whittendale is advance man for Klaw and Erlanger attractions.

"THE EAGLE'S NEST" AND "THE JUGGERNAUT" BOOKED STRONG

Lubin's offering, "The Eagle's Nest," with Edwin Arden and Romaine Fielding, and the Vitagraph presentation, "The Juggernaut," with Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, the two superior feature productions

THE DUEL IN "THE EAGLE'S NEST"
(V. L. S. E.—Lubin Special)

so far released in the new V-L-S-E service, have met with the instantaneous success predicted by the critics who reviewed these features, previous to their release.

In "The Eagle's Nest," the first V-L-S-E release, the Lubin company has presented a tense, stirring drama of wild mountain life that is a decided dramatic achievement, and in it Edwin Arden and Romaine Fielding have scored a great artistic triumph.

The charming personality and consummate artistry of Anita Stewart, and the splendid dramatic ability of Earle Williams displayed in "The Juggernaut" justify the expense of twenty-five thousand dollars by the Vitagraph company.

VALENTINE GRANT, WHO IS LEADING WOMAN TO WALKER WHITESIDE IN THE CORT FILM PRODUCTION OF "THE MELTING POT"

LORIMER JOHNSTON FINISHES "ESTERBROOKE CASE"

Vitagraph Director Lorimer Johnston has just completed "The Esterbrooke Case," which is listed as a Broadway Star Feature in three parts, for release the last of May.

"The Esterbrooke Case" tells a modern detective story, with all the thrills attendant upon the successful detection of crime. An all-star cast that includes L. Rogers Lytton, Julia Swayne Gordon, Zena Keefe, Charles Kent, Cissy Fitzgerald, Edward Elkas, Betty Gray, Paul Kelly, Garry McGarry, Robert Gaillard, George Stevens and others, enact the principal characters.

LORRAINE HULING PLAYS LEAD IN "MOVIE FANS"

Lorraine Huling, the attractive leading lady recently added to the acting force at the Thanhouser studios, heads the cast of the April 30 Falstaff release in the Mutual program. She has the part of the young stenographer who aspires to be a motion picture actress in the one-reel drama, "Movie Fans."

She and the clerk, played by Billy Sullivan, meet in a moving picture theatre. He is studying to be a scenario writer. In the end they are married, and when their baby comes they find that the drama of life surpasses in interest all their dreams.

Surbrug Machine Is a Perfect Vending Device

Exhibitors By Installing Chocolate Dispensing Mechanism Rented by the Well Known Tobacco Man Will Add Steady Income to Their Theatre Profits

THE Surbrug Chocolate Corporation, 204 Broadway, New York, at the head of which is J. W. Surbrug, the well-known tobacco maker and merchant, has secured at last an absolutely slug-proof, thief-proof and accurate penny vending machine.

The machine, the "Ecla, Jr.," will be used to vend small packages of Ecla chocolates, the fine-quality reputation of which is already well established.

A demonstration of the "Ecla, Jr." was given to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS at the office of the Surbrug Chocolate Corporation. Its operation is perfect. Over forty kinds of slugs of varying weights and patterns were used.

By some device that seems almost human each slug fails to bring out a chocolate package. Only a solid penny will work. Moreover, there is the additional advantage that the slugs are all retained in the machine, not discarded for further use.

Slugs are used very freely in slot machines today, and have proven a drawback to the greater distribution of vending machines of the penny type. This new invention should prove a boon to the business. Its importance will be readily understood by those familiar with the situation.

Territorial rights are offered by the Surbrug Corporation on the "Ecla, Jr." penny vending machine.

That these machines, notched as they are against slugs, will prove a profit-maker to the picture theatre goes without saying. In New York City the subway slot machines sell the astonishing number of 600,000 pieces of gum and chocolate every day. This output from the hurrying public should be proportionately increased in theatres where each one in the audience has handily before him a vending machine.

Vending machines are new to the picture theatres in America. In England, even in the highest class theatres, they have been in use for some time on a very general scale.

Too much in favor of the quality of "Ecla" chocolates can scarcely be said. They are delicious and wholesome.

"Quality," said Mr. Surbrug, "has been the keynote of success in all Surbrug tobacco products, as the public well knows. We are conducting the 'Ecla Chocolate' business along the very same lines."

A big demand, in particular for the "Ecla, Jr." vending machines, is expected from the prohibition States, where sweets are in demand.

SIDNEY OLCOTT SIGNS WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Famous Players Film Company last week engaged Sidney Olcott, one of the most capable and experienced feature directors.

Mr. Olcott was responsible for the production of "From the Manger to the Cross" and "Colleen Bawn." More recently, Mr. Olcott has been producing independently under the name of "Sidfilms," which activity he was induced to abandon by the offer of the Famous Players Film Company to become a member of its large producing staff.

During his career and in the course of his duties as a screen director, Mr. Olcott has traversed the entire globe, traveling 35,000 miles in one season.

TYRONE POWER GUEST OF COL. SELIG

Tyrone Power, the noted actor, with Mrs. Power, were guests of Colonel William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, in Chicago last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Power were en route to Los Angeles, Cal., where Mr. Power will enact leading roles in forthcoming Selig Red Seal plays. Tyrone Power, who has supported such stage celebrities as Sir Henry Irving, Ellen Terry and Mrs. Fiske, will shortly be seen in the role of Maverick Brander in the late Charles Hoyt's comedy of American life, "A Texas Steer." The play will be released July 26 as a Selig Red Seal play.

CORT COMEDY STARS KNUTE ERIKSON

The Harry Cort Comedy Film Company, of which Harry Cort, son of John Cort, is president, has announced the first line of comedy films which are to be issued by the concern. Work has already started on them, in spite of the fact that the studio which the company is to have in upper Manhattan has not been completed.

The first films which will be made are a series of episodes in which the principal character will be "Daffy Dan," a popular comic conceit, by Knute Erickson, who has been on the stage in such style of buffoonery for many years. The scenarios for these comedy films have been written by George E. Stoddard, who wrote "The Isle of Spice" and "The Royal Chef."

Knute Erickson is well known in the West, especially for his impersonation of comedy characters of the Scandinavian sort, much in demand in many towns and cities throughout the country. He made a big success in "Yon Yonson" and other serio-comedies of the same kind. He has had twenty years of experience on the stage.

The Harry Cort Comedy Film Company expects to make regular comedy releases, and will have sufficient room in the new studio to do anything.

SELIG ZOO NEARS COMPLETION

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, expects to leave within a short time for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will visit the new Selig Jungle-Zoo, which is rapidly nearing completion.

Colonel Selig has spent a small fortune in the building of this establishment and has never had an opportunity to view the Jungle-Zoo in its completed state. A cordial reception awaits Colonel Selig when he arrives in Los Angeles.

RUTH STONEHOUSE SEEN IN ESSANAY SPECIALS

Ruth Stonehouse is a wonderfully interesting little actress. Though not yet twenty years old, she plays leads and does it so well that you are anxious to see her again. "The Colorado Girl" Miss Stonehouse is called, because she lived in Victor, Colo., where her father is an expert in mining operations.

The remarkable grace of Miss Stonehouse is due to her being a dancer—a professional at that. Her ability in this art makes her adept in many roles for which otherwise she would not be eligible. She is vivacious, interesting and pretty and is considered one of the best leading women in photoplays today.

Miss Stonehouse appears as "The Slim Princess" in George Ade's comedy of that title, and in Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor's "The Crimson Wing."

REWARD FOR RETURN OF TWO EDISON PRINTS

Two prints of Edison pictures, "The Battle of Bunker Hill" and "Paul Revere's Ride," were left Monday evening, April 26, on a Gates avenue car, in Brooklyn, or on a New York to Brooklyn subway train.

A reward will be paid for their return to the owner at the Educational Department, General Film Company, Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, New York City.

THE ROONEYS IN FUNNY LUBIN SKETCH

Pat Rooney, Marion Bent and their clever young son, Pat Rooney, Jr., three of the most popular vaudevillians on the stage today, are featured in the Lubin comedy, "The Busy Bell Boy," released Saturday, May 8.

PAT ROONEY AND MARION BENT IN THEIR FIRST LUBIN COMEDY

This is the first time these inimitable dancers and fun makers have ever appeared on the screen. Their mannerisms, quite in a class by themselves, are refreshingly different at a time when so many comedy photoplays are usually mere imitations.

Rooney plays the part of Fidgie, a soda clerk, and he sticks at his job until he meets Marion and her mother. It is love at first sight. With a leap over the counter he follows them to their hotel where he gets a job as a bell boy.

Marion has a titled suitor, and Fidgie, wearing the evening clothes of a guest, exposes him as a fakir. Incidentally, he is the star at a hotel dansant with Marion as his partner.

Fidgie's dream of bliss comes to an abrupt end when the angry guests discover he is merely a bell boy. An amusing chase follows, in which Fidgie and Marion outdistance their pursuers and elope. Mr. Rooney's irrepressible spirits and remarkable agility make this photoplay very entertaining, and Bent's conception of the modern dances, as illustrated in the dansant scene, is unique. Others in the cast are Clara Lambert, Gilbert Ely and George Trimble.

MOTION PICTURES BRING $5,000,000 TO CALIFORNIA

SALLY, E. & R. STAR, RIVALS NAPOLEON IN COMEDY

Napoleon, the chimpanzee comedy star, just returned from a successful engagement in Australia, under the auspices of the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, has a new rival for the honors that have been his for so long.

Sally is her name and she can do everything but talk. With the usual prerogative of her sex she has not admitted her age. She is about eight years old and other sources have not been so reticent.

Napoleon smokes, roller skates, bicycles and does other masculine stunts. Sally keeps house, minds the baby, plays nurse, cooks and in many other ways plays the lady. Unlike Napoleon, however, she has never been on the stage, and training has been primarily and solely for the screen.

In her latest pictures her acting is so nearly human, so full of unconscious comedy that Napoleon will have to look to his laurels. The total absence of forced comedy in the parts Sally portrays for the screen makes her a fitting companion for Napoleon.

FOREIGN FILM COMPANY ACTIVE IN PHILADELPHIA

The Foreign Film Corporation, 251 North Thirteenth street, Philadelphia, has acquired extensive studios at 20 E. Herman street, in Germantown, a suburb of Philadelphia, where picturesque scenes and quaint architecture make charming backgrounds for all sorts of photo plays.

G. Guattari, formerly of Rome, Italy, an expert in all matters relating to the film industry, is president and general manager. H. H. Swartz is treasurer. J. B. Brown has the management of the O. K. comedies, one of which will be released each week. The Minerva branch, which will make only education and instructive films, is in charge of Professor Theodore Arntz, Jr., who has been a teacher in many countries. Some specific work for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Philadelphia is already under way by this branch of the company.

Pictures relating to the industry in all its parts will be released under the Clarion Film brand in a short time. Exclusive features from abroad will be released under the Inter-Oceanic brand. The first release in this branch of the corporation will be "Back to the Waves," an Italian picture. The first O. K. comedy, "She Lost Her Dog," is ready for release as soon as the program to carry the company's productions are decided on by Mr. Guattari. The company has secured as director, Carl Von Hoffman, Russian by birth, soldier of fortune by chance, and now an American.

OCTAVIA HANDWORTH JOINS LUBIN

Octavia Handworth, widely known for her good looks and versatility as an actress, is the latest leading woman to join the Lubin players, and is to be featured in a number of dramas especially suitable to her type.

Miss Handworth has had a long and thorough training as an actress—six years of her professional life having been spent in pictures and thirteen years on the legitimate stage. Miss Handworth was born in New York, but most of her girlhood days were spent in Copenhagen, Denmark, where she was educated in all the arts.

Lew Fields persuaded Miss Handworth to go on the stage and gave her a part in one of the Weber and Fields shows. From then on she played in a long list of dramatic productions. Eight years ago she was not only leading woman but directed the Dallas Stock Company at Dallas, Tex.

Six years ago Miss Handworth went into pictures. She has been in pictures ever since and has played leading roles in a number of different companies not only in this country but abroad as well.

Miss Handworth is a type well adapted for photoplays. She is tall, gray eyed, blonde, with unusually well modelled features, and a rhythmic grace that denotes much time spent out of doors in athletic pursuits.

"PRINCESS ROMANOFF" FILM COMPLETED BY FOX

The filming of "Princess Romanoff," the William Fox feature based upon Sardou's ever-memorable "Fedora," directed by Frank Powell, and in which Nance O'Neil is starred, has been completed, and the film will shortly be ready for release. Miss O'Neil, who has played the part of Princess Fedora Romanoff many times upon the legitimate stage all over the world, states that she has never been able until now to give to the tigerish Slav princess the necessary stormy emotional touches.

Miss O'Neil, whose work in the William

IBSENESQUE FINALE IN "ONE SUMMER'S SEQUEL"

The American Film Manufacturing Company has arranged to release two exceptionally attractive dramas and a clever comedy during the first week in May. "One Summer's Sequel," a feature drama in two parts, tells a very interesting story containing a thread of mystery to a rather Ibsenesque ending.

"When Empty Hearts are Filled" presents a strong plot of sympathetic appeal staged amongst majestic coast scenery. The comedy, "A Face Most Fair," deals with the efforts of a young man to stay in the hospital although in perfect health

"GRAUSTARK"

(V-L-S-E-Essanay—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

STORIES combining romance and adventure are in most instances particularly well adaptable for screen use, as a picture of this class is sure of a warm reception in all varieties of theatres, just as the books on which they are based are read with delight.

George Barr McCutcheon's "Graustark" is the best sort of photoplay offering belonging to this group that we have seen. It is grossly impossible, and it is unreal, being merely the product of a most fertile imagination, yet at the same time, despite all its unrealities it thrills the spectator from the time the plot begins to form until the very last scene.

To do the producers credit by relating the nature of the plot is a difficult task, as many have been the stories centering about the debonair American adventurer in an imaginary European principality. It is the innumerable incidental touches added by the author, and in this case almost faultlessly carried out by every member of the cast, which go to make the picture delightful.

No role is better suited to the personality of Francis X. Bushman than that of the American adventurer, the cheerful dispenser of one-hundred-dollar bills, who is always ready with his fists and his brains, to encounter and successfully cope with the corrupt powers in the mythical kingdom of Graustark. He is just the type for the part—dashing, handsome and looking very much the hero.

Of course there is the princess, generally in distress, and this character is pleasingly handled by Beverly Bayne.

While Mr. Bushman is responsible for the greater part of the comedy element in the film, Miss Bayne's role calls for many dramatic scenes, in all of which she acquits herself charmingly.

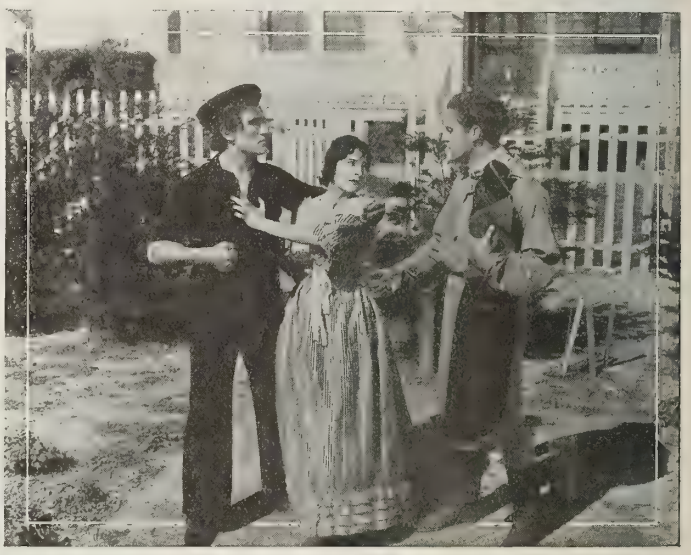
Then there is Albert Roscoe in the role of Lorry's friend and companion through all his adventures. Thomas Commerford makes a sympathetic figure of the princess' uncle, and Lester Cuneo and Bryant Washburn are a devilish appearing pair of villains. Helen Dunbar, Edna Mayo and Ernest Maupain complete the named cast.

Regarded from the technical side, the six reels are resplendent with clear photography and appropriate settings. A few scenes in the first reel, which are laid in a railroad car, are rather poorly lighted, but are nevertheless distinct. Then again those scenes showing the princess and Lorry wandering about the capital of the United States are not necessary for the advancement of the plot, although they are interesting.

To mention the separate thrills that are registered in the course of the plot's development would be impossible; suffice it to say, that there are enough of them to keep the spectator continually aroused and always anxious over the fate of the right party.

In its entirety "Graustark" is a fine production, the equal of which is not often seen. George Barr McCutcheon goes well on the screen, and Francis Bushman is an able interpreter of the adventurer. And don't forget that Beverly Bayne is a very fine little actress.



"MAY BLOSSOM"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WITH the presentation of "May Blossom," the Famous Players depart from their usual policy of offering a Broadway star in a Broadway success. For this visualization of David Belasco's drama no actor or actress of country-wide repute is starred, and the only disadvantage that this omission entails is a slight decrease in the advertising possibilities of the picture, as the players who appear are consistently competent.

The story could easily have been done in less than the four thousand feet here employed, yet due to the typical characterizations drawn by the author, which are clearly carried out by the cast, the interest is never allowed to succumb to the feebleness of the plot.

The picture was directed by Alan Dwan on the Pacific coast. Many of the exteriors were filmed on the top of a high hill, with the ocean as a background. These are very pretty and extremely well photographed.

The interiors are all typical of an old Virginia coast town. The few skirmishes which appear are well done. The entire four reels are well photographed and lighted.

The story opens with the familiar situation of one girl loved by two men. She accepts the more polished of the two. He, Richard, is captured as a spy by the Northern army, and sends word to May Blossom through Steve, the rejected suitor, explaining the situation. Steve, his good character blinded by his love for the girl, leads her to believe that Dick has perished.

In time Steve and May marry, and then comes the birth of a child, making them both very happy. At length Dick returns, and Steve's deceit is revealed, but May remains with her child, commanding both men to leave her. In the war Steve, realizing where May's love really lies, risks his life to save Dick, but is unsuccessful. He returns to his wife and they are reconciled.

Gertrude Robinson plays the sympathetic part of May Blossom with understanding. Donald Crisp makes Steve an interesting character, always more to be pitied than condemned, while Marshall Neilan, playing the gentlemanly Dick, is a striking contrast. Russell Bassett and Gertrude Norman complete the cast. The picture went well at the Strand Theatre, New York, where it received its first public showing.

THE LEADERS IN THE CAST OF NORTH AMERICAN'S "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY." TO BE RELEASED MAY 3.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Chapter One)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AS an introduction the first chapter of "The Diamond from the Sky" performs the essential function of a continued photoplay. It stimulates the interest to such a great extent that chapter two will be anticipated with the greatest pleasure. Chapter one seems to predict the unusual, while it presents in itself a most interesting foundation of the "picturized romantic novel."

"A Heritage of Hate" is the separate title of the two thousand six hundred feet which comprise chapter one. A short preface, revealing the identity of the author and some other interesting data concerning the prize contest, will precede the commencement of the story proper. This first chapter will be ready for release on May 3, and for an indefinite period two reels will be released each week thereafter.

Of course to predict success or failure for a continued photoplay, judging by the merits or faults of the first part, is most unsafe, but considering the fact that we have already witnessed more than one chapter, we can candidly say that "The Diamond from the Sky" bears a noticeable resemblance to a winner.

Even at this point in the novel, when the actual principals have not yet put in an appearance, the action is surprisingly smooth. The story takes its course in a logical manner, the scenes have been well laid, and the acting of the present cast is not to be criticised.

To comment on American photography is quite useless, and the same thing stands for exterior locations and settings. All these noticeable technicalities have been commendably attended to.

In the midst of all the talk concerning the unknown author, the director, Jacques Jaccard, should not be neglected. Up to date he has handled every situation, whether big or small, with admirable care, which shows in the completed work. A small but praiseworthy point is the fact that Mr. Jaccard has evidently discarded all semblances of artificial back-drops, seen through windows and doors. Instead of these, actual scenes catch the eye.

A brief synopsis of the action of chapter one follows. In the seventeenth century, Sir Arthur Stanley, journeying through Virginia, is made the captive of Indians. He is about to be burnt at the stake, when a meteor falls. This the Indians regard as a token from their god, commanding them to set the prisoner free.

Consequently, Sir Arthur is released. He finds in the meteor a large diamond, which he designates as the "charm against harm." Then many years are passed over. The time is about twenty years back, the locale still Virginia. Both Colonel Stanley and Judge Lamar Stanley are living on adjoining plantations. The colonel's wife is expecting a child. If it is a son, the Stanley property in England and the diamond will together revert to him; if it is a daughter, the estate and the diamond will go to the son of the judge.

The child is born and it is a girl. The colonel in a rage purchases a gypsy boy, born at the same time, to take her place, thus he is enabled to retain the Stanley fortune in his own family.

There is just enough comedy in these reels to furnish relief from the more dramatic moments. The greater part of it is furnished by Marmaduke Smythe, a servant of the Stanleys in England, who comes to execute the transfer of the property. Smythe's impersonater is a good actor.

"THE ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Parts Three and Four)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IN these two parts called respectively "The Silver Cup" and "The Ring of Death," the action grows more exciting and the suspense more intense. Alene's soul begins to evolve from the child to woman and therefore she becomes more self-conscious and hides her love for Robert Dane.

He with a romantic chivalry and lack of conceit (seldom if ever found in real life) will not ask her love until she has more time to know other men.

Another man comes in the scene, a villager, Abner Gray, whom Alene suspects of old Gersham's murder, because he wears the curious ring she saw on the murderer's hand; but this fact rather attracts Alene.

With her still childlike mind, she rejoices that the professor's death leaves her to a more congenial existence. Of course

A QUIET LUNCH TOGETHER

Abner falls in love with her. The one thing of interest in this sleepy old town is a large silver cup hung beside a mineral spring.

Legend ascribes to it health giving properties, if used at the spring, death by poison if used elsewhere. Alene informs her new friends that Professor Gersham placed the cup in its position while she was a child. Now enters the arch villain. Gilbert Jerome determines to keep his fortunes, even if it involves the killing of Alene.

Instead he falls in love and plans to marry her and thus retain the fortune. Finding out the strange reason of Alene's partiality for Abner Gray, Jerome uses it to have Gray arrested for murder, thus eliminating a rival.

At this stage it is too bad that the Duncans are quarantined at a small pox patients' house and Robert Dane is away on business. Just as Alene seems doomed to fall a victim to the villain he is disturbed by the arrival of Clara calling herself his wife. At this thrilling moment we are told to wait until next week.

John Ince comes into the film as Abner Gray, adding strength to the already strong cast. Jack Standing is as villainous in a cold sneering way as Gilbert Jerome would be in the flesh. The opportunity of Florence Hackett as Clara will come later.

"A CHILD OF GOD"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THERE is real tragedy in a man of physical and mental strength who is bending his talents to useless or improper ends. For this reason a drama which shows the regeneration of such a man is always sure of appeal. Particularly is this the case when causes for the man's change in habits are those set forth in this picture.

Cyrus Townsend Brady, who is widely known as a successful writer of novels and short stories, is the author of "A Child of God." Mr. Brady is a minister, and in this picture he has preached a powerful sermon, and at the same time presented a gripping human story. This is a combination which is always certain to please picture patrons.

The choice of Sam de Grasse for the title role is a most commendable one, since by his attractive personality he gives the character just the element which is needed. Francelia Billington also pleases as the school teacher, while Richard Cummings makes a forceful young minister.

One of the attractive features of the film is the careful attention to details which add surprising and effective touches to the story. A good example is the fond gaze of the stenographer at the big Westerner who has just beaten-up her employer.

Sam, a ranch man, falls in love with a school teacher from the East, but she refuses him on account of his wild ways. Before she can explain her attitude to him she is called home by her father. He wants her to marry a former suitor, who says that in this way alone can the older man avoid the immediate payment of notes held by him. The girl forces herself to promise the sacrifice.

Meantime the teacher's sister is killed in a train wreck near Sam's home, and the ranchman is the impromptu god-father at the baptism of her baby, which takes place as she is dying beside the wrecked train.

Sam's new responsibilities, as sponsor for the child, lead him to a contemplation of his past mode of life. He decides to obey the exhortation of an old tract seller, and become a "child of God." Of course he is ridiculed by his former friends, but he maintains his stand. Later he goes east to see his little god child and is amazed to learn that she is the small niece of the woman he loves.

He soon learns how things stand, and after taking up the notes thrashes the scoundrelly suitor within an inch of his life. Then the girl finds happiness with the man she loves, and her happiness is much greater in the knowledge of his reform.

There is a very fine train wreck scene and needless to say the photography is flawless.

"THE FAITH OF HER FATHERS"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE FAITH OF HER FATHERS" is a picturization of Bruno Lessing's story, adapted for the screen by Isadore Bernstein. Its theme terminates in a climax of tremendous power, which may be summed up in the triumph of religion over love. We have had many stories inversing this order, depicting the triumph of love over racial prejudice. This drama changes the order, disregards the conventional happy ending, but concludes naturally. There is much about the picture that is praiseworthy. The fine character portrayal given by Murdock MacQuarrie of the Rabbi is gratifying to see. He looks the part and acts it. The other Hebrew characters are evidentally drawn from life. The supernumeraries have been selected with an obvious regard to correct and telling types.

The picture glorifies the belief of the Jews, but it does not belittle Christianity or any other religion. It will make a strong appeal to the Jews, as is natural, but to other races it will present a lasting appeal for fair play in the matter of spiritual ideas. To predict its success seems to be a safe statement to make.

Cleo Madison appearing as the Rabbi's daughter is the character about whom most of the action revolves. She falls in love with a Christian missionary who visits the Yiddish quarter of the city in an effort to make converts of the Jews. They tell the Rabbi of their love, and he denounces her. The Christian departs leaving the girl to decide between religion and love.

Then follows a series of powerful scenes, commencing with the interior of the synagogue, where the Rabbi has come with the purpose of informing his daughter with the terrible consequences of ex-communication. But the head of the synagogue speaks.

He tells the unmerciful manner in which the Jews have been persecuted from time immemorial until the present day, and reminds the congregation that the Jewish faith has remained staunch throughout many centuries. The scenes depicting the persecution of the Hebrews are vividly portrayed on the screen.

Following the sermon, the girl who had before wavered between her religion and her love, disregards her personal feelings and begs her father's forgiveness. But the strain and the suffering has proved too much for her, and on reaching her father's doorstep she succumbs.

It may be gleaned from this brief outline that the picture is unusual in its sympathetic powers. It will touch the hearts of all. Charles Giblyn, who produced the picture; deserves great credit for his excellent handling of the subject. Everything about the picture is realistic and effective. Joe King appears in the role of the missionary.

"THE SUBSTITUTE"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

BILLY REEVES has certainly added to the "gayety of nations" in his "Night in a London Music Hall," and now he proposes to add to the fun of film fans in the same comical antics before the screen. Albeit he represents the "Club Man's" intoxication during a whole evening's adventures, he is neither vulgar nor suggestive, but only very funny.

It is claimed that Billy is the original "drunk" impersonator as a comedian. Anyway he has played the part over 5,000 times in America and England, and how many times he will have to portray it on the screen makes one's brain whirl to calculate. In "The Substitute" Billy first visits a gay restaurant and annexes a pretty girl. With her as his partner they literally dance over everybody in the place, so a new amusement must be provided—a roller skating contest gives a chance for more fun making gyrations.

But the climax is reached when at the club a boxing match is about to be called off because one of the boxers is absent. Nothing loth "our hero" offers himself as "The Substitute," dons the gloves, but doesn't doff his buns. The scene with Billy as the wobbling winner will cause side splitting laughter.

"THE UNWELCOME WIFE"

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS picture represents the height of the emotional in the drama. The element is elaborately evolved. A good deal of the picture is devoted to showing the mental and physical anguish of a woman supposed to be violently insane. The story concerns a man who marries again after divorcing his wife for insanity, and later faces the first wife, who has meantime become completely cured.

In theatres which cater to audiences fond of such dramas, "The Unwelcome Wife" will find its field. It is a good, well-built drama of its kind. The part of the insane woman, and it is one which calls for much ability, is ably played by Mme. Malvina Lobel. William McNulty is seen as her husband, and Vivian Prescott as her cousin, who later becomes the second wife of the hero.

The asylum scenes, frankly, will prove too much for the nerves of a sensitive audience. But to those who like their drama "straight" and strong, who love the terrific tension and the excruciating bitterness of the problem play, "The Unwelcome Wife" will be a welcome experience. With many scenes pitched on an almost hysterical level, the cast nevertheless acquits itself very commendably. The direction is able enough to permit one to follow the story at all times, in spite of its complexity.

The story of the drama is as follows:

A famous actress becomes insane at the time her child is born. A cousin who has left her husband because of his unfaithfulness is living with her, and has obtained a divorce. The lawyer sends his wife to a sanitarium and soon becomes interested in the other woman. He marries her after having his first marriage annulled on the ground if his wife's mental condition. They have a child who is seen six years later as the dearly loved companion of the child by the first wife.

When the actress is pronounced cured, she naturally goes to her home, as she knows nothing of what has happened. The second wife, seeing her love for her husband, decides to leave and let the other woman resume her place in the home, as if nothing has happened. When the truth becomes known the first wife refuses this, saying that she is the unwelcome one. The shock makes her insane once more, and she is returned to the asylum, leaving things as they had been during the six years of her confinement.

"THE GODDESS"

(Vitagraph Serial—Eight Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

AN invitation showing of the first four instalments—a total of eight reels—of this serial which will be released on the General Film program in weekly two-reel instalments, starting May 10, was held at the Vitagraph theatre, Wednesday, April 28.

Albert E. Smith made a little introductory speech, taking in the names of those responsible for the production: Governeur Morris, Charles L. Goddard, Ralph W. Ince, Anita Stewart and Earle Williams.

ANITA STEWART AS CELESTIA

The picture certainly gives the serial idea a different touch. The action is that of a vision into the future. Three great financiers, played by Frank Currier, Thomas Brooke and Charles Wellesley, plan to control the business of the world, using a woman as a tool.

The little child of eugenic parents is kidnapped and reared in a cave, far from all other humans. She is Celestia (Anita Stewart). Tommy (Earle Williams), son of one of the financiers, meets Celestia, still in her Grecian costume, first of all men. Then it is up to Professor Stilleter (Paul Scardon), the eminent psychologist, to get her away from Tommy's influence, which he does by main strength, aided by mountaineers.

Professor Stilleter brings Celestia to the city, still in her Grecian costume. Her arrival at the Pennsylvania terminal attracts a great crowd. The editor of a metropolitan daily can't make out if she is a female Billy Sunday or an advertising scheme, according to the sub-title.

Here the action of the fourth instalment ends with what is undoubtedly the important parts yet to follow. It is easy to assume that Celestia is the allegorical figure of all that is good, and that she will eventually bring world peace, aided and abetted by Tommy.

The action and productions are typical of Ralph Ince. But the story, which is the main thing, is a real Governeur Morris story. The intermingling of the allegory with touches of the absolutely commonplace and earthly is very cleverly done. To enumerate the clever touches would take some time. Anyone who remembers Ince or Morris knows that these deft touches so necessary to get the right effects are evident in every scene.

This is a serial launched under most auspicious conditions, with two of the most popular screen stars and what promises to be a great story. The efforts of the Vitagraph company are bent toward its success. So it seems more than likely that success is coming.

HECTOR TURNBULL, DRAMATIC CRITIC, JOINS LASKY SCENARIO STAFF

HECTOR TURNBULL is giving up his position as dramatic critic of the New York "Tribune" in order to become associated with the scenario department of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. Mr. Turnbull is the brother of Miss Margaret Turnbull, who is already assisting Wm. C. De Mille in the preparation of scenarios for the Lasky photodramas.

Hector Turnbull, before he joined the staff of the "Tribune" some two years ago, had already acquired a substantial reputation as a magazine writer, for the most desirable publications. At only seventeen years of age, he enlisted in the United States Field Artillery and served at various army posts in the United States and in the Philippines.

Mr. Turnbull has also devoted considerable time to the writing of vaudeville sketches, several of which have been produced with notable success.

"THE MODEL"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS picture is an adaptation of the play "Wine and Women." It is better described by its original title than by the new one, since it is a long drawn-out account of the ruin which was brought upon a young man of fine prospects by his double surrender to an adventuress and liquor. Dramas of this sort cannot be described as novel, but the public seems to enjoy representations of misfortune overtaking wealthy sinners. This odd trait will doubtless make the film popular in spite of its familiar plot.

As a drama of the sort, the conclusion is unfortunately weak. It shows the youthful reprobate snatched from disgrace, if not death, by a solicitous sweetheart and a doting father. Thus he finally avoids any real punishment for his sins, and instead has before him a bright future and behind him a shocking but not entirely unpleasant past. Surely the demand for a "happy ending" is not so great as to necessitate this.

William Elliott does some good acting as the young spendthrift. Dorothy Green gives a strictly conventional portrayal of the vampire, but one which is convincing. Alec B. Francis as the old artist handles the role of a blind man in good style. None of the other parts create much of an impression, although Cynthia Day, as the hero's ultimate sweetheart, is fair.

An artist's son inherits $100,000, which some crooks plan to remove from him through the means of a former model of his father's. He goes to Paris to live with her, and as soon as the cash is gone is cast off. Meantime his father has gone blind and lost his money. With his adopted daughter, the young man's former sweetheart, he comes to Paris. There various adventures take place. The model is killed by a jealous rival, and the American is arrested for the crime.

Then follows the weak conclusion mentioned above. The young roue is cleared, and at once finds himself reinstated in the graces of his family and former sweetheart. A final scene entitled "What Might Have Been" could equally well be called "Two Years Later."

"ONE SUMMER'S SEQUEL"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is a good presentation of a story whose interest is maintained by successfully holding the denouement until the end of the picture.

Two cousins, Lloyd and Edgar Norman, both wealthy young men from the city, have a summer flirtation with the innocent daughter of a New England farmer. They return to town, and at a double wedding the following spring both are married.

In the meantime the country girl, realizing that the promise made to her by one of the cousins will not be kept, leaves her parents just before her child is born and goes to the city. Here, with her baby in her arms, she attempts to stop the double wedding. Edgar meets her at the door and persuades her not to expose the wrong done her. Later Lloyd and his wife, ignorant of its identity, adopt her baby. Lloyd for some reason is insanely jealous of the child and becomes obsessed with the idea that it is the illegitimate offspring of his wife.

In a rage he makes this accusation, and she lyingly admits it to test his love. As he is ordering her from the house, Edgar appears. He lays bare the whole story of the summer's flirtation and Lloyd realizes that he himself is guilty of the crime for which he was about to drive his wife from his house. Forgiveness is refused him and he is left alone to bear the burden of his sin.

Winifred Greenwood and Ed Coxen in the principal roles are supported by George Field, Grace Thorne, Nan Christy and John Steppling. This picture contains some beautiful seashore scenes which are enhanced by the excellent technique.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathe Episode Eighteen)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

DURING the two past instalments Elaine has been in the clutches of the master criminal, Wu Fang, but his is not a nature which rejoices in an ordinary vengeance. Craig Kennedy has baffled him and also obtained the fortune which he hopes to hold. Accordingly he sends Elaine home, telling her that her friends will sicken and die one by one, and that after they and her relatives are all dead her turn will come.

He then starts to put his scheme in operation by placing the bacillus of a terrible tropical fever on the receiver of the telephone in Kennedy's apartment. As a result Jameson and Kennedy both become victims of the disease. However, the detective is not so easily conquered. Not only does he at once work out the cause of the infection, but knowing its nature he is able to call in a great specialist, who effects a cure.

The important part played by disease gives this chapter a twist which makes it less appealing than any of the others, but the strength of the story is just as great. Edwin Arden's acting as Wu Fang is particularly effective.

"THE VICTIM"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

ONE of the most contemptible of crimes is blackmail, and any story which makes skillful use of it as a theme can be sure of attracting interest. The hero of this feature is so afraid of his past that he bids fair to become a criminal in order to keep it hidden. And this although he had nothing of which to be ashamed. Finally his manhood asserts itself and he rids himself of his trouble, and finds life better than ever.

There is no attempt made to introduce spectacular effects or unusua people. It is simply a story of an every-day American youth, who makes good when the obstacles in his way seem very serious. As a result there is great appeal to the average audience.

The hero is played by Robert Harron. Mr. Harron is fortunate in having none of that theatrical appearance which so weakens the work of many actors of the would-be-matinee-idol sort. Consequently he plays modern roles with extreme realism. Equally effective is the work of Mae Marsh as the sweetheart and young wife.

After escaping from prison, where he has been sent for another man's crime, Frank Hastings gets work in a lock and safe company and soon becomes one of the firm, thanks to his invention of a new time clock. He is married and happy when a man whom he had known and for whose crime he had been convicted, appears and starts petty blackmail.

After a time he returns and forces the young man, under pain of exposure, to open the door of the local bank's vault, just equipped with one of his own locks. While the crooks are in the safe he slams the door and goes home. He tells the whole story to his wife, who induces him to call the police rather than leave the men to suffocate in the safe.

The leader has been attacked by the others and is dying. When the safe is opened he clears the young inventor of the crime for which he had been convicted. This dying confession is the one weak point in the story. It could have been avoided in many ways, and it is so ancient that it hurts the effect. The picture was made in the Majestic studios, and was produced by George Siegmann.

"THE GRAY HORROR"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

INTENSELY melodramatic in almost every scene, this scenario by Shannon Fife attempts also some of the psychology of fear. To my mind, however, this part of the play is overdrawn. While the memory of a murder even if done in self-defence may persistently haunt a man, it does seem unnatural that a young lawyer going to the house to try to unravel the mystery and help the haunted Ellis, should himself succumb to the horror.

Especially is this true when Betty, the adopted daughter of Ellis and sweetheart of Briggs, is cool and calm all through and goes seeking police protection for the men.

She is adopted because she was born just as her month, Mrs. Gray, started to run away with Ellis, from a brute and criminal husband whom Ellis had to shoot to save the woman and himself. She dies; whether Gray does or not Ellis can not discover, adding through the long years to the "Gray Horror" ever before him. How Parr oversaw the shooting in England and later finds Ellis in America and becomes the real menace which only Ellis' imagination had hitherto seen, is all told in the film.

In the end the villains all die. Gray is discovered to be dead, the horror is lifted, Ellis rejoices, Betty and Briggs are engaged; but it takes a lot of shooting and shocks and even a burned down house to accomplish this end.

Lilie Leslie takes good advantage of her opportunity to show versatility in the dual role of Mrs. Gray and then daughter Betty. Joseph Smiley does excellent work in his characterization of the fear haunted Ellis, also in directing the play itself. William Cahill as Briggs and John Smiley as Parr give good accounts of themselves.

"THE REAPING"

(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE REAPING" depicts the touching story of a poor mother's love for her little son. An abundance of human interest and good acting by a cast which includes Virginia Kirtley, Eugenie Forde, Robyn Adair and E. J. Brady make this a picture which will appeal strongly to the average audience. Little Otto Cytron, in the juvenile role, will win for himself a place in the hearts of all who see him.

Robert Chambers, successful business man, is absorbed in his work to the extent of neglecting his pretty young wife. Mrs. Chambers feels that their childless marriage is responsible for her husband's lack of interest in their home, and determines to adopt the little son of the Gray's, a poor family who are much indebted to Mr. Chambers through the dissipations of the husband.

Mrs. Gray loves her child dearly, but unselfishly consents to give him up so that he may have the advantages that the Chambers' wealth will give him. Gray proceeds to spend the money received for relinquishing his rights to the child in drink, and eventually is killed in a bar-room brawl.

Mrs. Gray is taken very ill, and the Chambers learn that the only hope for her lies in the restoration of her child. In the mother's recovery, which follows the return of her boy, Mrs. Chambers comes to understand the meaning of true maternal love.

"HELP WANTED"

(Morosco—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

WHEN the elderly employer perfumes his mustache and secretes a hand mirror in the top drawer of his desk for frequent consultations, it's high time for little Gertie Meyer, his stenographer, to remember the admonition of the popular song to the effect that red lights are placed in cafes to warn the young person of her danger.

This Gertie was dragged into it all very unwillingly and appreciated so much her rescue by Jack Scott, the junior member of Jerrold Scott & Son, that she knew she loved Jack. So Jack took her home to his mother and daddy got off without the usual threatened law suit.

This is an adaptation of Jack Lait's play by the same name which had a short run in New York last season, and was also presented in Chicago. The work of adaptation is done as well as can be with the basic material.

SCOTT, SR., CAPITULATES

Lois Meredith plays Gertrude Meyer. Owen Moore is pleasing as Jack Scott. He is very forceful, in the scene where he confronts his father. Hobart Bosworth plays the wrist-watch-perfumery-millionaire. His strong personality is completely lost in the impersonation of an elderly Beau Brummell.

Adele Farrington, Herbert Standing and Lillian Elliot are in the cast. George W. Hill was the comeraman. Hill is the man who is photographing "The Diamond from the Sky." It's about time he was becoming recognized. His work, such as a very quick "panoram," was finished throughout.

PHOTOPLAYERS' CLUB GIVES UP ROOMS

Los Angeles, April 26.

THE club rooms of the Photoplayers, Inc., a social organization of men engaged in the making of motion pictures, organized here more than two years ago, have been closed, and officers state this action was taken because of little interest manifested by members, which caused a deficit each week of $60 or more.

The closing of the club rooms does not mean the disbanding of the organization, as already arrangements have been made for a continuation of the weekly good fellowship dinners at the Hoffman cafe, each Wednesday evening.

"THE HIGH ROAD"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE story presented in this picture is one of no little familiarity in the world of fiction, the speaking drama and the silent drama. But inasmuch as the theme is familiar, it has been made so because of its popularity. For pure melodrama Edgar Sheldon's play will hold the screen longer than its predecessor held the boards.

Such success that will greet the play in its picturized form, will be due in practically every sense to the director, John W. Noble, whose original style of working out the story lends it an air of distinction.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE LOCKED DOORS

Instead of starting at the beginning, Mr. Noble takes the opening scenes from the middle of the story and then works back, showing the causes which led Mary Page to become the mistress of Wilson. Then we follow her as a factory girl, see her efforts to obtain more wages for the workers crowned with success, and finally made very happy by marrying an old lover.

There is one great big thrill in the picture, namely, the factory fire which is realistically done. The girls may be seen leaping from the windows to the street below. We don't see them land, but an effective touch is given by showing the bodies lain along the street covered with shrouds.

Mr. Noble's manner of having the close-ups fade in and out of the other scenes, is very effective after one has become used to it. In fact, the entire picture is filled with clever touches which can hardly help but be noticed, and it is these effects which will lift the picture above mediocrity.

The cast is headed by Valli Valli, who appears as May. She gives an attractive performance throughout the picture. Wilson is played by Frank Elliot, and Edward Brennan is Barnes. The scenes are all clearly photographed.

"THE CUP OF LIFE"

(Mutual Masterpictures—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IF we were asked to choose the best of the countless number of picture productions released during the year, concerning the pathetic story of a girl who spurned the proverbial straight and narrow path, only to find that her chosen life resulted in misery and degradation, we would mention without hesitation "The Cup of Life."

Quite a broad and dangerous statement to pronounce, so if there are those who believe we err in our opinion, we will withdraw it on proof that it is wrong.

Such a story that has so endeared itself to the hearts of the public, that it is released with more or less regularity by every producing concern in the business, must of a necessity rely almost totally on the acting of the cast to lift it from its sister pictures containing the same theme.

This merit "The Cup of Life," coming from the studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, possesses, together with some extraordinary human situations which are as impressive and telling as they are true to life and realistic. To C. Gardner Sullivan, who prepared the scenario, and to Thomas H. Ince, who supervised its production, a great amount of credit should go for the stable continuity of theme, the well laid settings, and the effective sequence of scenes; but in its finished state the cast will justly receive the greater part of attention.

Two sisters demand the greatest interest throughout the picture. They live in a dirty and squalid part of the city. One is content with her life, and marries a man of her own class. Her husband becomes prosperous and she lives in peace and happiness with her family.

The other, becoming disgusted with her surroundings, takes the easy path. Bessie Barriscale, who appears in this part, invests the role with great feeling. Pretty and fresh at first she slowly changes to merely a painted "thing," and the transformation is so complete that it is almost impossible to believe that the same person is playing the one woman. The part of the other sister is well taken care of by Enid Markey, while Charles Ray is seen as her husband.

Frank Borzage and Howard Hickman, Gertrude Claire, Arthur Maude and a dozen other players who have from time to time been starred in New York motion pictures, have important parts.

"WITH BRIDGES BURNED"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE three-reel pictures which have been put out by Edison lately have been of a quality which, it must be admitted, this one fails to measure up to. The chief trouble seems to be in the weakness of the story, or in its unsuitability for screen production. Augustus Phillips and Mabel Trunelle, who, so far as characters of any importance are concerned, do the good acting which is expected from them.

The story is one of Rex Beach's earlier pieces of work, and deals with the struggles of a young married couple to seize success when failure seemed to be their lot.

A young engineer is discharged in a wave of economy which hits his company's plant. As he has no other source of income and is unable to find another place, he is inclined to be hopelessly despondent. His wife reads of a $3,000,000 contract which is about to be let for some work in South Africa of the nature done by the firm for whom her husband has worked. She induces her husband to try for this contract, even though his former employers refuse to do anything more than appoint him a free lance agent.

HIS WIFE ADVISES A BOLD STEP

Taking the $1,000 which the young wife had received as a wedding present from her father, the man goes to England, and with only ten days to examine the specifications, prepares his bid, and gets the job. Thus success comes as the result of pluck and brains.

"BEULAH"

(Balboa—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HENRY B. WALTHALL, whom many consider the best dramatic actor on the screen, is the central figure in this six-part version of the novel of the same name by Augusta J. Evans handled by the Alliance program. Mr. Walthall plays Dr. Guy Hartwell, whose life is embittered by the infidelity of his first wife.

He adopts Beulah Benton, an orphan. This part is ably handled by Joyce Moore, who lifts the role above that of the ordinary "slavery" well nigh to the sublime, without forgetting that Beulah was a foundling. The inherent sadness of the character, too, it well mirrored in Miss Moore's expressive, intense face.

CLARA JOINS THE HANDS OF DR. HARTWELL AND BEULAH

Beulah's position in the Hartwell home is none too pleasant through the attitude of the doctor's sister. Eugene, another former inmate of the orphan asylum, whom Beulah had learned to love comes between the girl and the doctor. Eugene, by the way, is a thoroughly worthless character. But the lovers are finally united over the death bed of a mutual friend during a scarlet fever epidemic.

This is essentially a dramatic picture, and as such is a well-acted portrayal of a grim story which ends happily. The work of Henry Walthall never needs the stamp of praise. Miss Moore is the most conspicuous of the supporting cast and very able in her part. Many well-chosen close views and spectacular scenes lend value to the drama, which is strong in itself.

Others in the cast are Clifford Grey, Elsie Allen, Mae Prestell, Gypsy Abbott, Correne Grant, Margaret Nichols, Leopold Medan, Mollie McConnell, Henry Stanley, Gordon Sackville, Hazel Henderson, Sylvia Ashton, Charles Dudley, and Margaret Mulvane. The scenario is by Will M. Ritchey.

"GREATER THAN ART"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

JUST how long an attractive American girl would be able to play with fire in the shape of a wealthy Parisian man-about-town on his native heath, especially when he was supplying her with all the necessities and luxuries of life, we will not attempt to say. In this picture the heroine does this trick for a long enough period so that the Frenchman's ante-mortem statement comes as the biggest surprise of the story.

In producing this picture the difficult task of getting the atmosphere of the Latin quarter of Paris was attempted. This has never been done successfully in any American made picture which has come to our notice, but the effort made here is a commendable one.

Much of the excellence of the effect is due to the fine acting of Gertrude McCoy, as Lavinia Santell, the American art student in Paris, Bigelow Cooper also plays a difficult role with success. Duncan McRae is seen as one of the directors of the French school.

Left penniless by the sudden death of her father in America Lavinia tries to struggle on alone. Then a French bon vivant offers her a chance to continue her work in comfort for certain privileges. At first she rejects the offer in disgust but later she accepts it in desperation. Judging by the action of the story she becomes the man's mistress, but as hinted above she managed to avoid the final surrender.

However, she feels herself unworthy of the love which she is offered by an American artist. Then follows some of the familiar matter about prize pictures, together with some scenes strongly suggestive of "The Light That Failed." There is a duel, and a separation in anger. Later, of course, all comes out well and the young Americans find happiness together, while the old roue dies of too much good living. The drama is so constructed as to hold the attention of the audience very closely.

"THE LADY OF THE LIGHTHOUSE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CLOSE on the heels of the Vitagraph Company's plea for the passage of the Widowed Mother's Pension bill, its preachment against capital punishment, and its bid for peace, comes "The Lady of the Lighthouse," illustrating the almost uncanny adaptability of the blind, in a picture that is greater in educational value than it is in a dramatic sense.

In order to introduce the spectator to the wonders of the lighthouse, the home of the blind, situated at 111 East Fifty-ninth street, New York City, the producers have introduced a small boy, blinded while celebrating the Fourth of July.

The youth is taken to the lighthouse and is introduced to numerous of its inmates, and after a while he is thoroughly happy. In the end an operation is resorted to and his sight is restored.

The various useful occupations of the blind take up a great portion of the three reels, while the tutoring of the boy by the Lady of the Lighthouse, who later marries his father, lends heart-interest action to the story.

The boy, Reginald Sheffield, is a clever young actor, and gives a sympathetic performance in the principal role of Victor Vaughan. Rose Tapley is good in the title part and Lionel Adams is the boy's father.

Mandy Wilson, the colored mammy of the Vitagraph studios, furnishes what little comedy there is in the picture.

As a semi-educational film this one is excellent. Helen S. Woodruff prepared the scenario and Harry Lambart directed the work.

"RAFFERTY SETTLES THE WAR"

(All Celtic Film—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS comedy marks the appearance of a new entrant in the field of film makers. One picture, and that a single reel offering, can hardly be used as the basis of predicting the quality of future work. It may be said, however, that in "Rafferty Settles the War" one finds a clean comedy, which, while it may not amuse as much as some of the more lively farces, will certainly offend no one.

Rafferty is a genial old Irishman, who is much annoyed by the wrangling of his neighbors over the European war. Whenever he seeks peace and repose the war breaks out. One day he falls asleep and dreams that he is settling the war.

All of the monarchs of the contending countries meet at dinner at his home. He reads to them the peace treaty which he has signed and smiles happily while they sign it. When he wakes up he announces that he has just settled the war.

The picturing of the various European monarchs is done exceptionally well. The Kaiser and King Peter of Servia are two of the more strikingly life-like portrayals.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Ninth Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE BLACK BOX" seems to grow in interest with each succeeding episode. The situations continue to be more startling, and the mystery surrounding the persons of Craig and the Ashleigh family becomes more impenetrable with every foot of film.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, the author, has succeeded in keeping up the excellent pace at which he commenced nine weeks since, so that the outcome of the story can hardly be anticipated even at this point in the more than half completed serial.

A favorable effect always aimed at in film plays of a recurrent nature, has been marvelously well achieved in "The Black Box." Each instalment ends at a point of unusual suspense, and if there were no other reasons to draw the people back to see the following episode, this one surely would.

The happy part of it is, however, that there are many other causes, enumerated in previous comments, easily guessed, which possess the magnetic power of sustaining the interest from one week to another.

The episode in hand, entitled "Lost in London," opens with the discovered murder of Lord Ashleigh. A short time afterward Craig is caught by two of the manor servants. On seeing the professor he expresses great fear and surprise, so we may guess, that he picked the wrong one of the twin brothers on which to execute his foul deed. Craig is imprisoned in the cellar of the Ashleigh Castle, but soon makes good his escape.

In the meantime, Lenora, who has lost her way in the London streets, is made the captive of a white slaver, who has so far successfully eluded the police and Scotland Yard. Quest in his search for her stumbles on an easy clue to her whereabouts, and in a short time she is rescued and her captors turned over to the authorities.

By this time the liner bearing Laura has arrived in port. On disembarking Laura almost runs into Craig, who is escaping to a vessel bound for India. She hurries to Quest's headquarters and informs him of her discovery.

The detective's party hastily charters a boat and soon overtakes the slowly departing ship. Craig, who is serving in the capacity of second steward, sees their approach and is hiding in the dim recesses of the huge vessel, when the pursuing party embarks.

"WHO BEARS MALICE"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WRITTEN by Elizabeth N. Carpenter, well produced by Edgar Jones, the leads taken by Jones, Justina Huff and Louis Mortelle, this two reeler gives a chance for some excellent acting on the part of the principals and some realistic scenes of the Maine woods, but which were really taken in the snow at Betzwood, the Lubin farm.

George Colby has to leave his sweetheart Adele because there is no work, and becomes a trapper in the Northern woods where another trapper, Tom Weaver, becomes his enemy. This leads to fights and feuds until Colby hears that work has started again at home. He returns, marries Adele, and they are happy as doves until Weaver, seeking revenge, finds out the place where his enemy is supposed to be.

Adele intuitively suspects his mission and by deception gets him off the track, but herself in trouble, for Weaver pursues her with love, her husband with suspicion. When the climax comes Adele foolishly determines to go away with the villain in order to save hubby's life, but he returns in time, has a terrible fight with Weaver where guns, axes and knives play their lurid part.

Result, death of Weaver by falling on his own knife; peace and happiness for the married ones. Justina Huff is sweet and appealing as Adele Colby. The two men hate and love and fight like the two red blooded animals they are pictured to be.

JESSE L. LASKY RETURNS TO LOS ANGELES

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, April 26.

JESSE L. LASKY returned to the West Coast, arriving the early part of this week, and has since been busy putting into realities the plans formulated at the New York office.

At an early date an additional producing company will be added to the present number, which will make a total of four, all of which will be kept busy, for within the next few days the actual work of producing a subject of nine or more reels will be taken up, and three directors and companies are needed at all times in the making of regular releases for the Paramount program.

Edgar Selwyn has completed his work in the "Arab," and departed for the East the early part of this week. The subject is now in the cutting room of the Lasky laboratory, and will be completed by the end of the week.

Victor Moore, who was starred in "Snobs," is expected to arrive the first of the coming week for appearance in another film.

Other stars expected within the next two weeks are Fanny Ward for "The Marriage of Kitty," Laura Hope Crews for "The Fighting Hope," and Blanch Sweet and Carlyle Blackwell, now playing in "The Puppet's Crown," will next appear in "The Clue."

DETROIT WILL HAVE NEW $1,500,000 THEATRE

ANOTHER $1,500,000 deal in downtown property was practically closed last week between John H. Kunsky, who now operates a chain of eight theatres in Detroit, and the various owners of the property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Witherell streets, that city.

The property has a frontage of one hundred feet on Witherell street and 220 feet on Broadway, and faces Circus Park. From Woodward avenue, Detroit's leading thoroughfare, it is only a few feet. The lease runs for twenty years on some of the property and ninety-nine years on the balance.

The new theatre will cost close to a half million dollars and will be the largest and finest in the country, according to Mr. Kunsky. It will be exclusively for motion pictures.

The work of tearing down the present buildings will start within a few months, and it is expected that this playhouse will be ready by the first of 1916.

FROHMAN FILMS INTEREST ENGLISH BUYERS

THE English film producers have been handicapped in their work by the war which kept all films from the continent out of Great Britain.

The Frohman Amusement Corporation's first successful film, "The Fairy and the Waif," is a sweet story, such as has always been popular in England. The second big production of the Frohman corporation has even more of the English atmosphere. The star is C. Aubry Smith, also a champion cricketeer, which means much on the other side. The story is an English story written by Alfred Sutro and the lead opposite Mr. Smith is played by Marie Edith Wells, a beautiful English girl, who, to the mind of Director George Irving is a great find for the screen.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Masked Fate," (Biograph. Fri., May 7.)—One of the most antique situations known to the screen is the one in which a man playing burglar happens to encounter a real burglar. In spite of complete staleness of this plot it is the one used in this picture. The lack of interest is correspondingly great. Isabel Rea and Kenneth Davenport are the principals.

"A Day's Adventure." (Biograph. Sat., May 8.)—Some crooks capture a youth on his way to claim an inheritance, and after making him a prisoner one of them takes his credentials and passes himself off as the heir. His success is short lived, and after various adventures the crooks are captured. Charles West and Claire McDowell are seen as the hero and the leader of the thieves.

"Toys of Destiny." (Biograph. Mon., May 3.)—The time frazzled plot of a former actress engaged as a servant about a theatre, and the successful star, who turns out to be her daughter, is crowded into the screen once more in this picture. Isabel Rea and Marie Newton are seen as mother and daughter.

"Black Sheep." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., May 4.)—All the old standbys of the writer of melodrama are used in this play. There is the dissipated son, the scheming father who marries for money, the wealthy ward, the manly step-son, and besides these the usual murder of the son, with blame falling on the step-son. Then, naturally, there is the button torn from the murderer's coat, which clears the innocent man and allows wedding bells to ring. In the cast are Edward Cecil, Hector Sarno, Jane Wolf, Raymond Nye, Violet Reid and Vola Smith.

"The Master of the Sword." (Biograph. Thurs., May 6.)—Learning that her sister has been seduced by a fencing master a girl promises the dying victim that she will have revenge. She takes fencing lessons from the man until she becomes his equal. Meantime she has unnerved him by a series of notes signed by "The Avenger." When she finally appears in a mask and attacks the man he is so frightened that he dies of heart failure during the contest. In the cast are Madge Kirby, Charles Perley and Augusta Anderson.

"The Fable of the Galloping Pilgrim Who Kept on Galloping." (Essanay. Wed., May 5.)—A clever George Ade comedy showing how an ambitious belle, with the aid of her foxy mother, captures a wealthy bachelor. The bachelor, tired of the gay life, longed for a quiet home and fireside. He thought the timid young girl an ideal mate until she took the brakes off after the wedding, and then there was a rude awakening.

"How Slippery Slim Saw the Show." (Essanay. Thurs., May 6.)—Slippery Slim, his wife and baby attend a 10, 20 and 30-cent melodrama put on at the local opera house by a company of barnstormers. The baby, unlike its spellbound parents, did not enjoy the blood and thunder, and raised its voice in angry protest. Poor Slim had to leave in the midst of the most exciting scene to take the disturbing infant out. Amusing burlesque upon a cheap melodrama occupies the greater part of the reel.

"Thirty." (Essanay. Two reels. Sat., May 8.)—A scenario written by Victor Eubank supplies the material for an interesting newspaper picture. A star reporter sent to interview an attractive heiress who has a deep-seated hatred for the press, becomes engaged by her to keep her name out of the paper.

In doing so, he uncovers an anarchist's plot to blow up the home of a wealthy neighbor. The reporter and the heiress fall in love, and the former is made manager of a large newspaper which she owns.

The office and press room of a Chicago daily is effectively made use of to lend the proper atmosphere. Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne are featured.

"Sue." (Essanay. Mon., May 3.)—Dorothy Warshauer, winner of the contest carried on by the Chicago "Herald" and the Essanay Company for the most beautiful and popular girl in Chicago, and Albert Roscoe play the leads.

The story is based upon the actual contest. An heiress submits her photograph, and is picked by the judges to appear at the Essanay studio. Here she meets the star reporter of the paper and they fall in love.

The dissipated son of a millionaire, with much newspaper influence, is also in love with the girl, and he unsuccessfully tries to persuade her to give up the project. That night he is arrested in a gambling raid and released through the star reporter's influence.

The reporter and winner of the contest become engaged. A fair picture that will be of particular interest to those who have followed the Chicago "Herald" contest. Miss Warshauer's acting is good for an amateur.

"The Profligate." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., May 4.)—Produced from Arthur Hornblow's novel of the same name, this picture contains many thrilling situations. The cast is excellent, including E. H. Calvert, Ruth Stonehouse, Bryant Washburn and Thomas Commerford.

A reformed profligate falls in love with a girl who afterwards learns of his past. To prove himself innocent of his foster uncle's murder, a crime of which he had been barely acquitted, he sets out to find the real murderer.

In the murderer, he discovers his own father, who had deserted him when he was a baby. The girl learns the truth and signifies her love for him in spite of it.

"Cartoons in the Kitchen." (Edison. Tues., May 4.)—This reel consists of a series of decidedly clever animated cartoons interspersed with short scenes which serve to connect them. Several different sets of the moving drawings are shown, and all of them are funny.

"Jack Kennard, Coward." (Edison. Wed., May 5.)—This subject was made from the picture which won the college scenario contest. It indicates that the competition must have been decidedly poor, since it is rather a weak drama. It deals with a college student who is accused of cowardice by a jealous rival, but who not only proves the accuser wrong, but heaps coals of fire on his head in the process. Olive Templeton and Harry Beaumont are in the cast.

"A Sad Dog's Story." (Edison. Sat., May 8.)—A dog is supposed to tell this story, and a rather pleasing and novel effect is thus obtained. The dog is quite a capable actor. During the course of his adventures he is stolen and sold, but finally comes back into the possession of his original owners, who had banished him a short time before.

"The Actress and the Cheese Hound." (Kalem. Fri., May 7.)—When a knight of the road learns that an actress is staying at a local hotel, and has with her a fabulously valuable cheese hound, he investigates with a view to stealing the dog. A henpecked husband who has never seen a real live actress is also interested in the visitor. Complications follow, and only end with the timely arrival of the actress' husky husband. Marin Sais plays the role of the cheese hound's owner. The picture will interest all audiences.

"The Wild Engine." (Kalem. Sat., May 8.)—Few of the Hazards of Helen have had thrills of a more thrilling nature than this, the latest of the series. An engine moving in the yards gets away after the driver has fallen from the cab. A wreck seems inevitable, but Helen takes matters in hand and averts the tragedy. Her dive from a high drawbridge on a motorcycle is not only exciting, but an evidence of remarkable pluck. Not many men would care to try the stunt.

"An Innocent Sinner." (Kalem. Three reels. Mon., May 3.)—This is a melodrama in which two murders are unpunished. A man marries his brother's mistress. A doctor who possesses hypnotic power in an unusual degree is the principal villain. The principals are Katherine La Salle, Guy Coombs and James B. Ross.

"Ham's Easy Eats." (Kalem. Tues., May 4.)—Ham and Bud enjoy the society and food of persons quite out of their usual set. As with most such experiences their good fortune does not last very long, and it has a strenuous conclusion.

"The Clairvoyant Swindlers." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., May 5.)—A wealthy business man becomes interested in the occult, and as a result is taken in by a gang of swindlers posing as Oriental swamis. The girl detective is called in by the man's daughter, and ends a seance by cutting the wires of the telephone through which the "spirit" talked. Marin Sais, as the girl detective, makes the third actress who has played this part.

"A Hot Time in Punkville." (Lubin. Tues., May 11.)—A regular weekly cartoon by Vincent Whitman, showing the adventures of "Rastus" when he arrives home after a stolen ride in a box car.

The chicken he tries to grasp leaves him suddenly with only an egg for his pains, and the cow he next tries jumps over the moon, causing Rastus to get mixed up with the stars. Returning to earth he finds himself in a bad fix on falling into a bathroom, where the landlady is preparing her bath. This will cause many laughs.

"Who Stole the Doggies?" (Lubin. Tues., May 11.)—The hackneyed theme of the "weinerwurst," the cook and the rival policeman once more comes to the front in this release. The sausages being stolen, and Murphy seeing Maggie with a string of "hot dogs," arrests her in spite of his love.

Before she can explain Hogan comes along and arrests Murphy for having the sausages in evidence. The whole village gets wind of the matter and enters the game and tries to hang Murphy, but compromise on Hogan, when Maggie finally succeeds in explaining matters. Very funny to some people. Acted by Francis Nemyer, Babe Hardy and Harry Loraine.

"What Money Will Do." (Lubin. Fri., May 14.)—This story of an old man returning from Alaska with money, but pretending to be a pauper to test his son, leaves a "bad taste in the mouth" because the son is so unnatural as to turn his old father out to die in the poorhouse.

When he is rescued by a farm hand and his son's adopted daughter he gives them his wealth and makes his home with them when they marry. His son Fred and his grandson Paul now try to put him in an asylum, but he escapes. With all his fortune in bank notes, he is finally caught by these villainous relatives, but burns his money rather than let it fall to Fred and Paul. Such a film neither points a moral nor adorns a tale. Played by Dolly Larkin, May Dorsey, Marvin Mayo, William Parsons, J. A. Morley, Webster Campbell.

"An Arizona Wooing." (Selig. Tues., May 4.)—A Tom Mix Western drama in which a sheep herder is pegged out in the desert by a band of unfriendly cattlemen. He is released in time to prevent a Mexican outlaw from forcibly marrying his sweetheart.

"Her Career." (Selig. Wed., May 5.)—An amusing drama showing how an ex-actor discouraged his young stage-struck wife from going on the stage, and at the same time, keeping his identity unknown, protected her from the attentions of the manager of the dramatic school.

"The Strategist." (Selig. Fri., May 7.)—This comedy contains some laugh-provoking situations, among which is a wild rough-house scene. The story has to do with the struggles of a young man wishing to marry the girl he loves. He finally succeeds in spite of the attempts of the old maid daughter of his liberal employer to win him as her husband. Elsie Greeson and Sidney Smith are among the cast.

"The Lion's Mate." (Selig. Sat., May 8.)—An exciting and well-produced jungle zoo picture with its scenes laid in the wilds of Africa. A missionary and his daughter are captured by an Arab half-breed engaged in illicit slave traffic. They are rescued by a young Englishman who was sent out to take charge of an ivory trader's camp. The half-breed is torn to pieces by a lion whose mate he had killed.

"Cutey's Sister." (Vitagraph. Mon., May 3.)—Cutey shows the photograph of a popular actress as that of his sister. He at once becomes very popular among the boys and has a chance to meet all of their sisters. When the actress and her husband arrive in town trouble starts for Cutey, but he manages to save himself. Wally Van and Nitra Frazer are the principals.

"A Lily in Bohemia." (Vitagraph. Wed., May 5.)—Lillian Walker is featured in this drama in the somewhat familiar role of the country girl whose husband falls down in trying to make her like his habits of life. Her attitude causes him to leave his footless round of Bohemian pleasures.

"The Park Honeymooners." (Vitagraph. Thurs., May 6.)—This is a novel sort of picture in that it consists almost entirely of views in New York City parks. Being unable to go abroad, a pair of newlyweds spend their honeymoon in New York parks and use their camera. They are played by Antonio Moreno and Betty Gray.

"The Vanishing Vault." (Vitagraph. Fri., May 7.)—This is an amusing burlesque of detective stories. Paste diamonds and a strangely moving vault figure in the deep dark plot. Billy Quirk and Constance Talmadge head the cast.

"Pathe Daily News, No. 32."—Various good views from all over the world make this an interesting number. The scenes from Europe are all concerned with the war. Those showing the Russian troops just before the capture of Przemysl are unusually fine.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"God Is Love." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., April 24.)—A little child not only brings about a reconciliation between its parents, but also leads an old and cynical hermit to faith in God. The story has a considerable element of improbability, but this is easily overlooked in the interest aroused by the acting of little Bettie Marsh.

The picture is one which will make a particularly strong appeal in theatres which have principally a family patronage. Howard Gaye and Claire Anderson are seen as the temporarily estranged couple. The parting of the old hermit and the child and his subsequent death are touching incidents very well done.

"Home Again." (Komic. Sun., April 25.)—An unusually clever plot makes this a comedy of considerable excellence. A bit of pruning here and there might improve things, but it is not essential. Fay Tincher and Max Davidson are seen as Mr. and Mrs. Grinder. A traveling man is arrested as a purse snatcher and gets thirty days, although entirely innocent.

During his absence his wife sublets their house to the woman responsible for her husband's arrest. On his release the supposed purse snatcher goes to his former home and walks in. The complications which follow may be imagined.

"For the Honor of Bettina." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., April 25.)—This is a melodrama of much force and charm. Bettina is the daughter of an old Italian image maker. She falls in with bad company because of her father's devotion to his work and consequent neglect of her.

A young Italian violinist becomes interested in her and succeeds in saving her from the wiles of a seducer. The only flaw is the decidedly weak appearance of the hero, who is played by Frank Bennett. Teddy Sampson makes a most winsome Bettina. While structural faults may be seen, the film is one which will please any audience.

"The Open Door." (Reliance. Mon., April 26.)—The sort of romantic adventure told in this story can hardly be called real life, but it is none the less interesting. There is much more of an element of mystery and surprise than is often found in a one reel picture. A girl committing her first burglary is caught by a stranger, but the apparent owner of the place turns up and hands them over to a policeman.

The latter is a bogus officer, and abandons the couple after handcuffing them together. The real police arrive in time to capture the clever crooks, but the first man says nothing about the girl's attempt to rob him. Winifred Allen, Bradley Barker, Charles Darcy and William Sidwell compose the cast.

"Checkmate." (Majestic. Tues., April 27.)—There is plenty of fast action and a good story in this film. A broker appropriates his ward's funds, and in an effort to cover his crime induces her to elope with him. The elopement is frustrated by the quick wit of a telegraph operator. A good scene of a race between an express and a motor car on a parallel road adds to the interest. Bess Buskirk is seen as the girl.

"The Buried Treasure." (Reliance. Wed., April 28.)—This is a costume drama of pirates and buried gold. It is handsomely photographed, and of fair interest. In the cast are Florence Crawford, Walter Long and Fred Burns.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 17." (Thurs., April 29.)—There is much that is interesting in this number. Baseball and war are played up strong. Jeff Davis, the hobo king, puts in an appearance. An old-fashioned negro baptism in the Mississippi River is something new in the films. The rest of the events make the reel most desirable.

"The Little Soldier Man." (Majestic. Fri., April 30.)—In its class of juvenile pictures, "The Little Soldier Man," a comedy-drama, may be ranked with the best. Its beauty lies in the fact that its psychology is true to life. The youngsters who play in the principal parts enact a story of child-life instead of emulating the actions of grown-ups. Mildred Harris, the beautiful child who was formerly with the New York M. P. Corporation; Paul Willis and Robert Feuhrer appear as the leads. The photography is excellent.

"Movie Fans." (Falstaff. Fri., April 30.)—A clerk and a stenographer both have high ambitions but low salaries. They dream of becoming respectively a noted scenario writer and a renowned picture actress. But later they find happiness in their love for each other. Lorrain Huling and Billy Sullivan are the leads in this cleverly conceived comedy, which is of average merit.

"Locked Out." (Royal. Sat., May 1.)—While signing for a telegram a young wife locks herself out of her apartment. Hearing some men coming up the stairs she is forced to take refuge on the roof clad only in pajamas. The fire escape is the only means of escape, and that makes it necessary to go through a stranger's room. When her husband arrives as announced in the telegram he finds her in what at first appears to be a most compromising position, but all turns out happily. A rather good comedy with some novel situations.

"The Face Most Fair." (Beauty. Tues., May 4.)—A sprained ankle sends Billy to the hospital where he finds his nurse is the pretty girl he has been looking for. He feigns sickness in order to remain longer, but is unable to deceive the doctor. Afterwards at a garden party he again meets the beautiful nurse and they fall in love.

"The Spark from the Embers." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., May 5.)—A young girl becomes the model of a promising artist and refuses to let her father, a professional crook, know of her whereabouts.

In time the artist marries her. Her father, possessed with a knowledge of her happiness, through a painting which he sees in the artist's house, attempts to kill her, but after she has succeeded in causing his repentance he is shot by the police who heard the struggle.

This picture will pass as interesting; its tense situations are many, as is customary with this variety of plot, and its outcome, while not exactly pleasant, is strong. Frank Borzage is the artist, and Elizabeth Burbridge his wife.

"The Man from Nowhere." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., May 6.)—One of the William S. Hart pictures, which characteristic of all such productions, is most attractive every minute of the time. Mr. Hart, appearing in the title part, has a role which he well knows how to handle, and by reason of his magnetic personality he is the outstanding figure in every scene.

The atmosphere of the lawless west is well conveyed to the spectator, and the scenes are realistic to the extreme. Those scenes which take place on the desert, when The Man from Nowhere and his rival appear unsupported by any others, are extremely well acted and are most engrossing. The story, which is rather out of the beaten path, helps to make the picture one of the best of the week.

"Dreams Realized." (Beauty. Fri., May 7.)—The daughter of an actor rejects the suit of an Italian Count for a poor but worthy young man, thereby winning her father's lasting disapproval. Years later the father, broken down in health, forgives them and goes to live in their happy home. This picture lacks action and point, but will doubtless appeal to the sentimental audience.

"The Kite." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. Wed., May 7.)—Our old friend Dunbar (Edward Brennan) of the Mutual Girl series is on the job once more as a detective in "The Kite." He fathoms a very startling murder mystery concerning the horrible death of a great scientist's friend.

The scientist himself is at first accused of the crime, but friend Dunbar discovers that it his assistant, who meant to kill the professor so his way would be clear to marry his daughter. The detective's methods are exceedingly interesting to follow, and it can hardly be said that the story ever fails to interest, but it is at times unconvincing and lacking in plausability—that is, to the lay mind. We will refer it to a practical electrician as to whether the basis of the picture is logical, but to us it didn't seem so. Howard Hickman and Rhea Mitchell are also in the cast.

"That Doggone Serenade." (Royal. Sat., May 8.)—The neighborhood contains three pests—a mandolin player and a would-be singer, a dog who naturally howls at attempts of the musicians and its feminine owner. The only way to get peace is to marry the two off and muzzle the dog, which is done, after a great bit of trouble. This is a good comedy, the canine's actions being good for many laughs.

"When Empty Hearts Are Filled." (American. Sat., May 15.)—Perfect photography, excellent technique and beautiful seashore scenes make this a very attractive picture. Harry Von Meter and Vivian Rich act the story, which deals with an invalid fisherman and his young wife's love for a little child whom they rescue from a wreck.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"The Poor Fixer." (Luna.)—Herewith are set down the difficulties that beset a well-meaning brother, on attempting to smooth over the quarrel between his sister and her suitor. This is quite a neat little comedy, containing some very funny situations, and some acting which is very suitable for comedy. Dot Farley and other familiar people of the Albuquerque company appear in the leading parts.

"A Little Band of Gold." (Ideal. Two reels.)—This seems to be the time for revivals in all branches of the theatrical world. The Ideal company has brought to life an old sympathetic melodrama, the kind that pulls hard on the heart strings and very often brings tears to the eyes.

All the acoutrements of the old story are present. The honest laborer accused of a crime he did not commit, his suffering wife and three struggling children. Then fifteen years, one of his daughters is engaged to the son of the villain and then of course a dying confession and the old man's release from breaking rock.

At times the story departs from laws of logic, but such pictures and plays have always possessed this license. In the cast are: Lindsey I. Hall, Lucie K. Villa, Edna Payne, George Larkin and Clara Horton.

"The Stronger Mind." (United. Two reels.)—The familiar yarn of the crook who breaks away from his associates to reform and win the heart of an honorable girl. His old master pursues him, but the right is finally triumphant. This is an engaging drama, produced well with several new twists to the old story.

The scenes are characteristic in every instance, some of the Western exteriors being especially beautiful. Murdock MacQuarrie plays the crook who reforms, and Pauline Bush appears as the girl. Lon Chaney is effective as the master criminal. Except for the fact that the watchman of the bank is crudely made up the detail has been well attended to.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 164." (Wed., April 28.)—The police parade, which, by the way, was held in New York on a Saturday and shown for the Strand on the Monday following, in the "Universal Weekly," holds a place in this number, and is most interesting. Events on the Pacific coast hold a prominent place, and then there is the usual quota of scenes from Europe. My Mayer's cartoons are good.

"Tiny Hands." (Powers. Sat., May 1.)—A heart-interest drama produced by Sydney Ayres concerning the Civil War. Mr. Ayres himself leads the cast and is supported by Val Paul, Doris Pawn and Ida Lewis. Memories of his own little child cause the Colonel to pass a Southern lady and her baby through the lines. Simple in plot, this picture is sure to appeal to all classes.

"Cy Perkins in the City of Delusion." (Joker. Sat., May 1.)—Ernest Shields plays Cy and visits the Universal City studio, interrupting several scenes in the course of the making and posing as a general nuisance before he is taken away by his friends. This makes an interestingly funny reel that will surely be enjoyed, as it combines comedy with bits of information regarding studio life.

"His Uncle's Ward." (Big U. Two reels. Sun., May 2.)—This makes a pleasing story. A young man is to marry his uncle's choice, who is eugenically perfect. He rebels and feigns marriage, but on seeing her his attitude changes. He wins her after many humorous situations have been developed.

"$100,000." (Laemmle. Sun., May 2.)—The secretary of a bank, who is in love with an adventuress, plans to abscond with a large portion of the bank's money, but at the eleventh hour the girl discovers that her mother is one of the bank's depositors, and she suddenly reforms and saves the day. This is an exciting offering, produced by Frank Lloyd and played by Mr. Lloyd and Mildred Adams in the leading parts. The mob around the bank, on the verge of failure, is handled very well, and the acting appears most realistic.

No L-Ko release for Sun., May 2.

"For Cash." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., May 3.)—The old father of a mountain girl is so excited when he attempts to shoot his daughter's suitor that he dies. The girl is adopted by a rich cousin, and is taken to the city where she enters into the gay life of society.

The artist being unable to find her, sinks to a much lower level until one day in desperation he sells a painting of her to a blackmailing artist. Thinking better of his deed he returns to the place to find the artist insulting the girl. His timely rescue lays the foundation to a very happy marriage.

Lon Chaney directed this, while Warren Kerrigan and Vera Sisson are the principals. The two reels have been photographed well and some pretty scenes have been obtained, but the story becomes more vague as the action progresses and the main idea is hard to grasp.

"She Winked." (Joker. Mon., May 3.)—Ernest Shields has a number of weird adventures in Egypt with Princess Hassem Goin', a dainty Oriental played by Queenie Rosson. Some of the situations in this are novel, and the picture is put together in a manner which will surely cause it to be fully appreciated as a comedy. Archer McMakin put the picture on.

"The Blank Page." (Imp. Mon., May 3.)—The old story of the young wife and the neglectful husband. The latter is blinded by an explosion in his laboratory. The other man plans to elope with the wife, but the husband stumbles into the room, learns how matters stand and forces the other to fight a duel in the dark.

Both shots go astray, but when the lights go up the villain attempts to kill the husband, and is only prevented by the wife, who sees the true character of both men in time to stay with her husband. Ettienne Giradot, Violet Mersereau and William Welsh are the leads in this drama, which will offer excellent entertainment.

"The Faith of Her Fathers." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., May 4.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

No Rex release for Tues., May 4.

"Caught by a Thread." (Nestor. Tues., May 4.)—Hubby is addicted to the "important engagement" habit, which is secretly known to others than his wife as a poker game. But wifie effects a lasting cure to her false mate in a manner which is very funny, due to its unconventionality. Tom Gibson, who prepared the scenario for this, is responsible for its pleasing originality, and Al Christie, the director, has made the most of the humorous situations. Lee Moran and Victoria Forde are the leads.

"The Little Girl of the Attic." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., May 5.)—After the death of his son, who had married against his wishes, in the Civil war, the father is persuaded upon to seek his daughter, who is suffering severe abuse at the hands of a boarding-school principal, and take her into his home.

This story by Calder Johnstone has been produced by Frank Lloyd with a careful attention to detail, which gives it an air of distinct realism. The few battle scenes which appear are exceptionally well handled.

Marc Robbins registers some effective bits of character work in the role of Caesar, the old colored servant. Helen Leslie is the girl and Millard K. Wilson her father.

"Father Was Neutral." (L-Ko. Wed., May 5.)—Father cares little as to which of his daughter's three suitors she accepts, as he has a deep dislike for all of them. It comes down to the survival of the fittest, and Billie Ritchie is the winner. This is an ordinary slapstick, which will produce laughs, without exhibiting anything extraordinarily clever. Henry Bergman and Peggy Pearce are also in the cast.

"Rene Haggard Journeys On." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., May 6.)—This drama opens with a court-room scene, in which a man has just been tried and convicted of murder. Then follows his story, which is presented in an artful and gripping manner, which merits are enough to practically nullify the fact that it is of a very familiar nature.

In brief, the convicted man has killed the one who wronged his sister, now the wife of the governor. There is very good acting in this by Dorothy Phillips as the girl, Joseph W. Girard as the governor, William Welsh as the heavy and Esther Banks as the mother of the doomed murderer.

Ben Wilson, who produced the picture, is nominally starred as the justified avenger, yet his part is smaller than those of the rest of the mentioned principals.

"Roses and Thorns." (Big U. Thurs., May 6.)—An unhappily married man rescues a country girl from a perilous situation while on a hunting trip. Thereafter he cares for her. Finally he decides that his real place is with his wife and children.

The other woman resents his decision until she sees his little boy. Edna Maison, Ray Gallagher and Lois Holmes play the leads in this drama, which, although rather abrupt in termination, will please the average audience.

"Counting Out the Count." (Sterling. Thurs., May 6.)—The pilot of a penniless vaudevillian who assumes the person of a count is taken as a vehicle to introduce Billy Reeves to patrons of the picture theatre. Some of his antics are funny, but the picture is poorly put on, and even the details of this simple and well known story are sometimes terribly jumbled.

"Almost a King." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., May 7.)—The keeper of a delicatessen store is summoned to take the throne of a European kingdom, so he leaves his wife and children behind and departs for a good time.

The officials of the state desire that he marry the princess, but he rebels at first. She falls in love with an American traveler, and matters are in an uproar when the king's wife arrives and drags him off to his home and family. Lee Moran, who plays the king in this, will be practically responsible for the picture's success as his ridiculous capers in the burlesque court are most humorous.

Billie Rhodes makes a very pretty princess, while Jack Dillon and Stella Adams take the remaining major roles. Queen Pretzel is a funny figure. Al Christie wrote and produced this, and, although the laughs have been thicker and truer in some of his one reel subjects, "Almost a King" will do credit to his name.

"Father's Money." (Victor. Fri., May 7.)—Just a light comedy produced by Harry Myers and played by Mr. Myers, Rosemary Theby and Brinsley Shaw. The rich man's son refuses to work until he becomes engaged; then to get some money he procures a check from his father, and plays against his parent in the real estate market, making quite a sum. This will surely entertain as the players are capable. Mr. Shaw makes an excellent showing as the father.

"Tony." (Imp. Fri., May 7.)—Tony rescues the bank president's daughter from a blast, but is injured himself. In gratitude for this the father sends for Tony's wife and daughter in Italy, and at his recovery the family is reunited. A simple yet heart-interest drama with King Baggot, Ned Readon and Jane Gail in the leading parts. It is sure to be appreciated as Mr. Baggot invests the title part with a great amount of feeling.

"The Blood of His Brother." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 8.)—Of two brothers the younger treads the downward path, at length meeting with death after he has become a highway robber. The other attains wealth and happiness, the first through the discovery of a mine by his wayward brother, and the second through marriage with his employer's daughter.

Henry McRae has given us two more reels of thrilling melodrama in this picture, which contains the average number of impossibilities, but at the same time the action, always swift and exciting, never fails to hold the interest.

The holdup of the train by the band of outlaws is the basis of a number of sensational scenes. The bandits leap from their horses to the cars while both are in motion; some of them execute falls from their galloping horses, which are thrillers by themselves. Wellington A. Playter and Sherman Bainbridge are seen in the respective roles of the good and bad brothers, and Marie Walcamp and Rex de Roselli complete the cast of principals. The photography is clear and the scenes characteristic in every instance.

"In the Hills Beyond." (Powers. Sat., May 8.)—A married city man arrives in the country and proceeds to alienate a young girl's affections from her rural sweetheart, so nothing is left for that gentleman to do but to show his rival up. This makes a fair drama with a comedy touch at the close. Sydney Ayres plays the country farmer, and Val Paul and Doris Pawn handle the other leading roles.

"The Master Rogues of Europe." (Big U. Three reels. Sun., May 9.)—Two international crooks, a man and a woman, proceed to hoodwink the European denizens of the law for the greater part of these three reels. Finally they are captured by a young doctor, who is almost killed in his attempt to bring them to justice.

This picture is of foreign manufacture, and because of its exciting and well constructed story should prove a money making assets to the program of any house. The plot, although simple, is of unusual magnetic power, and the chain of events through which the two crooks and their pursuers pass are sensational and thrilling enough to satisfy the most ravenous appetites for such a variety of production.

Characteristic of the greater number of foreign made films, "The Master Rogues" contains fine photography, and a number of scenes are tinted with colors that are most pleasing to the eye. For presentation of a thrilling story in an artistic manner, this picture is one of the best.

"The Toll of Youth." (Laemmle. Sun., May 9.)—The father dreams that his son fails to pass an eugenic examination previous to matrimoney, and subsequently that he is forced to murder him. On awakening he discovers that it is only a nightmare, and that the test has been taken with successful results.

Frank Lloyd produced this, and Marc Robbins, Millard K. Wilson and Helen Leslie play the leads. It is original, to say the least, but its only reason for existence seems to be to display the horrible nightmare of the father, who has foolishly advised his son to see high life before the wedding.

Lively Bout in Gotham Film

The Clairmont Athletic Club fairly reeked with atmosphere on Tuesday afternoon when Director J. J. Mahoney produced the ringside scenes in the first big feature of the Gotham Film Company, "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan," in which Willie Ritchie, the ex-champion lightweight, is starring with Betty Marshall.

In arranging for the personnel of the picture an announcement had been made on Saturday night last at a club stag that Willie Ritchie would spar with Lou Ritchie for four rounds, and club members were out in plenty to see the bout, or, as "Willie" calls it, "the contest." They filled the bleachers to capacity, and although a bit unruly and over-enthusiastic at times, gave Mr. Mahoney real results.

Notables in the ring and the front ranks of fans were Leach Cross, Joe Humphreys, Billy Gibson, Willy Shea, Billy Cramer, Billy Grupp and Roney Davis. Billy Joh refereed.

Miss Marshall was her usual good-looking self and appeared to great advantage in masculine togs with a long ulster. She has been the understudy to Stella Mayhew in "High Jinks."

Huge Wooden Bottle Will Advertise "Prohibition"

Unique Publicity Object Will Be Hauled Through New England States in Accordance with the Campaign Laid Out By E. W. Lynch

A HUGE bottle made of wood and colored to resemble glass with the sinister visage of Demon Rum leering from its mouth, which bottle will be hauled through the New England States, will probably be E. W. Lynch's method of attracting attention to the fact that "Prohibition" is a great feature film and that it will be in such and such town in this or that day or days.

To emphasize the fact that "Prohibition" is not a sermon, but an entertainment, a large banner will stretch between posts at the bottle's side, inviting drinkers and teetotalers to see for themselves that "Prohibition" is a good feature, whether you vote that ticket or not.

E. W. Lynch, who for the last year has been booking features through the New England states from his offices at 110 West Fortieth street, New York City, has great faith in the drawing power of "Prohibition," which Robert T. Kane, president of the Prohibition Film corporation, at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, is actively selling to state right buyers.

Mr. Lynch began his motion picture work as an exhibitor in Worcester, Mass., where, in his Pleasant theatre, he recognized and quickly acted upon the use of features as a means of drawing people inside. About a year ago, in Worcester, he encountered a vaudeville team who were trying to do a protean act—three or four shows a day—and book the feature "David Copperfield" simultaneously.

The job was too big for them and Lynch bought the feature at a bargain. It made so much money for him that later he planked down many thousands of dollars to the Vitagraph company for the New England state rights of "The Christian," and on its rentals cleaned up handsomely.

To facilitate bookings on "Prohibition," Mr. Lynch is this week opening an office in Boston, in order to have closer connection with the exhibitors in the adjacent cities.

A good showman, Mr. Lynch puts in his best licks to help the exhibitor, not only by giving him a feature that will draw, but by supplying a big and striking line of publicity.

Panzer Returns to Screen in Pathe 4-Reel Feature

George Probert, However, Will Play the Lead in "The Fortunes of Pierre," While Other Members of the Cast Are Sam Ryan and Alma Martin

DONALD MacKENZIE, the Pathé producer, announces that he is making a four-reel feature called "The Fortunes of Pierre," which has all the earmarks of a notable success. Mr. MacKenzie has assembled a cast of well known players, most of whom have already achieved fame on the screen.

George Probert, who won golden opinions as Oskar Von Guggen in "Innocent" and the cadet in "The Lure," has the lead and this picture marks his debut before the camera. Mr. Probert confesses that his first two days of picture acting were little less than torture to him. The sight of the lens staring at him all the time was infinitely more dreadful than the batteries of critical eyes on a big opening night.

Paul Panzer, after weeks of successful vaudeville touring, returns to the screen again in this picture. Mr. Panzer, it will be remembered, made himself the best hated villain in the country through his work as Owen in "The Perils of Pauline."

Other members of the cast are Alma Martin, a popular favorite in the "legitimate," Sam Ryan, who has been in many Pathé pictures, and Charles Bunnell, who was with the Pathé St. Augustine Company in the winter of 1913-14.

The picture requires hundreds of supers and Mr. MacKenzie has made arrangements for a troop of cavalry, regulars of the United States Army, who will appear in a number of stirring scenes.

George Brackett Seitz wrote the scenario.

MINA
FILMS

The present day craze for comedy pictures has created a wonderful money-making opportunity for exhibitors, the very limit of which may be realized only by the use of comedies that are always good. One inferior comedy causes a greater set-back to a theatre's business than two genuinely funny films can overcome.

In MINA Films a heart-breaking standard of merit has been set by the producers. This standard is maintained week after week—there is no let down in quality. Though only a few months old, MINA one-reel comedies have achieved a remarkable vogue—an accomplishment of supreme merit alone. Exhibitors will be taking advantage of opportunity by ordering MINA films from the nearest licensed exchange. Released every Thursday on the

THIS new five-part feature which has set the motion picture industry by the ears is not merely a "picture with a punch" but "a picture with innumerable punches".

TIMELY because of the Prohibition wave which is sweeping the Universe.

COMPELLING because of the simple strength of its story — a story from everyday life.

ENTHRALLING because of the beauty of its sentiment. Woven into it is one of the prettiest love tales ever told.

BEAUTIFUL because of the artistry of its makers. Scenically perfect — photographically superb.

NO city too large, no hamlet too small to give "PROHIBITION" an enthusiastic welcome. The subject matter of its story is being discussed everywhere by people in all walks of life.

King Baggot's Marvelous Dual Impersonation THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Imp, 3 reel drama

Corsican Brothers

Founded on Alexander Dumas' masterpiece of fiction, this picture simply pulses with life and atmosphere. It is King Baggot's finest effort by far and he is splendidly supported by Jane Gail and a company of exceptional strength. A production far ahead of the "lemonade" so often handed exhibitors under the "Feature" label and a big drawing card for any theatre wide awake enough to grab at a good thing.

UNIVERSAL

Wellington Playter and Marie Walcamp in THE TORRENT, a triumph of thrilling realism Gold Seal, 2 reels

The Torrent

This is the finest outdoor feature picture ever produced at Universal City, is one of the biggest thrillers ever shown on the screen. In the great scene of the bursting dam, a hugh reservoir containing over 12,000,000 gallons of water was emptied in one wild flood with an effect which is simply stupendous. The dramatic story is magnificently interpreted by both principals and the whole effect is unique and of surprising strength. You cannot afford to miss this.

UNIVERSAL

The great dramatic story, THE GIRL WHO HAD A SOUL, one of Mary Fuller's greatest triumphs Victor, 3 reels

The Girl Who Had a Soul

A love story in which the underworld is brought into intimate touch with the spectator. Nothing like the familiar "police" slapstick melodrama, but a clean strong play with a grip and punch to it which is continuous throughout. Back of it all is one of the most interesting love stories ever pictured. Mary Fuller at her best, will most aptly describe the manner in which this brilliant young movie favorite carries her audience with her from first to last. Certain to make a big success.

UNIVERSAL

Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark in THE SMUGGLER'S LASS, a thrilling romance of the sea Bison, 2 reels

The Smuggler's Lass

Movie fans have caught on to Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark in a way which guarantees the success of any picture in which they are featured. In "The Smuggler's Lass" they have a plot in which they are thoroughly at home and this strong and breezy drama of the "blue water" is simply bound to prove a winner wherever shown.

UNIVERSAL

WHERE BRAINS ARE NEEDED, Big U, 2 reel drama, a delightful story, featuring Murdock MacQuarrie and Agnes Vernon

Where Brains Are Needed

"Crime" stories are, as a rule, either too strong for the ordinary spectator or so weak as to be simply a laughing stock. It has remained for the Universal to strike the happy medium and to give pictures like this one with a strong plot, powerfully acted by such stars as Murdock MacQuarrie and Agnes Vernon, an uncommon story of real merit and a setting which carries the air of reality and conviction straight through. Will take a lot of beating.

UNIVERSAL

PROFIT AND LOSS 2 reel Laemmle drama, with Sidney Ayres and Doris Pawn in a strong, powerful love story

Profit and Loss

Lemon hunters had better beware of this brilliant and convincing dramatic masterpiece because it is bound to be one of the biggest successes of the year. The story of the wife, faithless to her blind husband, of her sister's love and patience and the dramatic awakening when the truth is finally revealed are calculated to rouse the emotions of even the most apathetic. A triumphant confirmation of Universal's claim to go one better every time.

UNIVERSAL

AN IDYLL OF THE HILLS, a real life drama that grips. Features Pauline Bush and William Dowlin 2 reel Rex.

An Idyll of the Hills

Lovers of the big outdoors will smell the scent of the trees and hills in every inch of this big, strong, convincing picture. While the West has given us many stories, the deep romance of life in the hill country has never before been pictured in so stirring and realistic a manner. This picture will be a big hit wherever shown. Pauline Bush and William Dowlin are strong favorites with the Movie public and here they have scored a notable success in an exceptionally realistic play.

UNIVERSAL

Thousands of successful theatres in this and other countries are now using the complete Universal program, they have booked it, exhibited it and stuck to it week after week, because they find it immeasurably superior and because it does away with work and worry in the exhibitor's efforts to get up his own program.

How much do you spend a week for so-called features?

How much money have you poured into the coffers of the so-called "feature" film makers, whose best efforts do not even begin to measure up to the ordinary standards of the Universal?

By booking the Universal program you secure productions every week that make the average film producer's stuff look sick.

If you are keen for a success continual, constant, unending week after week, there is but one answer—BOOK THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM AND DO IT NOW.

The Absentee

The Victim

Get these pictures NOW for your theatre

Mr. Business Man—
I dare you to see this moving picture.

Dare you to go look at yourself on the screen!

Dare you to take your wife and daughter—and "the boy"—to see what is happening all about us in business every day.

"The Absentee," a fine, big Master-Picture, with Robert Edeson in the title rôle, puts business before you like a beetle with a pin through it.

Go look yourself over. See the beautiful, glittering wings of you—but don't be blind to the claws (that may not be what naturalists call them, but you understand me, I'm sure)!

I looked at the picture of an April afternoon—when my mind was not over-active. Then I went and walked around the park—and didn't realize it was raining!

"The Absentee" is that kind of a picture. It gives you a mental Turkish bath, then rubs your conscience down with a rough towel. It's a great picture to see. Full of very beautiful scenes—interspersed with some that have prongs in them.

And you get to the office next morning with a new point of view and more vim and vitality than you've had for a long time.

Yes, Mr. Business Man,—go to see "The Absentee." There's not a dull inch of film in the 48,000.

Most of us Americans are business men—whether we are clerks or work at a bench or follow a plough.

Personally—aside from the pleasure of looking at it—I got a lot out of the picture. I'm pretty sure you'll get a lot, too. Go to see

THE ABSENTEE*—produced by the Majestic Motion Picture Corporation—with Robert Edeson.

And, oh, papa dear,—how sweet she is when she cries!

And there you are!

A young girl in a moving picture theatre whispers a half dozen words to her father—and, in a breath, you know more than I could tell you in pages of Mae Marsh, the heroine of this week's second Master-Picture—"The Victim."

Just think of all that means!

What amazing charm and magnetism and, as the little girl said, "sweetness" it takes to show through a veil of tears. I suppose thousands and thousands of people have come actually to love Mae Marsh from just seeing her on the screen.

But, bless me!—here's half my space gone and I've told you nothing of "The Victim."

It's not a big production—or very long. It runs just short of an hour. But such a wholesome, well filled, solid, substantial hour!

There's a fine young hero (Bobby Harron;—he is, or ought to be, a friend of yours, too) and a very real, very villainous villain.

And plenty of excitement—oh, plenty.

And an ending where dreams come true. (The heroine cries again there—but that time for happiness—and she is sweet.)

Yes—it's a good picture; the kind you could whistle if it were music.

And—

You'll want to see it again.

There aren't many better moving pictures about than

THE VICTIM*—with Robert Harron and Mae Marsh.

And whether you pay 10c or a quarter or a dollar to look at it—you will be mighty glad you spent the money!

A good many people have written, asking where they can see Mutual Master-Pictures.

Frankly—the rush for them since people began to find out how good they are has put us away behind in our bookings.

The surest way is to have a chat with the man in the box office at the theatre you usually go to. Ask him to get them for you regularly—and to let you know when he is to show them.

He will—if you say to him: "I want to see

ROBERT EDESON plays Mutual Master-Picture,

AND how real he makes his characters. You would unhesitatingly pay $2 to see him in this play were it reproduced on the stage—and yet for less than one tenth of this sum your patrons can enjoy Mr. Edeson's finished acting in a play that's brim full of beautiful scenery, interesting and exciting situations.

"THE ABSENTEE" is a five-reel Majestic picture, opening with a prologue modeled after the ancient Greek plays, in which "Success," "Power," "Ambition," "Failure" are symbolized by the actors in the play.

The other four reels of the picture carry through the symbolic idea—but are modern, in scene and in action.

Yes, very modern—

Labor difficulties, militia, riots—are shown with a vividness that almost chills—so true are they in their realism.

The business man and his family will want to see this picture, the workingman and his family still more—if you tell them about it.

She is loved by the millions of people who have seen her on the screen.

"THE VICTIM" is not a long picture, but its three reels carry a story full of human interest —of self sacrifice, of love, and of a struggle to do right in the face of great obstacles.

The burglars fight among themselves, in the vault (another extremely exciting scene).

In the end, all turns out well for Mae and Bobby.
And if you watch the faces of your patrons as they file out of your theatre, you'll notice many red eyes—and you'll suspect—no, you'll know they have been crying.

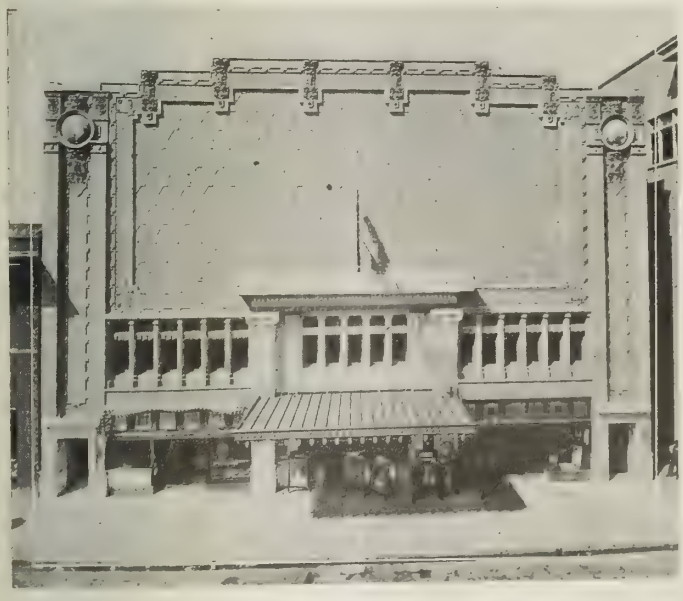
Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre



OGDEN, UTAH, HAS DE LUXE PICTURE THEATRE

OGDEN, UTAH, has six motion-picture houses and a population of 25,000. Now come Albert Scowcroft, H. A. Sims and Charles Zeimer who have demonstrated that actions speak louder than words, when it comes to the slogan: "Nothing is too good for Ogden."

There has just been opened in the Junction City of Utah a motion-picture theatre that comes near being the last word in comfort, convenience and ocular delight of a discriminating public.

With a seating capacity of near 2,300 the new Alhambra theatre sets a standard for cities the size of Ogden.

As a medium of publicity for Ogden it is unique and already the trans-continental visitors en route to the expositions on the coast are advertising Ogden's show house. Unique in appointments, architecture and comforts the Alhambra is different.

The exterior gives promise of what is to be encountered inside. The entire front of the theatre is built of polychrome terra cotta and the architect has struck away boldly from the conventions.

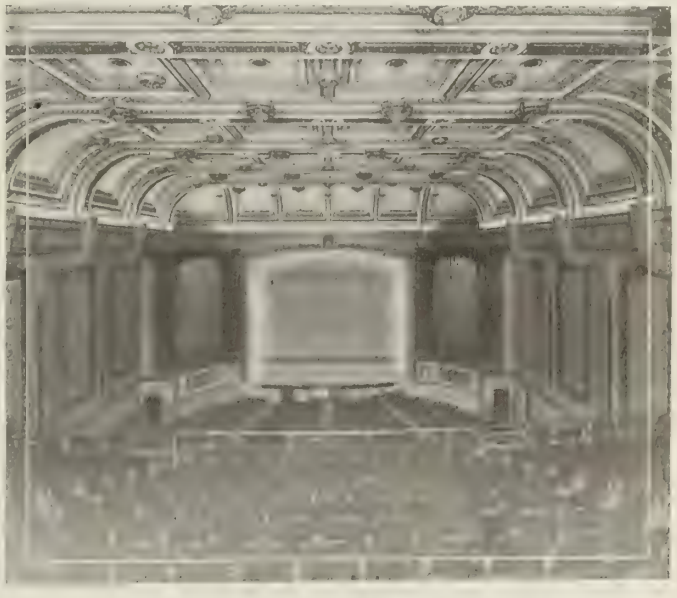
The ornamental work and beautifully molded courses that embellish the massive terra cotta front and lobby walls were made by magnifying and photographing frozen water crystal with their myriad of fantastic shapes and outlines. A steel marquise with art glass and adequately illuminated together with an animated electric sign, complete the exterior decorations.

Interior and Exterior Decorative Schemes Impressive

The lobby with the ticket office to the right and illuminated bulletin board to the left, heavy plate-glass doors, big mirror panels set in the cream terra cotta walls, its tiled floor, mezzanine floor above leading to the manager's offices, stock rooms and operating room, brass work and general appointments all are introductory to the real climax in effects inside.

The ceiling of the lobby with its frosted lights in rosettes and panels is treated in old ivory and gold, and with a mural painting of Music and her cupids adds to the lavishness of the decorative scheme.

Within is the foyer, treated in similar fashion. At either hand are sanitary drinking fountains and various retiring rooms, all with appointments commensurate with the high-class equipment throughout.



The main decorative feature of the interior is the lofty art ceiling, with its enormous cornice overhang support on gigantic brackets and capitals, carried down to the base above the floor line on fluted pilasters. The main ceiling is carried across with a heavy ornamental beam effect with rich coffers intersecting between. From the center of each coffer as well as from each beam intersection hangs an indirect light fixture, containing light globes backed by powerful reflectors.

These fixtures bring out the beautiful color effects of the ceiling, the scheme being French gray, old ivory, blue and gold. The ceiling cove, just above the massive cornice, is lighted by a continuous line of concealed lights extending all round the building.

Over the proscenium arch, which is surmounted by a cartouche containing a gilded cupid with a trumpet, are four large panels, carrying mural paintings in oil and representing Song, Dance, Music and Drama.

$25,000 Organ Installed

High grade chairs are used for seating throughout, the center of the parquet carrying a series of loges railed off in brass. Loges also prevail along the front of the first balcony with the exception of the immediate center where the concealed operating room is located beneath the floor.

The ventilating, heating and cooling systems are of the latest mushroom style, all the air being forced through a spray of water prior to its entering the theatre proper.

The management takes great pride in the organ, which was installed at a cost of $25,000. In addition to the regular sets of pipes it is equipped with a harp arrangement, cathedral chimes and a large echo organ in the rear of the second balcony, which

Maine Law Compels Authorities to Act on License Applications

Bangor, Me., April 28.

UNDER the provisions of a new Maine law, passed by the recent session of the state legislature and taking effect in July, proprietors of motion picture theatres, owners of machines desiring to exhibit, or machine operators, are given the right of appeal in case the municipal officers of the city or town unreasonably refuse or neglect to grant them a license. Instead of the license fee being left in the hands of the municipal officers to determine the new law, which is amendatory to a statute already in force, provides that for exhibitors the fee shall not exceed $10, and for operators not more than $5 per annum.

Under the amended law it is provided that: Any person desiring to keep, exhibit or use any moving picture machine shall make application to the municipal officers of the city or town for a permit or license, and on receipt of the application the municipal officers shall inspect or cause to be inspected the housing provided for such motion picture machine, the machine and the building in which it is located, the latter as to exits, entrances and fire escapes.

If, after inspection, they are convinced that the state regulations are carefully complied with, and the machine is found to be in safe and suitable condition, they may issue a license.

Applicant May Appeal in Ten Days

If such officers, after a written application to them for a license, unreasonably refuse or neglect to grant it, the applicant, by giving them ten days notice and a bond to pay all costs arising therefrom, may appeal to the county commissioners, who after a hearing of the parties may grant the license or not, as they judge reasonable.

No license or permit is granted under this section of the law to any motion picture machine operated by oxhydrogen gas, so-called, or by limelight.

The same right of appeal is given to an operator desiring a license, who is not less than 18 years of age, and has satisfied the municipal officers that he is thoroughly skilled in the mechanical and electrical apparatus and devices used in the operation of the machine.

In relation to the foregoing the amended law provides: "Any person keeping, using or operating any motion picture machine, contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $500, to be recovered on complaint or indictment to the use of a city or town in which any such violation occurs, but no final judgment on such complaint or indictment shall be entered during the pendency of an appeal as provided in sections two and three hereof (those quoted above), and in case such appeal be sustained, such complaint or indictment shall be dismissed."

Restrictions on Buildings Used for Operation

An entire section, relating to the building in which the machines may be operated, is taken from the former law and the following section substituted:

"No motion picture machine involving the use of a combustible film more than 10 inches in length, shall be kept, used or exhibited in any building place of public assemblage or place or building used for entertainment, whether such place or building has been licensed for a public entertainment or not, unless a license or permit shall have been first obtained from the municipal officers of the city or town in which said motion picture machine is kept or exhibited, and said motion picture machine shall be placed in an enclosure or booth consisting of a steel frame covered with asbestos wood and constructed and located in accordance with the specifications hereinafter provided, and the entrances and exits or fire escapes connected with such public building..... erected in accordance with the specifications hereinafter set forth; provided, that this act shall not apply to any motion picture machine operated with only cellulose acetate films not more than one inch and one fourth in width, and using only an enclosed incandescent lamp; provided also, that the manufacturer of such motion picture apparatus shall apply for and receive the approval of the insurance commissioner; and provided also, that no such motion picture apparatus shall be used where an admission fee is charged, except in social, fraternal, charitable, religious and educational organizations, where the machine so used is owned by said organization and used in the city or town where such organization is located, and the proceeds of such admission fees are to be devoted to the uses of the organization."

The state legislature has amended the law in relation to the protection of life in public buildings, and this applies to all rooms used for public assembly or amusement. It provides for proper exits and fireescapes, which shall be kept unobstructed. The municipal officers, where there is no organized fire department, are charged with making an annual inspection or having it made to determine if regulations are complied with.

The municipal officers or fire chief may require changes to be made and give the owners of the buildings 60 days in which to comply. When they find that proper safeguards and precautions are taken they shall issue a certificate to that effect, which shall be valid for a year. Records of these certificates shall be kept by the town or city clerk. Any municipal officer, fire inspector or chief of fire department refusing to perform the duties imposed on him by this law forfeits $50.

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

Remedy for Cone-Burning Carbons

J. Fisher, Philadelphia, Pa.—I have a Power 6-A model with alternating current, using a Compensarc for economizing the current. Have 110 volts and use ¾ inch carbons. I use a Bio Light carbon for the bottom and a Bio carbon for the top.

I find that as soon as it reaches the middle section, the Bio Light carbon which I use for the bottom begins to burn in the shape of a cone. Can you tell me the cause of this and the remedy to apply to prevent it acting this way? Also, what is the best practice to hold the carbons to get the best results on alernating current?

I have a 9 by 12-foot screen and a throw of 65 feet and I notice that it is out of focus on the outside of the screen. How do you account for it? What is the cause; do I need a new aperture plate?

Answer.—Operators have from long practice, when burning alternating current, used both carbons top and bottom of the same size and quality. It is only when burning direct current that you need to make a difference in the two. The reason for you to use a Bio Light carbon for the bottom cannot be surmised.

Use Bio ¾ inch cored carbons for both top and bottom. If then you have any trouble with the bottom carbon burning to a cone it may be remedied by filing off flat, though you should not have this carbon trouble, using a high grade of carbon.

A great many operators prefer to set the carbons in a vertical position and both carbons in alignment for the best operation when burning alternating current. Others let the lamp remain in the same angle as when burning direct current, but keep the two carbons in the same alignment.

It is more or less a matter of taste as to which is the best when the current is obtained through an economizer. If you use alternating current with only a wire resistance, the set for the carbons should be to have the lamp at an angle. The idea is that through a wire resistance you can separate the two carbons to some degree and the best light is from one carbon point only.

Economizers reduce the voltage and the carbons are practically together, forming an intense light zone between the two points.

Hence, a less angle is necessary and the lamp can just as well be put in a straight vertical position.

Your lens trouble would seem to be from a poor quality of objective, or you have not put the several lenses into their relative positions to obtain correct definition across the full field.

Open the mounting and clean the lenses thoroughly and then replace them squarely in correct order. Have the compound lens in front toward the screen with the most curved surface turned in the same direction.

Then if your objective has only the single rear lens, have this with its most curved surface toward the screen. If there are two rear lenses have the concave surface of the one toward the film and put this lens in the barrel first; then the brass ring separator, followed by the double convex lens with the most curved surface turned inward, that is, toward the screen.

When you have the lenses placed in these relations and the out-of-focus trouble does not disappear, then the lenses are of poor quality and you had best send it to the manufacturers for alterations or obtain a new objective.

The Component Parts of Light

G. L. S., St. Louis, Mo.—Will you please explain the meaning of the composition of light? What is the velocity of light and what is the meaning of actinic property of light?

ANSWER.—When a beam of light is made to pass through a prism made of optical glass its rays are decomposed into a number of individual rays of various colors. These rays can then be made to pass into and out of a similar prism when they will again reunite to form a white beam of light.

From these two facts light is said to be made up from seven colors blending into white. Spectrum is the term used when speaking of the decomposed ray of light into its individual color rays. Starting with the less luminous rays the seven colors are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet.

The middle section, or yellowish green, is the most luminous. Red produces the most heating effect. The upper colors, especially the violet rays, have the effect of chemical action on certain substances, and these rays constitute the actinic property of light, which means they produce chemical action.

Authorities differ somewhat as to the exact velocity of light. Several say it is 192,000 miles per second. Others it is 186,000. The first is the rate determined by Olaf Roemer in 1675 when he was studying the eclipses of Jupiter's moons. The lesser rates is given by Bradley in the year 1723 and also verified by M. Foucault.

Different Light from Same Projectors

H. B. T., Washington, D. C.—I am operating two Power 6-A projectors, using Fort Wayne Compensarcs. With one machine I get a much better light than from the other one. Can you explain why this happens, and can it be from a difference in the lamp construction?

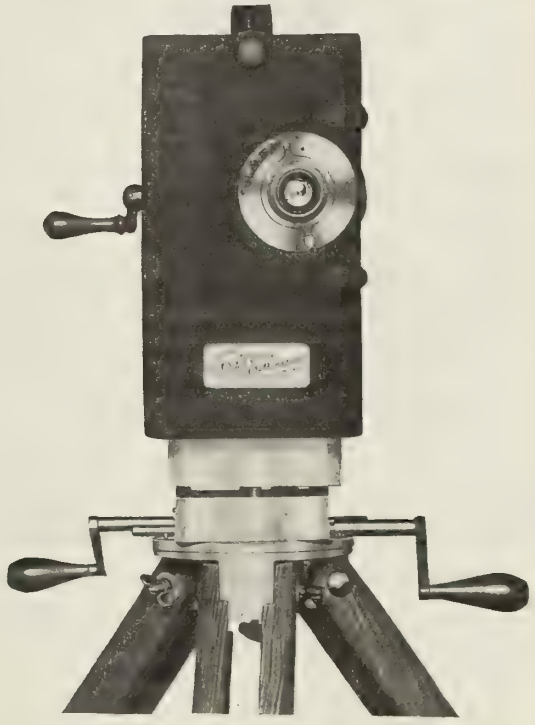
ANSWER.—Operating two identically the same machines should not give you any great difference in the illumination from each. You may have a greater length of wire or a wire of a smaller gauge connected to the one that would tend to lessen the voltage, and hence the strength of current in the one machine.

Also, the lenses of the one machine may be of a poorer quality and absorb or reflect back some of the light rays. However, if there is much difference in the light from the two projectors you had best look over the connections and wire to the faulty lamp, as it might be expected to find the trouble in this part and not the optical system.

You might interchange the two Compensarcs and see if they are the seat of the trouble. The voltage from the Compensarc being of a relatively low value, the connections within the lamphouse may be faulty from the high heat of the arc and fumes or dust preventing a good contact.



Distance of Screen from Stage

W. A. D., Lexington, Ky.—I want to obtain the best results from our projection and would like to have your views as to the proper distance a screen should be put on the stage.

THEATRE MAILING LIST THEORY vs. FACTS

Suggestions in connection with circularizing motion picture theatres.

DON'T fool yourself into the belief that a cheap or borrowed mailing list, even if well recommended, is an economical investment.

In analyzing a number of mailing lists, I have discovered that they have been compiled through dovetailing lists that have been "swapped," resulting in an accumulation of "dead" theatres and a duplication of existing theatres—some under the name of the exhibitor, some under the name of the theatre, and some with only a street address.

Why not consult me regarding our service? I will prove to you that we can save you money.

ANSWER.—It would not be advisable to place the screen immediately behind the footlights, and if the stage is of some size or distance to the back wall and your theatre is narrow it would be best not to place it on the back wall either.

About one-half to two-thirds the distance back of the footlights would give the better effect. Audiences have become accustomed to fill the rear seats first from the practice of putting the screen in front on the stage.

Good projection cannot be obtained form a short distance to the screen especially when the film is not new. The position of the screen has been long neglected, as also its artistic mounting. An audience's appetite can be stimulated before the projection starts by seeing the screen with attractive surroundings. It indicates a good show to follow and you start off with the audience feeling in a good mood.

Better results can be obtained with the slide projection when using a separate lantern. Longer focus condensing lenses should be used for slide work and less current is required also. These two conditions cannot be had from the lamp and lenses used for film projection. The requirements in the two cases are almost opposite to each other.

Vista Cameras Solve Local Event Photographic Problems

THE Vista Cinematagraph Company, of 1446 Broadway, New York City, is putting on the market an improved model motion picture camera which it believes will go a long way toward solving the problem of local event photography.

The exhibitor has long recognized the advantages of owning his own camera and the tremendous value of local pictures, but has been hindered by their excessive cost and the experience required. The orignial cost of this new camera is very small and no previous experience is necessary to secure excellent results.

This camera is small and convenient, weighing only eight and one-half pounds. Standard size film is used so that pictures taken with it can be attached to any film and run as a part of the regular program. Its operation is so simple that only rudimentary knowledge of photography is necessary to operate it. The developing can be done by any local photographer.

Used Bell-Howell Camera for Hudson Bay Pictures

ANOTHER set of pictures bringing to the spectator life in the Far North by means of the film has recently received considerable comment. These were taken on the expedition of Robert J. Flaherty, F.R.G.S., who recently discovered the fact that Canada possesses more islands in Hudson Bay than she had previously thought she owned.

The films show life in the Hudson Bay region, customs of the Eskimos and hardships and pastimes of the explorers. A Bell-Howell was employed in taking the pictures, which are said to be clearly photographed and almost totally free from static.

is separate but controlled electrically by the console in the orchestra pit. This instrument is augmented during the evening performances by an orchestra of seven pieces.

While the Alhambra is designed and operated as a motion picture theatre, provision has been made for a large stage, adequate dressing rooms and general equipment. The curtain is operated by electricity from the operator's booth beneath the balcony in front.

The American, Salt Lake, and the Alhambra use Paramount, World and Fox features, at the same time catering to the music-loving public.

Chattanooga's Last Vaudeville House Succumbs to Motion Pictures

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 28.

THE leasing of the Majestic theatre by Howell Graham, manager of the Quality Way syndicate of motion picture theatres, who will convert it into a modern, up-to-date motion picture house, means the passing, for the time at least, of vaudeville attractions in this city. After an existence of more than three years, the Majestic will, at the end of a few days, close its career as a vaudeville house. It will be reopened on May 10, and will probably be called the "Metro." It is understood that several thousand dollars will be spent in remodeling the Majestic. A "photo-player" of the finest type will be installed.

The Majestic, or Metro, is the fifth member of the Quality Way syndicate of motion picture theatres, the others being the Crescent, Colonial, Alhambra and Theato. The Majestic has been technically leased by Mr. Graham as an individual, but it is understood that the lease will be assumed by the company controlling the Quality Way theatres. In addition to being manager of these theatres Mr. Graham is also a director in the Tennessee Amusement and Leasing Company.

Standardization and the Taking of the Picture

By Frank M. Byam, Sales Manager, the Bell & Howell Co.

This is the Third Article on Standardization

IF the average patron of the motion picture theatre could go "behind the scenes"—that is to say, if he or she could follow closely the process by means of which the picture is produced—interest in and appreciation of the motion picture would be greatly intensified.

It is safe to say that not one person in a thousand, of those who watch the pictures move swiftly across the screen, realizes with what painstaking care the work must be done if satisfactory results are to be secured.

The manufacturer of film, the maker of the machines used in processing film, the producer of motion pictures, the builder of projectors, the exchange manager, the exhibitor—all of these and many others may either help or hinder the processes involved in the production of the perfect motion picture.

And any one of them may, through carelessness, indifference or inefficiency, either make the efforts of the others fruitless or rob them of half their value. No stronger argument than this could be offered for the setting up of definite standards of construction and operation throughout the motion picture business.

It is offered here by way of emphasizing the importance of standardizing the methods used in the taking of the motion picture.

In the study of this subject one is impressed anew with the interdependence of the various processes in the bringing of the motion picture to the screen. As we have seen, the character of the work done by the film perforator has a direct bearing upon the efficiency of the camera, printer and perforator.

Bad Printing a Drawback

So here, the character of the work done by the camera may aid or prevent the making of perfect prints, while inefficiency in printing may bring the efforts of the camera man to naught. The use of printers and cameras of correct design and construction is, of course, necessary to complete success in these departments. The turning out of perfect work would be greatly aided by the use of perforators, cameras and printers, all of which should be constructed to conform to the same standard of film perforation.

But even after the adoption of machines so standardized difficulties would still stand in the way of perfect printing. One of these difficulties is to be found in the fact that camera makers have failed to agree upon a uniform point on the film at which all pictures should start.

Some manufacturers construct their cameras so that the picture begins on a line drawn across the film through the perforations, while others provide for the starting of the pictures from a line set mid-way between the perforations.

In the making up of a reel of negative film resort is frequently had to pictures taken by several different cameras. Strips of film on which the picture starts from a line drawn through the perforations may alternate with strips on which the line is set between the perforations.

Difference in Viewpoints

When this condition exists, it is impossible to make good prints for the reason that it is impracticable to readjust the positive film in its relation to the negative during the printing process. The defects which appear in the positive prints because the pictures are not properly framed invariably reappear upon the screen regardless of its make.

While the projector operator may minimize the difficulty, he cannot possibly cure these defects. And, as a matter of fact, he rarely succeeds in altogether preventing them from interfering with the showing of the pictures.

It is admitted that the question as to the point at which the picture should start is one upon which "honest men may easily differ." Those who favor starting from a line drawn across the film midway between the perforations offer the following in support of their contention.

This method facilitates splicing, because the film joinder extends from side to side of the film without interruption.

The splice is stronger than it would be if the cut were made through the perforations because the perforations are surrounded by two thicknesses of film at the splice.

This method of splicing aids in bringing the films to a perfect register for printing by providing a perfect perforation on each side of the film at the splicing point.

Something may, of course, be said in support of each method of establishing a point at which the picture should start, but, after all, the thing of first importance is to establish a definite starting point for all motion picture cameras and then to adhere strictly to the rule established.

The men who undertake to put motion picture camera practice on a basis of high efficiency will find their work cut out for them. The task is made more difficult by the use of the cheap and inferior cameras widely advertised for use by unsuspecting amateurs.

Amateur photographers are, without doubt, entitled to much of the credit for the great advances made in photography during recent years. But it is one thing to make a good still picture with its circulation limited to a few persons at most and with the use and display of it wholly disassociated from mechanical processes, and quite another to make a good motion picture which may be seen by millions and which depends almost wholly upon mechanical processes for its portrayal upon the screen.

Efficiency of Film Movement

Given a good lens and a minimum amount of experience and an amateur photographer may produce some remarkably good pictures. But the motion picture photographer must add to lens quality an efficient film movement mechanism and a type of design and construction that is above all things dependable. It is just here that the mischief wrought by the "amateur" motion picture camera is revealed.

Men have been assured that good pictures can be made by these cameras and have been led to believe that a profitable business could be developed in the making of local scenes. But most of the pictures made are of indifferent value, while all of them that have been marketed have helped to increase the confusion which thrives in the absence of standardization.

Not only are these cameras of inferior design but their construction is often so faulty that even if—for example—they were adjusted to a given standard as to the starting of the picture, they could not be depended on to maintain it.

It is too much to hope that the manufacture of such cameras will be discontinued so long as men can be found to purchase them. And so, the remedy for this evil—as for other evils in the motion picture business—lies in standardization.

The mechanical processes involved in the taking of motion pictures should be standardized, and the work should be done on the initiative of the manufacturers of motion-picture machinery. And it must be done.

In no other way can the artistic development of the motion picture be made to keep abreast of the demands of a public that is steadily growing more discriminating in its attitude toward this—the only—universally popular means of amusement and entertainment.

Several New Theatres Under Way In St. Louis

THE Pageant, a new theatre being built on Delmar Boulevard just east of Hamilton avenue, St. Louis, is nearing completion. The Pageant occupies part of a $40,000 building that includes four stores and bachelor apartments on the upper floors. The theatre will run an exclusive picture program, and will, seat 2,000.

An airdome to be opened May 1, is to built immediately on a lot purchased by the Melba Amusement Company at the southeast corner of Grand avenue and Miami street, St. Louis. The lot is 151 by 204 feet, and besides the airdome, a large theatre is to be erected so as to be ready for business in the fall. The new building, of which the theatre will be a part, will cost about $100,000, and will have stores and office rooms. William C. Neubauer is president of the Melba Amusement Company.

Another new theatre is to go up soon in St. Louis, on a plot of ground at the corner of Spring and Gravois avenues. The land, with a frontage of 385 feet, has been bought by J. S. Feydt, Jr., who is said to represent several influential south side business men, who will build a large motion picture theatre on the property.

Mogler Theatre an Architectural Departure

The new Mogler Theatre, 9th street and Bremen avenue, St. Louis, which was opened to the public on March 17 under the personal direction of the owner, Jos. Mogler, is a new departure in theatrical architecture.

The usual feature of the Mogler is that although the house seats 1,200 persons, there is no balcony, the space ordinarily used for a balcony being in this instance used for an apartment of six rooms, with all the conveniences of the metropolitan apartment house.

The Mogler has created much comment among prospective theatre builders, and Mr. Mogler, who lives in the apartment, is kept busy showing the arrangement of the rooms, the spacious halls and closets and modern bath to visitors. The St. Louis architect, who designed the Mogler, has made plans for two more theatres to be built with the same idea.

Mr. Mogler is a pioneer exhibitor in St. Louis, having operated a canvas topped theatre at Broadway and Bremen for more than eight years.

The new house represents the realization of Mr. Mogler's plans and ambition of years, and the personal attention he has given the business together with his ceaseless industry in trying to upbuild the motion picture business has been the direct cause of his success.

The new Mogler maintains an all picture program and has been packed at every performance since its opening.

F. D. Abernathy, manager of the Le Beaume Theatre, Le Beaume and 9th streets, St. Louis, has had the house remodeled and refurnished with all the latest motion picture theatre equipments. A Kriterion program is used, and five cents admission is charged.

Middle West Exhibitors Are Active

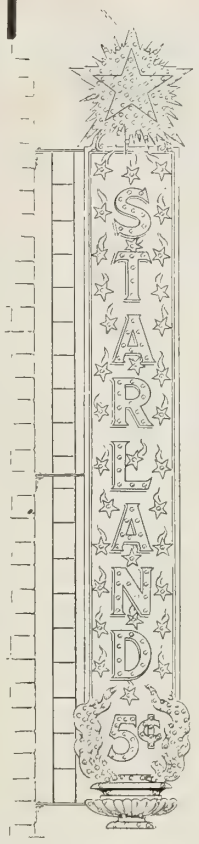
Messrs. Shafer & Teft, who own the new Empire Theatre in New Brunswick, N. J., have purchased from Mr. Carson, the Temple Theatre at Lorain, Ohio, and have already taken possession.



A. J. Partridge, a wealthy real estate man of Chicago, and the owner of the Schiller building, and E. C. Devine left for New York last Friday to arrange for the booking of several large features to be run during the summer at Orchestra Hall, Chicago. They have leased Orchestra Hall for several months and will use it for motion pictures exclusively.

The Eureka Theatre, Fortieth and Market streets, Philadelphia, has been sold by Banist & Co. for the Eureka Amusement Company, Inc., to Gersham B. McIntosh for a $32,000 consideration subject to a mortgage of $25,000.

The Fulton, at Second and Rockland Streets, Philadelphia, is a new theatre, 109x30 feet, with 500 seats, costing $18,000. G. Chapman is the manager.

The Orthodox Street Theatre in Frankford, Pa., with 500 seats, has just been overhauled and many improvements added, amongst them a mirror screen, and up-to-date projection machine, and a new rectifier. This theatre is owned by the Calehuff Supply Company, of 1301 Race Street. The new manager is H. Herbst.

Alterations to the extent of $1,500 are being made to the Alhambra Theatre, owned by the Alhambra Company.

will enter upon another phase of its eventful career on April 25, when it will be opened as a vaudeville and moving picture house. G. M. Anderson, of the Essanay Company, and Thomas O'Day, owners of the theatre, have leased it for a term of ten years to the Western States Vaudeville Association, represented here by Irving S. Ackerman and Sam Harris. This concern already conducts two vaudeville and picture houses here, the Majestic and Republic.

The name of the Gaiety will be changed, and hereafter it will be known as the Hippodrome. Anderson and O'Day state that the lease provides for a joint management of the theatre by themselves and the Western States Vaudeville Association. This theatre was erected two years ago and several attempts have been made to conduct it as a home of musical comedy, but without success. Moving pictures have been shown there at intervals and will now be strongly featured.

Among Detroit and Other Michigan Theatres

The Knights of Columbus, of Bad Axe, Mich., through Architects Cowles & Mutscheller, of Saginaw, Mich., have plans in progress and are taking bids on a building to comprise a picture theatre and lodge rooms. It is to cost $25,000. It will be three stories high, 40 by 120 feet in size, and of brick.

The Schloss Amusement Company, of Muskegon, Mich., announces that work will soon begin on the construction of a modern theatre to cost about $25,000, seating 1,200.

The Globe theatre, Grand River and Trumbull avenues, Detroit, Mich., has been sold by LeRoy Bishop to the Globe Amusement Company, Mr. Bishop retaining stock in the concern to the extent of the value of the property. The company is capitalized at $100,000. The ownership has been put up in the corporate form for the purpose of making extensions which will make the theatre one of the best among those outside of the central area, say the stockholders. It will be thoroughly remodeled and extended about 50 feet at the rear, providing additional seating capacity for 60. Plans for the alterations are in the hands of C. Howard Crane, architect. They contemplate the expenditure of about $25,000. Officers of the company are: LeRoy Bishop, president; Alvin D. Hersch, vice-president, and Herman A. Loiffler, secretary and treasurer.

A theatre, 30 by 120 feet in size, is to be erected by Louis F. Wojcik at 894 Junction avenue, Detroit.

The National Syndicate of America, Detroit, Mich., has changed its name to the Detroit Alliance Film Service Company. The incorporators are: W. H. Goodfellow, Francis Reno and Gus Froebel.

George Thompson, treasurer of the Jeffers theatre, Saginaw, Mich., has resigned to become manager of the Majestic theatre at Madison, Wis. Ed. Veazey, long connected with the Butterfield interests, has been appointed manager of the Jeffers.

New 1,200 Seat Theatre in Altoona, Pa.

J. M. Miles, a prominent confectioner of Altoona, is getting plans completed for the erection of a theatre and it is said will start work on the construction as soon as the architects complete the plans and the bids are in.

The capacity of the new theatre will be 1,200 and will be equipped with all the modern conveniences for the comfort of its patrons and the proper conduction of the motion picture business.

H. F. Thomas, a well-known young man of Greensburg, Pa., has purchased a half-interest in the Casino Theatre of that town from C. D. Case. He will take an active interest in the business and will manage the house.

The Casino Theatre is a house of 300 capacity. Mr. Thomas states that the theatre will be re-painted and re-decorated, and it will be one of the best houses in the town when the renovating process is completed.

Manager C. A. McFarland, of the Queen Theatre, Houston, Texas, recently announced that his double bill—a Kalem, "The Siren's Reign," and Essanay's "A Jitney Elopement," featuring Charlie Chaplin—hit the right spot in Houstonians' hearts; so hard that he predicted all records for attendance would be broken before the films went off.

M. L. Semon has been appointed resident manager of the Interstate Amusement Company's interests in Birmingham, Ala., succeeding E. C. Raymond, and will be put in charge of the Lyric. Mr. Semon has been in charge of local theatres with the Wells interests for years, and is known in Southern theatrical circles very favorably.

Stirring Edison Feature Weekly

The Talented Favorites—Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott

in the absorbing

3-Act Feature of Society and Political Intrigue

"Her Proper Place"

by the skilled plot weaver, Mary Rider, author of "Killed Against Orders."
Released Monday, May 10th—3000 feet.

More sincerely and more directly than can any artificial "thriller" does this story of a self-sacrificing girl, silently loving her "king," grip our heart sympathies, when so superior to acting does Miriam Nesbitt live it forth. As the sister who, first, gives up her lover to her younger sister and then uncomplainingly takes her place as the family slavey, Miriam Nesbitt makes this character possess the widest appeal and brings pathetically and powerfully to mind the bitter tragedy enacted daily in so many households by this very situation. The very simplicity—the heart-reaching touches she imparts to this lonely girl—places the character in the heroic class.

Marc MacDermott, as the Senator who, unconsciously, is the poor girl's "king," and is made the victim of a political scandal thereby, rounds out the artistic work that these two always place upon the screen and emphasizes again the unfailing appeal they register on the hearts of photoplay patrons. As a Feature should be supported, so does the strongly knit work of such capable favorites as Edward Earle, Bessie Learn, Margaret Prussing, Mrs. Erskine, Harry Beaumont and Robert Brower give support and added strength to this true-to-life and tense story.

Edison Features Feature "strength—not length"

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 16

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

Here are a few excerpts from the many letters that come to us continually. They tell their own story of how wide-awake exhibitors are making money by using World Film program.

"DIAMOND" CREATES STIR AMONG EXHIBITORS

Many Managers Are Impressed with the Novelty of the $20,000 Prize Play, Produced by the American Film Company, at the First Private Showing in New York That They Practically Book It in the Projection Room

THE invited audience, comprised mainly of prominent New York exhibitors, who gathered to witness the first three chapters of "The Diamond from the Sky," were enthusiastic on the completion of the seven reels forming this part of the continued photoplay. Many of them booked it then and there, following the example set by their brother exhibitors after the premiere Chicago exhibition.

Similar trade performances were given throughout the country prior to the release of the first chapter of "The Diamond from the Sky," for it was the policy of John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Corporation, and S. S. Hutchinson, treasurer, to extend to all exhibitors the privilege of seeing the picture before signing up. Both these men were present at the showing in the American theatre, New York, and expressed themselves as more than pleased with the results of their policy.

The feeling of confidence which these preliminary exhibitions instilled in the minds of exhibitors was sufficient to insure large bookings on the picture, for actual proof that the story is as good as advertised accompanied each performance.

Anxious to Learn Author's Name

Many who saw the first seven reels at the New York exhibition were extremely anxious to learn the identity of the author of this picturized romantic novel. His name, or perhaps it's her's, is not to be disclosed until May 3, the release day of the first three reels. Mr. Freuler went no further than to say that the author was prominent in both literary and motion-picture fields, and that when the name was announced it would create a great surprise.

Suffice it to say that the pleasing effect created by the first three chapters, as regards the realism and even continuity of theme, the excellently conceived situations, and the clever contrasts of drama and comedy, very often intermingled with logically brought about thrills, well substantiates Mr. Freuler's statement regarding the capability and prominence of the mysterious author.

On the appearance of the story in its picturized form, it will also run serially in many leading papers throughout the country. Both the picture and the novel will tally exactly in regard [illegible] author and scenario writer [illegible] busy collaborating on [illegible]

Ere the showing was over those who could find words in which to express their opinion of the picture were unanimous in declaring it one of the best that they had ever witnessed, both from the standpoint of photography, the sustained interest of the story and in its sensational and thrilling developments that are bound to pull the public back to the theaters in which it is to be shown, while many others were charmed by the picture that they found themselves utterly unable to put into words their appreciation.

Lottie Pickford in the leading feminine role of Esther, proves satisfactory in every respect and her grace, youth and winsomeness seems likely from the wide publicity to be given to leap into fame almost equal with that of "Little Mary." NOVELIZED FILM GREAT SUCCE[illegible]

Chicago, April 16.—On May 3 the North American Film Corporation, with headquarters in Chicago and special representatives in every Mutual exchange, will release the first three reels of one of the greatest serial conceptions that has yet been brought forth.

This is The Diamond From the Sky, selected from The Chicago Tribune's serial photoplay competition as the most unique effort that almost has yet been seen. More than nineteen thousand photoplays were sent in and examined in this contest. The Diamond From the Sky is reported to be a product of genius. Of a genius as yet unknown to fame—at least the fame that has been connected with the making of motion pictures. On Sunday, May 2—the day before the release of the first reels—the name of the author will be revealed in every Sunday paper that is to carry the serial.

Ten thousand dollars has already been paid to the fortunate and gifted author. An additional $10,000 will be offered and paid to the person who, during the progress of the pictured story, as it is thrown on the screen throughout the land, will write a scenario that will be selected as the fitting sequel to its intense and unusual current and ending.

The Chicago Tribune, that conducted this contest, was the father of the serial story idea in the United States, and its circulation was increased one hundred per cent thereby. With the screening of this marvelous photoplay it is expected that The Tribune will become the most talked about daily in the country.

The North American Film Corporation, which will merchandise this epoch marking film, was organized principally by J. R. Freuler with a view to giving the film absolutely the best in the field of distribution, sale and speedy publicity.

The production's beautiful photography, the rapid but well-sustained action as the compelling story is developed, and the superb acting of the principals, won round after round of applause. Altogether, while the exhibitors who viewed the opening chapters had been led to expect much, they found that the reality vastly surpassed their expectations.

and The Goddess is it.

You have become accustomed to serials black, murky, devilish, cruel, mysterious.

The Goddess is light, airy, angelic, kindly, mystic.

No claptrap methods, no tricky, no sensational melodrama, no typical cigarette smoking villain still pursuing her, and yet—

Interest, curiosity, fascination, desire, all has been created for each succeeding chapter as have never been known before.

The Goddess will fascinate your patrons who never saw an advertisement —who never read the story—who don't know the stars—but who are affected by wonderful acting, plot and scenery.

The Goddess will carry your audiences off their feet.

The Goddess has no contest to bolster it.

The Goddess needs no outside influence to assist it and yet—

The uniquest of advertising and publicity stunts that will introduce and follow The Goddess will arouse your community to a fever pitch—

And the story of The Goddess—Written by Gouverneur Morris—Pictured by Chas. W. Goddard—Produced by The Vitagraph Company—Directed by Ralph W. Ince with Anita Stewart and Earle Williams in the leading roles, will be published every day by the principal newspaper in your city.

And the picture of The Goddess in two part weekly chapters can be booked in every office of

The General Film Company.

Love Rocks Throne of "Graustark"

¶ Like "the Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady" everyone is more or less human under the skin. Even princes fall in love and beautiful princesses from time immemorial have trampled on affairs of state and monarchial pride when the "real man" comes a-wooing.

¶ In America we believe one man is as good as another. George Barr McCutcheon, the author of "Graustark," chose as the hero of his great story a true American. The hero, Grenfall Lorry, met the beautiful princess when she was traveling through the United States "incog." And he fell in love at first sight.

¶ Now Lorry didn't know she was a princess. It probably wouldn't have made any difference if he had. He knew she was the girl for him. That was enough. So he followed her to "Graustark."

¶ And the beautiful princess fell in love with Lorry. Is there any more to say? For she was a true woman and altogether like "the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady."

¶ The task of putting "Graustark" in the films was one of the greatest ever imposed on any producer. But ESSANAY did not falter. Like all ESSANAY FEATURES "Graustark" is a superb creation. It holds interest from the beginning to the end of its six acts.

¶ The following branch offices of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay (Inc.) are now booking this big success: New York City, 1600 Broadway; Philadelphia, 1316 Vine St.; Chicago, S. E. Cor. Wabash & Adams (Chicago Business College); Atlanta, 75 Walton St.; Kansas City, 12th & Walnut, Boley Bldg.; Dallas, 1900 Commerce St.; and San Francisco, Mr. C. B. Price, Hotel Stewart.

FEWER PICTURES—BETTER PICTURES—LONGER RUNS. This is the order of the future.

There is little doubt about it now. It is no longer a prophesy; it is actually going into effect.

The year past has been largely a scramble, without order or logic.

THE well-established daily change programs have gone steadily on, furnishing a solid undertone to the business. Now they are adding features, but with a clear idea ahead of furnishing a shorter program of higher quality and fit for a longer run than a daily change.

With features as a whole the production and exhibition of them have in a large measure been equally wild. Big and little houses have struggled to book them; big and little companies have competed in their production.

But the lines of cleavage have appeared and grow more and more distinct.

THE production and distribution of features is now in the hands of comparatively a few concerns. 1914 saw the disappearance of more than fifty of the smaller, weaker companies.

And just so with the theatres. The trend is strongly toward fewer and better theatres and a classification of these by style and class of program. What may be called the "Strand" style of program is just growing in popularity—that is a program consisting of a dramatic feature together with a comedy, a news pictorial, an educational.

ALL of which means FEWER PICTURES—BETTER PICTURES—LONGER RUNS.

But there is still chaos in the booking of pictures.

We have too many exchanges and with many of them a blind, reckless competition that is working much harm.

Their one aim seems to be to get bulk business, to secure the greatest possible number of customers.

IF Ajax Film can't put its service in a house at its price, it puts it in anyway, and two weeks later breaks its contract in favor of another house for a better price. This disorder seems to prevail quite generally.

THIS is wrong—unbusinesslike.

In the first place, bulk business does not pay an exchange and never did. An exchange makes more money out of fewer and better customers.

But there's the exhibitor to consider. It might seem as if this sharp competition benefited him. But it doesn't.

IF he has Ajax pictures for two weeks and then some other brand, and then some other, how is he to establish the name of his house, its kind of pictures, its character? How is he to participate in the benefits of the advertising the maker of the pictures does?

A FEW years ago a prominent clothing manufacturing house, backed by a big advertising campaign, went after bulk customers in this very same way. It got them; but a year later the concern reversed its policy.

Instead of putting its brand of clothing into two or more stores in a town or section of a large city, it selected one dealer and then protected him.

IT protected him against near-at-hand competition, and helped him sell more clothes through advertising and other sales help. All with the result that the concern sold more goods at less expense through one dealer than through three. And the dealer also made more money.

THE dealer in every business must be protected, not only for his sake, but also for the good of the manufacturer.

The exhibitor must be protected and supported. It is he alone who can raise and hold admission prices. It is he alone who takes in the stream of money that in turn supports the whole industry.

BETTER pictures he must have—pictures as excellent in amusement qualities as the magazine fiction which the millions read.

And sooner or later he must realize that better pictures mean fewer pictures and longer runs for them—not pictures turned out by the foot rule to make a daily change program, but pictures so good that they must be shown again.

BUT he needs protection.

He should get one service and hold it. He should be protected against competition. He should be able to advertise to a population sufficient to his seating capacity that he has such and such picture and that he alone has them.

Then he can afford to pay a satisfactory rental in return for this service from the manufacturer.

AND the latter, by cutting down an exorbitant and unnecessary distributing and printing expense can put more money into his pictures and make them better

Vol. XI May 15, 1915 No. 19

A Censor Board That Is Proving Its Own Undoing

THE State censor board of Kansas was probably created to be a public protector, but—if the editorials in the newspapers of the State are to be believed—it has already become a public nuisance.

One would hardly suppose that any public officials could have managed to make themselves so thoroughly obnoxious to most of their fellow citizens in the brief space of time that has elapsed since the decision of the United States Supreme Court.

The paragraph that follows, however, speaks for itself. It is taken from the Kansas City "Post" for April 25.

"THE feeling against the censors has become so acute that certain officials, reported to have had a part in choosing them, have issued denials."

AND this:

"Unless their rulings are modified, politicians believe the censor board will be an issue in Kansas politics next year.

"More editorials are carried in Kansas newspapers on the movie censor board than on the war, the doings of the last legislature and the Kansas rate hearing combined."

THE disgust of the Kansas newspapers with "the long hairs at Topeka," as Ed Howe in the Atchison "Globe" epitomizes them, is due to a number of things. But the feeling has been crystallized by the board's manner of applying its ruling that all drinking scenes must be eliminated from pictures destined for Kansas audiences.

Following this declaration with a bigoted literalness, the Reverend Festus Foster, Miss Carrie Simpson, of Parsons, Kansas, and Superintendent of Public Instruction Ross, the censorious trinity, have applied it to pictures that neither Major Metellus C. Funkhouser, Mrs. Maude Murray Miller, nor J. Louis Breitinger, in their most prudish moments, would ever have dreamed of cutting.

THE patience of the press was exhausted when the Rev. Festus and his colleagues solemnly prohibited "When We Were Twenty-One" from being shown in Kansas.

"Atchison and the whole State," exclaimed Ed Howe in the Atchison "Globe," "is howling over another fool law passed by our legislature, and Kansas throughout the country is receiving a lot more of rube publicity. The unpopular law which is causing so much indignation . . . is the State censorship of moving pictures? . . . There was almost a riot in Topeka Monday night when the news became circulated over the city that 'When We Were Twenty-One' had been ordered out of the State.

"At the Iris Theatre, where it was displayed, the ushers gave each patron printed cards for them to voice their sentiments on the question, 'Should this picture be condemned or not?' The vote shows that 28 were in favor of condemning the film, while 504 were opposed to that movement. That straw vote in Topeka shows just about how accurately the Kansas legislature represents the sentiments of Kansas people . . . If the 'Last Supper' were produced in motion pictures, it would be barred for the same reason."

HAD the censors taken care to arouse the indignation of none but exhibitors and exchange men, they would probably have been permitted to continue unheeded.

Unfortunately—for them—they outraged the common sense and broad-mindedness of most of the newspaper editors of Kansas.

By being intolerant, they have made themselves intolerable. And, in a State where the newspapers have as much power and influence as they have in Kansas, it might have been prudent for the censors to conciliate the press instead of antagonizing it.

CENSORSHIP is only an experiment as yet. Despite the favorite assertion of its advocates that "public opinion" demands it, it has still to win and hold the approbation of the public.

We may be mistaken, but we believe that the newspapers of a community are more representative of its wishes and feelings than its politicians or its prudes.

The politicians may have been eager to promote censorship as a speculation, but they have enough to answer to the newspapers for, without rendering themselves liable to attack on that side.

THE Kansas newspapers show which way the wind is blowing. The Kansas City "Post" is right—the censor board will be an issue in Kansas next year.

We will go even further. It will be a dead issue next year, unless those that "sit in darkness" at Topeka see a great light.

The Significance of the Farrar Engagement

THE engagement of Geraldine Farrar, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera House, to appear in screen productions of her famous characterizations in grand opera, calls for more than passing notice.

This linking together of the motion picture with the most exclusive artistic circle ought to make a final conversion of these "exclusives"—unfortunately, they are still million-fold—whose "exclusiveness" toward the motion picture only results from an obstinate ignorance of—not its possibilities—but its actualities. As such this notable acquisition to a list comprising almost all great names in literature and the drama is a matter of congratulation.

Pennsylvania May Have Same Old Censor Law

Daix Measure Passes Senate and Reaches Second Reading in House, but Amendment by Reading Representative May Cause Legislature to Adjourn Without Action—Maurer's Change in Bill Approved by Film Men, but Possible Postponement of Passage Is Regretted—Action on Other Bills

Harrisburg, Pa., May 5.

THE close of the week in the Legislature found bills in which the motion picture interests are vitally interested considerably advanced in the direction of final adoption or rejection.

The Daix bill, providing for a board of three censors to take the place of the existing board of two members, which is the administration measure introduced at the instance of J. Louis Breitinger, the present chief censor, but amended last week in many material respects to meet the insistence of the recently organized exhibitors and exchange men of the state, was passed finally by the Senate and sent to the House early in the week.

Perhaps unfortunately for the motion picture interests, this bill was amended when it reached second reading in the House last Wednesday. While the amendment, which simply strikes out the clause permitting the censors to bar films tending to "prejudice the public mind," can in itself do no harm to the picture interests and, in fact, is rather to their advantage, it is considered unfortunate that it should have been made at this stage of the fast waning legislative session. Unless the amendment is knocked out when the bill is up for third reading in the House next week, it will be necessary for the bill to be sent back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendment before the bill can finally be sent to the Governor. That, of course, would give opportunity for delay and possible controversy which, inasmuch as it is now planned to adjourn the Legislature on May 13, might result in the bill being tied up in the last stages of the session in such a way as to endanger its chances of final passage.

Amendment Comes Too Late

The amendment was offered by Representative James H. Maurer, of Reading, the only Socialist member of the Legislature, and does not appear to have been inspired by any consideration other than his individual desire to have eliminated what he believes to be an unjust provision of the bill. Nevertheless, it is regarded as unfortunate that it should have come so late in the session as, possibly, to prejudice the changes of the whole bill which contains some valuable concessions for the picture interests and is the only censorship bill with much chance ever to reach the Governor.

Representative Maurer offered his amendment in a meeting of the House Wednesday morning when the lawmakers were paying little attention to what was going on and while a lot of bills were being passed upon in a perfunctory way. There was no opposition to the amendment, scarcely a dozen members knowing what was going on. The striking out of the clause referred to gives the censors only the right to disapprove of films or slides which are "sacreligious, obscene, immoral or such as would tend to incite riot." In explaining his reason for offering the amendment, Mr. Maurer afterward said to the correspondent of Motion Picture News:

"The phrase, 'or prejudice the public mind,' is ambiguous, undefinable, unstatutory. The power it conveys to censors is entirely discretionary. It creates a board of despots instead of a board of censors. Surely it is enough power to give this board, which has not been shown to be necessary, the right to prevent the exposure of pictures that are sacreligious, obscene, indecent, immoral or which might endanger the public peace?

"It is not wise to clothe any set of persons with unlimited authority, and the eliminated phrase does so. By its power there are few pictures, if any, that could be shown if the censors said 'No.' They need give no reason for disqualifying a picture but that it tends to 'prejudice the public mind.'

"Every picture is, in some sense, instructive as well as amusing, and every picture thus would be subject to 'prejudices,' in the minds of the censors. 'Prejudice the public mind' is elastic enough to be stretched to fit any condition and, until men have become angels and infallible, I shall fight against giving to one or three of them any such power. As this bill is now, it complies with all that is religiously and morally necessary. Carrying the now eliminated phrase, I should have had to fight against the passage of the act."

Film Men Fear Bill May Fail

While recognizing that the attitude taken by Mr. Maurer in this matter, is intended to be in sympathy with the point of view of the motion picture interests, the film men fear the delay that would be involved in sending the bill back to the Senate might result in the failure of passage of the whole bill and therefore it is considered likely that when the measure comes up next week for third reading in the House, an effort will be made to have reconsidered the votes on which Mr. Maurer's amendment was adopted. If this can be done and the amendment knocked out the House would be able at once to take final action on the bill, in which event, in case of a favorable vote on third reading, it would go direct to the Governor instead of back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendment.

Final action on the negro "equal rights" bill, which was passed by the House several weeks ago after it suddenly had been rushed out of committee, will be taken in the Senate probably next week. This measure, which prohibits managers of theatres from maintaining separate seats for the white and negro patrons of their theatres, passed first and second reading in the Senate in the present week, and is now on the third reading calendar. It is opposed by motion picture interests especially in that section of the state bordering on the Mason-Dixon line where the question of negro segregation in the picture theatres has become a very serious one.

The passage of the bill in the house, after it was generally supposed it would be permitted to die in committee, was the result of a clever move on the part of the friends of the measure who rightly banked on the fact that the lawmakers, once they were forced to take an open stand on the negro question on the floor of the House, would not dare to risk alienating the negro vote by casting their ballots in opposition to the measure. What action the Senate will take on the bill is problematical but it's certain that the negro citizens of the State are keeping close tabs on those who are for and against the bill.

"Fifty Cent" Bill Likely to Die

The Stern censorship bill, which goes the Daix bill one better by reducing the fee for censorship to 50 cents instead of $1 a film as provided in the latter bill, is still on the third reading calendar of the House. Representative Isadore Stern, father of the measure, which, it was understood, was introduced merely to have something to fall back on should the Daix bill fail of passage, will probably not press the measure for action if the Daix bill has smooth sailing on the rest of its voyage through the legislature.

The bills of Senator Snyder, having to do with theatre construction and which are designed chiefly to prevent the enforcement of building rules, made to govern the construction of new theatres, in connection with theatres now in existence, have passed the Senate successfully and are on the first reading calendar of the House. They are likely to be advanced rapidly in that body during the coming week.

The bill board bill, designed to give borough and township authorities the right to regulate the construction and use of theatrical bill boards, still is regarded as a dead issue. It will probably never come from the House committee to which it has been referred. It is said also that the so-called "ticket scalpers" bill, which would place absurdly rigid restrictions on the way theatre tickets are printed and disposed of, is hardly likely to become a law.

SING SING WARDEN ORDERS PATHÉ FILMS FOR CONVICTS

Warden Thomas Mott Osborne of Sing Sing prison apparently likes Pathécolor films. Manager Burnstein of the Pathé New York exchange received a telegram from him on the 26th, requesting a five reel program, all in color, for a show at the prison. The warden is much impressed with the Pathé films.

SANGER AND JORDAN CONTROL CRAWFORD NOVELS

Sanger and Jordan, brokers and agents, in acquiring the world's motion picture rights of "In the Palace of the King" and "The White Sister," both by F. Marion Crawford, have also consummated a deal whereby the motion picture rights of all the rest of this gifted author's works pass into their hands.

As there are some thirty odd of these successful novels, Sanger and Jordan are now prepared to negotiate the picture rights of the same.

George B. Cox Is New President of World Film

Well Known Political Leader in Cincinnati Now Identified with Film Industry—William A. Brady Is Made a Member of the Board of Directors

AT the recent election of officers of the World Film Corporation, with head offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, the most important changes brought George B. Cox, of Cincinnati, to the president's chair and placed William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, on the board of directors.

As the officers now stand, George B. Cox is president, succeeding Van Horn Ely; George A. Huhn, of Philadelphia, is chairman of the executive board; Joseph L. Rhinock is an additional vice-president, and William A. Brady and Milton C. Work are on the board of directors. Lewis J. Selznick continues as vice-president and general manager.

The importance of this election should be clear at a glance. George B. Cox, in addition to being personally very wealthy, is a wise showman, holding high affiliation with the Shuberts, Klaw and Erlanger, Marcus Loew and other big concerns. Mr. Brady is as big factor in the theatrical field as any other single man. He owns many shows of great value for motion picture adaptation. Mr. Huhn represents Philadelphia and Wall Street banking interests. Mr. Rhinock is well known in the theatrical world and his value to the Shuberts and to Loew is generally recognized.

"The World Film Corporation is now in a better position than ever," is the statement made at the home offices. "Nothing can stop us from going right to the top. When Mr. Selznick first raised two million dollars for the World Film Corporation, the men who put up the money did so because they thought it was a good investment. As long as they knew their interests were safe they were happy. Now, however, they have become impressed with the vast opportunities of the motion picture business and want to be active in it. Mr. Cox as president will be active in the affairs of the corporation and will give it the benefit of his ability.

"Of no less importance is the placing of Mr. Brady on the board of directors. When he first went into the business he simply turned his play over for production. Now he says he wants to get into it himself and see that the best possible motion pictures are turned out under his name. Mr. Brady possesses in an extraordinary degree the ability to forecast what the public wants.

"This he will apply to the World Film Corporation. With one exception, Daniel Frohman, Mr. Brady is the first big theatrical man active to engage personally in the motion picture business. Many others have turned their plays over for production but they have not been active as he will be.

"Mr. Huhn's election will place a tremendously big financial man in an active position with the World Film Corporation.

"The chief point is that these big men, these master minds, are going to be active. They see the strength of the motion picture industry and want to participate in it themselves. Theirs will be no routine holding of offices. They will be in the thick of the fight. Their advent will help the World Film Corporation still further on its upward path."

League Branch in New Orleans Holds 2nd Meeting

Following Officers Elected: M. L. Costley, President; Jac. Miller, Vice-President; George E. Grusch, Secretary; B. F. Brennen, Treasurer—Directors Named

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, La., May 5.

ENTHUSIASM, co-operation, and a desire to get together to fight coming obnoxious laws, featured the second meeting of Louisiana exhibitors, held April 24 in the Green Room of the Grunewald, New Orleans' largest and most exclusive hotel.

The meeting was presided over by Martin L. Costley, Jr., elected president of the Louisiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Saturday before last, and Mr. Costley's first act was to name the officers who will serve until January, 1916. This list is as follows:

M. L. Costley, Jr., Pastime theatre, president; Jac. Miller, Hippodrome, vice-president; George E. Grusch, Coliseum theatre, secretary; and B. F. Brennen, Iberville theatre, treasurer.

Only a temporary organization had been effected at the previous meeting. The board of directors will consist of the officers named, with the addition of N. Sobel, Washington theatre; G. B. Mars, Mars theatre; Frank E. Evans, Mound City theatre; George Saik, Elysium theatre, and Gervais Arnoult, Acme theatre.

The meeting was called for 10:30 o'clock, in order to assure a big attendance, and the hour proved popular.

The constitution, framed by a committee during the week, was adopted. Exhibitor Chisholm led off the talks, and laid especial stress on the point of co-operation amongst exhibitors, especially at this time, with the question of censorship looming largely on the exhibitor's horizon.

Mr. Brennen echoed his sentiments, and claimed unity was the factor necessary, as rumors of increased taxation on small theatres were being heard.

Mr. Costley said quite a number of exhibitors throughout the state had so far paid no attention to the invitation to join the league. He said he couldn't understand this, but freely predicted that before long they would be clamoring to come in.

The board of directors will meet every Saturday night after showtime, about eleven o'clock, at the league's headquarters, temporarily at the Hippodrome, and the league itself will meet once a month at 2 P. M. on the second Saturdays. A large attendance is expected by the officers.

Committees as follows will be named on May 1: Arbitration, finance, membership, and legislation. The initiation fees have been suspended for a period of thirty days, in order to allow exhibitors to come in freely during that period of the league's organization.

Arnold Service, Just Organized, to Release 6 Films

Philip Mills, Formerly Identified with Picture Playhouse, Is President of Company Handling Savoia Pictures—Molly McIntyre Signs with Turin Concern

PHILIP MILLS, one of the original organizers of the Picture Playhouse Film Company, who resigned and sold his holding in that company recently, has been elected president of the Arnold Service Company, 1328 Broadway, a newly organized corporation backed with ample capital.

The Arnold Service Company has secured exclusive booking rights for the Savoia Feature Company, of Turin, Italy, one of the best known and wealthiest companies in the producing business.

They start off with six new four-reel features which will shortly be shown in a Broadway theatre and will announce one new feature a week hereafter.

The six features ready for release April 25, are as follows: "Mirror of Life," a romance by Ivanhoe Ronalta, four reels; "Flying Clue," adapted from the novel by Bret Harte, four reels; "Heart of India," adapted from a novel by Prof. Rulver, four reels; "Margot," adapted from a novel by Alfred de Musset, four reels; "The Fatal Domino," from a novel by Aleria Dolores, four reels; and "The Four-Leaved Clover," adapted from the novel by Wilkie Collins, four reels.

Several American stars have signed contracts with the Savoia Company to appear in specially selected scenarios from well known Broadway successes.

Molly McIntyre has just signed a contract to appear for the Savoia Company in a five-reel feature film and will shortly leave for Italy to be filmed with an all star cast.

Attempt to Force Censorship at Capital Fails

Demand of Washington, D. C., Ministers and Social Workers That an Advisory Censor Board Be Created to Aid District of Columbia Police Rejected by Major Pullman—Present System Is Adequate, Declare Officials, Who Say Exhibitors Are Ever Ready to Co-Operate with Them

Washington, D. C., May 5.

DECLARING that some of the motion picture films exhibited in Washington have had a tendency to foster ideas of crime in the minds of youthful patrons of the local theatres, and that a stricter censorship was a necessity here, about twenty-five church and social workers appeared before Superintendent of Police Major Raymond W. Pullman, for a discussion of the situation. The conference was arranged for by Mrs. John N. Culbertson, president of the Women's Interdenominational Missionary Union.

It was suggested at the conference by Rabbi Simon that a committee of censorship, consisting of twelve unsalaried minister or other volunteers, be appointed to aid the police department, which suggestion has been taken under advisement.

Common Sense Needed in the Matter

Common sense must govern the movement for the regulation and control of motion picture exhibitions, declared Mr. Simon, who further stated that it is not the intention of those interested to in any way antagonize the motion picture business, in which is recognized a great power for educational and moral good, but that motion picture producers should be educated to the belief that it is pictures of the latter kind, and not those of a character to create criminal thoughts and suggestions, that the people want. Motion pictures are here to stay and should be permitted under proper regulation.

He declared that there are many different points of view as to what kind of pictures should be barred, and thus the whole matter must be considered from a common-sense standpoint.

Among others present was Captain Charles T. Peck, in whose precinct there are a large number of the theatres.

A member of his command, Patrolman Thomas Oriani, devotes his entire time to the inspection of the houses and reports to Captain Peck any films that he may consider of a doubtful nature. The captain then makes a personal inspection and if the picture proves doubtful, a request is made to the offending exhibitor to discontinue its showing. This, Captain Peck stated, has always been followed promptly and no trouble has ever resulted. It has always been shown to be the desire of the exhibitors to co-operate with the police department in keeping the industry in this city above reproach. A weekly report of the inspections made is also submitted to the superintendent of police.

The conference has proven to be more beneficial than otherwise, as it has brought to the surface the efforts made by the exhibitors to do more than barely slip by moral requirements, and their co-operation with church and police interests is perhaps now better appreciated.

Major Pullman has stated that as strict a censorship as is possible is now maintained in Washington by the police and that this method would be continued until the coming of legislation providing for a federal commission of motion picture censorship.

Exhibitors Indignant Over Action

As was expected, the hearing caused just indignation among the local exhibitors. Even the general sentiment among the residents who frequent these houses was that there was no further cause for censoring films in Washington.

Tom Moore, a pioneer in the business as exchange man and exhibitor, who operates a chain of theatres, including the largest in the city, had this to say on the subject: "As Christian workers I do not believe that these people look seriously at the movement they are agitating. Certainly they are not thoroughly familiar with the motion pictures exhibited in our city today, for neither manufacturer, exhibitor nor patrons would stand for pictures which were not thoroughly wholesome.

"Whenever there is a question about the propriety of a film, I always arrange a private showing for the commissioners or police department and get their sanction before running the picture. The police have always been the civil censors in Washington and I have always adhered to their wishes and suggestions, in fact, have requested their opinions. My associate exhibitors have done likewise."

Crandall Defends Present Method

Harry Crandall, manager of Crandall's theatre, and president of the local Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, was of the belief that the present hearing before the superintendent of police would have no material effect upon the existing conditions of affairs. "The fact that all films exhibited have been censored by a committee composed of people from all walks of life before leaving New York, and many of them again passed muster by the critical board in Pennsylvania, is proof enough that they will be unoffensive when viewed in Washington. We want the opinion of the public, but we want sane judgment."

A. Brylawski, who operates a chain of theatres and is also a pioneer among the exhibitors, voiced the previous sentiments and added: "The matter of censorship has been thoroughly thrashed out before Congress. Churchmen and others interested in the motion picture film business appeared before the Committee on Education and advocated censorship of films, but Congress, after investigation, found the plan nonfeasible. The present plan of censorship is meeting with conditions admirably. If local censorship is established here it would mean that every town constable would be a censor and in a short time nothing would be left of the 'movie' nation but the bare reel."

Arthur Robb, manager of Moore's Garden theatre, made a significant remark when he said, "There is not the slightest chance of putting anything having the slightest tendency of demoralizing the young or hurting the feelings of the adult on the screen in Washington. In the first place, the police are very vigilant, and in the second place, the public here is about as strict a censor as one wishes to cope with. Washington is much more particular than most cities."

Rolfe Companies Complete Work on Pacific Coast

Members of the Studios Are Coming East, and While Many Pictures Will Be Produced in New York, One Organization Will Be Located in California

Los Angeles, May 3.

WITH the completion of the present productions of the two producing companies of the B. A. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., Mr. Rolfe, who has been in charge of the producing plant here, and the principals of the companies, will leave for New York City, where many future productions will be made.

The company has leased a building at Sixty-first street and Broadway which is now being fitted for a motion picture studio. This has two floors and each will give stage capacity of 75 x 300 feet. At present it is believed the two companies will leave here in about three weeks.

This week the Rolfe studio was a very busy place for more than four hundred extra people, and 156 horses were used in the battle scenes of "Fighting Bob," a six-reel adaptation from the play of the same name by Edward Rose. For these scenes a set more than four hundred feet in length and about two hundred feet wide, representing a plaza of a Latin-American town, was built, and the charge and capture of this barricaded street will serve as the big thrill of this production. Orin Johnston and Olive Wyndham are playing the leads in this special production for the Metro program.

The other Rolfe company, making "My Best Girl," went to San Francisco this week, where the army reserve station on Angel Island, and the grounds and buildings of the University of California were used as exterior locations. Max Figman and Winifred Kingston are the principals of this production.

"We will in all probability have one company in California," Mr. Rolfe stated, in speaking of the plans of the company. "This organization will make the productions it will be impossible for us to make in New York for lack of space.

"In the winter it is our intention to make all interiors at the New York studios and send the companies to Florida to make the exteriors."

CARL LAEMMLE BACK FROM UNIVERSAL CITY DEDICATION

"It was a glorious trip, far exceeding all my anticipations, but just the same I'm glad to be back at my desk again," said Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, last Monday, as he pushed aside a stack of letters which had accumulated while he was away at the opening of Universal City, Cal., on March 15.

"I only wish that the people who saw the opening could see Universal City now. It looked great then, but now things are more systematized and it looks even better. Twenty-three directors are at work there, with as many producing companies. Eight directors and their companies are working here in the East.

"That makes thirty-one producing companies making Universal moving pictures. Operating on so gigantic a scale, I think that the Universal can produce good pictures more cheaply than any other concern in the world. But we have not yet reached our limit, and we will soon announce even bigger doings at Universal City."

BUSHMAN SOON TO BEGIN QUALITY PICTURES

Los Angeles, May 3.

Harry B. Ham has arrived here from New York City, and is busy making arrangements for the opening of a studio where the Francis X. Bushman Quality Pictures Corporation subjects will be made.

Local photoplayers have received letters advising that Mr. Bushman will arrive here within the next few days, and it is understood that the production of the first subject will be taken up at once.

Edwin Thanhouser Signs 2 "Legitimate" Directors

Thomas Coffen Cooke, 17 Years with Wagenhals and Kempner, and Ernest C. Warde, Stage Director for Mansfield 5 Years, Identified with New Rochelle Company

THINGS are happening rapidly at New Rochelle, for the long arm of Edwin Thanhouser has again reached down into Broadway for the kind of support he is determined to get.

Mr. Thanhouser has signed Thomas Coffen Cooke and Ernest C. Warde, both known wherever the English spoken drama is patronized.

Mr. Cooke has a record of seventeen years as director for Wagenhals and Kempner, during which time he produced with such famous stars as Modjeska, Annie Russell, Blanche Walsh, Louis James, Katherine Kidder and Frederick Warde.

Among the more modern successes which he staged are "Paid in Full," "Seven Days" and "The Greyhound."

Ernest Warde, in taking up the work of a motion picture director, brings with him experience well worthy the son of so famous a father; he trouped it with his father, and in a few years had reached an engagement with Richard Mansfield.

Mr. Warde remained in the company to the end of Mansfield's days, completing nine years of service. For the last five years of this time, however, he was Mr. Mansfield's stage director. Since Mr. Mansfield's death Mr. Warde worked successfully in stock and produced among others Henry Savage's "Everywoman."

Andrew Mack was also under his direction.

THOMAS C. COOKE

Of the bringing of Cooke and Warde into filmdom, Mr. Thanhouser says:

"I feel that eventually the production of films will be in the hands of the masters of the speaking stage; of course, there will be exceptions. But the legitimate experience of these gentlemen brings an appreciation of possibilities which will mould the destiny of the silent drama.

"I believe in producing along legitimate lines and in bringing into pictures men of proven ability. I hope to achieve an unusual standard and maintain it. That they have never produced for films matters not; their records stamp them as men with imaginations, and I am satisfied that they can visualize a plot.

"That is where the fate of a production is born. To grasp camera technique is for them only a matter of adjustment—to adapt themselves to changed conditions."

Lichtman Will Head National Booking Organization

Organizer of Alco Creating a Method of Direct Contact Between Producer and Exhibitor—No Competition Intended with Existing Programs

AL. LICHTMAN, who founded and organized the Alco Film Corporation, and more recently general manager of the Select Booking Agency, has severed this connection in order to establish a direct method of contact between important producers and exhibitors.

Mr. Lichtman has opened offices in the Times Building, New York City, and it is his intention to align a number of important theatres throughout the country with whom he will arrange to book as many feature attractions as can be obtained and that will conform to the highest existing standards. Mr. Lichtman is confident that with the number and prominence of the theatres with which he is now negotiating for this booking privilege, he can within a short time impress the leading feature producers of the world with the desirability of this plan of distribution.

In Mr. Lichtman's judgment, when the leading feature producers realize that an important chain of theatres are booking features through one central office, they will be prepared, regardless of their present program affiliations, to issue through his offices their most notable attractions, because of the wider commercial possibilities these subjects would possess, distributed and exhibited individually in a circuit of select theatres.

In an interview, Mr. Lichtman explains that his plan is not in any degree to create competing standards with the programs now in circulation, but is rather designed to assist exhibitors who require special attractions from time to time to secure them in the most effective and methodical manner, by supplying the proper incentive for producing special feature attractions to the manufacturers.

It is this plan of co-operation between producers and exhibitors for which Mr. Lichtman has organized the A1 Lichtman Film Booking Agency.

AD. KESSEL LEAVES WEST COAST FOR EAST

Ad. Kessel, president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and the Keystone company, who has been at the West Coast studios now for the past two months, has about finished his work there and will be leaving for the East in a very few days.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XV

Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players Film Company, Who Has Been in the Industry for Fifteen Years, Is Optimistic Over Prices Producers Receive for Films—High Rentals Now Possible Though Three Years Ago It Seemed Out of the Question

ADOLPH ZUKOR is president of the Famous Players Film Company, and always has been since that company started business. That's no news, to be sure; everybody knows it. Also, everyone knows that he was the first man to realize on the value of the theatrical star and play when presented in a pretentious feature.

To the Famous Players Film Company is due the present demand for features. In the beginning it leads and it still leads. It has created the most valuable brand name in the feature field. It gave the American public Sarah Bernhardt, James K. Hackett and Mrs. Fiske, thereby doing "missionary work" of incalculable value to all other feature producers for which it paved the way. This in no way detracts from the value of the pictures made by other producers but the fact remains that Famous Players blazed the trail—and blazed it gloriously.

Adolph Zukor, like the lion at any banquet, "needs no introduction to this audience." Let him speak for himself.

"The people who pick out price-cutting in the renting end as one of the weak spots of the business err through inexperience," said Mr. Zukor. "They are the people who haven't been in the business long. It is much easier to get high rentals now than ever because there are more theatres which can afford to pay high rentals.

"Three years ago it was hard to get high rentals. Exhibitors were afraid to run high class features for they were very much of an experiment. Further, most of them couldn't afford to pay high rentals. Now the demand for features is an established fact and features are being shown in the majority of motion picture theatres.

"The type of theatre which charges good prices, from fifteen cents up, is replacing the old time cheap show. These theatres must have good pictures and can afford to pay for them. I wish that these fellows who are talking of how hard it is to get high rentals had been in the business three years ago when it was hard.

Features Need Proper Exploitation

"One of the hardest things to accomplish in the motion picture industry, I find, is persuading the exhibitor to give each feature proper exploitation. If an exhibitor would advertise a picture for several days before its showing instead of putting out a 'here today' poster on the day of the showing he would do better.

"The recent influx into the industry of persons unfamiliar with it, undoubtedly constitutes a weak spot. Necessarily, on coming in they are ignorant of its first principles. But that is not the worst of it. Many of them feel that they can make the motion picture industry a side issue to other interests.

"This business is too big, too important, to be a side issue to anything else. A man must spend his whole time and brain on it. Changes are constantly occurring, and the fellow who thinks he can run his moving picture company as a side-show to anything else is mistaken.

"I fully agree with the other producers who say that these recent entrants are a weak spot in the business. They are the fellows who give the exhibitors pictures at all sorts of prices. Usually they start wrong by underestimating the amount they will have to spend.

"I have been in the motion picture business for fifteen years and never yet has any project in which I have been interested failed to cost at least twice what I anticipated.

"When a man has figured out his expenses down to the last penny and then raised enough money just comfortably to carry him through, he receives a hard blow when he finds that his expenses are about twice what he expected.

"Especially is this true as regards the cost of producing. Then, when he has spent the allotted amount and more, too, it is very much up to him to get it back in a hurry. Then comes the distributing of features at any price in order to get quick action.

Theatres Able to Pay High Rentals

"Do you realize how many motion picture theatres there are today which can afford to pay high rentals. The number is considerably lower than many think.

"There are only from 300 to 350 theatres in the country which play a picture from three days to a week. A little fewer than 1,200 theatres can afford to play good pictures at good prices, that is from $50 a day up. These are actual figures, compiled with much care, not mere estimates. When I hear talk of 20,000 motion picture theatres in the country, with the implication that all of them are fitted to play the best pictures, I have to smile.

"The good part of it is, though, that the number of pretentious theatres is increasing daily. All over the country, a good theatre or two is replacing several poor ones. That is only natural, for the average motion picture fan will pay ten, fifteen or twenty-five cents to see good pictures well projected more cheerfully than he will spend the evening in a five cent theatre. Then there is the increasing number of theatres like the Strand, which charge up to fifty cents and give a show which many prefer to a speaking attraction.

The Value of the Stage Star

"As for the value of the stage star—a good picture with a star is better than a good picture without a star. Miss Pickford is our most popular star, but I find that, with her exception, the stage star is in demand.

"The day of adaptations is bound to pass for the suitable material is rapidly being exhausted. Then will come the time when famous writers will devote their time first of all to motion pictures and adaptations of the pictures will be made for the printed page and for the stage. This industry is getting so big that it will attract and employ the best minds of the world.

"Competition exists. In fact, I'm rather glad of it. Oftentimes it's very unhealthful for the pocketbook, but it keeps my mind active and keeps me busy all of the time, and I enjoy that more than making money."

And Mr. Zukor's eyes twinkled reflectively as he thought of the good fights he has waged in the past.

Biograph Plans to Re-issue 1912-1913 Griffith Films

Company Will Revive Subjects Directed by Producer of "Judith" and "Birth of a Nation" with All-Star Casts—Begin June 11

THE announcement made by Biograph Company to the effect that they will re-issue the all-star Biographs produced by D. W. Griffith during 1912 and 1913 is of importance to every exhibitor. A folder listing subjects most in demand has been mailed to exhibitors.

This announcement is the outcome of the large number of requests Biograph has been receiving for the re-issue of these subjects, and the course they have followed in releasing them in the regular service will enable every exhibitor to include them in his program.

It is hardly necessary to introduce these subjects to the exhibitors; suffice it to say that they are well known Biographs with the following players in the casts: Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Dorothy Gish, Robert Harron, Charles H. Mailes, W. Chrystie Miller, Lionel Barrymore, Mabel Normand, Harry Carey, Florence La Badie, Claire McDowell, Charles H. West, etc., etc., and directed by D. W. Griffith, who directed "Judith of Bethulia" and "The Birth of a Nation," the two greatest motion pictures ever produced.

These re-issues will be released in the regular service every Friday, beginning with "The Battle," on Friday, June 11, and the demand for bookings should be large.

ETHEL BARRYMORE WITH METRO

Ethel Barrymore is to make her appearance again in pictures, this time under the Rolfe banner on the Metro program and in some big play yet to be selected, but undoubtedly one of Miss Barrymore's former productions.

FILBERT RETURNS FROM TRIP IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

John P. Filbert, head of tht Pacific Amusement Supply company, of Los Angeles, has just returned from a trip through the southern part of California, where he installed two projecting machine outfits.

One was in the new theater being built for J. P. Anderson, at Calexico, on the Mexican border, and the other outfit at the San Diego municipal play grounds. In both instances Powers 6-A motor driven machines were furnished. The San Diego play ground also installed spot lights and B. and L. dissolvers.

NEW ORLEANS JUDGE UPHOLDS EJECTION BY EXHIBITOR

Judge J. J. Fischer in the First City Criminal Court at New Orleans recently handed down an opinion of interest of exhibitors. In discharging a certain prominent suburban exhibitor on April 28, he gave the following opinion:

"When a person or persons become obstreporous or noisy or abusive about a motion picture show, the exhibitor, or one of his employees, may eject that person or persons from the building, and may even use considerable force if necessary."

Fox Obtains Rights to 5 Plays and Novels of Note

They Consist of "The Payment," "A Beggar on Horseback," "The Galley Slave," "The Mediator" and "The Gunner's Mate"—Fine Productions Promised

THE plans of the William Fox Film Corporation for the summer include a most ambitious program employing the services of such noted players as William Farnum, Betty Nansen, William E. Shay, Claire Whitney, Nance O'Neil, Jean Southern, Theda Bara and Ethel Kauffman.

Several other noted stars are being considered by Mr. Fox, who is determined to put out a feature program which shall be second to none in the acting, direction, or the presentation of great screen dramas by noted authors.

The William Fox staff of directors already includes such masters of this branch of the profession as Herbert Brenon, Frank Powell, Edgar Lewis, Marshall Farnum and J. Gordon Edwards. Mr. Brenon has put out such successes as "Kreutzer Sonata," starring Nance O'Neil, and "The Clemenceau Case," with Theda Bara.

Mr. Powell has to his credit the successful Fox features, "A Fool There Was," "Children of the Ghetto," "From the Valley of the Missing," and "Princess Romanoff." Edgar Lewis has produced every one of the celebrated William Farnum series, which includes, up to date, "The Plunderer," "The Nigger," "Samson," and "A Gilded Fool."

J. Gordon Edwards has directed Betty Nansen since her arrival in this country, and under his auspices "The Celebrated Scandal," "Anna Karenina" and "A Woman's Resurrection" have been produced. Marshall Farnum, a brother of William, is a recent recruit to the William Fox standard, and is working on an elaborate production of Marie Corelli's famous book and play, "Wormwood."

This production has employed the services of hundreds of people and the scenery and effects used are unusually elaborate and costly. On the great open-air stage recently erected by Mr. Fox on Jersey City Heights, and which is one of the biggest of its kind in existence, an exact reproduction built to scale of a portion of Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris was built, and also a facsimile of the famous Pont de Neuf, from which the unhappy heroine of "Wormwood" flings herself to death in the Seine.

Among the plays and novels for the screen rights of which William Fox has secured exclusive rights, are "The Payment," by Adeline Leitzpach; "A Beggar on Horseback," "Rachel," by Carina Jordan; "The Galley Slave," by Bartley Campbell; a screen version of that famous success, "The Mediator," by Roy Norton, the author of "The Plunderer"; and the naval melodrama, "The Gunner's Mate," by James C. McKiernan.

Each of these productions is to be most elaborately presented and a famous star will appear in each. In the case of "The Gunner's Mate" special permission has been obtained by Mr. Fox from Josephus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, to take scenes in and about naval stations and also on board the battleships both in port and at sea. The production will be made a highly spectacular one.

V-L-S-E Manager Advocates Advance Sale of Seats

Walter W. Irwin Believes That Many People Would Willingly Pay Extra Price for Best Seats at Showing of Feature Productions

A SUGGESTION that points the way to increase box office receipts comes from the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc. It is made in keeping with its policy of helping the exhibitors make more money, and while not a new idea in amusements, it is decidedly unique as applied to pictures. It advocates the advance sale of seats, and as applied to the productions of the V-L-S-E companies, appears to be entirely practical.

In discussing the idea, General Manager Walter W. Irwin, said:

"I believe, where real merit exists, the matter of advance sales will hereafter be of just as great importance in the management of picture theatres, as it is in the management of the theatres playing spoken dramas; in every locality, there are sufficient numbers of people willing to pay an advance in price for the convenience of having their seat reserved for at least one exhibition during the evening.

"I think that this showing could begin at 7:30 or 8 o'clock, and prices of the exhibitions before and after that time could be given at the regular admission charges.

"The big productions released on the V-L-S-E program are announced approximately three months in advance of their release dates, and on the days that these features are shown, it is usually impossible to take care of all the people that come to the theatre about 8 o'clock.

"Many of these, unwilling to wait in line, go away, and unquestionably much money is lost to the exhibitor. If, however, he would advertise that the 8 o'clock performance was a reserved seat showing, at which an increased price was asked, this loss would be overcome. The people willing to pay the premium would patronize the 8 o'clock performance and the others would doubtless attend the exhibitions before and after that time.

"The advance sale of seats will cause a better distribution of the attendance among the different performances, as well as bringing increased admission charges, and save to the exhibitor the loss sustained through patrons who rather not stand in line.

"I believe," continued Mr. Irwin, "that the exhibitor would long since have established a system along this line, were it possible to announce, with certainty, the showing of a particular production on an announced date, but with the advent of the V-L-S-E program, this drawback is overcome through the fact that the productions are all ready, and through direct booking arrangements, enough prints are available to positively assure the fulfillment of all bookings.

"Another thing that makes this plan feasible is the fact that Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay enjoy the confidence of the public, and the announcement of the advance sale of reserved seats for any of their productions should meet with immediate response from the picture play patrons."

MANY BUFFALO MANAGERS MAKE CHANGES

Buffalo, N. Y., May 5.

Several important changes took place in Buffalo theatres May 1 when several managers were transferred or dropped. Mrs. Lillian M. Hastings, for many years manager of the old Victoria, who has been at the head of the New Victoria, the handsome $250,000 Mitchel H. Mark house, ceased to be managing director of that theatre on May 1, and Gus Schlesinger, the present manager of the Regent, took charge.

George W. Erdmann, who has guided the policies of the Elmwood Theatre since its opening a year ago, one of the most beautiful houses in the residential district, has been transferred by the United Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., to the New Columbia Theatre on Genesee street.

The present manager of the Columbia, Max Goodman, has resigned. Sam Davis, manager of Keith's, goes to the Elmwood. John Kelly will manage Keith's.

ROY McCARDELL WINS AMERICAN $10,000 PRIZE

New York Newspaper Man, Inventor of the Colored Comic Supplement, Who Ranks High in Magazine Circles as a Humorist and Short Story Writer, Crowns Fourteen Years' Scenario Writing with This Award for "The Diamond from the Sky"

LAST December the American Film Manufacturing Company announced an offer of $10,000 for a photoplay. The offer was open to every one—man, woman, or child. The manuscripts were to be not less than 1,000 words. The contest closed on January 17, and nearly 20,000 manuscripts were received. They came from all classes—from men, women, and children; from professionals and amateurs; from everybody.

Immediately after the contest closed the judges—Mae Tinee, film critic; John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Corporation; and R. R. Nehls, manager American Film Manufacturing Company—proceeded to review the manuscripts.

Each manuscript submitted bore no evidence of the author's name. The names were written on separate slips of paper and put in sealed envelopes and numbered. The judges did not know the author of the winning photoplay until the sealed envelope containing his name was opened.

Upon opening the envelope that bore the number which corresponded with the number of the selected manuscript the judges found the name of Roy L. McCardell, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Nothing could have been a greater surprise, for Mr. McCardell is known as one of America's leading story writers, as well as an author of many photoplays. His home is at 140 Pelham road, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Read Offer in "The Globe"

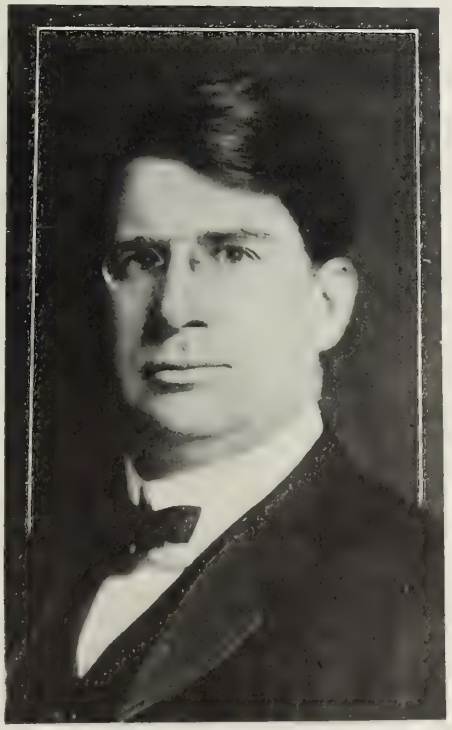
He read the announcement of the $10,000 prize offer in the New York "Globe." The title of Mr. McCardell's manuscript was "The Diamond from the Sky." "The Diamond from the Sky" was selected by the judges because it contained an idea which they thought was the best for a photoplay production.

Finding that Mr. McCardell was the author and knowing him to be one of the most successful authors of photoplays and stories, the principals engaged his services in preparing the story to appear in newspapers simultaneously with the appearance of the films at the moving picture theatres.

The $10,000 prize won by Mr. McCardell was simply for his idea.

Now another prize of $10,000 is to be given for the best idea for a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky."

In the accompanying story Miss Kitty Kelly, film critic, tells of her interview with Roy L. McCardell.



Here, ladies and gentlemen, I beg you to meet the man whose mind has just paid him a $10,000 dividend—Roy L. McCardell, author of stories and scenarios—writer of the photoplay story that won the $10,000 prize—"The Diamond from the Sky."

He is the man who has distinctly put the move—meaning additional move—into the American Film Manufacturing company's studios at Santa Barbara, shocking into tense activity all the forces of a big company of actors created for the purpose of giving adequate pictorial expression to his $10,000 idea.

Several months ago Mr. McCardell read of an offer in the New York "Globe" of $10,000 for a photoplay. This contest was conducted by this paper and associated newspapers. Mr. McCardell wrote out his idea and submitted it in response to the announcement.

The conditions of the contest made it necessary for every one who competed to put only a number on the manuscript itself and to sign the author's name and address separately.

This was done. The judges were Miss Mae Tinee, film critic; John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film Corporation; and R. R. Nehls, manager of the American Film Manufacturing Company—the company which was to produce the photoplay.

ROY McCARDELL

"And how did you happen to be the winner in this contest?" I asked.

"I didn't 'happen' to," said Mr. McCardell emphatically. "I've been working on a continued photoplay idea for a number of years. I knew the big pictures were coming. I followed them carefully. When this $10,000 prize offer was announced I felt it was the biggest opportunity I ever had seen and it was time for me to bring out my ideas. First I read the conditions carefully and found out what they wanted, and then I got busy and set down my ideas.

"I worked at it practically. I saw pictures, I talked to all the exchange men and exhibitors I knew, and heard what their patrons demanded, and then I drew conclusions.

"For a photoplay such as was wanted I knew that chapters full of suspense were essential. Things not only had to happen, but they had to keep promising they would happen. People not only want to be interested in what is happening now, but they want to be obliged to look ahead to what is going to happen. From my study I learned that the public liked modern things, romantic things, and a clean love theme.

Romance Is Essential

"I weighed all the serial stories that had gone before and judged what made for success or failure in them. And I found that what counted mostly for success was youth, romance, and adventure.

"That's what the people are looking for. They all seek romance, and when they can get it for 10 cents it's an awful good bargain. Most folks can find enough squalor and unhappiness at home without going out and looking for it for amusement.

"So I did a clean, lively story, with no excruciating torture, no slatternly characters, nothing physically repulsive, full of thrills and full of comradeliness, in which there is triumph of the good old virtues that make the world go round.

"I put earnestness, sincerity and resoluteness into it, and I didn't spare the midnight light."

ENGLISH EDITOR PRAISES WEST COAST NUMBER

The West Coast issue continues to call forth praise on every hand. Its numerous features have impressed the members of the industry abroad. The latest word is from Low Warren, editor of "The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly." In a recent number, he says:

"Hearty congratulations to our American contemporary, the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, whose special West Coast Number just to hand, is one of the best issues that have come to us from the other side. It is so crammed full of good things that I have put it aside for careful perusal in my leisure moments during the next week-end."

GRIFFITH BACK IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, May 3.

D. W. Griffith, who has been in the East since the opening of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty theatre, New York City, arrived at Los Angeles the first of the week to resume production of his next release, "The Mother and the Law."

With his arrival he made the announcement that four prints of his thirteen reel subject are playing to very satisfactory business at New York, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles, and that the opening at Chicago and in other large cities has now been postponed until fall.

The tenth week of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Auditorium here began Monday, and business has been as good as during the seventh, eighth and ninth weeks. Seats are now on sale for a week in advance, and it is the belief of Manager Lloyd Brown that the engagement will continue for several weeks, the first engagement which continued nine weeks having proven so unexpected that he does not wish to make a prophecy for the future.

ALLIANCE FILMS POPULAR AT ANTIPODES

The latest reports received at the Alliance general offices from Australia contain the accounts of the flattering reception which is accorded the Alliance releases when they are shown in the big cities of the Antipodes.

Exhibitors in Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide and Brisbane, in Australia, and Wellington, Auckland and Queenstown, in New Zealand, are regular users of the Alliance service.

On every Thursday, beginning with May 20, the Selig Polyscope Company will release a Diamond Special, in three reels. The releases will be made through the regular service of the General Film Company.

The first release will be "The Two Natures Within Him." This is a gripping story, having to do with a dual personality.

Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton take the leading roles.

Other Diamond Specials to be released weekly through the regular service of the General Film Company will include: "How Callahan Cleaned Up Little Hell," "Two Pals in Blue," with Tom Mix; "His Father's Rifle," a Diamond Special of Jungle-Zoo atmosphere, and others, announced later.

These Selig Diamond Specials were originally produced as features, but will be released in the General Film Company's regular service.

Bernstein to Organize Fourth Program, He Declares

Expects to Contract with Well-Known Dramatists for Scenarios—He Controls Mechanical Devices Which Are Important in Picture Making

ISADORE BERNSTEIN has sent the following communication to the trade press with the request that it be published to counteract and to rectify all idle rumors of his future plans in the motion picture industry:

"To set at rest all idle rumors and definitely declare my policy of activities in the moving picture industry for the future, I wish to make the following statements:

"Plans are already under way for the manufacture of a fourth programme, consisting of one, two and three reels, interspersed with one special feature of five reels and upward in length per week.

"Popular books and especially plays of note have been utilized so extensively of late that only indifferent material is left in the discard. My organization will be fortified with writers who will construct the photodrama along the dignified and pains-taking lines found so necessary upon the legitimate stage, the special features giving opportunity for entering into contracts which will reimburse the dramatist sufficiently to place at our disposal the best writers.

"I am in possession of certain recent inventions, fully protected, which will give me a decided advantage over the manufacturers of yesterday, and everything will be constructed upon a new and up-to-date basis.

"Having no junk in subcellars to unload and no unwise contracts to operate under, I will have a free and untrammeled hand in the manufacture of only the latest and best in the photo-drama field.

"Future plans include a system whereby the exhibitor will be able to arrange his program to such advantage that a superior product will be less costly than present day existing arrangements.

"This is an age of the survival of the fittest, and being equipped with the experience of the last few years and backed by a group of financiers who are not connected in any way with the photoplay or theatrical business, I am in position to revolutionize certain phases of the moving picture industry, and if the picture fans of tomorrow do not think they can support four programs, then mine will be one of three doing business."

Farrar Pictures Will Only Be Released on Paramount

Cecil B. DeMille, Director General of Lasky Feature Play Company, Will Supervise All Productions Featuring the Famous Singer—Goldfish Goes to Pacific Coast

THE Lasky Feature Play Company announces definite decisions on two of the most important points connected with the photoplay productions in which Geraldine Farrar is to appear, under the direction of this camera.

First: Cecil B. DeMille, director general for the Lasky Company, will personally direct all the productions in which Geraldine Farrar appears.

Second: These Farrar photodramas will be released exclusively through and only through the Paramount program. Any exhibitor who signs for the Paramount Program will positively have them and there is no price at all at which other exhibitors can get them or hope to get them. Farrar is Lasky and Lasky is Paramount.

Samuel Goldfish, who is now on his way to the Lasky studios in Hollywood, California, to consult with Mr. Lasky and Mr. De Mille made these two announcements just before his departure for the coast.

At first there was some question whether it would be possible for Mr. De Mille, with his myriad other responsibilities and duties, to devote himself exclusively to Miss Farrar during the eight weeks that she will be at the studio.

But it was finally decided that this is so far the greatest undertaking yet assayed by any photodramatic concern that only Mr. De Mille himself could be permitted to assume the infinite responsibility involved, and other matters have been so arranged that De Mille will attend to every minute detail of each Farrar production.

With regard to the determination to make the Farrar productions absolutely Paramount program offerings, it may be stated that the Lasky company felt that this issue involved a great principle—the principle of justice and encouragement to Paramount exhibitors.

Farrar star photodramas will never be offered at a price. They have no price. They go to Paramount exhibitors as part of the Paramount program as the greatest conceivable evidence that the Lasky company appreciates the work that Paramount exhibitors are doing for the elevation of photodramatic art and is doing its utmost to co-operate. Farrar photodramas are for the picture playhouses.

"SPECIAL NIGHT FOR BACHELORS"

MANAGER DICK KILGORE, of the Colonial Theatre, Third and Market streets, Harrisburg, Pa., pulled off a clever advertising scheme in the form of a "Special Night for Bachelors."

Every day for half a week in advance of the event he threw a slide on the screen announcing that "Thursday Will Be Bachelors' Night. All Unmarried Gentlemen Who Are Forty Years Old or More Will Receive Box Seats Free by Applying at the Ticket Office on that Night."

Every time the slide was shown in advance of the event it extracted a good laugh from the audience, and it started the people talking about the clever "stunt." All the patrons began wondering whether any bachelors would take advantage of the offer, and they told their friends outside the theatre about it.

When Thursday night came not a bachelor put in an appearance, although the management stood ready to make good its offer, but every seat in the house, outside of the reserved boxes, was occupied by curious persons attracted by the odd announcement.

All the people, especially the women, wanted to see if any of their bachelor friends would have the nerve to take advantage of the offer, and the box office receipts jumped up accordingly.

PITTSBURGHERS IN THE WEALTHY SECTION PREFER HIGH PRICES

H. B. KEISTER, of the East Liberty Cameraphone theatre, Pittsburgh, has taken another advance step and has startled the neighborhood with the sign on the front of his ticket office. It reads, "Adults twenty cents, Children ten cents."

And this is how it all happened. The other theatres in that section were charging ten and five cents, but Keister stated that he was willing to put the best shows he could secure in his theatre, which has the reputation of having the best people in Pittsburgh's richest district as its patrons.

He thought it all over and decided to charge the higher price. The other exhibitors only smiled and said "Go to it," and he did. His theatre is being packed with the higher prices and the little fellows about him are charging five cents and are having a hard time getting the people into their theatres at that price, while Keister has them standing.

He has taken all of the big features he could get his hands on, and incidentally had a clash with the police authorities for running the Fox Film Corporation's "The Nigger." The police stated that it could not be run and Keister worked it all that day regardless of the order.

The matter was taken up with the police later by Keister, and he was told he could not repeat on it. He talked the matter over with Harvey B. Day, Pittsburgh manager of the Fox Corporation, and the name was changed to "The New Governor," and the police only smiled and let it go at that. Day was willing to stand a lawsuit before he would permit the police to interfere with the running of this feature from his office.

"PROGRESSIVE 'BLACK BOX' PARTIES" ARE THE RAGE

THE manager of a large uptown theatre in New York learned of an interesting practice which has lately come into vogue in New York. He learned from one of an automobile party which visited his theatre that his guests were pretty generally conducting a "Black Box" tour or progressive party.

Through the "Evening World," in which "The Black Box" is appearing in story form, it was learned where the various installments of the serial were being shown that evening, and, starting with the theatre running installment No. 1, the automobile load of society people had, in the course of one evening, visited five theatres where they had seen the second, third and four episodes of the serial in succession.

In two weeks the party declared they intended to see the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth episodes in the same manner. Progressive "Black Box" parties now promise to be quite the rage with photo fans who have automobiles.

SAN FRANCISCO EXHIBITOR USES DISTINCTIVE ANNOUNCEMENTS

LOUIS R. GREENFIELD, manager of the new Fillmore theatre, San Francisco, made use of an unique announcement card on the re-opening of the house a short time ago.

Enclosed with two admission tickets sent to prospective patrons was a deckle edge card containing a notice of the policy inaugurated by the new management. The card, though plain, was distinctive. In addition to the printed announcement on the main part of the sheet, a scene from "Du Barry," the drama shown the opening night, appeared, printed in sepia on a short flap at the top.

"JUNE" ADVERTISING BRING RESULTS TO EXHIBITOR

RECENTLY a full page advertisement of "Runaway June" appeared in the "Four-County Windsorite," of Windsor Mo. Charles Curnutt, proprietor of the Victoria Theatre, secured this absolutely free. Any exhibitor who can obtain gratis a full page advertisement in his daily newspaper of a motion picture which he is showing is certainly a "live wire."

How Mr. Curnutt did this is decidedly interesting to other exhibitors who can follow in his path. The center two columns of the page Mr. Curnutt reserved for his own advertising of the Reliance serial, "Runaway June."

First in these two columns appeared a formal wedding invitation for the union of June Moore and Ned Warner at his theatre on April 22, when he ran the first instalment of the serial. Then followed this box:

> The young couple this week are making a tour of the business districts of Windsor and selecting and arranging for their household necessities among the many live, wide-awake business firms.

There was other advertising matter for the theatre in these two central columns.

The two columns to the left and the two columns to the right were occupied by a five-thousand word story written by Mr. Curnutt, which described the shopping tour made by June and Ned, the exhibitor giving names of the tradespeople, playing them up in bold face type.

Wherever June or Ned made a purchase the name of the merchant was given. The merchant was charged by the exhibitor for these advertising mentions. In this way Mr. Curnutt not only got his entire page advertisement entirely free, but he made a small profit as well.

LUCKY NAMES BRING FREE SEATS ON MONDAYS

Eventually they'll get around to you, because every day somebody who has a name is let in free, gratis, for nothing. It's a new scheme, and has worked well.

ORIENTAL LIFE AS IT IS MIRRORED IN THE LATEST SELIG RED SEAL, "THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD"

FORTUNE REPULSES MOHAMMED THE HOUR OF PRAYER THE AMERICANS ARE FREED

ROBERTS SIGNS WITH LASKY FOR ANOTHER YEAR

Theodore Roberts has signed with the Lasky Feature Play Company to continue under this management for another year.

Mr. Roberts has shown not only a genius for the screen, but a cheerful diligence which may well be an example to other artists and for which the Lasky Company cannot express its thanks too deeply. Three or four such characterizations as he makes might well be considered the work of a year, and yet he has appeared in more important roles than any other Lasky artist. He has indeed at his command the spirit of "infinite variety."

Some of the most important roles assumed by Theodore Roberts during the past year have been Sam Stone in "Bobby Burnit," Mike Reardon in "Ready Money," the Grand Duke in "The Man from Home," the stellar role of "The Circus Man," Jack Rance, the sheriff, in "The Girl of the Golden West," Bruno in "After Five," the secret agent in "The Unafraid," the Burgomaster in "The Captive," the Senator in "The Governor's Lady," and the Senator in "The Woman."

COBE ENDS WESTERN TRIP

Andrew J. Cobe, president of the Alliance, returned to New York from a two weeks' trip during which he visited nearly all of the Alliance exchanges east of Duluth.

"I made it a point," said Mr. Cobe, "in every city that I touched to visit one or two of the leading theatres. Out of twenty houses which I entered, fifteen were using the Alliance Program, of which seven were playing 'Beulah.'

"The shortage of good features was the fact that impressed me the most. The picture-loving public will not tolerate anything but the best, and they are willing to pay the right price."

WINNIPEG RAISES PRICE TO TEN CENTS

Winnipeg, Can., May 5.

Chiefly because the five cent exchanges are unable to meet a further demand of films, but also owing to the fact that patronage is somewhat on the decrease, the half dozen picture houses of Winnipeg which have been charging an admission price of five cents, have come back to ten cents.

Superba of United Back from 6 Weeks Trip in South

Company, Under Guidance of Director Hutchinson, Filmed Many Places of Historic Interest Never Before Photographed for Motion Pictures

AFTER a six-week picture-making trip through the South, during which Director Charles A. Hutchinson and the Superba Company obtained permission to photograph many buildings and places never before allowed to be filmed, this company, which left to make a series of southern and outdoor comedy for the United program in March, is now at its New York studio.

With it was Patrice, the vaudeville star and actress, who had gone with the company to play special leads. So successful was this first experiment with a traveling company that President Golden of the Superba Company, has decided to send the company on a second trip to Maine, along the Atlantic Coast and into Canada in two weeks.

The Superba Company went first to Savannah, Ga., where it remained for three weeks, using the city as headquarters and making short trips into the surrounding country for the local color needed for the southern pictures.

From Savannah, Director Hutchinson took his company to St. Augustine, where the picturesque missions were incorporated into the pictures, and from there to Palm Beach, where the company remained two weeks longer, making a number of beautiful society pictures around the Royal Ponce de Leon Hotel.

Mr. Hutchinson's work as director of the Superba company has attracted attention before for its originality and excellence. His unusual experience on the legitimate stage in stock and as a Broadway leading man, followed by years more as a leading man and producer of high class vaudeville sketches with Patrice, both in this country and England, have given him confidence and executive ability for handling detail and planning effective "business" which give to his pictures a distinctive touch.

Among the comedies made during the southern trip in which Patrice will star are: "Just Like His Wife," "You're Next," "Their Day in the Country," "Troubled Waters," and "An Old Man's Darling."

Others in the company were W. E. Browning, the well known star of many Broadway successes, David L. Don, Joe Burke and Edith Thornton.

Anglo-American Will Handle Alliance in England

Contracts Between Cobe and Hounsell Signed This Past Week—War Has Improved Film Business in Britain, Says Latter

ONE of the big deals during the past week in New York film circles was the signing of the contracts by President Cobe, of the Alliance Films Corporation, and Edgar Hounsell, the head of the Anglo-American Film Co., of London, whereby the latter concern will in the future be the sole distributors of the Alliance Program in the British Isles.

Mr. Hounsell, who is one of the oldest feature men, in point of service in the English film world, sailed for Great Britain last Saturday on the Lusitania, accompanied by Edward Barry, who will be in the service of the Anglo-American Company as sales manager.

Before sailing Mr. Hounsell remarked upon the peculiar situation which had arisen in English filmdom as a result of the war.

"When the war started," said Mr. Hounsell, "there was an alarming drop in the exhibitors' receipts. The exhibitors turned with tears in their eyes to the exchangemen and begged for a large reduction in rental rates. There was nothing for the exchangemen to do but meet the exhibitors' demand. Then began the period of great activity all over England, for factories that had been idle for months began operation, manufacturing war supplies, and as a result there is more money in circulation now than there has been for years.

"The exhibitor is doing better business now than before the war, and he refuses in spite of all arguments to pay the old rental rates, and the exchange is 'left out in the cold,' so far as enjoying any benefit from this flurry of prosperity."

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, May 3.

THOMAS H. INCE, director general of the NYMP studios, five miles out of Santa Monica, on the ocean front, was seriously injured the first of last week when the high power Pathfinder auto he was driving from the studios to his home in Hollywood, skidded on the wet pavement and turned turtle.

Mr. Ince had driven up a slight incline near Sawtelle, and upon reaching the top saw an auto approaching from the opposite direction. When he applied the brakes the machine whirled about, locking the front wheels. In this he was thrown from his seat and alighted against the curb.

Raymond B. West, a director, who was driving ahead in another car, not seeing the lights of Mr. Ince's machine, returned to learn the trouble, and found the director in a semi-conscious condition.

He was rushed to the office of a nearby doctor, where examination brought out the fact that his collar bone was badly shattered, and it was feared he was internally injured. The producer was immediately removed to his home, where the fracture was adjusted, and where he will be kept in the care of nurses for the next month or six weeks.

The day following the accident he insisted upon directing the operations at the studio from his home, and this is being done by stenographic services and evening conferences with his co-workers.

Some more "unusual" California weather has been delaying production at the numerous studios of the L. A. film colony, and the demands for space in the enclosed studios has, during the past two weeks, been far in excess of the space. All directors are behind with their releases and the studios present exceedingly busy scenes every time the sun puts in an appearance.

Air Flight the Big Scene

The Famous Players company spent the early part of last week at San Diego, where they secured the use of a millionaire's yacht for some scenes for "The Girl of Yesterday," being produced by Alan Dwan, with Mary Pickford in the name role.

This is a story of present-day American life, of the nature of a comedy drama. If the weather permits, the big scene of the subject will be made at Griffith park, where Miss Pickford is scheduled to come to take a ride in the aeroplane of Glen Martin.

Manager Al Kaufman has made a trip, and is using his utmost persuasive manner to convince the popular star that it is perfectly safe, including in all of his talks that he is going up and will be there turning the crank if anything should happen.

An additional company was added at the L-Ko producing plant last week, when a company was assigned Jack McCully, formerly director of Gold Seal dramas for the Universal. Director Harry Edwards is staging a two reel subject featuring Billie Richie with Henry Bergman and Peggy Pierce.

For this two large sets have been especially prepared, and there is every indication that it will be the most pretentious subject produced for this brand.

Laura Hope Crews, who is to be featured in the Lasky production of "Fighting Bob," an adaptation from the successful Belasco play, has arrived at the Lasky studio and work has been taken up on this subject. Frank Mills, popular leading man of Broadway, has been selected to play the male lead in this subject, and is also at the Lasky studio.

MacMillan with Universal

Violet MacMillan, star of the Oz subjects, and later with the NYMP companies, is now with the Universal, and a new company, to be directed by W. C. Dowlan, has been formed, with Miss MacMillan as the leading woman. Last week the first subject was taken up. This will be one reel, entitled, "Out of the Night," and is a story of the life of a cabaret dancer.

The specially prepared story filmed at the Universal on the occasion of the visit of the members of the Associated Traffic Managers of America, has been completed for release Memorial Day.

This shows the nation-wide war which was declared on Decoration Day, as the result of all railroads issuing an order to pay engineers by the day instead of the mile, as at present. The traffic men, in session extraordinary, are induced to compromise, by the daughter of a G. A. R. member, who was the companion, during the Civil War, of the president of the traffic organization.

The subject was produced by Joseph Degrass from a scenario by Calder Johnstone and L. V. Jefferson.

Nestor Company at Beach

The Daly Joker company is making "A Case of Beans," being the experience of a young husband whose wife was so devoted to bridge she neglected to serve other than canned goods—mostly beans—for their meals.

How he improved conditions makes an interesting story. Jack Prescott, late of the Santa Barbara company, is now leading man of this organization, playing opposite Fritzi Brunette.

The Christie-Nestor company spent a portion of a week recently at one of the beaches where a roller coaster, miniature train, and other novelties were used in the one reel subject "Their Friend the Burglar."

In "The Downfall of Potts," another Nestor of the week, Lee Moran appeared as Potts, the star detective, with Eddie Lyons as the new member of the force.

In the kidnapping of the commissioner's daughter the blame is placed on Potts, and the new addition to the detective corps wins the girl and the praise of the commissioner.

The Allen Curtis Joker makers are now filming No. 6 of the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" series following the making of "The Barbecue Belle," in which Max Asher appeared as the chef of the big feed.

For the first time in several months the Joseph de Grasse company is engaged in making a picture of a western character with all the melodramatic thrills that may be packed into two reels. The title of this is "One Man's Evil," and was written by Ida May Park.

A stranger arrives in the little western city, makes friends with the town's young men, is a good fellow at the bars and causes a riot of drinking. While entertaining the young men he is also becoming popular with the village belles. When this is learned the sweetheart of one of the girls, inflamed by intemperance caused by the stranger's hospitality, attempts to shoot the stranger, but his aim is bad and his bullet hits the girl.

Blame is placed on the stranger, who is aided in escaping the mob by the sister of the youth who did the shooting and later confessed to her. The man who brought evil to the community is thus led to leave, to save his life from the mob, and there is a reconciliation of all. In this subject Pauline Bush is being featured as the sheriff's sweetheart and sister of the man who did the shooting.

The "Black Box" company is this week making the final of the series of fifteen two reel episodes, and following this all members will take a short vacation while scenarios and props are being prepared for a number of multiple reel subjects in which they will appear.

"The Broken Coin" series company is now working on number two, in which some big sets, including marvelous castles of the rulers of an imaginary principality are used. No announcement has been made as to who will write the newspaper serial about this series, but it is expected this matter will be decided within the next week, that all may be in readiness at the time of the release of the first number, the third week in June.

Cleo Madison Featured in "Dancers"

"The Dancers" is the title of a three-reel Gold Seal subject now being filmed, in which Cleo Madison will be featured in the name part. It is the story of an actress who abandoned her baby daughter and 17 years later infatuates the son of the woman who adopted the infant after he had given his mother, then on her death bed, the promise that he would wed the ward.

The son fulfills his promise, and his wife is a great aid to him in his chosen career, until the dancer again learns of his success, and attempts to allure him to an elopement. But the detective employed by the dancer to find her child, makes a report at the time she is preparing to elope. The story is an unusually strong one, with prolonged suspense that adds materially to the interest.

Another story of theatrical life is being made by Universal Director Burton King, "The Opening Night," in which Adele Lane appears as the leading woman of a new "legitimate" stage production, and continues her business through two acts after knowing her debauched husband has taken his life because she refuses to give him additional funds following his gambling away all her savings. This is the second theatrical story to be made by this company in the past two weeks, and it is possible a series may be filmed, with each release separate and distinct.

"The Flower Girl" is a one reel subject for the Big U brand, being a drama in which the unsuccessful suitor attempts to steal the score of an opera after he had caused the composer, his rival, no end of trouble.

4-year-old Actor Featured

But the daughter, refusing to accept the husband her father chooses for her, goes to seek employment as a singer and discovers the theft. Doris Pawn plays the name part, Sydney Ayers the composer and Val Paul the heavy.

George Stone, the four-year-old actor, is being featured in a one reel subject, "Billy's Cupidity," being produced by Frank Lloyd, for the Laemmle brand. In this the youngster plays the part of a city newsboy, and by a series of incidents serves to re-unite the lovers, who were estranged because of the habits of the man.

Members of the 101 Bison company joined the Sells-Floto circus here last week for a trip of ten days, and are now traveling with the aggregation for the purpose of filming the three reel circus story by Hugh Weir, "Peggy of the Big Top."

Marie Walcamp is playing the name part and in the cast are Wellington Playter, Rex de Rosselli, Sherman Bainbridge, Clarence Hodge, and Billie Reiter. The direction is in charge of Henry McRae.

Dr. H. G. Stafford and Calder Johnstone, have written a two reel subject, "The Traveling Tinkerer," which is of a semi-scientific nature, dealing with prenatal influence. The principal character of the photoplay will be a hunchback, the name part, played by Murdock MacQuarrie.

Two New Selig Directors

The Universal company has secured the privilege of making pictures within the California - Panama exposition grounds at San Diego, and Dr. H. G. Stafford, of the scenario staff, has been sent there to write stories in which the most beautiful locations may be used.

The first will probably require scenes about the Hopi Indian Village, and a company will leave the early part of the week to film the subject.

Two additional directors have been added to the West Coast producing staff of the Selig company, in the persons of George Nicholas, who just completed filming "Ghosts," an adaptation from the Ibsen play, for the Majestic company, and Guy Oliver, who has been leading man of the Edendale studio company for the past two years.

Mr. Nichols will at once take up the filming of a multiple reel subject adapted from the Charles Belmont Davis story, "The Octopus," prepared by Emma Bell. This represents city life as an injury to society by luring young men from the country and small villages to lives of dissipation.

Mr. Oliver is making his second one reel subject. This is entitled "The Coyote," and deals with incidents pertaining to the construction of a new railroad through the western country.

The Edendale studio company is now making "Marianna, the Girl of the Streets," a story of city slums. Stella Roseta and Lamar Johnston will be seen in the principal parts of this subject of two reels.

Anna Luther, formerly with the Lubin company, is now a member of the Selig Jungle Zoo stock company.

Working scripts for the next big subject to be produced by Director Conlin Campbell of the Selig company, is now being prepared by Lanier Bartlett. This will be entitled "Mizpah," and is an adaptation using the central theme of the Ella Wheeler Wilcox play, and facts from the Book of Esther.

Massive sets representing ancient villages are now being built, and hundreds of extra people will be used in many scenes. This is to be the most spectacular production the Selig company has attempted and will require seven or eight reels.

Charles Chaplin in "Work"

Charley Chaplin is now appearing in "Work," which will in all probability require two full thousand feet reels to complete, judging from the great quantity of tools the prop men have secured for use in the production. In this the popular comedian of the screen will dabble into many trades with his usual success—that of introducing laughable situations.

There was a dandy little celebration at the Essanay studio Monday morning when the news of the fifth victory of the Niles Essanay Indians reached the studio from the Northern producing plant.

The baseball team has played but six games this season and of that number lost but one—that with the Oakland Coast League. Last season the team, according to "Scoop" Breslauer, played forty-five games and won forty.

President Gilmore, of the Federal League, who recently tendered President Woodrow Wilson with a handsome sterling silver watch fob, which is also a season ticket to all games of the league, has honored Charles Chaplin in a similar manner, and the comedian is now studying railroad time tables to see how he can take advantage of the gift without missing a rehearsal.

Harry Ravier and Glenwood Abbott, who have leased the Kalem studio at Culver City, where they have been producing one reel comedies, are now engaged in making a five reel subject, which will be released under the title of "The Automatic Escort," in which Phroso, the Mechanical Doll of the vaudeville stage, is featured as the body guard of a woman newspaper writer who does the expositions.

The second story of the English writer, Ouida, "Tricotrin," has been adapted for filming and is now being made at the Majestic studio. This subject will consist of three reels and the cast includes such well-known players as Jack Conway, Vera Lewis, Jennie Lee, Wilbur Higby, Margaret Loveridge and others.

This is of the nature of a melodrama, but is considered a much stronger story than the first adaptation from this author's works, "Strathmore." The direction of this is in charge of George Seigmann.

Filming Second Ibsen Play

The second Ibsen play to be adapted for the screen, "Pillars of Society," is now being filmed by Reliance players for the M. M.-P. program.

The scenario for this was prepared by Mary H. O'Connor and the players selected are Henry Walthall, Mary Alden and Ralph Lewis, who will appear in the parts of Bernick, head of the ancient ship building house of Bernick that is nearing bankruptcy; as Lona the half sister of Bernick; and the leader of hypocrites or one of the pillars of society, respectively.

WINIFRED KINGSTON

A crook story, entitled "Out of Bondage," with F. A. Turner playing the role of the crook, and again appearing as 'father" of Dorothy Gish playing the part of Mary, is being made at the Majestic studios.

The plot hinges about one crook forcing his daughter to marry his pal, after which there is a falling out and one tells the police. Walter Long and Richard Cummings also appear in this subject.

The filming of "The Fox Woman," adapted from the novel by John Luther Long, author of "Madam Butterfly," is now well under way. This will be made in four reels for release as a Mutual Master-Picture.

"The Fox Woman," according to Japanese mythology, is one that steals souls, and it is she that causes all the trouble. Signe Auen is appearing in this role. Teddy Sampson (in private life Mrs. Ford Sterling) appears as the wife of the Japanese, and Elmer Clifton is the artist. Direction is by Lloyd Ingraham.

A pretty Indian romance is being pictured by Sheriff Arthur Mackley, in the filming of "The Race Love," a two reel Reliance. This portrays the white man winning the love of the Indian maiden, but she is not satisfied with the life away from her own people and subsequently returns to her first love and the Indian people. Bessie Buskirk is the Indian maiden and Ray Myers the white man who wins her love.

Mae Marsh in Pastoral Drama

Work was taken up last week on the filming of "Her Shattered Idol," to be a four reel contribution of the Majestic company to the Mutual Master-Picture program, written by Ella Woods. In this Robert Harron and Mae Marsh will be featured as lovers in a pastoral drama.

Their romance is broken off by the girl becoming infatuated with a blacksmith of the village because of his strength, but the uncle contrives to right matters. Elmo Linkenhelt, who was chosen to personify the God of War in the allegorical climax of "The Birth of a Nation," because of his muscular development, has been cast to play the part of the blacksmith.

Spottiswoode Aitken appears as the uncle and Jennie Lee as the old-fashioned rural mother. The production is in charge of Jack O'Brien.

"Gasoline Gus" is the title of the subject commanding the attention of the Komic brand makers, wherein two clerks employed by a certain Mr. Fizz as soda dispensers, war for the affections of Fizz's daughter.

EUGENE PALLETTE IN "THE SPELL OF THE POPPY" (Majestic—Two Reels—May 9)

Gus is fired because the cash register does not balance and stars a jitney bus. But unfortunately he purchased the one just stolen from his former employer. Then comes the other clerk with the firm's daughter on his arm, and not recognizing his rival because of the goggles, employs him to take them for a ride.

The jitney lands in a canal and the escort leaves the maid to drown, but not so with Gus. He becomes the hero and the cowardly one is arrested for stealing the auto.

Director William Christy Cabanne and members of the company filming 'The Failure" spent a portion of last week at San Quentin, the California state prison, where they succeeded in securing the rights to make a number of scenes for this coming Majestic Mutual Master-Picture.

The attempts of a father, whose life has been embittered by the loss of his wife and only son, to retain his only remaining treasure, his daughter, Nida, forms the basis of the plot for "The Living Death," a two reel Majestic subject.

F. A. Turner has been cast for the part of the father and will be supported by Billie West as the daughter, and Edward

J. Peil as her sweetheart. The subject is being filmed under the direction of Tod Browning.

Biograph Players Finish Desert Subject

An interior set, 40 x 125 feet, representing the interior of a New York City cheap music and dance hall, has been prepared for scenes for the coming Majestic Mutual Master-Picture, "Up from the Depths," now being filmed by Paul Powell. Gladys Brockwell and Courtenay Foote appear in the leading roles of this subject.

Traverse Vale and company of Biograph players have just returned from Redlands, Cal., where exteriors were made for "The Mountain Rose," a two reel desert subject. The principals of this production were Louise Vale, Franklin Ritchie and Kenneth Davenport.

For a scene of not more than ten feet, depicting a riot, for the political story, "Blame the Woman," produced by George Reahms, more than forty extra people were used this week. The principals of this one reel subject were Augusta Anderson and Charles Pearley.

"Captain Fracasse," an adaptation from the French novel of the same title, has been filmed in two reels at the Biograph studio with Vola Smith, Herbert Barrington, Al Garcia and Grant Nye playing the leading parts. This is a costume subject with scenes of the sixteenth century, and is of a decidedly melodramatic nature.

Irish Players in Melodrama

Roughing it in the San Fernando canyon for several days was the vacation enjoyed this week by the members of the Wray Physioc Biograph company.

While in the mountains exteriors for the Western mining picture, "A Buckskin Shirt," were made. The principals of the cast were Joe McDermott, Ivan Christie and Marie Newton.

Isabelle Ray impersonated the part of an actress this week in the making of the one reel subject, "The Heart of an Actress," under the direction of George Morgan. The male lead was taken by Frank Newberg.

The Irish Players, under the direction of Tony O'Sullivan, are making a melodrama, "The Fruits of Discontent," with Clara Macdowell and Charles West playing the leading parts.

The last of the scenes depicting the interior of the United States Senate were filmed last week at the N. Y. M. P. studio for the M. M.-P. "The Man from Oregon," which will consist of about five reels. Four hundred people were used in the scenes, and this is regarded as the largest interior set ever used at a local studio.

Director Raymond B. West had ample opportunity to display his athletic ability last week in making scenes for "The Mating," the multiple reel subject of college life which will offer Bessie Barriscale as star.

Members of the football team of the University of Southern California were secured to make up a team supporting Lewis J. Cody, who is playing the part of "Bullet Dick" Ames, the gridiron hero, the male lead of the subject. The making of these scenes was like a trip back to a certain Middle West university for Director West, as he played half back for three consecutive seasons for a university of the Big 9.

"The Beckoning Flame"

The coast road near Inceville was this week transformed into a street of Calcutta, for scenes depicting a celebration given by English army officers for the five reel feature, "The Beckoning Flame." In this there was a gay array of floats prancing horses, and other features of the parade included six elephants and a like number of camels.

"His Superficial Wife" is the title given a two reel subject being made last week by Walter Edwards, who also plays the leading part, that of a husband whose wife is of the butterfly type. After much pleading she induces him to buy her a very expensive jewel that she may outshine the other women of her coterie.

A dream reveals to her the folly of her ways, and after a series of incidents, paramount of which is the loss of a goodly sum at a whist party, she induces her husband to return the jewel, and the lesson teaches her to be a model wife. Mr. Edwards has been making a record for speedy production of two reel subjects and his associates have now dubbed him "The Cyclone."

Indians of the N. Y. M. P. studio are working in a story of the early California Mission days, "The Secret of Lost River." For this some of the exceptional scenes preserved from the early days for which

PAULINE BUSH IN "THE HEART OF CERISE" (Rex-Universal)

Southern California is noted will be used. The story is one of heart interest and depicts the helpful manner of the early comers to the West.

"The Pathway of the Past"

A thrilling gangster crook story being filmed this week is "The Pathway of the Past," a two reel N. Y. M. P. subject of a very melodramatic flavor. The heroine of the story is implicated in a robbery by one of the crooks because she would not countenance his advances, but after serving a term of imprisonment she secures employment and is the means of preventing her employer losing heavily by a fake stock selling enterprise of the crook.

To insure sufficient thrills for a two reel subject arrangements have been made for the sinking of two ships for the making of the N. Y. M. P. subject "The Floating Death."

The story points out the evil of the present manner of inspecting ocean-going ships, and shows the result of the grafting official who grants the navigator of an unsafe vessel his sailing papers. Fire breaks out on the ship and seven hundred, among them the wife of the inspector, perish.

The inspector becomes a suicide, and the man who bribed him, in trying to escape, meets death when a freighter on which he has taken passage rams a derelict loaded with dynamite.

Herbert Standing, the character actor of the Morosco Photoplays, and three of his sons this week are occupying conspicuous places on the screens of downtown theatres. The father is seen in "Captain Courtesy," at Tally's Broadway; Harold is playing lead in a production at the Garrick across the street, and in the same subject his twin brother plays the part of the governor. A block and a half up street Jack Standing is playing an important part in a Lubin subject.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

WOULD NOT RENT "NIGGER" FOR LOW ADMISSION

THAT Washington will support higher priced productions, even in face of the constant wail of some of the exhibitors that the general public will balk at even six for ten cents, is borne out by the heavy attendance during the four days' exhibition at Crandall's theatre of "The Nigger," for which Mr. Crandall demanded and got an admission of fifteen cents at his matinee and a quarter in the evenings. Mr. Crandall has a seating capacity at his house of five hundred, and he filled each seat nearly ten times each day.

Considerable credit for this increase in price, for all other theatres in this territory which will show this picture will follow suit, is due to Lieutenant Jim P. Anderson, through whose office it is being booked, who has refused to let it go to any exhibitor who will not get a fair admission, and a fair admission for the ordinary house is that charged at Crandall's during the days named.

Of course, there were those who refused to pay the price, but these others could hardly have been accommodated. A return engagement of two days is scheduled for that house, at which time those who failed to see it at its initial appearance will have a second opportunity of doing so. By all houses holding to the stated price the value of the picture is not in any way cheapened, say those interested.

The general public, according to Mr. Anderson, are willing to pay just what a production is worth, and the appraising thereof must necessarily be done by the exhibitor. If he thinks a show to be worth but five cents or ten cents and does not ask for more, the patrons are not going to hand him a quarter. In this territory, it will be shown at the Colonial, in Richmond, and the New Wells, in Norfolk, each for six days; at the Palace theatre, in Petersburg, Va., for two days, and there are a number of theatres which have already or are about to book this feature in the near future.

EXCHANGES IN PITTSBURGH SHOW ACTIVITY

THE Alliance is to have a new Pittsburgh manager. Formerly it was managed through the Weiland Film Company, but Max W. Herring is to take charge of the work in the Pittsburgh district and is to have the rights for that district. He is a hustler and has a host of friends, and they have started booking his pictures so that he has been kept busy all week.

He has been able so far to book his pictures away ahead and is getting a regular list of customers.

The Independent Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, has moved next door to its offices in Ferry street. When the Pittsburgh Photoplay Company moved its offices to 420 Penn avenue and combined with the Continental and Thanhouser companies, there the Independent took advantage of the move to obtain larger floor space.

The entire force of the Independent moved the plant in one night.

As more room was needed by the Feature Film and Calcium Light Company, a general house cleaning and remodeling was started this week, and the result is that the sales offices of the company at 125 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, is being enlarged materially so as to accommodate its ever increasing business.

The rear of the sales room was used for reserve stock, and all this has been removed to other quarters and the entire first floor is being used for sales and display purposes. The reserve stock has been removed to the warehouse of the company in First avenue.

When the work is completed it is said the company will have the largest and most thoroughly equipped plant in this section of the country, and the officials in this city are more than pleased with the increase in the business during the past several months.

HARRIS IS MANAGER OF BROADWAY STAR IN OMAHA

FRANK HARRIS, for the last three years one of the most prominent and popular motion-picture exhibitors in the state of Nebraska, has resigned the managership of the Empress theatre in Omaha to accept the office of district manager of the Broadway Star Feature Film Company, with headquarters in Kansas City. He is temporarily traveling representative. Later he will have his headquarters in Minneapolis, and then will have charge of the northern district, including the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Iowa.

He was president of the Nebraska branch of the M. P. E. L. A. for one year and made a live-wire president. Since that time he has been as close as any man to the pulse of motion-picture activity in this territory. He made a decided success as manager of the Empress and upon leaving he remains a member of the board of directors.

E. R. Pearson, formerly manager for the General, Pathe and World Film exchanges, in Omaha, holding them all with marked success, is general representative in the middle west for the company with which Harris is associated. Both are among the livest of the motion-picture live-wires in the central west and their friends in Omaha are congratulating them that they have grown out of metropolitan activities into a wider field.

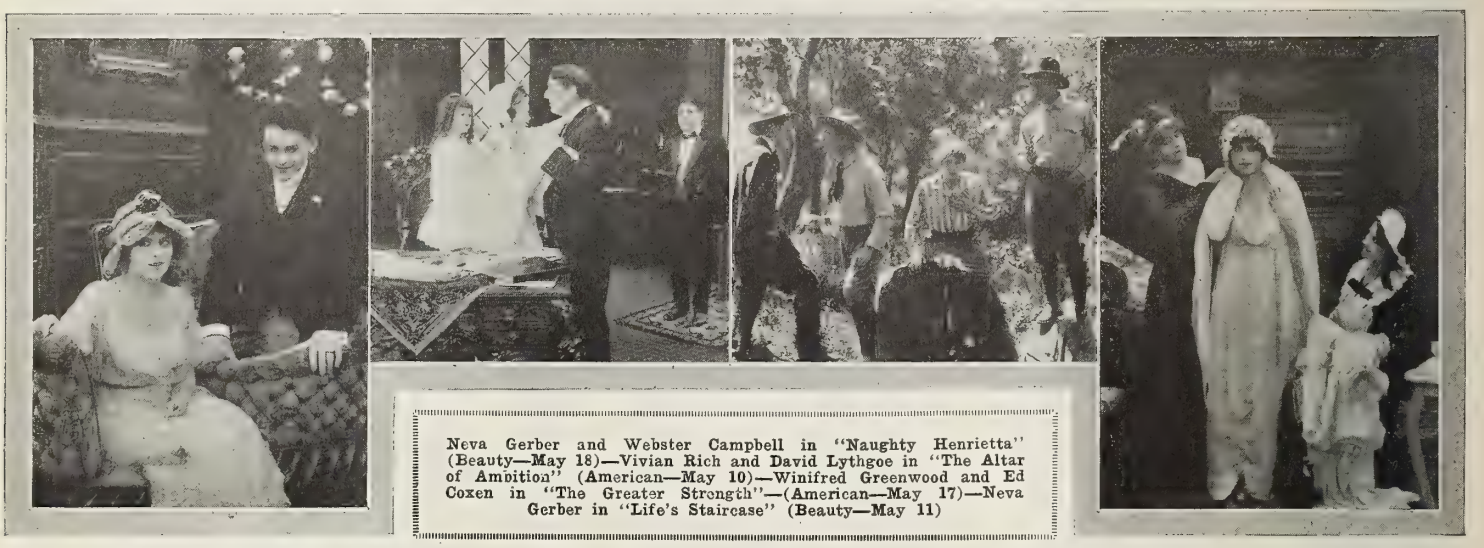
FIVE COAST EXCHANGES MERGED INTO ONE

A REORGANIZATION of the film renting firms known as the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Alco Film Corporation of California, Pacific Feature Films, Metro Film Corporation of California and All Star Feature Film Distributors, was effected this week, and all interests were merged into one corporation known as All Star Feature Film Distributors. Sol Lesser, who was president of a majority of the merged corporations, has been elected president.

These several companies or corporations were owned by practically the same parties, but each new organization was effected when some additional program or attraction was contracted with for release in California or adjoining states.

The plans for the future of the new organization were all made prior to the merging of the several different firms, and contracts now held give the All Star Feature Film Distributors the renting rights in California, Arizona and Nevada for all subjects of the Metro Pictures Corporation; Life Photo Plays; and past and future George Kleine Attractions; the releases of the Alco Film Corporation; and such state rights subjects as "The Spoilers," "Caberia," "The Christian," "Heart of Maryland," "Salisbury's Wild Animal Life," and others.

The All Star Distributors will continue with the main office and exchange at 234 Eddy street, San Francisco, and branch exchanges at Seattle and Los Angeles. The latter will remain in charge of E. H. Emmick, who will be assisted by Ted Bargman, formerly manager of the Golden Gate Exchange.



SELDON TO SELL MASTER-PICTURES IN INDIANAPOLIS TERRITORY

FRED M. SHELDON, of the S. and P. Film Company of Louisville, will take charge of the Louisville offices of the Mutual Film Corporation.

FOX EXPOSITION HEADQUARTERS FIXED

THE Fox Film Corporation has made special arrangements through its general manager, Winfield R. Sheehan, who is now in San Francisco, to make its headquarters in the Exposition City at No. 107 Golden Gate avenue, the general meeting place and center of activities for the exhibitors visiting San Francisco during the coming exhibitors' convention this summer.

William Fox, president of the corporation, has designated Harry Leonhardt, formerly with the F. F. Proctor Enterprises, New York City, to look after the welfare and comfort of all the visiting exhibitors during the convention and have them make themselves at home in the San Francisco branch of the firm.

Mr. Leonhardt, who is general Pacific coast manager for the Fox enterprises, has already arranged a sight-seeing party and a series of special entertainments which will comprise visits to Panama-Pacific Exposition and a general survey and inspection of the points of interest in and about the Golden Gate city.

Mr. Leonhardt says that the welcome sign will be hung out at all hours of the day and night during the period of the convention, and that Mrs. Leonhardt will be delighted to entertain the ladies who attend the convention.

The arrangements are under the direct supervision from the New York end of William Fox himself, and he has given orders that no expense is to be spared to see that all visitors to the offices are given the "time of their lives."

MATTINGLY DIES FROM INJURIES

CHARLES D. MATTINGLY, general manager of the Oklahoma City exchange of the Universal Film Company, died April 21 of injuries sustained in an automobile accident some weeks ago.

A sudden turn for the worse snuffed out the life of the man after he apparently had passed the crisis in his illness and was believed by physicians to be recovering. Internal injuries caused death.

A father, mother, widow and small child survive him. The body was taken to Little Rock, Ark., for interment.

Suitable resolutions concerning the death were adopted by committees of the Oklahoma City Film exchange men and the Theater Owners' and Managers' Association.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

THORNBY TO MAKE FEATURES FOR KNICKERBOCKER

Robert T. Thornby, the director of the Knickerbocker Star Features at their studios in Flushing, is proving himself equal to the task of organizing and perfecting a new three-reel feature company.

A new stage has been erected, making it possible to place a dozen or more sets at the same time, and other improvements are being made to meet the demands of the new company.

Mr. Thornby comes to the Knickerbocker studios with the recommendation of many dramatic successes, having been the director of all the Sterling kid comedies, and a successful Vitagraph director producing such dramas as, "The Passing of Joe Merry," "Daddy's Soldier Boy," "The Outlaw," and others.

Van Loan Baseball Story Filmed by Bosworth

JUST at the time when baseball again comes into its own in the public eye throughout the country, Bosworth, Inc., announces as its next release, "Little Sunset," a story of the national game adapted from the story of the same name by Charles E. Van Loan, who has become an authority on sport and famous as a "Saturday Evening Post" humorist.

The story is probably the most vivid picture of big league ball players in action ever secured for the motion picture screen, and offers a comedy that is true to life, most of the scenes having been taken in the Los Angeles park of the Venice team of the Pacific Coast League. This team's star players appear singly and as a whole throughout the picture and their dashing illustrations of the famous "hook slide," the "spitball" and other expert tricks of the profession are a distinct exhibition in themselves.

HOBART BOSWORTH, CHARLES E. VAN LOAN AND GORDON GRIFFITH IN "LITTLE SUNSET"

Mr. Van Loan met with an automobile accident just prior to producing this picture, but stood close by the camera throughout the production of the subject, supervising the work on crutches.

In the title role appears Gordon Griffith, the child actor, in one of the most fascinating characterizations yet seen on the screen. Master Griffith is one of the youngest, if not the youngest, actor appearing before the motion picture camera today. Other important characters in the story are portrayed by Hobart Bosworth, as "The Terrible Swede," Joseph Ray, as "Little Sunset's" father, Rhea Haines as his mother and Marshall Stedman as manager of the "Apaches."

This photoplay will be released by Paramount, May 6, just the time when baseball is in full swing all over the country.

Universal Smashes Car for "Black Box" Scene

THE twelfth episode of "The Black Box" depicts a most realistic interior view of a railroad wreck. Sometime ago the Universal constructed a private car for the taking of train interiors. The car had been used in only seven plays when it became necessary to use it for the staging of a scene in the twelfth episode of "The Black Box."

The car is kept in the railroad yards of a transcontinental railroad which enters Los Angeles and was taken into the desert several miles along the railroad.

The engine then backed away from the car about a quarter of a mile and was then started toward the car at full speed. The engineer jumped, leaving the throttle of the engine wide open.

THE TRAIN WRECK SCENE IN EPISODE 12 OF "THE BLACK BOX"

The engine crushed in the forward part of the car and twisted the rear and side walls into rhomboid shape. Strong lights were then thrown in through the windows and the Universal "Black Box" actors took their places in the scene.

GOEBEL ORGANIZING ANOTHER COMPANY FOR UNITED

President Otto E. Goebel, of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, which produces the Premier pictures appearing each week on the regular United program, is in New York getting a company together for the production of single-reelers.

The present Premier players, headed by Lillian Hamilton, Edythe Sterling and Frederick Church are giving all of their attention to two-reel pictures. Mr. Goeble has decided to double his forces so that he can increase the output of his studios by two releases a week.

HOOPS DESERTS STAGE FOR FOX PHOTOPLAYS

Arthur Hoops, the well-known actor, who plays Lieut. Ivan Shombach in "A Woman's Resurrection," in the William Fox production of the Count Leo Tolstoi photoplay, in which Betty Nansen is starred, is only another noted thespian to desert the stage for the screen. Mr. Hoops is a graduate of the Carlton Dramatic Club of Chicago, of which the alumni number such famous names as Charles Richman, Olive May, Joseph Kilgour and many others. Mr. Hoops will be recalled as playing leading parts in support of James K. Hackett, Virginia Harned, and also being starred at the head of his own company by Charles Frohman and Daniel Frohman.

He has also appeared in support of Nat Goodwin, and before joining the William Fox forces was seen in a vaudeville sketch, called "Detective Keen." Mr. Hoops gives a very fine performance of a very difficult character in "A Woman's Resurrection."

"GREAT RUBY" WILL BE SEEN ON SCREEN

The Lubin Company began the filming this week of the famous Drury Lane melodrama, "The Great Ruby," originally produced in this country by Augustin Daly with a cast which included Ada Rehan, Blanche Bates, Charles Richmond and other well-known players.

"The Great Ruby" was written by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton. The film version was made by Clay M. Greene and the production is being directed by Barry O'Neil. It will be a V-L-S-E Lubin special.

The cast includes Beatrice Morgan, for many years one of Charles Frohman's stars, who will play Lady Garnett; Josephine Parks, George Soule Spencer, Eleanor Barry, Frankie Mann, Walter Hitchcock, Mildred Gregory, Ruth Bryan, Peter Lang, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Charles Brandt, Douglas Sibole, William Turner, George Trimble.

SELIG TO PRODUCE "THE CRISIS"

One of the Selig Red Seal plays which will be produced in the near future is "The Crisis," a film adaptation from the story by Winston Churchill. Hundreds of actors will be engaged for this big story.

"The House of a Thousand Candles" is another Selig Red Seal play in course of production. The motion picture play was adapted from the popular novel of the same name.

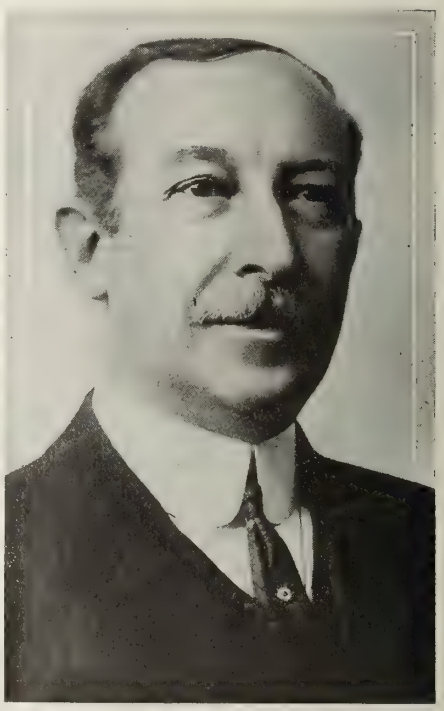
MABEL VAN BUREN ON UNITED PROGRAM

An important addition to the playing forces of the Ideal Studio is Mabel Van Buren, who portrays the leading role in a forthcoming United production entitled "Stepping Westward," a two-reel story by Reverend Clarence J. Harris, the well-known photoplaywright.

Miss Van Buren is well known for her work in the Lasky production of "The Girl of the Golden West."

Oscar Eagle Joins Famous Players Producing Staff

Director, Who Headed Selig Studios for Two Years and Was Formerly Associated with Belasco, Will Begin "The Dictator," Starring John Barrymore



FOLLOWING the engagement of Director Sidney Olcott, the Famous Players Film Company has added Oscar Eagle to its producing staff. Mr. Eagle is one of the most prominent producers in the world, and has in the past been responsible for the direction of a notable series of feature film successes.

He was for two years at the head of the Chicago studios of the Selig company, and prior to that was associated for many years with David Belasco, with whom he secured a national reputation as a stage director. He was also connected for a long period of time with the Liebler Company, for whom he produced many of the greatest dramatic successes sponsored by that theatrical firm.

During his association with David Belasco, Mr. Eagle attended to the chief productions under Mr. Belasco's direct supervision.

The first production to be directed by Mr. Eagle for the Famous Players will be John Barrymore in the celebrated adventurous romance, "The Dictator," by Richard Harding Davis. For this purpose, Mr. Eagle, John Barrymore, and an entire supporting company, will sail for Cuba this week in order to obtain realistic atmosphere.

"The Dictator" is admirably suited to John Barrymore. The central figure of "The Dictator" is Broke Travers, a young American, who is forced by existing and exciting circumstances, to become temporarily the dictator of a small republic in South America, and who in doing so, becomes a hero of many momentous and romantic situations, some comic and some very serious indeed, from all of which he emerges the victor, through the aid of his clever wit and never-failing audacity, and is finally rescued by a kindly fate in the substantial guise of an American battleship.

This subject will be released some time in August on the Paramount program.

THE WEDDING OF PRINCESS YETIVE AND GRENFALL LORRY, THE CLOSING SCENE OF "GRAUSTARK," SIX REEL ESSANAY SPECIAL, RELEASED THROUGH V-L-S-E, INC.

MAC BARNES ASSUMES LEADING ROLE IN "VINDICATION"

Mac Barnes, playing the part of the boss, in Knickerbocker Star Features, directed by Robert T. Thornby, finds himself in his element.

For two years he played with Frank Keenan in his act entitled "Vindication," in which he played the part of the governor. Mr. Barnes puts great power and personality in his role of the boss, proving that he is a man of experience.

100,000 Patrons Protest Boston Censor Measure

"DO you want Bill Jones and Mary Jane Busy Body to tell you what moving pictures you can or cannot see?"

That is only one of the battle cries spread broadcast throughout the State of Massachusetts by the Co-operative Anti-Censorship committee, organized to fight the bill in the legislature which would place motion picture censorship in the hands of three officials and, say the picture men, "put 80 per cent. of the picture theatres of this state out of business the first week after the bill went into effect."

The Carstens bill, they call it, and it is the outgrowth of circumstances which have involved the police court and the pulpit, the governor, mayor and negro agitator. The film men had their legislative program all mapped out, with certain prospects that "next general court" would lull the censorship bill to sleep until at least another session. Then "Hypocrites" came along. The mayor ordered Truth to be clothed and the first faint rumblings of the coming storm were heard.

Starts Over "Birth of a Nation"

Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" brought the lightning, thunder and the demagogue. Eleven arrests were made, 3,000 negroes and their sympathizers marched to the State House, the governor wept with them (and has since been accused of playing politics in the matter) and the demand for a rigid censorship bill became a roar.

Promptly the motion picture men came to the front. Their committee began sending letters to every exhibitor in the state, enclosing blanks to be signed by public men in the various cities and towns.

"And they went to it right off the reel," said Manager Murphy, of the United Film Service to the NEWS representative. "Why, at one theatre in Boston alone, our appeal for support from the people against the censorship outrage has brought to me more than 100,000 signed protest blanks."

"But isn't some sort of rigid censorship necessary?"

National Board Is Enough

"We have it now," was the decisive reply. "The National Board is composed of 132 prominent people who are trained observers. They are doing an extremely arduous work well. And what can a board of three do in this State? We run the reels off at the State House for official approval. We never run them faster than 15 minutes to the reel. With an eight-hour day, no lunch, and steady work right through till Saturday night, just 192 reels could be examined. Last week alone 252 reels were released here. Three men can't do the work."

"What effect would cutting down the film supply have?"

"The only possible outcome of such a cut would be to put 80 per cent. of the theatres out of business. This would throw a thousand people out of work. And why? So that three more political jobs may be created. And they will kill the film with the punch, which will cut down the attendance at the theatre. Then the exhibitor will want to raise the price to make up; and he will have a poorer show to offer. I tell you, this bill must be killed; it's unnecessary, unjust; a bit of political meddling in a business which should be entirely free from politics; because the picture business is the people's business. Their films are properly censored now."

The committee in charge of the opposition consists of Mrs. Alice R. Carroll, social worker; James F. Burke, president Motion Picture Operators' Union, Alden Washburn, exhibitor, J. A. Eslow, manager Universal Film Exchange, and E. O. Ramsdell, exhibitor.

Committee Uses Special Slides

This committee is using two special slides in the theatres to persuade the patrons to sign the protests at the door. These signs read:

KILL IT.

A Senate bill against the Motion Picture industry by needless State censorship should be killed.
The Workingman's Show is in Danger.
It would mean higher prices for poorer shows.
Do you want this?
Sign the slip received at the door.

The Boston Post says: "The censorship bill would seriously affect $32,000,000 of investments in the motion picture business in this State, throw out of work 4,000 people and substitute an inefficient board of three for a capable national board of 135, which has censored pictures for five years."

Another feature of the bill is the fee of one dollar to be charged for examination of a reel under a thousand feet and a fee of two dollars for reels more than that length.

St. Louis Mayor Urges Film Censorship

MAYOR KIEL'S recommendations to the first Board of Aldermen, of St. Louis, in his first annual message under the new charter included the creation of a municipal board of censors for motion pictures, and motion-piceures theatres and tents. The message was delivered on April 24, and was in part as follows:

"I want to call your attention to the necessity of censoring moving-picture films shown in St. Louis, so that we may rest assured that our children may safely attend these shows without being subjected to moral danger.

"While most of the films shown here are censored under the direction of the National Board of Censorship, it is necessary, I believe, that you appoint a committee and invest it with sufficient authority to inquire into conditions in St. Louis in a logical preparation for the passage of legislation regulating motion-picture shows, both as to the character of the films shown and as to the physical condition of the buildings in which such pictures are exhibited. It is my information that there are nearly 100 motion-picture shows in the city, many of which are not entirely fireproof, and some of which are in tents, and these, because of their great hazard to life and property, should be abolished. Statistics prepared by the building commissioner show that over 82,000 persons attend these motion-picture houses every day. A large part of this attendance is children. We should therefore be doubly anxious to see that their welfare demands protective measures."

The mayor is not alone in his plea for censorship, the churches are warmly advocating it; several of the ministers in St. Louis mention it in their sermons, and in many of the smaller towns in Missouri and Illinois there is talk of censorship. The St. Clair County Federation of Catholic Societies met recently in Freeburg, Ill. Every town in the county was represented. More than 200 delegates were present, and during the business of the meeting, a motion-picture censor was recommended for every town.

While organizations are pleading for censorship, many individuals are writing letters to the people's columns in the daily papers, criticising the useless censorship laws passed recently by Missouri legislators. One such law banning the prize-fight films is denounced more than others. To quote one writer: "Give the common people a chance to see the world's events in motion pictures. Let's have sensible laws, that do not prohibit some films, and allow others to be shown more detrimental to the morals of the people than a prize-fight film would be."

MAYOR TRIES TO FORCE CENSORS ON SAN DIEGO

Mayor Charles F. O'Neall of San Diego, Calif., is preparing an ordinance which is to provide for a board of censors for vaudeville and moving picture theatres.

He proposes to regulate the character of dress, character of songs and jokes in vaudeville performances and the style of pictures by eliminating improperly dressed characters, murder and hold-up or other robbery scenes. The board of censors is to consist of five persons to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the common council.

The board is to have access to all performances and is to be furnished with an outline of each performance before its public presentation. The proposed ordinance is to carry a penalty clause of a fine not to exceed three hundred dollars or imprisonment in jail, not to exceed six months.

As such an ordinance would not be in effect until thirty days after its passage and approval by the city's chief executive, the present mayor would not have any further hand in it than its preparation, as his term of office expires on May 3.

Famous Players Moves to New Los Angeles Studio

Plant Built by Fiction Pictures, Inc., at Melrose Avenue and Gordon Street Now Occupied—Vance Now on Way to New York

Los Angeles, May 3.

TODAY is moving day for the Famous Players, the company having purchased the almost completed plant built under the direction of Louis Joseph Vance and Wilfred Lucas for the Fiction Pictures, Inc., at Melrose avenue and Gordon street, Los Angeles. Since coming West in December the Famous Players' producing companies have been working at the Oz Film company studio at Gower and Santa Monica streets, Hollywood.

The purchase of this plant, which is spoken of by men of the film colony as being the most complete and convenient one of the many here, Manager Al Kaufmann states, means the permanent location of one or more producing companies in California. At the present time Alan Dwan is the only director working here, James Kirkwood having recently departed for the eastern studio, but it is now expected that Mr. Kirkwood will be returned to Los Angeles. It is the expectation of Manager Kaufmann that two companies will be retained at Los Angeles at all times.

The studio is now ready for production work, the only part remaining unfinished being the laboratory. This will be completed at once, and inasmuch as equipment sufficient for the making of all prints needed is now here, it is very probable that Los Angeles made subjects will be completed here and shipped direct to the exchanges.

Louis Joseph Vance, retiring president of the Fiction Pictures, Inc., is now on his way to New York City. It is understood he intends to organize a new company and return to Los Angeles and begin production within the near future. The three subjects completed by this company have received laudatory comment from every quarter.

The plant covers a plot of ground 300 feet wide by more than 400 feet deep. Along the front has been placed the administration building, 12 x 16 ft. concrete vault; laboratories, wood-working shop, equipped with all necessary electric driven machines; the inclosed studio, with a stage 50 by 70 ft., and a scene painting dock that will accommodate a drop 25 x 60 ft.; and the projection room. The open stage is at the rear of the lot and is 60 x 150 feet, fitted with scene docks along the full length and two traps, each ten feet deep, so arranged that any sized opening up to 20 x 30 feet can be secured. The dressing rooms extend along the rear of the scene dock, there being thirty-six in all, each fitted with hot and cold water, and large and roomy. Along one side of the lot is a garage and place where the extra people may wait in comfort.

In the laboratory the winding room is 12 x 20, the developing department has four 260 gal. tanks, two fixing tanks, each of fifteen barrels capacity, and there are six washing tanks. The drying will be done by eight drums each having a capacity of 1,800 feet of film. The printing room is equipped with an Automatic Double Duplex printer.

Cosmofotofilm Celebrates First Anniversary

American Representative Distributing the Pictures of the London Film Company, Producers of "The House of Temperley," Takes Half of Floor in World Tower

THE Cosmofotofilm company, which entered the feature film business in New York just a year ago, making its bow to the trade and public at the Strand theatre, New York, with "The House of Temperley," based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, "Rodney Stone," has moved into new and extensive quarters occupying one-half of the sixth floor in the World's Tower building, 110-112 West Fortieth street, New York City.

In the new offices of the Cosmofotofilm company there will be a large and most complete projection room, with two of the best projection machines in a double size booth. The executive office, publicity department and general offices, shipping and receiving rooms have all been laid out in a manner calculated to prove most advantageous to all concerned. With a continued and ever-increasing output of the films of the London Film company, which has made so memorable a showing for the past year, the outlook for the Cosmofotofilm company is, indeed, a rosy one.

One of the most remarkable facts which has been demonstrated in the past year by the Cosmofotofilm company is that it is possible for an individual film manufacturing concern to offer its films for sale on the open market or to any of the large combines, as opportunity may offer, and do a sound and ever increasing business without booking on a percentage plan.

Paul H. Cromelin, the head of the Cosmofotofilm company, has always felt that the product of the London Film Company, of which the Cosmofotofilm company is sole American distributor, was of so high a degree of quality that a good price could always be asked and maintained. The London Film company has always made it a policy to employ none but the very best of talent under the able directorship of two of the greatest American producers, Harold Shaw and George Loane Tucker.

Some of the very best American actresses have gone to London and taken leading parts and are still doing so in the pictures produced by the London Film Company, among whom are Jane Gail and Edna Flugrath.

The Cosmofotofilm pictures, while staged in England, are replete with American atmosphere, and for this reason make a particularly strong appeal. Great care has been exercised in all productions.

If the Cosmofotofilm company continues to advance at the rate it has been doing, it is reasonable to suppose that the concern will enter the front rank of motion picturedom before very long and stay in the state-right business.

Its latest production, "The Middleman," featuring Albert Chevalier, England's great character impersonator, and Jane Gail, has just been disposed of on the national right plan to the Metro Pictures corporation, which will give this subject the extensive publicity it so richly deserves.

EGAN EDUCATIONALS PLACED IN MOORE HOUSES

Service of educational subjects, handled by Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, of the Egan Film Company, Columbia Theatre building, New York City, has been contracted for by Tom Moore, who operates several motion picture theatres in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Moore will show the subjects in all his theatres. He says that they are as popular, in their way, as the Charlie Chaplin comedies. Incidentally Mrs. Cobb reports business as excellent.

McCARTHY RESIGNS FROM UNIVERSAL

J. J. McCarthy has resigned from the Universal Film service, after a period of three years as a traveling representative, and gone into the exhibit end of the business.

He and Mr. Beckman, of Bloomfield, Neb., have purchased the Lyric Theatre, of Norfolk, and he will have its exclusive management, making extensive improvements, and opening it about May 10.

SPRING SEASON BRINGS MANY NEW STUDIOS

The Ayeanddee Film Manufacturing Company Organized in Harrisburg, Pa., Tulsa Company in Oklahoma; the Art Film Company in Philadelphia; the Coburn Photo and Film Company in Indianapolis; the New Highland Film in Cincinnati; and the Kleervue Film Company in Cleveland

Harrisburg, Pa., May 5.

WITH the purpose of establishing an extensive film producing industry in central Pennsylvania, the Ayeanddee Film Manufacturing company has just established itself in offices in 19 North Third street, this city.

The producing manager, George G. Greneir, a scenario writer, who has been identified with the Edison, Universal and other companies in New York, announced today that the company proposes to erect a large building in Oberlin, a village situated among picturesque hills, a few miles from Harrisburg, where three or four companies of actors will be employed producing motion picture films.

Oberlin is close to Steelton, where is located the huge plant of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, where it is proposed to gain "local color" for some of the pictures.

According to present plans the building will be large enough to produce ten films at a time. Each of the companies will have 20 to 25 actors, many of whom will be enrolled from Harrisburg local talent, although the stars will be actors and actresses of more experience.

The pictures will be both of a general and local nature and will be handled through a large exchange. The company says a dozen Harrisburg picture houses already have contracted to use some of its products.

It is proposed to invade many parts of central Pennsylvania, within a radius of 150 miles of this city, in seeking scenes for pictures. This will take in a large part of the anthracite coal mining regions where mining and labor stories will be produced. Pictures also will be taken along the banks of the beautiful Susquehanna River which flows through the State. Mr. Greneir says the company will apply for a state charter next month.

Tulsa Motion Picture Company Under Way

THE Tulsa Motion Picture Company, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, is a new producing concern backed by local capital, said to represent a number of the leading business men of Tulsa.

Arrangements have been made to occupy the spacious grounds of the Dry Farming Congress at Tulsa, and the construction of an outdoor stage is now going on. The grounds are well equipped with large glass buildings and embrace a good sized body of water. The grounds are within two blocks of the city limits.

The climate of Oklahoma is particularly well adapted to production work, and the immediate vicinity of Tulsa includes oil fields, stretches of prairies, coal mines, cities, railroad tracks, and the picturesque Osage mountains. Much enthusiasm is expressed by local papers over the new enterprise.

Art Film Begins Production

Philadelphia, May 5.

THE Art Film Company is one of several new producing companies that are finding Philadelphia a good field for the production of high class features. The Art Film Company has a well equipped plant at Twenty-fifth and Lehigh avenues, and is already filming its first feature, the well known Clyde Fitch play, "The Stubbornness of Geraldine," for which this company has the sole rights.

Besides producing big features the company will develop and print all its own work, a factory for this purpose being included under its roof. The building was formerly a church structure and stands in a lot 100 x 125 feet. There is a large studio, airy dressing rooms, modern heating and lighting facilities, and the newest devices for the proper printing of films.

It is purposed in the near future to build another entire glass studio, for which there is ample room on the grounds. The company was incorporated in Delaware and it's capitalized at $50,000. The president and general manager is William H. Cook, a pioneer in the industry, having started with Lubin when the latter made his first picture in his own back yard.

Albert B. Meyers is assistant general manager and Joseph Sutton is the secretary.

The director of plays is Gaston Mervale, well known from his former association with prominent theatrical companies. Charles Gerard is stage manager.

The company formed to screen the releases of the Art Film comprises practically an all star cast. Chief amongst these is Laura Nelson Hall, former leading woman of Henry W. Savage. She is well remembered for her excellent work in "Everywoman."

She also took the lead in the photo play "Dope."

Miss Hall has a long contract to play exclusively for this company. Supporting her are Marie Empress of "Little Cafe" fame, who appeared in pictures in "When We Were Twenty-one." There is also Mary Moore, a sister of Owen Moore and Daisy Belmore. Vernon Steele, Jules Frerrer and Stanley Harrison are amongst the leading men.

The Art Film will at present release one big feature each month.

Coburn Company to Make Films in Indiana

Indianapolis, Ind., May 5.

THE Coburn Photo and Film Company, 902 Hume-Mansur Building, have announced that arrangements are nearly completed for the manufacture of motion picture films of all kinds and that in a few months people from coast to coast will be witnessing Indianapolis-made motion pictures.

The company will release its films under the name of the Hoosier Movies and will manufacture everything in the way of motion pictures from slapstick comedy, to society dramas and cowboy films.

H. H. Coburn, general manager of the company, said this week that his company was making arrangements to lease a tract of land on Forty-eighth street, near Fairview Park, which will make an ideal setting for the staging of moving picture scenarios, and said that as soon as he closed negotiations for the land, the company will erect a studio.

Principal players of the company have already been engaged, according to Virgil E. Burris, dramatic director of the company. "The Country Boy's Triumph" will be the company's first picture

The film is a melodrama in two reels and was written several months ago by Mr. Burris while he was connected with the Visco Film Company, at Jacksonville, Fla.

Knickerbocker Star Features Sign Mac M. Barnes

Actor, Who Was With Brady for Five Years and Has Been Successful in Numerous Heavy Parts, Will Be Directed by Robert T. Thornby

MAC M. BARNES, formerly with the Selig company of Chicago, and a man who has had many years' experience on the speaking stage, has been secured by Knickerbocker Star Features.

Mr. Barnes was with W. A. Brady's company for five years. Three years he played the squire in "Way Down East," and two years he played Captain Hanks in "As Ye Sow," the latter being a character comedy part.

MAC M. BARNES

Three years prior to this he played the squire in "The Dairy Farm." One of the earlier successes of Mr. Barnes', several years ago, was in "The Arkansas Traveler," in which he played the part of Judge with Chanfrau.

Other noted parts he has played with great success are the Major in "The Way of Wealth," Council Blake in "The Last Stroke," Denver Dan in "Forgiven," the Professor in "A Night Off."

Mr. Barnes has been very successful in heavy parts, having played with unusual success in "Tempted by Necessity," a screen story. His first big success on the screen was in the comedy, "The Millionaire Cowboy."

In the first release of Knickerbocker Star Features, Mr. Barnes is seen to best advantage as the political boss, a strong character calling for all the fight necessary for one to capture a city and its wealth. Mr. Barnes was secured by Knickerbocker Star Features as he came direct from the Frank Lenan Company, in vaudeville, in a masterpiece entitled "Vindication." In this Mr. Barnes played the lead, as the Governor, for two years with signal success.

During the first few releases of Knickerbocker Star Features Mr. Barnes will be seen in varied characters, such as the political boss, the governor, the village squire, and other parts, for which he is well fitted. Mr. Barnes is under the direction of Robert T. Thornby, director of the new company that will produce three-reel features on alternate weeks for the General Film Company's program.

It might be of interest to note that Mr. Barnes is chaplain of the White Rats actors organization of New York, the largest body for the mutual protection and help of actors in the world.

Families in Kishineff Massacre Filmed for Cort Play

Many People Who Witnessed the Horrors of the Event Take Part as "Extras" in "The Melting Pot," Featuring Walker Whiteside

THOSE moving picture "fans" who are looking for thrills and big scenes in the story the principal role of which is portrayed by a big star will find them all in "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's famous play in which Walker Whiteside is being featured by the Cort Film Corporation.

The Cort Film Corporation has taken into consideration the drawing power of the names of star, play and author, and then has topped the whole thing with the strength of numbers and magnificence of setting which will make the film a real American spectacle production dealing with the things and happenings of life in this generation.

In the Kishineff massacre scenes alone, there has been much time and thought expended. The types have been gathered with a care to realism. More than fifty per cent. of the extra people used in these "bits" were recruited from the lower East Side, all of them having come to this country from Russia.

Many of them were in the Kishineff massacre. One family of fifteen used in the massacre scenes and in the steerage scenes was brought to America after experience in Kishineff with money contributed for the sufferers at the time. In these scenes 1,500 people and 200 horses were employed.

The scenes in the steerage were made aboard the S. S. Paloma in which there was plenty of room because of the very small number of immigrants coming into the country at the present time.

Three hundred and seventy-five people wer taken to the Paloma, off Sandy Hook, in two large tugs. Pictures were then taken all the way up New York Bay, part of the time with the vessel lying at anchor and part of the time under steam.

The pomp and splendor with which the court of Russian Czar is surrounded has been reproduced in careful detail and costumed with regard for the actual trappings worn by high officials.

The concert hall scene in which Mr. Whiteside directs an orchestra of one hundred symphony players has been staged with the big sets necessary to house the orchestra and a section of the audience containing more than 400 people in front of the camera.

Great Stars Engaged For Universal Program

Players of Renown on English Speaking Stage Will Appear in Adaptations of Successful Dramas and Best Sellers for Release on the Regular Service of the Company—Emmett Corrigan, Helen Ware, Marie Cahill, Wilton Lackaye and Frank Keenan Some of the Favorites

MARIE CAHILL FRANK KEENAN WILTON LACKAYE EMMET CORRIGAN HELEN WARE

ON the regular Universal program, as soon as the work of production can get under way, there will be released the most important features yet made by the Universal Film Manufacturing company.

These will present great stage stars of the present day in motion picture adaptations of dramatic successes and well-known books. They will be released on the regular Universal program, starting at the rate of one a week. This will be increased later. Most of the contracts call for the appearance of the star in one picture with an option which provides that the players shall become members of the regular Universal stock companies if the first picture is satisfactory.

The list of stars is truly a notable one, including only stars who are real stars. Among them are several members of the cast of the Frohman-Belasco all-star revival of "A Celebrated Case," and of the Shubert all-star revival of "Trilby."

Emmet Corrigan will start work next week at the Universal Coytesville studios, appearing in "Caleb West, Master Diver," an adaptation of the book of the same name by F. Hopkinson Smith. Lawrence Marsden, the old Kalem and Biograph producer, has been specially engaged by the Universal to direct the production. Mr. Corrigan is considered one of the best "straight" actors on the legitimate stage.

Helen Ware, the famous emotional actress, who starred in "Within the Law" last year and now is playing in "A Celebrated Case," will appear in "Lass o' Lowries," in which she was featured in New York and on the road for two seasons.

Marie Cahill Under Big Contract

Marie Cahill, comedienne, will appear in "Judy Forgot," one of her big stage successes. Avery Hopwood, the author of the play, will make the motion picture adaptation. Miss Cahill's contract calls for a stipend of $10,000. "Judy Forgot" will be produced at the Coytesville studio.

Wilton Lackaye, famous for his strong work in "The Battle" and many other Broadway shows, will appear in a play not yet announced. Mr. Lackaye is now playing Svengali in "Trilby."

Frank Keenan, whose sheriff in "The Girl of the Golden West" made him famous, will appear in a special production. This may be an adaptation of his vaudeville sketch "Vindication" in which he plays a Southern war veteran.

Henry E. Dixey, star of "A Thousand Years Ago" and "Adonis," will be seen in a four reel feature.

Lawrence D'Orsay, the famous English comedian, will be seen in his most popular role, that of "The Earl of Pawtucket."

Nat C. Goodwin, the much married star, now playing in "A Celebrated Case," will be seen in "Business Is Business."

Julia Dean, star of "The Law of the Land" now on Broadway, and a famous Juliet, will appear in "Her Own Money." Charles E. Evans, of the old team of Evans and Hoey, will appear in his famous old comedy "The Parlor Match." Ward and Vokes, a famous team, will appear in their success "The Run on the Bank." Herbert Kelsey and Effie Shannon, two famous stars, recently seen in "Years of Discretion," will appear in a play to be announced.

Popular Novels for the Screen

Negotiations have been almost closed with a good score of other famous stars which will be seen on the regular Universal program. These are in addition to the recently acquired screen stars which include Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber, Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark and Hobart Bosworth.

Among the popular novels which the Universal has secured for motion picture work are "Bucky O'Connors" by William McLeod Raine, "The Little Brother of the Rich" by Medill Patterson, "The Escape of Mr. Trimm" which Irvin S. Cobb considers his best work, "The Pirates of Panama" and "The Son of the Immortals" by Louis Tracy. Rights to the Alfred Henry Lewis novels, described in the contract as "all that are suitable for motion picture production," have been secured.

Plays That Have Been Obtained

The plays secured include C. T. Dazey's melodrama "The Suburban," Lottie Blair Parker's "Under Southern Skies" and Augustus Thomas' "Colorado." Rights have also been secured for Ralph Cameron's books "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail" and "Corporal Cameron."

These are not all, for negotiations for many more books and plays are pending.

CHINESE ACTOR ENTERTAINS PATHE PRODUCERS

Ah Ling Foo, one of the real Chinese actors in Pathe's "Exploits of Elaine," gave a dinner at the Oriental restaurant in Pell street, New York, the other night, to the Whartons, producers of the "Exploits," Mrs. Bess Wharton, E. A. MacManus, of the Hearst forces; Mr. Gordon, assistant to the Whartons, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitworth Buck.

A full line of Chinese delicacies was served, including real bird's nest soup, a rarity that costs about $5 a plate.

GOTHAM'S FIRST FEATURE COMPLETED

The Gotham Film Company, Inc., M. W. Taggart, president, has completed its first feature, "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan," in four parts, founded on the story of the same name in "The Saturday Evening Post," and starring Betty Marshall and Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion of America.

The picture, scheduled for release on June 1, will be shortly shown to the trade in a New York projection room.

Substitute Censorship Bill Passes Ohio Senate

Penalty for Showing Uncensored Films to Fall on Exchanges Instead of Exhibitors; Censors May Delegate Powers—Governor Expected to Sign the Measure

Columbus, O., May 4.

OVERRIDING, under the spur of Republican Floor Leader Howard, the amendments offered by Senator Fellinger, of Cleveland, to remove from the censor board the right to delegate their authority when overworked to certain of their subordinate employes, and of Senator Myers, to create a volunteer appeal board of ten representative men and women to whom producers or exchange men dissatisfied with the decisions of the board could appeal, the Senate yesterday afternoon passed the Besow bill.

The measure as passed, in addition to the power of calling upon subordinates to censor pictures, places the responsibility for showing uncensored films or films in which changes ordered have not been made upon the exchange men instead of the exhibitors and gives final jurisdiction in cases of violations to justices of the peace, police judges and mayors of the district in which the offenses were committed. The fees for censoring remain unchanged. It is believed Governor Willis will sign the bill.

The bill known as House Bill 450, passed the House by a safe majority and was sent up to the Senate. There it was met by the opposition, and promptly equipped with two amendments. The first of these killed the second of the above-named provisions, and made it incumbent upon the members of the board to do the reviewing of films themselves.

The second amendment, and the most important one from the manufacturers' standpoint, created an appeal board, consisting of ten men and women, to serve without salaries, upon appointment by the governor. This board would meet once, or at most twice a month, and all manufacturers and exchangemen would have the privilege of appealing from the decisions of the censor board to this higher body. Such an appeal would have automatically stayed all action by the censors until the appeal had been heard and passed upon by the new board.

Kane Offers $100 for Best Story of "Prohibition"

He Holds Showing in the Broadway Theatre at 2.00 a. m., for Contestants, Salvation Army Derelicts, Whose Experiences Seemed to Qualify Them as Judges

IN arranging for the descriptive matter to be contained in the literature exploiting the feature film "Prohibition," Robert T. Kane, president of the producing company handling the picture, made a novel experiment.

Seeking to get away from the usual stereotype story covering the mere dramatic action of the plot, Mr. Kane went into several Salvation Army meetings and publicly announced that he would give a prize of one hundred dollars to the best story of the film "Prohibition" written by one of the derelicts who came to the Salvation Army meetings in hope of finding a better way.

In order to give these men the opportunity of seeing the film and thus enabling them to write intelligently about it. Mr. Kane gave a special demonstration of the picture at a Broadway theatre at 2 o'clock in the morning, to which were invited inebriates only. Whether they were men who went out of curiosity and by their presence tacitly admitted falsely that they were victims of the alcoholic habit could not be accurately known, but the theatre was filled. Many interesting details of the occasion could be related, did space permit of so doing.

As a result of this contest about 1,200 stories were submitted, upon which Mr. Kane personally passed together with a selected board of publicity experts. The story selected as being the best was sent in by Donald Hobert French, a one time Australian newspaper man, who had lost his grip when he found himself unable to keep his foot off the brass rail. Mr. Kane had a chat with French, who said that with the hundred dollars he would try again.

Mr. Kane added another hundred dollars to give him two tries.

FIRST AUTHENTIC PICTURES OF VOSGES BATTLE

Carting his camera into the Vosges Mountains where some of the most desperate and bloody encounters of the war have been staged, Leon Crabier, the Mutual Weekly photographer with the French army, has secured what will go down in history as the most wonderful motion pictures of actual warfare ever filmed. These pictures will be shown in Mutual Weekly No. 18, released at all Mutual exchanges May 6.

FRENCH TROOPS ADVANCING IN SKIRMISH FORMATION

Leaving the Gaumont studios in Paris, shortly before eventualities in the Vosges region were resumed, M. Crabier arrived in time to meet the members of the council of French officers, planning the attack. The pictures show the advance, begun the following morning, the heroic French troops greatly handicapped by the snow, which at times reached to their knees.

The attack on the woods, which was cleared of German scouts and outposts after a bloody encounter of many hours is graphically depicted, while in the distance the camera has caught the advance line of the Germans, strongly entrenched on the crest of a hill. French scouts, followed by regiment after regiment of infantry, with the artillery bringing up the rear, are clearly shown.

MinA Films Will Come from Coast After June 1

New Studios for Housing and Working Bostock Animals Are Completed and Production in Los Angeles Will Commence at Once

BEGINNING with the release on the licensed program for Thursday, June 3, the maker of MinA Films announces that all future releases of this brand will be made at the newly and especially constructed and equipped studios in Los Angeles.

The film world was thrown into a state of expectancy last winter by the news that the maker of MinA Films had acquired the famous Bostock Arena and Jungle. This purchase of the Bostock animals gave rise to much speculation as to the purpose of the move. Then followed the announcement that arrangements had been made to present these mute performers in a new type of motion pictures.

Though MinA Films have up to this time been made in the East, it was decided that because of excellent climatic conditions California offered the best facilities to produce animal pictures.

A site in Los Angeles was selected for a studio which, because of the very nature of the pictures to be made, required a different style of construction than is ordinarily followed. Meanwhile, the animals were thoroughly rehearsed under the expert direction of Captain Jack Bonavita, M. Gay and ten other animal trainers.

Now, with the studios complete, and details for production arranged, the first release with the Bostock animals will be distributed very shortly.

"Phyllis of the Sierras" in Course of Production

Third Bret Harte Vehicle for Beatriz Michelena Provided by the California Motion Picture Corporation Is Under Way at the Company's Studios

"A PHYLLIS of the Sierras" will be the next Bret Harte photoplay produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation, which is making a specialty of transferring to the screen the greatest stories of this famous Western novelist.

Hard on the heels of "The Lily of Poverty Flat," the five-reel feature, released through the World Film Corporation, will come this new picture-play, depicting another romance of the bonanza days in the Golden State.

Charles Kenyon, who successfully dramatized "The Lily of Poverty Flat," has written the scenario for "A Phyllis of the Sierras," constructing a strong vehicle for Beatriz Michelena, the California screen star who once more plays the part of a mountain girl, untutored and unspoiled, a half-wild creature whose life is transformed by a great love.

While the exteriors for the photoplay are being filmed at the California Motion Picture Corporation's mountain headquarters in the Boulder Creek region, in the heart of the redwood country, the interiors are being taken at the San Rafael studio. "A Phyllis of the Sierras" will be released June 28.

NOTED PLAYERS WILL MARKET ART FILM SALES PICTURES

Detroit, Mich., May 5.

The Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is no longer meeting in the Equity building, where it has maintained club rooms for several years. The league has arranged with the Detroit Kriterion Theatre Company, 183 Jefferson avenue, whereby it will hereafter have access to the projection room of that concern, located on the third floor, this being large enough to take care of any sized meeting which the league may have.

The league is arranging for a special meeting and banquet to take place on Tuesday night, May 11, the hour being 10:30 p. m. A short business session will take place, followed by the serving of refreshments. Secretary Orth asks that every member of the league be in attendance at this meeting.

MARSTON VITAGRAPH FILMS PASS CENSORS

Theodore Marston, the Vitagraph director, who has picturized some of the most virile of the features turned out by that company, is proud of the fact that during the past eighteen months he has not had a scene cut from any of his productions by the Board of Censors.

The mention of this fact came during a discussion of "Out of the Big Snows," the latest feature which he has completed and which shortly will be seen.

Mr. Marston has been working on three of the feature releases of the Vitagraph company during the past two weeks. "Mortmain," in which Robert Edeson is featured; "Out of the Big Snows," in which James Morrison and Dorothy Kelly have the leading roles; and "The Four Grains of Rice," with the same two stars.

"HEIGHTS OF HAZARD" TO HAVE MILLIONAIRE ATMOSPHERE

The combination of Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, author, and Charles Richman, actor, in the making for the screen of Dr. Brady's "Heights of Hazard," spell immediate success for Mr. Richman's initial appearance as a Vitagraph star.

"Heights of Hazard" was pictured by Eugene Mullin and is being produced in five parts under the direction of Captain Harry Lambart, with Mr. Richman as Billy Williams, the unknown, Eleanor Woodruff as Olivia Martindale, and Charles Kent as Mr. Martindale.

In order to lend the correct atmosphere to the interior settings necessary to the action, the Vitagraph Company has leased a house on East Fiftieth street, New York City, and called in a well-known decorator, much in demand by the Vanderbilts, Morgans and other leading moneyed men, to furnish the elaborate settings necessary to show the interior of a millionaire's home, where many of the most interesting scenes take place.

"FEATURE" ABRAMS TO MANAGE "QUALITY" STUDIOS

Charles "Feature" Abrams, one of the real old time film men, who has been prominently connected in the motion picture industry in New York for ten years, left Wednesday for Los Angeles, where he will be business manager of the Quality-Metro studios, where the Francis X. Bushman pictures will be produced for the Metro program. He was accompanied by Mrs. Belle Abrams.

Fred J. Balshofer, president and general manager of the Quality-Metro studios, left for the coast about the same time. Work of production will start there very soon. Mr. Balshofer, who engineered the deal by which Bushman's services were acquired, and Mr. Abrams are old associates. "Charlie," as Abrams is better known, was connected for a long time with Great Northern. Of late he and Joseph Miles have been conducting the Films Lloyds.

PIKE'S PEAK COMPANY MAKING TWO-PART WESTERNS

Two-part western dramas have taken a boom at the Garden of the God's studio of the Pike's Peak Film Company, releasing under the Lariat brand of the United program. William V. Mong has advanced into the assistant directorship of the Colorado Springs studio, into the editorship of the scenario department and into the role of leading actor as well.

With him he has brought not only new ideas, but some twelve odd years' experience as a star on the "legitimate" stage, and enough practice as a scenario writer and actor for the films to make his work acceptable to the public. He has only been at the Pike's Peak studio a few weeks, but already a series of lively western photodramas has come from his pen, and the Pike's Peak company, with Mr. Mong and Josephine West in the leads, are making film history under the directorship of Otis B. Thayer.

MUTUAL FILM MAY HELP HIM TO FIND WIFE

Another case of the whereabouts of a missing person discovered through motion pictures has just been reported by the Western Import Company, agents in Europe for Reliance, Majestic and New York Motion films.

A few months ago Allen A. Campbell, an efficiency engineer, moved to Cincinnati to take a position with the Union Gas and Electric Company of that city.

His wife remained in New York, but subsequently disappeared. Now he has discovered, through the "Mutual Weekly" that she is in Europe as a Red Cross nurse. A special run of the weekly was made for Mr. Campbell in order to study the scene which showed her leaving the French liner "La Lorraine" with a party of nurses.

The Western Import Company is now co-operating with Mr. Campbell and will seek to locate the missing woman through its extensive European organization.

Dear Sir: I note in many of the trade journals that credit is given to me for having been instrumental in defeating the proposed "Wild Animal" bill recently before the California Legislature.

While it is true that I assisted in every way possible to defeat the measure, the main credit is due to Mr. William Selig, who with his counsel, Frank Stobbs, worked hard and successfully in the interest of those opposed to the passage of the measure.

For this reason, I am writing and feel that you will give credit where credit is due. Very truly yours, (Signed) David Horsley, M. C.

MORLEY IS AGAIN PLAYING IN LUBIN PICTURES

Jay Morley, who will be remembered for his work in recent Lubin releases, is back once more with the Melville forces at Los Angeles.

JAY MORLEY

He takes with him added prestige and a host of admirers, who will eagerly look forward to his re-appearance under the Lubin banner in the big features which are in the course of production and preparation at the Western Studios.

His new association with his old directors, Wilbert Melville and Leon Kent, is a happy one and big things are expected from the combination.

Mr. Morley's picture work covers a period of four years, during which time he has been identified with many producing companies on the coast. He was on the legitimate stage for several seasons in repertoire.

MOORE PRAISED FOR WORK ON "GOD'S WITNESS"

W. Eugene Moore, the Thanhouser director, is receiving a great deal of praise as the result of the acceptance of "God's Witness," as a Mutual masterpicture.

This picture was scenarioized from the book, "At the Mercy of Tiberius."

RUTH BLAIR IS ACTRESS OF UNUSUAL TALENT

Now that Mrs. Vernon Castle is going to enter the motion picture world she will find that there has already been a "Mrs. Vernon Castle of the Movies" in the realm of the silent drama

Mrs. Castle's rival is the tall, beautiful and graceful Ruth Blair, leading lady with the Pyramid Company in pictures appearing on the United programme, whose exquisite charm, whose wonderful clothes and daintiness of bearing have caused her to be likened to the well known Mrs. Castle.

Miss Blair was born in Williamsport, Pa. Her early inspiration to become an actress came through her association with her famous teacher, Madame Currier, who trained Julia Marlowe. Madame Currier, seeing the unusual artistic and dramatic ability of the girl, encouraged her.

Miss Blair will play opposite Edwin August, who is the star for the Pyramid United Program Pictures.

MORRIS FOSTERS WELCOMED AT THANHOUSER STUDIO

Monday, April 26, was a big day for Mr. and Mrs. Morris Foster (she was—is—Mignon Anderson) at the Thanhouser studio.

The newlyweds returned from their honeymoon in Florida, were imprisoned temporarily in one of the offices in the executive building, and the whole stock company and office staff was summoned on a pre-arranged signal. Then there was uncovered before them a magnificent set of Colonial silver, the gift of all the Thanhouserites.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD IN "THE LURE OF THE MASK"

Harold Lockwood, one of the most prominent photoplay stars, and Elsie Jane Wilson, who will be remembered on the speaking stage in the title role of "Everywoman," appear as the leading characters in the American creation, "The Lure of the Mask," a coming Mutual masterpicture, which marks the debut of these well-known artists under the "Flying A" standard.

Mr. Lockwood has had many important leads in other big feature productions, and is also a protege of his present director, Thomas Ricketts, under whom he started his successful screen career several years ago.

Miss Wilson's film experience is well prepared through her stage experience, and possesses a character especially adapted to the part she plays. Irving Cummings is also prominently cast in this feature picture, as is Hal Clements, Lucy Peyton, William Ehfe and other screen favorites.

The scenario was prepared from Harold MacGrath's novel of the same title, which has lost none of its gripping character in the picturization.

CAPELLANI, OF WORLD FILM, RENTS WILLAT HOME

Albert Capellani, the new French director, now busily engaged with the World Film Corporation in making his first American production, "The Face in the Moonlight," the William A. Brady photoplay feature in which Robert Warwick is being starred, is pleased with his American environment, for he has leased "Doc" Willat's handsome home on the Palisades.

Mrs. Capellani will shortly sail from France, bringing with her the three Capellani children and the library of reference books, which in Parisian moving picture circles is reckoned as the most extensive collection of its kind.

THRILLING MOMENTS IN THE FOX FILM PRODUCTION, "PRINCESS ROMANOFF," FROM SARDOU'S "FEDORA."

IPANOFF BELIEVES THE PRINCESS IS DEAD — PRINCESS ROMANOFF FINDS THE MAN SHE HAS BEEN TRAILING — IPANOFF'S CONFESSION

"THE CHALICE OF COURAGE"

(Vitagraph—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Reverend Cyrus Townsend Brady has utilized a keen portrayal of human emotions, both good and bad, as a foundation for "The Chalice of Courage." Seldom do films act so upon their audiences as does this by reason of its human theme, a theme realistic and effective.

As a nucleus for the major plot we are given a man, Newbold. When his wife is mortally injured by a terrific fall, he kills her at her own request. Then we have the dead woman's old lover passionately fond of another girl. This girl is lost in the mountains, is found and cared for through the long winter by Newbold. A sacred love springs up between them, but for three months they live along as brother and sister. At length the lover appears, is recognized by Newbold, who, in a rage, nearly kills him, but outside interference saves the man's life. He humbles himself and shortly afterwards ends his life, leaving his old enemy and the girl he loves to live together, their union being sanctioned by the girl's father.

Situations unusual in photoplays are present here, situations which are of enormous power. Imagine a man possessed with such a supreme and unselfish love that he is willing to kill his wife for mercy's sake. Then come those scenes laid in the solitude of the mountains between man and woman alone. Their strength and dramatic power are nearly inmeasurable, their effect on the spectator awe-inspiring. Here we must leave the story and consider its background. Laid in the expansive mountains of our own west, the clear views are taken in the very heart of the untouched country. The snow scenes, over which play gorgeous light and shadow effects, are beautiful. Photographically the picture is a supreme achievement. In fact, the setting is ideal for the story.

The interest in the action is reinforced now and then by several thrilling occurrences. The wife's fall down the mountainside is the first. This is a far-away scene, but clearly and realistically performed. Newbold's rescue of the girl from the surging river is another daring piece of work, while his fight with Armstrong is terrible. Besides the rain and snow storm create no mean effects.

Rollin S. Sturgeon is to be heartily congratulated for his masterly handling of the film. In behalf of the cast, much might be said, but suffice it that each player is satisfyingly successful in the fulfillment of his duties. William Duncan appears as Newbold, Natalie De Lontan as his wife, George Holt as the other man, Myrtle Gonzalez as the girl, George Kunkel as a westerner, besides William V. Ranous, Otto Lederer and Anna Schaefer in character parts.

PENNSYLVANIA CENSOR BILL PASSES HOUSE

Harrisburg, Pa., May 5.

THE Daix Censorship bill, granting material concessions to the film industry, passed the House today by a vote of 180 to 0. It now goes to the Senate for concurrence on a minor amendment. This will probably be granted.

"PRINCESS ROMANOFF"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

SELDOM has a stronger climax been seen than that reached in this adaptation of Sardou's "Fedora." The unhappy Princess Romanoff, played by Nance O'Neill, has been pursuing the man who killed her lover. After a chase over two continents the guilty man lies at her feet while outside the door are members of the Secret Police ready to kill him. Ipanoff, on the other hand, has learned that his mother and brother are held prisoners at home and has cabled to find out the name of the informant.

The Princess Romanoff finds out that Ipanoff killed her former lover to protect the name of his (Ipanoff's) wife. That balks her revenge. So she shelters Ipanoff from the police and cables an order for the release of the mother and brother.

But Ipanoff swears he will kill the informant. A cable reaches him at the Princess' house telling him that it was she who caused the arrest of his loved ones. Ipanoff starts to execute his threat. Servants stop him. The Princess in despair tries suicide by poison. Just then word arrives from abroad that Ipanoff's mother and brother have been released.

He, too, loses his desire for revenge; he tries to resuscitate the Princess. Then come the cheering words of the doctor, "She will live."

These scenes follow an exceedingly well told and worked up dramatic story—exceedingly well done.

Nance O'Neill plays the title role. One of the leading emotional actresses of the stage, she loses none of her forcefulness through the camera. Clifford Bruce plays Ipanoff; Dorothy Bernard plays his wife, and Stuart Holmes plays Vladimir, whom the Princess loved. These three are the most important of the lesser characters and all are very well done.

WING HONORED BY COAST PHOTOPLAY LEAGUE

Los Angeles, May 3.

THE members of the board of control of the Photoplay Authors' League at a recent meeting elected W. E. Wing, former Los Angeles newspaper writer and Associated Press correspondent, and who for the past several years has been connected with the Selig company as scenario writer, editor of "The Script," the official organ of the league.

Mr. Wing will take up the new duties at once, succeeding Will M. Ritchey, who has edited the publication since it was founded by the league, more than a year ago.

"The Script," first published solely for the benefit of the members of the league, has been so ably conducted, and so many requests received from amateur writers to get on its mailing list, that the subscription has been opened to all.

A noteworthy achievement of the publication has been that of inducing many magazines and newspapers to stop carrying advertising matter from correspondence schools attempting to teach scenario writing, by producing evidence to prove that the schools were not giving value received in their so-called courses.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Second Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Diamond from the Sky" undergoes the process of modernization in this chapter, entitled "An Eye for an Eye." Some twenty-one years are passed over which space of time completely transfers the period of the picture's action from the past to the present.

This lapse of years finds the two babies and the one little boy, introduced in Chapter One, full grown persons. Consequently the three big stars of the photoplay, playing the three main characters, are for the first time introduced as exponents of the American company's romantic novel.

ESTHER IS THE CENTER OF ATTRACTION

Lottie Pickford, Irving Cummings and William Russell constitute this trio. Miss Pickford is the heroine, the real child of Cummings.

It need hardly be mentioned that each of these three players possess the characteristic requirements of their rspective roles, and the little seen of them in this chapter merely whets the appetite for more.

BLAIR LOSES HEAVILY

On the other hand, Hagar, the gypsy mother, played by Eugenie Ford, still remains in the novel and performs very well, while George Periolat, playing Luke Lovell, the gypsy, has yet been honored with few opportunities over which to display his renowned villainy.

The picture continues on its glorious path with regard to photographic, scenic and light effects, while the story in itself reels on with ever increasing interest. Elswhere in this issue you will find a story revealing Roy McCardell as the author of "The Diamond from the Sky." The merits of the plot's construction, mentioned in last week's issue, may be more fully appreciated now that the author's name has been announced.

A brief synopsis of the action of this separate chapter follows. Three years following the exchange of the infants, Hagar, the gypsy, returns, intending to take her child away, but acting on the spirit of the moment she takes Esther, Colonel Stanley's daughter, together with the diamond, the charm against harm.

The old Colonel dies in the intervening eighteen years, at the end of which time Hagar gives Esther into the care of Dr. Lee. She soon wins the hearts of both Arthur, the accepted heir of Colonel Stanley, and Blair, the son of Judge Lamar Stanley, who now lives alone with his mother.

Blair hears much about the charmed diamond, which is now in the possession of Lee, and resolves to get it. Entering the old man's house at the same time that Arthur is serenading Esther, he encounters the old doctor, strangles him and finding the diamond, stands aghast at his foul deed when the chapter closes.

"THE WOMAN"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is not often that the standard of a concern such as the Lasky company, which produces consistently meritorious pictures from one year's end to the other, is raised by one single offering. Such occurrences are infrequent, but with "The Woman" we honestly believe that the followers of motion pictures will rank the Lasky company as a better concern than heretofore.

"DON'T TELL HER NAME!"

The originality and the tenacious qualities embodied in the plot are the primary essentials responsible for this statement. Based on David Belasco's play the picture presents a series of powerful scenes.

A brief outline of the plot will convey its power to the reader. Senator Jim Blake, opposing Senator Mathew Standish and realizing the fact that he is losing ground, determines to unearth some shady episode in his rival's as yet untarnished career.

He soon discovers that there is a woman, a woman wronged by Standish, but her name is wanting. And he discovers, but not until three reels of intense action have been passed over, that the woman is his own happily married daughter. And so the old man must see his hated rival sweep on to victory, without the least resistance.

Such is the substance of William DeMille's play as produced by George Melford, who, it might be remarked, has produced it excellently. For relief from the tension of those dramatic scenes, before mentioned, the setting is changed now and then to the Senate chamber, where one of Blake's partisans is holding the gathered representatives by a long and dry speech.

These are comedy scenes and of the variety that create spontaneous laughter.

On the Strand program no single person was featured, but if we were to choose the most distinguished player in the cast it would be Theodore Roberts, the character actor who has yet been unequaled on the screen. In interpreting the role of Jim Blake, Mr. Roberts brings out all the stubborn characteristics of the part, all the dominating majesty, besides investing the man with a most magnetic realism.

Playing Standish is Ernest Joy. It is a heavy part, and Mr. Joy handles it very well indeed. Mabel Van Buren is the woman, and a pathetic figure she makes of the role. Lois Meredith is the sympathetic little telephone operator, who has the information desired by the senator, but who refuses to give it up, even under the most trying circumstances. James Neill is good as the woman's husband. The rest of the cast includes Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Helen Hill and Dr. Beitel.

The photography and settings will undergo the most severe test applied, while the lighting is most effectively handled. Unless we are sadly mistaken, "The Woman" has set a mark that the Lasky company will find difficult to surpass.

"THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD"

(V-L-S-E-Selig—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NO better proof can be desired of the Selig company's ability to screen a drama laid in the far-off Orient than to mention "The Adventures of Kathlyn." "The Carpet from Bagdad" is another picture by the same author, Harold MacGrath, with a setting similar to that of the renowned serial.

Romance and the most harrowing sort of adventures are combined in this tale, while the Oriental setting lends a touch of attractive mysticism to the story. The lacale, which embraces divers cities and desert scenes in Egypt, is never betrayed by any reminders of our own country, the atmosphere being at all times realistic.

The countless supernumeraries have obviously been trained with care and understanding by the director, Colin Cambell. The exterior settings are as substantial as the genuine article, while the interiors of the palace, harem, hotel and other places bespeak of a minute attention to detail.

The cause of all the trouble in the story is a sacred carpet, referred to in the title. It is looked upon with awe by its possessor, and even more so by its guardian, Mohammed. Wadsworth, a member of a band of international crooks, steals this precious carpet, and then and there the excitement commences.

He sells it to a buyer, who happens to be in love with the daughter of the leader of the same band of crooks. All three are captured by Mohammed, undergo nerve-racking experiences and are finally rescued.

Then, back in New York, the buyer, Jones, discovers that Wadsworth is a crook, but in other respects, including the love affair, the film closes with a satisfying finale.

Speaking of excitement, the three fights which are staged, in which one American copes with some half dozen natives, are so realistic that they make one really anxious over the fate of the participants.

Guy Oliver makes the crook, Wadsworth, a character who plays varyingly on the spectator's emotions. Sometimes he is to be admired, other times to be condemned, but in every respect he acquits himself creditably.

Kathlyn Williams makes a sympathetic figure of Fortune, the girl, while Wheeler Oakman is acceptable as the hero, though displaying little animation. Others in the cast are Eugenie Besserer, Frank Clark, Harry Lonsdale and Charles Clary, who plays the role of Mohammed.

"WHEN JUSTICE SLEEPS"

(Pathe-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THIS is the third of the "Who Pays?" series, appearing in theatres at the same time that the stories are published in newspapers throughout the country. Each story is complete in itself, but each deals with some problem of modern life.

The present picture is designed to show the rather bungling work of modern courts in the punishment of crime. The man who actually commits the crime is often much less guilty than some other person who urges him on, but goes unpunished. The story used to illustrate this truth is a little more fanciful than is necessary, as more probable situations would have served equally well; however, it is possessed of real interest, and is well acted.

As in all of this series, Henry King and Ruth Roland are seen in the leads. Miss Roland combines good acting with an attractive personality in a manner which is decidedly effective.

A young bank cashier is getting a good salary and is happily married. His wife, however, develops her extravagant streak until she ruins her husband's credit. He makes a lucky play on a long shot at the races, and later is successful in the stock market, but with "borrowed" money from the vaults of the bank.

The bank examiner is coming and in order to get the stolen money back into the vaults the cashier induces his brother to go to the bank at night, open the vaults and restore the cash. This leads to the brother's capture and imprisonment. The question is "Who pays?"

A moral which is not mentioned but which is of much importance is the folly of a husband keeping his wife in ignorance of the amount of money he is making.

THANHOUSER BRINGS OUT SPECIAL POSTER

ALL over the country theatres are displaying a very pretty one sheet poster announcing the Falstaff comedies, made by Thanhouser. The border design is the torched Shakespearian horn, which is also the trade-mark of the brand.

The poster is done in Turkey red, with quaint, antique lettering. They were shipped to the Mutual exchanges for distribution to their customers, and the branch managers are busy getting them to the theatres which are asking for Falstaffs.

"THE ABSENTEE"

(Mutual Master Pictures—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

OF late much has been written and spoken concerning the factory owner who leaves his plant in charge of a self-seeking and disloyal manager, departing himself to enjoy his more or less honestly gained wealth. Taking this as a theme, William Christy Cabanne and Frank E. Woods, of the Majestic Company, have collaborated on a story which makes a stanch appeal for the abolishment of this neglectful practice. Mr. Cabanne also produced the picture.

THE RESULT OF ILL-GOTTEN WEALTH

Practically the entire first reel is utilized to present an allegorical introduction to the modern story. It is really a miniature replica of what follows, and consequently the course of the second story may be almost anticipated in detail. Yet this knowledge furnished to the onlooker is by no means a dampener to his interest.

It is most attractive to watch the development of the main plot after seeing the same characters in the allegorical prologue. It is fascinating to see the similarity of the abstract and the specific, as conceived by the authors and to note the truth of both versions of the themes.

For a starter Ambition, personified as young and as yet undisappointed, is shown. He is striving to meet Success. Success has attained his coveted station by hard work, and when he at last has the opportunity to relax he places Might and that person's evil self in his place and goes off with Pleasure. Might, influenced by his wife, Extravagance, and his daughter, Vanity (Genevieve Rhodes), and spurred on by the selfish advice of his evil spirit, misuses his authority and forces all the Toilers, including Ambition, to suffer.

Then the blind eyes of Justice are opened to the miserableness of the Toilers, and she informs Success of Might's cruel work, with the result that Success returns once more to his lofty position and alleviates the suffering of the people.

The main and modern story is an elaboration of this same theme. Success is a factory owner, played by Robert Edeson. Might (A. D. Sears) is the man left in charge. Justice (Olga Grey) is an employe of the factory. Ambition (George Berranger) is a young inventor, the evil self of Might is his right-hand man. This modernization of the theme presents numerous opportunities to introduce spectacle and heart interest.

The strike riots, the patrol of the militia, the suffering caused by the cutting of wages are all masterly handled, and the climax, the owner's return and the adjustment of affairs, is handled with an excellent understanding of dramatic construction.

Then follow some scenes illustrating the fact that the reversion to the old order of affairs came too late. Some girls strayed, some women died and some men were arrested. These scenes are anti-climaxical and are a bit too long, about the only fault in the story's development.

The film is not an incentive to industrial antagonism. It will promote good feeling by its finale, but in its entirety it might be termed "neutral." It has been produced very well. The allegorical scenes are laid in the mountains.

"THE GIRL WHO MIGHT HAVE BEEN"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THESE three reels are taken up in showing the manner in which a detective falls in love with a girl, an unwilling tool of a band of crooks, how she is killed for threatening to give her pals away, and finally, how the detective successfully discovers the murderer and hunts him to the ground.

The story is of average interest. There is nothing to startle by its originality in any scene. The characters are, however, carefully drawn, and well interpreted by the players.

The action is thrilling most all the time, for the methods of the crooks and the detective while working against each other create a considerable amount of excitement.

The final scenes, in which the master criminal is attempting to escape from the detective, who has traced him to his den, are replete with stirring incidents. The sleuth at length overpowers the other and he falls to the street below.

As a thrilling melodrama this picture is good. It contains inconsistencies which always accompany such offerings. It might be mentioned that the title does not seem particularly applicable to the story, and again that some of the sub-titles are unnecessary. The photography and scenes are good.

Included in the cast are: Harry Morey, Ned Finley, Betty Gray, Edward Elkas, Frank Currier and Paul Scardon.

"THE BUTTERFLY"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER'S novel of the same name from which this picture is adapted is a book which enjoyed a just popularity. The story is not, however, one which lends itself to a very strong screen version. Aside from a few incidents there is little action, and the peculiar nature of the plot makes it difficult to follow.

Howard Estabrook plays the leading part, that of John Butler, the successful suitor of the dancing girl Elaine. The latter is played by Barbara Tennant. As an emotional actress Miss Tennant has registered some notable successes, but she is too mature for the part of the young girl, who is the heroine of this story. O. A. C. Lund is the director and also plays the part of John Arthur.

The opening incidents of the drama take place in Egypt, and the story concerns a hunchback who plans a life-long revenge on the woman who has spurned him. He attacks her through her stepdaughter, who he lures to the stage and teaches to become a dancer.

Later he murders the woman, although this was not part of his plan. One of Elaine's lovers is blamed for the crime, but she succeeds in establishing his innocence, while the real criminal is killed by a timely fall from a precipice.

"RUMPELSTILTSKIN"

(Mutual Master-Pictures—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TO see enacted on the screen a fairy story, perhaps one of the most extensively read and liked of its kind, will indeed be a pleasure to even an audience comprised of adults, to say nothing of the joyous effect it will have upon juveniles. In fact, human nature will hardly allow any to be dissatisfied with "Rumpelstiltskin," except perhaps those who have just past the fairy tale age, and consider themselves above such a thing.

To see the trysts and then the happy marriage of the prince and the miller's daughter, to see the wondrous magic of the good fairy, to behold the misshapen dwarf and his evil workings, to look upon the jolly court of old King Cole, to watch the straw being turned to gold, Simple Simon changed to a frog, in fact to behold the entire production makes one very, very glad he is alive, and thankful to think that one of the best producers in the country has an artistic and imaginative enough mind to turn a delightful myth into a more delightful picture.

And then the atmosphere has been faultlessly brought out. The interior of the mill is realistic, the outside a revelation. The old king's court is an illustration transferred from the book to the screen. The scenes in the forest are beautiful, and the interior of Rumpelstiltskin's cave is an inspiration. All are supported by pleasing photography, and the film has been artfully tinted in many places.

Cast as the title character is Clyde Tracy, who proves himself fully capable of handling the role of the deformed and ugly dwarf. Elizabeth Burbridge is a most characteristic type for the miller's daughter, and the same may be said of Kenneth Browne, the prince. Margaret Thompson is fascinating as the good fairy, while J. Barney Sherry and Louis Morrison handle the respective roles of the miller and King Cole in fine style.

There is much that is humorous and much that is pathetic in the four reels, just the right proportion of each. The course of the prince and his wife over hill and dale by means of the magic carpet might be mentioned as a most ingenious piece of double exposure work.

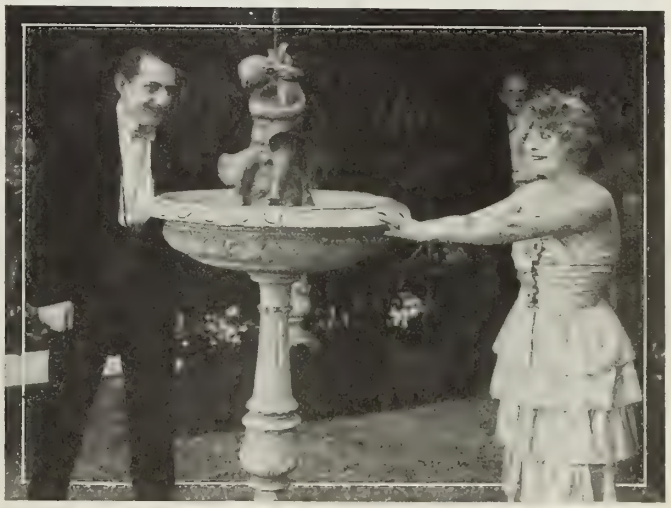
Thomas H. Ince and all those in "The Village by the Sea" who were concerned in the production of "Rumpelstiltskin" deserve sincere congratulations for the presentation of an eternal fairy story in just the right manner conceivable.

"WHO'S WHO IN SOCIETY"



(George Kleine—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

NO one knows who made the adaptations for the many good refined comedy pictures which George Kleine has been producing of late. George Fitzmaurice, the old Pathe scenario expert, now a full fledged director, both wrote and produced "Who's Who in Society."

It is an original scenario with plenty of fun to carry it through four reels of laughter and a cast of players who have appeared in other Kleine pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Brien are new rich, Mrs. O'Brien being afflicted with social ambitions. So she almost adopts Lord Algy, who arrives via a broken down auto and wishes him onto her pretty daughter Mary. That evening comes the reception with all O'Brien's old, low-life, pals on the job. Mrs. O'Brien scorns a humble detective whom she thinks is a crook. But the detective captures Lord Algy and explains that the latter is a real crook and that the auto accident was prearranged. O'Brien rejoices and Mary Ellen slips her hand into that of the stranger while Mrs. O'Brien throws away her copy of "Who's Who in Society."

MARY ELLEN AND THE DETECTIVE FIND MUCH IN COMMON

Much fun is furnished by O'Brien and Mary Ellen making fun of "the juke." A Jap butler also proves a real comedian. Then there are the sub-titles which liven up the high comedy spirit. Some day these Kleine comedy subtitles will be proverbial. It's nice to be able to hand George Fitzmaurice the credit he deserves for the script.

Now for the cast. There are Kate Sergeantson and Dan Moyles as the O'Briens and pretty Della Connors as Mary Ellen. They are ably aided and abetted by Edward Lester as Lord Algy and William H. Power as the detective.

This is up to the Kleine comedy standard, which is the very highest.

"THE MIDDLEMAN"

(Cosmofotofilm—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HERE is a truly exceptional dramatic offering, one which commands a feeling akin to reverence through the intensity of its story, the acting and the notable technique of the producer. At its first American showing, an invitation affair held recently in the Broadway theatre, New York City, it made a strong impression on a "hard" trade gathering.

Albert Chevalier, one of the few players with an international following, plays the leading role, that of Cyrus Blenkarn. Of special interest in this country is the work of Jane Gail, an American girl, in the feminine leading role, Mary Blenkarn, and the fact that the producer is George Loane Tucker, also an American. Both did themselves proud.

The story, compressed, tells of the enrichment of Joseph Chandler, owner of the Tatlow potteries, through the discovery of a new glaze by Cyrus Blankarn, an employee. Julian Chandler and Mary Blenkarn, their children, are in love. But the ambitious Chandler, Sr., wants his son to mary an heiress. So when Julian leaves for Africa the father intercepts a letter from the son to Mary.

The girl is left to bear her shame, thinking her sweetheart faithless. Blenkarn swears revenge. Stock speculation ruins Chandler. Another invention by Blenkarn brings him into control of the potteries and leaves his former employer a bootless suppliant for work. Julian returns to learn of the stolen letter. Through the marriage of the two young persons their elders' anger is cooled and the story ends with prospects of a happy future for all.

Chevalier does some very gripping work. His interpretations of the humble servant, the angry father and the man glorying in his revenge and the humbling of his enemy were very telling. Miss Gail did her usual excellent, well-judged work throughout.

WHEN THEY MET

Mr. Tucker deserves more than a word. His handling of the mob scenes was masterful, and many times he made an expression or turn of the hand tell the story more effectually than could the spoken word or a sub-title. The players include Douglas Munro, Gerald Ames, George Bellamy, Hubert Willis, Frank Stanmore, Minna Grey, Gwynne Herbert and Christine Rayner.

"THE LOVE LIAR"

(Pathe-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FEW persons will deny the truth pointed out in this powerful drama of the "Who Pays?" series. The point emphasized is that bitterness and heart-sickness are the lot of the woman who sells herself for a price, whether or not a wedding ceremony is concerned in the affair.

The woman in this case had always enjoyed wealth and luxury. So lazy of mind had she become that the thought of living any other sort of life seemed repellent. Suddenly she faced an unanticipated necessity.

Either she must marry an old man of vast wealth or she must meet poverty. She chose the farce of a marriage with the old man. Sickened as she was with her life with him, her lot was soon made much harder when she fell desperately in love with a young doctor, who cared for the aged invalid she called her husband.

In some stories the old man would have died a timely death or removed himself quietly in another way. Not so here. Instead the cold, stinging jealousy of the old man is seen, and the would-be lovers face the misery which the woman has brought on them by selling herself. The woman is the cause but she is not the only one who pays.

Ruth Roland does some excellent acting in a role which calls for much emotional work. David Gilfether, as the old husband, carries realism and lack of affectation to a most creditably high point. Henry King appears as the unfortunate young lover.

"HER PROPER PLACE"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

IF one forgets the improbable actions of the governor in this drama and considers it as a story of self-sacrifice and its reward, there is no question about its interest Everyday emotions are dealt with, but there is a most unconventional twist in the actions of the girl in the case. This adds the element necessary to hold the spectator's attention.

Marc MacDermott as Senator Northrup does his usual excellent acting. The role of the persecuted older sister is well taken by Miriam Nesbitt.

THE GOVERNOR ATTENDS THE RECEPTION

Agnes is the oldest of three sisters, and has allowed herself to be so imposed upon by them that they all expect her to do the unpleasant things about the place. They even force her to refuse congenial occupation because it would take too much of her time from waiting on them. The younger sisters are married while Agnes hardly gets a chance to see a man. After the weddings she goes to the city and gets a place as a stenographer.

Senator Northrup has so attracted her that she has fallen in love with him, although she has never met him. When a crank shoots the senator in his office she happens to be near and aids in taking care of the wounded man and in hushing the matter up for his political good.

Later she is forced to return home, and out of self-respect tells her family that she is engaged, but refuses to tell to whom. Finally she tells as a secret that it is to Senator Northrup, now candidate for governor. Of course, the news gets out and no one is more surprised than Northrup.

He decides to attend a reception given by Agnes' family, but does so with the intention of announcing her as impostor. When he sees who the girl is he forgets his anger and tells the newspaper men that he will not deny the engagement.

"THE ALTAR OF AMBITION"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is a well presented political drama. The various settings are appropriate and carefully staged. Some of the scenes take place in the rooms of a downtown club, and from the windows one observes the passing traffic of the street outside. The scene showing the election returns projected from the offices of the daily paper is also well done, and the tempter's fatal fall from a spirited horse is realistic.

David Lythgoe and Vivian Rich, who take the leading roles, receive excellent support from Harry Von Meter and Jack

THE RECONCILIATION

Richardson, while the child in the juvenile part on occasion shows real histrionic ability.

The plot hinges on the attempt of Richard Barry, a candidate for Governor, to beat John Farden, his opponent, by involving Farden's wife in an affair with William Morris, a man who is heavily indebted to Barry.

The plan works so well that Farden turns his unjustly accused wife from his house. In spite of the fact that full publicity is given this scandal Farden is elected.

However, his victory promises to cost him dearly, for his little daughter is taken seriously ill, and her mother for whom she cries, is unable to be located. At this juncture Morris on his death bed confesses the whole plot, and Farden's wife returns home in time to save the life of her child.

"THE BULLDOGS OF THE TRAIL"

(Interstate-Picture Playhouse—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the first release of the Interstate Film company and can be obtained through the Picture Playhouse Film Company. Kenneth MacDougall is responsible for the story, the direction and likewise the impersonation of the heroic member of the Northwest mounted police.

The story is unusual in its construction and production. It deals with the vengeance meted out to two old men by a Hindu secret society which they had betrayed. Both of them die suddenly before the spectator is aware of the nature of the society.

This method of developing the story has an effect productive of great interest. Following this the daughter of one of the murdered men is captured by the Hindus, and the rest of the film is employed to show the daring and thrilling manner in which her lover rescues her from their clutches.

These scenes with the hero and heroine constantly in danger are most exciting, and of course are capped with a final which is very gratifying.

The photography is all that could be desired. The snow scenes are tinted with a light sepia shade which is pleasing to the eye. The exterior locations are not in conformity with our conception of a Northwestern Canadian output, but do not detract from the story's interest. One interior of a cabin is plainly artificial, but the remainder are realistic enough.

Mr. MacDougall makes a most manly figure of the young soldier, and in the opposite role of his sweetheart, Sydney Shields performs with pleasant and consistent merit. Wynn Davidson and Hamilton Crane are others in the cast.

No sensation will be created by this subject, yet its story is upheld by original production together with some strong situations, and the whole supported by artistic photography and settings will certainly entertain.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathe—Episode Nineteen)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE originality which has marked this series from its start continues to be in evidence in this instalment, entitled "The Saving Circles." The thrills in these adventures are of two varying sorts. At times they are produced entirely by the tenseness of the situation, and on other occasions by spectacular feats. It is the latter style of thrill which predominates in this chapter and an aeroplane is used to obtain the desired result. A good view of the Sperry gyroscopic stabilizer adds to the interest.

A duel between this aeroplane and an armored motor car, mounting an aeroplane gun, is the most striking feature of the episode. With a plentiful supply of the small steel areo-arrows, which need only the force of their fall to drive them through man as if he were a soap-bubble, Wu Fang is circling about in a monoplane driven by his new ally, an aviator.

As he seeks to drop the terrible weapons on Elaine, Craig Kennedy appears in the armored motor car, and the army man with the aero-gun soon brings him to the ground. But though terribly hurt Wu Fang is seen to be still alive as the picture closes.

To go back to the beginning, Wu Fang planned to blow up Kennedy's laboratory by a bomb dropped from above. The place was marked for the aviator by a white circle painted on the roof. Fortunately Kennedy discovered the circle, and painting it out placed one of the same sort on the roof of the building in which

WU FANG FACES DEATH

Wu Fang's spy was watching. The spy was killed and the other building wrecked.

So intent are the two parties on each other's activities that nothing directly concerning the fortune found by Kennedy is done. Arnold Daly, Pearl White and Edwin Arden continue their good work. Also the acting of Creighton Hale as Walter Jameson should be mentioned. Throughout the whole series Mr. Hale has acted a minor part in such attractive style as to make it of almost equal importance to that of the famous detective.

GALBRAITH MAKES SCREEN DEBUT WITH AMERICAN

JOSEPH Galbraith, a former star of the speaking stage at the Belasco theatre in Los Angeles, has joined the leading American studio forces and will be cast in some of the leading roles in "Flying A" productions under the direction of Archer MacMackin.

Mr. Galbraith has an excellent screen personality, and will prove a pleasing addition to this company of stars.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Ten)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PROFESSOR Ashleigh is growing more suspicious appearing as the story advances. While before Craig seemed to be the chief offender, now the professor is beginning to appear even more guilty than his one time servant.

The fact that when any foul crime is perpetrated the professor is not to be found until some time afterwards, well upholds the belief that he is in some manner or another connected with the execution of the deed.

At the outset of this chapter, entitled "The Ship of Horror," a murder is committed on board the ship bound for South Africa. The victim is an inocent old lady, and her death is caused by a poisoned cup of boullion, which was evidently ment for Quest. Soon after the doomed passenger has sipped the deadly fluid, Craig's head appears in a port hole and a look of horror spreads over his face. A few minutes after this the professor enters the cabin.

Quest's party is unable to locate the fugitive Craig on the ship, and on arriving in Port Said they consult the professor as to the place in which he will seek seclusion. The professor informs them that he believes Craig to have taken shelter with a friendly tribe of natives and consequently the party sets off across the desert to search for him. In the dead of night their guides forsake them, as the water they have been drinking is poisoned.

QUEST STARTS HIS SEARCH FOR CRAIG

This change of locale has caused a number of realistic exterior street settings to be introduced. The photography of the two reels is very good, and the usual high class acting continues.

"THE ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Fifth and Sixth Parts)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THESE pictures increase in thrills with each week that passes. Alene, not knowing what marriage means, marries Abner Gray in prison, because the lawyer tells her she can thus keep from testifying against him.

Just then a note comes purporting to be from Dane, requesting her presence at a lonely old mill. Arrived at the mill, no Robert Dane is there. Clara Delane, jealous of Gilbert Jerome's attentions to Alene and thoroughly unscrupulous, has forged the note, and the minute Alene arrives, pushes her into the slimy, deep-mill pond. Abner Gray, released from prison for lack of evidence, and Robert Dane, notified of events through the papers, arrive in time to see Alene's death struggle.

In attempting a rescue, both men are heroes. Meantime Clara, thinking all three have perished, flies with Gilbert to the city, he, in spite of village protests, taking along the old silver cup.

Mary Charleson's realistic acting in the old mill scene shows that no mistake was made in starring her in this series.

Crane Wilbur gives a fine impersonation as Robert Dane.

"THE COMEBACK"

(Majestic-Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

EVERY producer of two-reel motion pictures in the country will do well to study this film. It is a remarkably fine example of a fast-moving, well-put-together and gripping story told in the best possible style. But it is more, because it is a clean, attractive drama, which avoids the many unpleasant pitfalls into which so many directors tumble in their eager attempts to install a "punch."

There are plenty of thrills, and there is a crime incident, but nothing offensive exists in the two reels. The heroine is effectively and charmingly played by Billie West. Her much victimized husband is portrayed by Elmer Clifton. A number of unusual scenes, such as one in which the hero makes the outgoing steamer by means of the baggage hoist, give strength to the "high spots."

A business man sends his son to Europe to look after a contract. The son has just become engaged, but his step-brother is extremely jealous of him. The European trip was largely at his instigation in order to give him a chance to win the girl. During the lover's absence the father dies and leaves him his property, it to go to his step-son if the first heir dies childless.

The crooked step-son arranges a scheme by which on the lover's return he has a crony insult his sweetheart while they are sitting at a table on which a pistol is lying. The weapon is loaded with blanks, but the hot-headed lover fires at the blackguardly visitor and then flees, supposing he has killed him. He is provided with a ticket to China, but decides to go to the lumber camps.

Shortly after this the other man obtains a body from a morgue, hides it in the bushes and identifies it as that of his step-brother. He thus obtains the estate. In the lumber camp the younger man learns the truth through a newspaper clipping and arrives just in time to make a desperate chase after the crook and capture him on the steamer. Overjoyed at seeing him, his sweetheart, whose parents have forced her to accept the other man, calls for the ship's chaplain and there is a marriage on board after all.

"MEANS AND MORALS"

(Essanay—Two Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

H. S. SHELDON has supplied the scenario for a human interest drama that will appeal to most audiences, particularly as it is presented by a very good cast, including Edna Mayo, Bryant Washburn, Peggy Sweeney and Thomas Commerford. Edna Mayo is most attractive in this picture and her acting is thoroughly natural and effective.

THE PICKPOCKET IS GIVEN A CHANCE

Irma Carson and Frances Smith are two shop girls who are forced to subsist on their salary of six dollars a week. This leaves very little for anything but the bare necessities. Irma, one night urged by a craving for a good substantial meal, goes out into the street and deliberately accosts a man, trusting that he will prove of the right sort.

The man is Dick Hardy. He takes her to a restaurant and when he demands his pay, she lays the truth of the matter before him. She is a good girl, she is hungry, she took a long chance.

Dick escorts her safely home and when he leaves her he tells her that he is a pickpocket. Later Dick is caught stealing a pocket-book of a woman shopper in the store where Irma works. Irma goes to the manager and tells him the whole story of the evening spent with Dick.

The manager is won over by her eloquent appeal and decides to give Dick a chance to make good. He does so, and six months later marries Irma.

"WORMWOOD" LEOPARD CREATES EXCITEMENT AT FOX STUDIOS

THE forthcoming William Fox production of "Wormwood," Marie Corelli's book and drama, visualized for the screen by Marshall Farnum, the director, and Garfield Thompson, affords Mr. Farnum an opportunity to make his debut as an animal trainer. The instrument of his plunge into the ranks of the arena is a spotted leopard, which is used with startling effect in this Fox Film Corporation production. There were several exciting adventures with the leopard over at the William Fox studios when the scenes in which the big cat takes part were being made.

TAKING THE LEOPARD SCENES FOR FOX'S "WORMWOOD"

The animal was peacefully gnawing at a bone, when its trainer gave it a prod with a goad in order to make it walk in front of the black velvet curtain, which was dropped behind it for "vision stuff," the idea being that Gaston Beauvais, the absinthe-soaked, is haunted day and night by this spotted creature of his wormwood-induced delirium.

The leopard took offense at the interruption at his meal time in this arbitrary fashion, and made a leap, not for his trainer, but for Mr. Farnum. The latter had never qualified as an acrobat, but he did a back jump, and then a leap for life for the stairway that would have done credit to any tumbler. Cameraman Thompson was just as nimble in getting out of the way.

CAPT. MELVILLE MAY ESTABLISH STUDIO IN EXPOSITION GROUNDS

Los Angeles, May 3.

CAPT. WILBERT MELVILLE, head of the Western Lubin Company, is now on his way to New York City, where he will embark in the yacht he purchased last September, and return to Los Angeles by the Panama Canal.

With his arrival here plans for an additional studio, to be located at San Diego, will be completed. It is reported that Mr. Melville has been granted the right to establish a studio on the California-Panama exposition grounds, where two and three-reel subjects will be filmed. Whether this is a fact or not, it is definitely stated that his new yacht, "Vergana," which is one hundred and eighty feet in length and has a twenty-foot beam, will be anchored in San Diego bay and that Capt. Melville intends to keep it there for a long period, and during the time produce pictures. The "Vergana" will be the largest private yacht permanently located in Pacific waters.

The Lubin players are this week producing a two-reel subject, "The Web of Hate," from an original scenario by Julian Lamothe.

The teams now starting the pennant race are Pathé Frères Jersey City; the Babcock & Wilcox Company, of Newark; the Oxweld-Star Electric Company, of Newark; the Michelin Tire Company, of New Brunswick, and the Singer Sewing Machine Company, of Elizabethport. The league season starts May first and closes September first.

Pearl White, the Pathé star, is to pitch the first ball at the opening game, and General Manager Gasnier, of Pathé, will be there to give his pets a good send-off.

"MILLIONAIRE BABY" COMPLETED

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, May 5.

THE production of the "Millionaire Baby," the second Selig Red Seal play, to be released through the V-L-S-E on May 31, was completed last Monday. An elaborate theatre scene was staged, which has an important bearing upon the plot.

One of the Selig Chicago studios was transformed into a perfect theatre. The audience of some hundred people all in evening clothes, were seated between the camera and the stage.

After four hours of careful rehearsing, several pictures of the scene were taken in order that both the actions of the audience and the acting of the principals engaged in the scene on the stage would appear thoroughly realistic.

Thomas Heffron had charge of the directing of this large scene. Grace Darmond, Charles Siddon, Robert Sherwood and Baby Erickson were in the cast which presented the act before the camera.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"A Much Needed Lesson." (Biograph. Mon., May 10.)—A rather laughable story is told in this comedy drama. A young wife thinks her husband is too attentive. Her father, a girl friend and the husband carry out a little plot which teaches her to be less particular. In the cast are Jack Mulhall, Rea Martin, Gus Pixley and Irma Dawkins.

"The Confession." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., May 11.)—Filled with bitterness when his wife died at the time of her daughter's birth a wealthy man went to Paris with his young son. He left the baby in the care of a doctor and his wife, who concealed the news of the child's death in order to keep receiving the money sent for its care. After the son had grown up he returned to America and met the daughter of his dead sister's foster parents. They fell in love and were married. Then the father appeared, and, ignorant of the truth, told them that they were brother and sister.

The girl's mother, torn with conflicting emotions, told the truth just in time to save her from siucide. Franklin Ritchie and Gretchen Hartman are the young couple.

"The Sheriff's Story." (Biograph. Thurs., May 13.)—There is a gloomy though powerful note in this Western drama. Pressed by Indians, a pioneer yields to his wife's request and kills her with his last cartridge. Hardly has the shot been fired when help arrives. The realization that he has uselessly killed his wife makes the man insane.

"The Little Scapegoat." (Biograph. Fri., May 14.)—Here again is seen the familiar story of the poor girl who goes to live with rich relations, who make a servant of her. It goes without saying that she captures the wealthy suitor of her haughty cousin. Irma Dawkins plays the title role, and Jack Mulhall that of her lover.

"The Oriental Ruby." (Biograph. Sat., May 15.)—A Hindoo steals a ruby and makes an unsuccessful attempt to fix the blame on the father of the dead man's sweetheart. Augusta Anderson, Charles Perley and Edward Cecil are the principals.

"Nearly a Scandal." (Edison. Wed., May 12.)—William Wadsworth and Arthur Housman appear as two excitable Germans in this slapstick comedy. A considerable portion of the film is devoted to a chase, and some good use is made of trick photography.

"His Peasant Princess." (Edison. Sat., May 15.)—The conventional story of the young prince who falls in love with a peasant girl only to find that she is not only a princess in disguise, but the very princess he is supposed to marry. The use of comedy names and semi-humorous makeup for the various dignitaries and nobles has a rather unfortunate effect. Frank McGlynn is seen as the prince.

"An Innocent Thief." (Edison. Tues., May 11.)—This is an attractive love story with a new twist on the idea of an innocent thievery. Augustus Phillips and Bessie Learn are seen in the leading roles.

"By the Sea." (Essanay. Thurs., April 29.)—In this laughable one-reel comedy Charles Chaplin is ably assisted by several others in presenting a riot of slapstick fun. The action takes place by the seashore on a windy day. The picture is filled with his usual clever antics of the kind that have never failed to bring forth hearty laughter.

"Home Coming." (Essanay. Mon., May 10.)—Bryant Washburn and Nell Craig play this drama written by I. A. R. Wylie. A famous young opera singer discovers the German girl he had loved in boyhood. She is dying of homesickness in a large American city. He saves her life by the disclosing of his identity and asking her to marry him.

"Means and Morals." (Essanay. Two acts. Tues., May 11.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Fable of the Highroller and the Buzzing Blondine." (Essanay. Wed., May 12.)—A comedy produced form a very clever George Ade fable. An actress with lemon meringue hair leaves a Wall Street plunger when she thinks he is broke. A pretty little nurse falls in love with him and they are married, only to find to the surprise of both that he had cleaned up a fortune while he was laid up in the hospital. Bryant Washburn and Ruth Stonehouse are among the cast.

"Sweedie in Vaudeville." (Essanay. Thurs., May 13.)—A good Sweedie comedy with plenty of action and many laughs. Sweedie, the scrubwoman of the theatre, decides on a stage career, and secures Slivers, a three hundreed pounder, for her song and dance partner. When their turn comes to go on, the Props jealously try to crab the act, but after a fierce struggle, Sweedie and Slivers hold possession of the stage.

"The Awakening Hour." (Essanay. Three acts. Sat., May 15.)—A fairly well developed drama with Joseph Byron Totten and Nell Craig in the leading roles. The first part of the picture drags, but in the latter enough action is developed to hold the interest to the end.

The plot deals with a young girl's rise in the theatrical profession and her final reconciliation with her country suitor through the efforts of the leading man who is unselfishly in love with her.

"A Sister's Burden." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., May 10.)—Martha, the oldest of three children, has to keep house for them and her lazy father. She gives up a chance to have married happiness because of what she believes to be her duty.

Fifteen years later she meets her former lover, and they plan to be married, but again the claims of her family interfere. Then her fiance shows her the mistake she is making, and she realizes that even helpfulness can be made a sin. Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde play the leads.

"Rushing the Lunch Counter." (Kalem. Tues., May 11.)—The usual amusing slapstick comedy of the Ham comedies is seen in good form here. Ham and Bud, finding a railway lunch counter temporarily unattended, proceed to take care of it in a style of their own. The adventures which follow cause them to leave town filled with food but covered with bruises. A hand-car serves as their Pullman.

"Scotty Weed's Alibi." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., May 12.)—The girl detective, played in this instance by Cleo Ridgeley, accuses a suspected crook of stealing a diamond tiara at a society woman's ball. His room is searched and the tiara found in an electrolier.

"The Black Ring." (Kalem. Three reels. Fri., May 14.)—A black ring is found by a wealthy young man posing as a chauffeur in order to be near a girl with whom he is in love.

The ring makes it possible for him to enter the meeting place of a gang of criminals who style themselves "Knights of the Black Ring." This leads to his recovering a diamond necklace stolen from the girl. Meantime she has fallen in love with him, and is of course much pleased both at his bravery and his real identity.

The film is a good adventure story. Tom Moore and Marguerite Courtot are the lovers. Robert Ellis is seen as the leader of the crooks.

"A Fiend at the Throttle." (Kalem. Sat., May 15.)—An injured engineer escapes from his bed and jumps on a locomotive while in delirium. Rita, the telegraph operator, learns of the train with its mad engineer, and boards the engine from a hand-car. She is just in time to stop the train and bring help to the conductor, who has come forward and is struggling with the deranged man. In this picture the part usually taken by Helen Holmes is played by Elsie McLeod.

"A Lucky Strike." (Lubin. One reel. Tues., May 18.)—Written and produced by Arthur D. Hotaling. Played by Mae Hotely, Babe Hardy, Cora Walker, Frances Ne Moyer. Although in real life men often advertise for wives and sometimes obtain them—with more or less happy results—there is seldom the comedy element present that is injected in this one reeler.

Bill Meyers, a rich miner, having in good faith advertised for a wife, Nellie Crehan and her niece Elinor answer it for a lark. When Bill in dead earnest comes East for the interview, they substitute Nora, the cook, for the supposed willing bride.

After finding out that Bill has just been paid a "cool million" for his mine, the joke is on the Crehans and they try to put Nora back in her place. But too late! Bill has tasted Nora's pie and thinks a good cook a good enough wife for a miner, so Nora gets the "Lucky Strike."

"A Decision of the Court." (Lubin. Two reels. Thurs., May 20.)—Written and produced by Paul Powell. A story of long cherished hatred and revenge which in the end falls with crushing force on the villain's head. In this case a "villainess" works all the damage, feeling, however, that she is doing an act of just retribution. Madge Cord hates Judge Hall with vindictive force because he sentenced her son (justly, be it said in passing) to a long prison term. The son dies shortly. The mother later remarries and prospers, but never forgets her grievance.

Later when Judge Hall and his son Elwood appear in the same hotel as the Cords, she deliberately aims to make a gambler of Elwood, and succeeds with but little trouble.

When Elwood is deep in debt to the Cords and their cronies Burke and Booth, they use this debt as a lever to force him to steal a forthcoming decision of his father's which will materially affect the stock market.

With this inside information, the Cord gang proceed to "clean up" the "Street." Unable to resist a temptation to "gloat," Madge calls on her old enemy and voices her triumph. He shows her his real decision, which, owing to later evidence, reverses Elwood's purloined document. Result: a tumble in stocks, ruin of the Cord syndicate, a triumphant judge, a crushed and broken woman. Ample justice is done by the cast: Velma Whitman, Robert Gray, George Routhe, Sidney Hayes, Melvin Mayo, L. C. Shumway.

"In the Dark." (Lubin. Three reels. Wed., May 19.)—Reviewed at length in next issue.

"Just Retribution." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., May 21.)—Written and produced by Geo. W. Terwilliger.

Almost too improbable for even a melodrama, with an attempted crime in every scene, but well produced and with a splendid cast in Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalfe as leads, ably assisted by Kempton Greene, Edwin De Wolfe and Jack O'Neil.

May Larkin loves Harry Campbell, her father's lawyer, but their marriage is postponed by the father's death. As the will bequeathes all to a nephew in case of May's death without heirs, he becomes a villain to get that money.

His efforts, aided by a more villainous gang, to abduct the girl, try to kill her and set fire to the house when her sweetheart manages to come to her aid, form the plot and cause many thrills. In the end the true lovers marry and the nephew gets his just deserts.

"The Clubman." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., May 22.)—Again is Billy Reeves the "whole show" in this comedy of Comus. But instead of the wings of the good, this drunken reveler has feet that tangle him in all sorts of traps. On his final arrival at home, the "Clubman" stumbles inadvertently into the tiger's jaws, a rug reposing peacefully on the hearth, but mistaken by the inebriate for a real "beastie." This is a very funny scene.

After wife rescues hubby from this dilemma, he gets into trouble with a refractory pillow, and before slumber finally closes his weary lids, caps the climax of his antics by swallowing at one gulp (feathers and all) a poor little canary chirping in its cage. I can hear in fancy the howls of laughter which will greet this Billy Reeves stunt.

"The Ingratitude of Liz Taylor." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., May 10.)—This picture from a Maibelle Heikes Justice scenario is made unusually interesting by the clever acting of Roland Sharp, a juvenile, who plays the role of a newsboy, and by the equally clever acting of his airedale pup Paddy.

The rest of the cast led by Vivian Reed and Guy Oliver are also excellent. The newsboy falls in love with an older girl, who has been kind to him. He serves her devotedly, and is heartbroken when he learns she is about to marry a man of her own age. This is an excellent production of a very pretty story, and ought to appeal strongly to most audiences.

"The Yellow Streak." (Selig. Tues., May 11.)—The profligate son of an Eastern capitalist sent West to reform, returns home at the death of his father, deserting a pretty young girl of the mining camp. Seventeen years later on a trip through the West he runs across his son, who, unknown to him, was born shortly after his desertion. He is saved from shooting him by the mother. E. J. Brady and Eugenie Forde and Leo Pierson appear in this picture.

"The Last of the Stills." (Selig. Wed., May 12.)—A good production of an improbable story dealing with the love of a city man for the daughter of a moonshiner. Most of the scenes are laid in the mountains of Kentucky. The cast includes Virginia Kirtley, Robyn Adair and E. J. Brady.

"A Matrimonial Boomerang." (Selig. Fri., May 14.)—A Tom Mix Western comedy in which the cowboys, to revenge themselves on the sheriff for the prohibition of gambling, force him to marry an old Indian hag. It later turns out that she is a pretty school teacher with whom they are all in love. She had disguised herself to escape their attentions.

"The Jarrs Visit Arcadia." (Vitagraph. Mon., May 10.)—The sixth of the Jarr family series of comedies is told in this film. It is as amusing as is the rule with these sprightly adventures. The Jarrs go for a visit to the suburban home of their friends, the Jenkins, in Arcadia. Their experiences make their Harlem flat look good. As usual the Jarrs are played by Harry Davenport and Rose Tapley.

"When a Feller's Nose Is Out of Joint." (Vitagraph. Wed., May 12.)—A very pretty comedy drama is told in this reel. Sonny Jim does not appreciate the attention which is showered upon the new baby. So one night he carries the little new brother out to the barn, hoping that a stork will take him elsewhere. Soon after a fire starts in the nursery. So Sonny Jim's escapade results in saving the baby's life.

"To Save Him for His Wife." (Vitagraph. Thurs., May 13.)—Self-sacrifice leads to a happiness which the little country girl had given up hoping for in this fine comedy drama. Believing the hotel guest with whom she is in love to be married, Mary saves him from the wiles of an adventuress. Then it turns out that he has no wife, but that he wants one, and she is Mary. Lillian Walker plays the part of Mary, while that of her lover is taken by Evart Overton.

"The Professor's Painless Cure." (Vitagraph. Fri., May 14.)—The absent-minded actions of the professor furnish the chief comedy element in this picture, which is played by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. The Professor cures his wife of the dance craze by a simple and effective plan.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Their Social Splash." (Keystone. Sun., April 26.)—Charlie Murray appears as one of the stars in this laughable slapstick, which contains much that is strikingly original for this variety of comedies. The finale when all the characters end up in a tank, having fallen therein through the roof, is most humorous, and many of the other scenes will produce the heartiest kind of laughter. There are several risque scenes, which should be omitted, and it is believed the censor board has seen to these defects in an otherwise clean film.

"A Bear Affair." (Keystone. Thurs., April 29.)—A foolish and very funny appearing individual repairs to the west to hunt, and gets into all manner of scraps before he finally departs. The hunter is a good comedian, but there is too much vulgarity mixed up with the comedy. Some of it will doubtless be elmiinated.

"The House of Bentley." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., May 1.)—This is a particularly fine picture. The idea presented is entirely free from morbid attempts to offer problems, and is one which in spite of its familiarity has a strong appeal.

Besides this it is well constructed and acted. Teddy Sampson makes a most charming heroine. A wealthy business man discharges his pretty stenographer when he discovers that his son has fallen in love with her. He also tells the boy that he will disown him if he marries her.

The youth goes to his grandmother and she takes a hand. She goes to see the little stenographer, and approves heartily of her grandson's choice. Then she takes her home, and leaving her in her room proceeds to recall to her son the story of his own marriage. Realizing how unhappy he would have been if not allowed to marry the girl of his choice the father relents, the girl is called in and everyone is happy. In every way it is a good picture.

"Ethel's Disguise." (Komic. Sun., May 2.)—Ethel consents to go to a cafe in male attire in order to serve papers in a divorce case on an Italian. Her sweetheart happens to come to the same place, and unintentionally appears in a bad light to Ethel. There is considerable excitement, ending in the discovery of Ethel's identity by her sweetheart. Fay Tincher does her usual clever work as the snappy stenographer.

"Monsieur Nickola Dupree." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., May 4.)—A young artist is constantly beset by a tempter, who he believes is the personification of the Devil, but developments show that this character is no other than his uncle who is testing him to discover whether he is worthy of inheriting his fortune.

While this production contains the elements of a good story, poor producing has caused most of the action to appear somewhat ridiculous. It is novel, to be sure, yet some of its scenes fail to "get over." The letter written by the girl to her lover is rather foolish.

The cast which includes Ernest Ward, Morris Foster, Harris Foster and Florence La Badie is entirely competent. In photography and settings the two reels leave little to be desired.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 18." (Thurs., May 6.)—San Francisco celebrates the ninth anniversary of her rapid rise since the earthquake of 1906; Mayor Mitchell reviews New York's annual police parade; Mayor Thompson takes office in Chicago after Prosperity Day Parade. The war news is still interesting, while a number of timely domestic events make the entire reel most entertaining.

"A Scientific Mother." (Falstaff. Fri., May 7.)—The Falstaff brand is still good, for "A Scientific Mother" is a very novelly conceived offering, which is sure to keep one laughing all the time. The young mother is frightened at the marked diminutiveness of her child, so she adopts a scientific diet for the boy.

He grows most rapidly, until at the age of eighteen he measures seven feet at least. Then she has difficulty in finding a mate for him, but he surprises her by picking out his own wife, who happens to be about half his height. Jack Doughty is the young giant in this, while Ruth Elder is seen as his sweetheart and Mignon Anderson as his mother.

"The Old Shoemaker." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., May 8.)—The youthful reporter loves the shoemaker's daughter, but a most villainous Italian stands in his way. This man abducts the girl and the other proves the hero, rescuing her from a mountain cave.

This is a rather poor picture considering the fact that Reliance produced it. It is melodrama and relies too much upon coincidence to convince thoroughly. The back drop, seen through the window of the cobbler's shop, is quite poor. The photography is very good.

"The Song of the Heart." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., May 11.)—An engaging story which depicts the adventures of two young people, one a struggling musician and the other a carbaret singer, who finally are triumphant over both villainy and poverty. While exhibiting nothing remarkably original, this story has been well produced, and is always interesting.

A few inconsistencies are present in the development of the plot, among them being the fact that a bar room is shown with both men and women patronizing it. The faults, however, are not large enough to do bodily harm to the interest in the story. Mignon Anderson and Arthur Ashley are the principals. The photography is good.

"The Altar of Ambition." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 10.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Life's Staircase." (Beauty. Tues., May 11.)—This is an exceptionally pretty picture containing many examples of perfect technique in double and triple exposures and fade-ins. It is the first Beauty picture in which Neva Gerber appears, and her work is excellent.

Webster Campbell is also good. Following the announcement of their engagement the boy and the girl decide to destroy all tokens of their past love affairs. Memories of these presented by fade-ins supply interesting material for the greater portion of the picture.

"The Broken Window." (American. Wed., May 12.)—A window broken by some boys in the Professor's house introduces his attractive maid to the young repair man. In order to renew their acquaintance, first the repair man and then the maid smash the same window on two succeeding occasions.

The professor thinks burglars are responsible, but when he discovers the truth, he realizes that a minister and not a policeman is needed. A pleasing and unusual comedy played by John Steppling, Winifred Greenwood and Ed. Coxen.

"His Affianced Wife." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., May 12.)—A version of the celebrated plot in which a girl manages to break away from her unfavorable surroundings and become the stenographer of a respectable man.

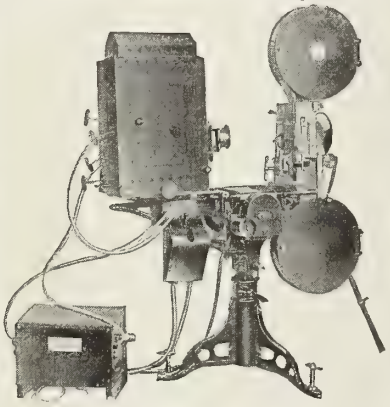
At the last moment her brother returns bent on blackmail, and the girl shoots him in self defense. Her employer, although discovering her shady past, refuses to allow her arrest on old charges by claiming her as his fiancee.

This is interesting despite its somewhat hackneyed theme. Its situations are of a powerful nature, and the story is well worked out to the climax, which puts a finishing thrill on the picture. Leona Hutton plays the title role well, and George Fisher is her crooked brother, while Harry Keenan makes a convincing business man.

"The Shoal Light." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., May 13.)—The old light-house keeper, and his almost equally old successor, are irreconcilable until the villain appears. This gentleman extinguishes the light hoping that the ex-light-house keeper's son will land on the rocks.

Through their combined efforts and the aid of the daughter of the keeper the light is set in working order again, in the nick of time to save the young man and his ship. This is a highly pleasing offering, departing considerably from the beaten path in both theme and situations. The two old men are very good character actors, and Charlie Ray is seen in a good part as the young son.

His rescue of his father's rival's daughter from the water is a nice bit of thrilling work, and the final scenes which show the old men with the aid of the girl lighting the light are productive of a great suspense. The scenes in this are realistic, even an artificial scene which shows the light-house at a distance.



"Casey's Tribulations." (Royal. Sat., May 15.)—An attempt at slapstick which is too poor to deserve comment. There is much that is vulgar in the reel, while the attempt at poetry in the subtitles makes one wonder why.

"The Human Octopus." (Kay Bee. Two reels. Fri., May 14.)—A story concerning newspaper and political life in which a reporter "gets the goods" on the boss, and forces him through threatening publication of his information to allow him to marry his daughter.

Although interesting in its melodramatic structure the story is hardly true enough to life to convince the onlooker. A political boss would hardly go through his duties without looking at a paper; a reporter, no matter how much of a star, would hardly speed about the town in a touring car, and that gentleman would hardly sacrifice an important story to his own interests.

THE MASTER MODEL

Mr. R. I. Brown, of Texarkana, Texas, writes:

"I think the American Standard Machine the best on the market and I now have my third one. One I am using here now is nearly two years; I have only had to buy one take-up chain and one sprocket for it, and it throws as good a picture on the screen now as it did the first day I installed it."

Excellent projection under a heavy grind, with minimum repairs, severely tests any motion picture machine. And when you run across STANDARDS that have been on the job for two, four, six—even seven years—with little upkeep cost, that are in good serviceable condition, you have positive proof that the STANDARD is the machine for YOU.

"Pathe News, No. 33."—The portion of this reel which is intended for general distribution is devoted to scenes in this country, with the exception of the departure of Jess Willard from Havana. A feature which will interest woman is the section devoted to spring hats.

Colonel Heeza Liar at the front, an animated cartoon, completes the reel. In addition to this there are special sections showing incidents of local interest at Kansas City, Boston, Syracuse, New York, Philadelphia and Mississippi valley cities.

"Whiffles and the Emperor." (Pathe. One reel.)—Whiffles and his uncle are not on good terms, and the former's chances of being the heir are rapidly diminishing. The uncle suffers from a nightmare involving Napoleon, and this unfortunately leads to more trouble for the nephew. A good example of the Whiffles comedies.

"The Ladder of Love." (Pathe. Two reels.)—While the underlying idea of this drama is not new there is a novel twist to the story, which, combined with good acting, makes it a worthy offering. A banker's son marries a chorus girl, and as a result is turned out of his home.

He starts working and gradually builds up a small fund besides maintaining a comfortable little home. The father owns a worthless gold mine in which he has invested much money. He circulates false accounts of a rich strike at the same time that he puts stock in the affair on the market. The son invests all of his money and loses the whole amount.

In rage he goes to his father and demands restitution, which, being refused, he enters the house and robs the safe, believing that he is right in doing so. He is caught by his sister, but the ultimate result is a reconciliation with his father.

"From Oxford to Windsor." (Pathe. Split reel.)—A fine series of views taken from a boat on the river. The highly cultivated scenery of the region is shown attractively.

"A Giraffe Hunt in Africa." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Colored pictures show a brief view of hunters before and after the killing of a giraffe. On the same reel is "From Oxford to Windsor" and "Some Interesting Birds."

"Some Interesting Birds." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This is a very fine colored film showing certain European birds. It is sure to please, and its only fault is its brevity.

"The Bay of Ha-Long." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Some most interesting views of this strange Oriental harbor make an attractive but short film.

"Ima Simp, Goat." (Pathe. One reel.)—In an effort to cure Ima Simp of a peculiar affliction, which makes him yawn constantly, a doctor transfers some goat's blood into his system. The result is that he butts everything in sight and adopts a diet of tin cans. He is finally cured. An amusing comedy.

"Father's Brilliant Idea." (Pathe. One reel.)—Father is troubled by the extravagance of his daughter, and when she becomes engaged and wants a high-class wedding with all the fixings he is upset. He suddenly thinks of the saving if he could induce his daughter to elope. He carefully plans the elopement, but alas, it falls through entirely, and the expensive wedding takes place after all. A rather original and amusing comedy.

"An Excursion to the Vosges Mountains." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This short piece of color film shows some very beautiful views in this region which is now the seat of some of the bitterest fighting. Three other short colored films go to make up a full reel with this one. They are "The Otter" and "The Agouti," interesting educationals, and "Picturesque Camau," an attractive scenic. The four subjects make a varied offering.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"Alias Holland Gin." (Lariat. Two reels.)—The first reel shows the familiar story of a minister's daughter seduced and abandoned. Seven years then elapse and she is shown as the proprietress of a gambling house in a Western town. She is rough, but respectable. She fleeces a man who from a superficial resemblance she takes to be her false lover. Later he helps her to square accounts with the real man, who is fortunately killed. The woman then makes a happy marriage with the gallant stranger.

"The Curse." (Premier. Two reels.)—A young scientist is secretly married to a mountain girl. He is suddenly sent to South America, and the note which he leaves for the girl is never received by her. Her father does not believe her story and orders her from the house with his curse.

The young husband comes home as agreed in his note, and finds that the girl's father has become partly insane. He insists that the girl is dead, and the younger man is forced to believe him. Needless to say things do not end in so unfortunate a way. There is not much action in the picture, but it holds the attention without this element.

"In Her Daddy's Footsteps." (Grandin. Two reels.)—A girl who wants to have a good time like her brother dons masculine attire, and follows her father to a poker joint. The place is raided and as an example the patrons get ten days at hard labor. The girl and her father are cell mates. The story is, of course, entirely impossible, but it is a rather amusing bit of comedy. Ethel Grandin is featured.

"The Vivisectionist." (Beaumont-American. Two reels.)—Wishing to study the various mental aspects of a jealous woman a famous psychologist deliberately makes his wife believe that he loves another in order to use her as a handy subject for his observation.

Before he is through with his experiments he finds himself condemned to death for a murder which he did not commit, but which resulted from circumstances for which he was in part responsible. The familiar death bed confession saves him about five minutes from the gallows. Marian Swayne plays the leading feminine role, while Joseph Levering is seen as the detective.

"Davy Crockett." (Superba. One reel.)—This is a burlesque of the famous and popular pioneer. As such it is a regrettable production, and will probably be none too popular. The production is entirely a slapstick one, but it burlesques situations in which there was nothing funny.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 165." (Wed., May 5.)—A view of the completed Roosevelt Dam in Phoenix, Ariz.; Confederate veterans parade in Atlanta, Ga.; the launching of the U. S. S. Wadsworth, latest destroyer at Bath, Me.; a large selection of war scenes, a few other domestics and Hy Mayer's cartoons complete this reel.

"Fate's Alibi." (Laemmle. Sun., May 6.)—A drama produced by Frank Lloyd which contains a heart-interest theme that is sure to be enjoyed, although the idea is slightly exaggerated. A down and out gentleman recovers a lady's lost purse, and instead of returning it to her he buys himself some respectable clothes and obtains a position, which in time is lucrative. The girl remembers his face and the police arrest him, but on hearing his story he is set free. Millard K. Wilson and Helen Leslie are the leads in this.

"Wanted—A Chaperone." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., May 7.)—Whether a plot be original or conventional makes little difference when Lee Moran is at his best.

Here he is disguised as a female chaperone, superintending a party of two girls and two boys, with results that are exceedingly uproarious to say the least. The usual complications arise when the girls prepare for the night, when they go in bathing, et cetera. No offense is given, however, as Al Christie has handled each situation with extreme care. Others in the cast of this truly funny feature are Eddie Lyons, Victoria Forde, Jack Dillon, Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams and Harry Rattenberry.

The Girl Who Had a Soul." (Victor. Three reels. Mon., May 10.)—A version of the story in which a girl, reared among thieves and murderers, manages to break away from her hereditary environment, and becomes the housekeeper of a rich young doctor.

This gentleman is engaged to a young woman who wants merely his money, being quite in love with his assistant. Friend Doctor surprises his fiancee in the arms of his aide; his temper runs away with him, and drawing a knife, he kills Dr. Fox.

His adoring housekeeper takes the blame; she is arrested; it is discovered she is an old offender, and she is about to be sentenced when in rushes the young physician, explaining that he killed Fox in self-defense. The rest can be surmised.

While Mary Fuller, and in fact, the rest of the principals, do excellent work, in their respective parts, the story seems to have been somewhat neglected in regard to logic, to further the opportunities of the players. Inconsistencies creep in here and there and assert themselves to the disadvantage of the story's realism; yet despite them, the entire three reels are extraordinarily interesting; this fact, however, is due to the cast and direction.

Realism predominates in the scenes, particularly so in the crooks' den, where Mrs. Charles Craig and Curtis Benton register some effective bits of character portrayal. Miss Fuller is more than pleasing in the role of the reformed Lady Raffles, while Matt Moore imbues the doctor with his always pleasing personality.

Photographically the subject is very good, and the settings are most fitting. Lucius Henderson, director, has scored Mary Fuller in another success, and its success is all the more praiseworthy when one stops to consider the development of the plot.

Uncle's New Blazer. (Imp. Mon., May 10.)—Rather a weak specimen of present-day comedies, with Billy Garwood and Violet Mersereau in the leading parts. By wearing his uncle's new blazer the nephew is mistaken by his aunt for her husband. He is seen with another girl, which makes auntie jealous, so the young man promises to get rid of the girl for a substantial check, and all ends well.

"The Torrent." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., May 11.)—There is so much that is worthy of lengthy description in all of Henry McRae's productions that it is hardly possible to do them justice in such short space.

Suffice it to say, that "The Torrent" is a highly pleasing melodrama, with thrills innumerable, of which the biggest is the bursting of a huge dam, and the flooding of the valley below. This is the climax which all the action leads to, but that action instead of being left to take care of itself is full of smaller thrills, all of which reflect credit on the producer's name and the members of his company.

Throughout the two reels a remarkably well trained horse and dog perform, their acting being almost astounding, so much intelligence do they display.

In the cast of this production, Wellington Playter appears as the hero, Sherman Bainbridge as the heavy, Marie Walcamp as the girl, and Rex de Roselli as her father. The scene of action never varies from the construction work of the dam, which makes a most interesting locale.

"A Shot in the Dark." (Rex. Tues., May 11.)—The husband is accused of shooting his wife's old lover, but it develops that the man's Hindu servant, whose sister had been betrayed by the same man, committed the deed.

Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joseph W. Girard appear in this drama, which will be responsible for quite an amount of suspense. The male characters are mostly members of an army post, and the combination of such an unconventionally constructed story with this locale makes the drama a desirable one-reeler.

"He Fell in the Park." (Nestor. Tues., May 11.)—A comedy of mixed identities and an extremely jealous husband, produced by Ed. Lyons and written by Al. Christie. Lee Moran gets in some clever work as the jealous Mr. Crabb, while Ed. Lyons and Victoria Forde appear in the other important parts.

"What a Blind Man Saw." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., May 12.)—A girl marries a wealthy man merely for his money. After the marriage he is stricken blind, and his wife carries on with a former lover. The wife's sister tries to dissuade her from her disgraceful actions but with no avail.

On regaining his sight the husband keeps quiet concerning his recovery and learns his wife's character. She elopes with the other man, and he is content to marry her sister. A fair drama, with Sidney Ayres, Doris Pawn and Val Paul in the principal parts.

"The Stool Pigeon's Revenge." (L-Ko. Wed., May 12.)—Hank Mann again supported by Peggy Pearce and a number of other funny people in another acrobatically strenuous farce.

The plot revolves about the act implied in the title and is developed well by the dare-devil cast. This will surely get over. The L-Ko assemblage has omitted the dirt from all their releases of recent weeks, which has raised their standard considerably.

"An Idyll of the Hills." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., May 13.)—The story of this is very good, but there is hardly enough action to sustain the interest over two thousand feet. A few of the episodes of the story are none too clearly put. The photography and scenes are very good. Pauline Bush, Lon Chaney and M. K. Wilson are the principal characters.

"Pokes and Jabs." (Sterling. Thurs., May 13.)—A strenuous slapstick, in which two henpecked husbands go out for a "time," one of them dressing as a woman. The situations resulting on their home-coming and during their tour of the saloons are humorously conceived and very well carried out by the cast.

The majority of the male comedians who appear seem confirmed acrobats, and their actions have obviously been well guided by a director who knows his business. This was made by an outside company, but the Sterling brand has seldom been honored with a more acceptable slapstick.

"The Corsican Brothers." (Imp. Three reels. Fri., May 14.)—Reviewed at length in a previous issue.

"A Stranger in the Camp." (Victor. Fri., May 14.)—A clubman, much the worse for wear, lands in a lumber camp, clothed in a dress suit. He is made the cook of the establishment and when the sheriff arrives looking for a murderer the officer believes that he is the guilty party. This reel is composed of rather meaningless comedy, which will amuse in only a few places. The acting, except for that of Brimsley Shaw and Glen White, is poor.

"Following Father's Footsteps." (Nestor. Fri., May 14.)—One of the average Nestor comedies produced by Al Christie, with a cast including Lee Moran, Billie Rhodes, Harry Rattenberry and Stella Adams. The widower has a son and the widow a daughter.

The two older people get married, and then after complications have been fathomed the young people follow the example set by their elders.

"Framed." (Powers. Sat., May 15.)—A miner is cheated out of his gold by a gambler and his daughter, who later learns of his mother's poverty. She sends some money to her and later the miner realizes her generosity, and the story terminates happily. This is only an ordinary offering, which will entertain fairly well. Sydney Ayres, Doris Pawn and Val Paul are the principals.

"Nothing Ever Happens Right." (Joker. Sat., May 15.)—The renowned scenario writer dreams of his wife having incurred the enmity of two villains because of the gown she wore.

They try in divers manners to kill her, and her husband stands around rubbing his hands in great glee, because he believes he has found new ideas for his writings. This was produced by Roy McCray and is way below the standard of Joker comedies, mainly because the story is too ridiculous even for a comedy-dream.

Ernest Shields is the author, and does some good work, but he is not capable of lifting an awfully poor plot.

"The Jungle Queen." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., May 15.)—Marie Walcamp is responsible for all the thrills that are present in this wild animal drama produced by Henry McRae.

For entering into close proximity with wild animals Miss Walcamp's superior has yet to be seen, and in this picture she well upholds her title for being the most fearless woman in the films. The story of these two reels is good, but Miss Walcamp's daring demands the greatest amount of interest. Others in the cast are Wellington A. Playter, Sherman Bainbridge and Rex de Roselli.

"Where Brains Are Needed." (Big U. Two reel. Sun., May 16.)—The detective who is discharged from the force because of his age, goes in search of evidence when his daughter is accused of robbing her mistress, and discovers the real thieves, and by this act he regains his position on the force.

Murdock MacQuarrie produced this besides playing the part of the detective. His portrayal of that character is most convincing and pleasant to watch. The picture, too, is put on very well, and the action never tires.

Agnes Vernon plays the daughter. This feature ought to take well in any house, as it contains both heart interest and exciting action, supplemented by good acting and direction.

MISCELLANEOUS

"Rafferty Stops a Marathon Runner." (All-Celtic.)—This is the second of the All-Celtic series of comedies. Rafferty has an amusing time with an escaped inmate of an insane asylum who thinks he is a Marathon runner and a real runner whom Rafferty thinks is the "nut."

There is plenty of good, clean fun in the picture. It stands high among one-reel comedies. In the cast are Joseph Sullivan, Laurie Mackin, Charles A. Mason, Billy Bowers, W. P. Lewis, Resi Vern, A. E. Sprague, Pat Foy, Tommie Mullens, Charlie Craig and John J. Eller and Lawson Robertson, the professional athletes.

LUBIN

LIBERTY BELL Features

"LIBERTY BELL" is the name we have chosen to identify those Lubin photo plays of unusually high quality (of 4 reels or more) with famous theatrical stars in the leading roles, to be released through the V. L. S. E. Inc.

For the present we are offering

"The Eagle's Nest"

in 6 parts, which is playing to packed houses in all parts of the country. "The Eagle's Nest" featuring Edwin Arden and Romaine Fielding is one of the most picturesque and thrilling dramas ever shown on the screen. The scenic effects are notably beautiful, having been photographed principally in the world famous "Garden of the Gods."

Also

from the celebrated play of the same name by George Ade, featuring Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer. "The College Widow" is unquestionably the greatest college picture shown. It comprises an exciting football game, a "snake dance" of nearly 10,000 students and the most sensational fire scene ever pictured.

The Lubin LIBERTY BELL feature for release June 7th is Cecil Raleigh's successful comedy drama

with the popular and famous star, Rose Coghlan, in the cast.

Keystone Exhibitors to Hold Convention in Reading

League Members Expected to Turn Out in Force in June—Two Floors of Rajah Temple Engaged for Event—Parade a Feature

Harrisburg, Pa., May 5.

THIS city is going to be largely represented at the big state convention of the new Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, which is to be held in the neighboring city of Reading on June 7, 8 and 9.

This convention is going to assume the form of a sort of exposition of the motion picture business and the entertainment features will be most elaborate. One feature is to be a big parade and it has just been announced that the Keystone Motorcycle Club, a crack organization of this city, will have charge of the entire motorcycle division of the procession. The club is now in communication with motorcyclists' organizations in all parts of the state, lining them up for the big time.

Frank A. Gould, of Reading, publicity agent of the State League, has been on the job among the picture men of the state. He was in Harrisburg this week and also visited Lancaster, York and other Central Pennsylvania cities where he met with much encouragement in getting motion picture men to accept invitations to be on hand.

Among the Harrisburg exhibitors who already have announced their intention of being present for the jollification are Isaac Silverman, owner of the Photoplay, and his manager, Clyde D. Klinger; Athens and James George, of the Victoria; Peter Megaro, Regent; C. Floyd Hopkins, Colonial; Rumford and Windsor, Arena; J. M. Lenney, proprietor of two theatres in East Harrisburg, and H. L. Sellers, of Steelton.

Rajah Temple, Reading, where the convention will be held, consists of two floors. The lower one will be used for the exhibit, while the upper part will be devoted to entertainment of various kinds.

Mr. Zerr is making up one of the neatest booklets comprising over fifty pages. These are to be of such a fine nature that they will be sold. Embossed on the front cover will be a large pretzel for which Reading is noted far and wide. The word "pretzel" as well as the real article will play a conspicuous part at the convention.

The Reading local is arranging to hold a grand ball on Tuesday evening during the exhibit. This will be one of the most unique affairs of its kind ever held in the state. Many of the screen favorites have been invited to attend and already numerous acceptances have been received.

On Monday evening a "Dutch lunch" will be given the visitors, while a banquet will mark the close of the affair, Wednesday night. At the latter it is expected to have as one of the guests Governor Brumbaugh and other State officials, in addition to Mayor Stratton and his cabinet of Reading.

One of the treats to be enjoyed will be the demonstration promised by "Pop" Lubin, who has agreed to send one hundred or more of his players, bringing them to the city on a "special." They will be accompanied by the Lubinville band. Arrangements for the Lubin delegation have been placed in the hands of Mr. Lubin's publicity representative, J. Allen Boone. Mr. Zerr, accompanied by Frank A. Gould, state publicity representative for the League, visited the Lubin studio in Philadelphia, where they were cordially received and assured that the Lubin people would do everything possible towards making the Reading convention a success.

While the exhibitors are in session there will be entertainment aplenty for the visitors' wives and friends. The delegates will be conveyed over the mountain railways and participate in the parade on Tuesday afternoon.

Among the exhibitors who are active in the arrangements include: J. C. Hansen, Carr & Schad, Frank D. Hill, L. C. Bright, Smith and Kantner, Chas. Graul, L. B. Reinert, Charles L. Snyder and Hen Johnston.

Don't take our word—read what the critics are saying of Edison Features in Regular Service. See the superiority for yourself.

A trio cast at their best

Mabel Trunnelle, Gladys Hulette and Augustus Phillips

in the

Remarkable 3-act Feature, "THE WRONG WOMAN"

From a famous English play of undying popularity

In "The Wrong Woman" you get the girl that won her way and hearts in the winning "Olive's Opportunities"—Mabel Trunnelle, now for the first time as an adventuress. In "The Wrong Woman" you get all the melodramatic punch that that series had, because it's put on by the same producer—Richard Ridgely. But you get more—you get pictorial beauty blended into punchful situation—situations scenarioized to their brimful of suspenseful power—scenes and situations that pull one along with bated breath. In short, "It's a Ridgely picture," with three artists—Mabel Trunnelle, Gladys Hulette and Augustus Phillips to place into screen life a remarkable plot, masterly produced—not to overlook so good a villain as George Wright whom we all can cordially dislike for his true-to-life smoothness. Released Friday, May 21st—3000 feet.

Another screen proof—right before our very eyes—that the new life thrilling the Edison program is due to their hard and fast—perhaps old-fashioned, but thoroughly honest belief that it pays in the end to "Feature Features of Strength—Not Length." Seeing is believing, Mr. Exhibitor. See for yourself.

Mrs. Wallace Erskine, John Sturgeon and Yale Benner in "Their Own Ways," of which the World said "There is a sweet naturalness, a delightful lack of affectation that will endear it to spectators wherever it is shown." Released Tuesday, May 18th.—1000 feet.

Raymond McKee and Dallas Welford in the comedy, "A Hazardous Courtship." Released Saturday, May 22nd—1000 feet.

Wadsworth and Housman in the comedy, "Chinks and Chickens." Released Wednesday, May 19th—1000 feet.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

Pasadena, Cal., Has Theatre For Millionaires

A THEATRE built and furnished especially to cater to the desires of a colony of millionaires has been opened at Pasadena, Cal., and very fittingly it has been named the Strand, the theatre beautiful, after the New York City theatre of the same name. J. M. Root is lessee and manager.

The building is owned by Frank Dale, a Pasadena man, and is located at 434 Colorado street, a few steps from the new Maryland Hotel, rebuilt on the site of the one destroyed by fire early this year, near other popular winter hostelries of the foot hill city, and but one block from the centre of the retail district of the city.

EXTERIOR, THE STRAND, PASADENA, CAL.

The plans were drawn by Train and Williams, architects, Exchange building, Los Angeles, and the construction work and finishing was done by the contracting firm of H. H. Hines, Inc., with offices in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The building, 65 x 120 feet, is of class A construction, with a store room on each side of the lobby, offices on the second floor, and a deep basement under the entire structure, needed for the ventilating and heating system installed.

Complete Ventilation System Installed

In the planning of the building special stress was laid on the ventilating and heating systems, and it was finally decided to install the combined Ellingwood system, manufactured by the Buffalo Forge Company, Buffalo, N. Y., which makes it possible to cool the air going into the theatre on warm days, or heat it on cold days.

All air for the theatre is drawn in from the roof through a number of sprays of water, and by another suction fan is forced into the theatre, entering through a series of mushroom radiators, one of which is placed under every third seat.

In passing through the water, before entering the theatre, the air is cooled to the extent of thirty or forty degrees. It then passes over a heating system, in which oil is used for fuel, and heated to the desired degree.

Entering the theatre as it does through the many radiators no draughts are caused, and at the same time the foul air is forced out the vents in the ceiling. The capacity of the system is fifteen cubic feet of air every minute for every seat in the house.

The lobby, vestibule, rest rooms, auditorium and stage setting are very attractive because of the simplicity of the decorating scheme. Throughout the colors used are ivory, green and gold, and there is a noticeable absence of the gaudy colorings profusely used in many places of amusement.

Extending from the building to the curb is a natural color copper marquise, with roof of prism glass that casts rainbows on the spotless tile flooring of the lobby during the day. The lobby has a wainscoting of Mexican marble and onyx, with rows of frames for photographs along either side, conveniently placed for the appreciation of the eye of the passerby.

But one other display—that of a large brass frame in the center at the front—is used in the lobby. The box office is of onyx, with beveled plate glass and brass fastenings.

Vestibule Is Striking in Appearance

Beginning in the lobby, extending through the spacious vestibule, and then entirely around the auditorium, is a frieze of free-hand decorations, consisting of musical cupids holding wreaths of roses, painted in soft tints. This is the work of S. Simmins, a well-known decorator whose work is to be found in many of the mansions of this and the Old World.

The vestibule, finished with a wainscoting of genuine solid mahogany reaching from the tile floor to within a few feet of the tastefully decorated ceiling, is furnished with green velvet draperies and velour carpets of the same color.

INTERIOR OF THE STRAND, PASADENA

At the entrance of the auditorium, on either side, is a massive mahogany pillar, hand carved and fourteen inches in diameter at the base. In the center of the vestibule is a very pretty display of flowers, principally roses, for which Pasadena is noted.

The auditorium is divided into three sections, the main one being in the center. The back three rows of each section constitute the loge seats, where Pasadena-made rattan chairs of a very comfortable size and shape are used. Special attention was given here so that the section should not be crowded, and it

Decision Handed Down in Power Fire Valve Suit

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, Plaintiff, vs. C. R. Baird Company and Chester R. Baird, Defendants, before Judge Mayer, United States District Court, Southern District of New York, for infringement of letters patent No. 959,601, dated May 31, 1910. This involves the fire valve for the protection against fire at the entrance of the magazines. Judge Mayer gives a short history of the necessity for such protection and its development.

He goes on, "The prior art defenses may be divided into (1) prior patents, and (2) prior use devices."

"The paper, art (Granichstaedten patent of February 5, 1901; Hughes British Patent of 1902, and Weiser patent of February 13, 1906), neither anticipates nor negatives invention."

"The previous Power patent No. 809,981, dated January 16, 1906, was constructed differently from the device of the patent in suit."

"Eberhard Schneider produced three valves known as Exhibits I, J and K. Exhibit K need not be considered. Exhibits I and J doubtless put out fire—how efficiently is problematic—but they do not prevent scratching and they are sufficiently crude to be a long distance away from the Power fire valve."

Judge Mayer then goes on to say that Mr. Power did something which Mr. Schneider did not do and his failure "is, to my mind, convincing proof that what Power accomplished in this regard was invention," as far as Schneider is concerned.

Judge Mayer then considered Exhibit O, the valve made by Earle M. Wooden, and states, "If prior use (not merely experimental), of the Wooden valve had been successfully established, I would have had no doubt that the Power patent would have been invalid as against Wooden's valve."

He then goes on to give the history of Wooden's work and his invention, which was used according to the testimony at Port Chester, New York, and in Nilsson Hall, in New York City. This latter place proved to be Teutonia Hall, and not Nilsson.

Judge Mayer goes on to say, "By a process of elimination the plaintiff succeeded in creating substantial doubt as to the correctness of Wooden's testimony in respect of the Port Chester exhibition, and as to that I have an affirmative doubt."

"I do not wish to be understood as stating that I do not believe that Wooden gave the exhibition at Port Chester, but I do believe that he is in error as to his date."

"As to the Teutonia Hall exhibition, I may say that it is entirely clear that such an exhibition took place, and, in this regard, Wooden is corroborated by credible and disinterested witnesses, but I cannot say that he has satisfied me beyond a reasonable doubt that Exhibit O was used on the occasion of the production of the 'Passion Play' at Teutonia Hall."

Beside the question of unreasonable doubt, Judge Mayer says that the testimony shows that the Wooden valve was merely experimental and shortly abandoned and that no attempt was made "of giving something to the world" as "he consigned the structure literally to the junk heap."

"As there is no question of infringement on this branch of the case, I conclude that this patent is valid and infringed by defendant company and, in so doing, I am of opinion that the transaction between the parties did not put the defendant company in the position of an implied licensee."

"I do not recall any testimony upon which infringement can be found against Baird individually."

Machine and Supply Jobbers Hold Meeting in Chicago

AN important meeting of prominent distributors and jobbers of motion-picture machines and supplies was held recently in Chicago at the Hotel LaSalle.

Among those present were: H. T. Edwards, of the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, and J. H. Hallberg, of New York; Lewis Schwaab, of Philadelphia; E. E. Fulton and Frank Huff, of Chicago, the latter representing the Kleine Optical Company; A. D. Flintom of Kansas City; Mr. Smith, of Clark and Rowland, and Ludwig Hommel, of Pittsburgh.

The general object of the meeting was to advance the interests, both of the exhibitor and the dealer, in respect to theatre supplies. Views and information were exchanged in an effort to determine what machines and supplies are giving best satisfaction to the exhibitor, and in the latter's interest to take steps to discontinue the sale of unsatisfactory articles. It was decided to introduce more vigorously and advertise the meritorius articles extensively.

Ways and means of stopping the unscrupulous dealer were freely discussed. This particularly applies to the dealer who sells machines and other equipment through misrepresentation. The practice, it is stated, is very common at the present time in adding inferior parts to well-known makes of machines.

An important matter which came up concerned the introduction of new and highly superior lenses, the cost of which may run up as high as $100.

These lenses will be introduced to the high-class exhibitor who pays a large service fee and wants the very highest grade of projection. Also steps were taken to provide for each dealer an ample supply of carbons hereafter in case of stringency. It is expected that other prominent dealers will co-operate in this movement, and meetings hereafter will be held regularly at frequent intervals and reported in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Michigan Twice-a-Year Inspection Bill Ready for Governor's Signature

Lansing, Mich., May 5.

THE Michigan legislature has adjourned for this session and has passed only one bill pertaining to the moving picture industry, although it had under consideration at least a half dozen, some of which would have been very disastrous to the industry, if passed.

The only bill which passed both the senate and house and which will become a law as soon as it is signed by the Governor of the State, is that which compels the state fire marshal to inspect moving picture show houses at least twice a year, a fee of ten dollars being charged for each inspection, but owners not having to pay more than twenty dollars in any one year.

The state fire marshal has been making two inspections annually for the past several years. A number of exhibitors called on the state fire marshal some months ago and endeavored to have the inspections reduced to one annually, but their efforts in that direction were unsuccessful.

The argument presented by the introducer of the bill was that two inspections would make the theatres less susceptible to fires, and that it was the duty of the state to take every precaution to make theatres absolutely fire-preventative.

An amendment to the bill was made, however, which exempts moving picture theatres for religious, educational or scientific purposes when shown from non-inflammable films and in special machines. This means that such machines as the Pathescope can be used.

This is a great victory for the makers of that machine, as some time ago a deputy inspector of the fire marshal's office stopped a number of firms from using the Pathescope machine on the ground that it was against the law.

Union in Phoenix, Ariz., at Deadlock With Managers

THE Stage Employees' Union, with which the operators in Phoenix, Ariz., are affiliated, has raised a question that is going to cause trouble in Arizona.

They do not want to permit a man who is an owner of a theatre to work in his own booth despite the fact that he is willing and does employ all union help, including the other man in the booth. The local contends that the owner must employ two men from the union.

They will not permit the proprietor to join the union and have a voice yet they demand that he sit by and watch a man take his place. It would work a decided hardship in the small houses where the owner finds it imperative to cut every expense and to operate his own machine.

The newspapers here and the manufacturers' and merchants' association is opposed to the boycott method. The managers' association has met with the committee of the operators' local and an endeavor is being made to adjust the difference with some chance of success.

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

Positions of Lenses of Different Thickness

E. K. L., Norwalk, Conn.—I am using a Simplex machine with the condensing lenses that came with it. When I was cleansing the condensers I noticed that the two lenses were not the same thickness and that the thicker lens was nearest the arc lamp.

Is this the correct position for this lens, or does it make any difference in either way these lenses are replaced in the mounting?

ANSWER.—The matter of condensing lenses seems a very troublesome one with operators, and when there is anything wrong with their projection they instinctively say it is the fault of these lenses, similarly with novice electricians, when something goes wrong, it is always said to be caused by a ground. It is true condensing lenses are at fault at times, but not as often as these are blamed for defective projection work.

The principle upon which there is need for condensing lenses is to bend, or turn, into the aperture the rays of light that would otherwise be lost. Light always travels in straight lines and but very few rays would pass through the aperture from the arc light, according to the distance of the arc from the aperture if a condenser was not used.

Another basic law governing the use of these lenses is to not refract the rays too much with a single lens, as spherical aberration will give trouble in the quality of light. These two conditions of things have been met by the use of a condenser, and this condenser split up into two lenses to lessen the spherical aberration.

Then a step further as to the best two lenses to use, and if both are not just alike, their proper relation to the other. Obviously, it is not proper to place them with the curved surfaces turned outward. In this position the incidental ray meets the refracting surface at too great an angle, and, too, some rays would be reflected and not pass into the glass. When turned with their plane surface outward, and this is the proper way in which to place these lenses, then it makes no difference as to which lens is placed first toward the light.

This, of course, is in respect to their plane surfaces only.

Gentlemen:

The Rex Film Renovator which you installed for us some time ago is the best thing the writer has ever come across in this line. It does the work so well that we call our films which have just been put through it "first run renovated." And aside from a very short distance from the beginning and the ending of the film it is indeed "first run" again. I can highly recommend this Renovator to any Exchange man who wants to have his cheaper customers satisfied. Our Exhibitors are now beginning to ask for "renovated" reels, and not for "age," as the Renovator almost entirely eliminates the age objection.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes for your continued success, I am,

Yours very truly,
J. A. ESLOW, Mgr.

There is a difference at which the refracted ray leaves the first lens and the incidental ray strikes the second lens when using two lenses of different curvatures.

Then, remembering the laws of refraction, the proper way would be to have the lens with most curvature first toward the light. You can prove this fact for yourself very readily by first adjusting the light and lamphouse with the short focus lens placed nearest the light, and then leaving the light and lamphouse in the same position, replace the two lenses, one for the other, and notice the diameter of the light cone on heat plate.

If the cone does not reach the heat plate, hold a piece of cardboard in the path of light and locate the point where it is of the diameter of the aperture. You will find it much nearer the lamphouse and a little less bright than when the two lenses are placed with short focus toward the light and a long focus toward the aperture.

Old Racing Man Orders Minusa Screen

JAMES B., better known as Jim Haggin, who formerly appropriated much of the spotlight in the good old days when horse racing was the absorbing topic of most red-blooded folks, ordered one of the famous Minusa Gold Fibre screens for his new house, the Ben Ali, which opened at Lexington, Ky., May 1.

This theatre's furnishings are especially luxurious, the seats themselves costing fifteen dollars each, not including the cost of installation. The Minusa Gold Fibre screen he chose was built according to specifications of his theatre under the personal direction of E. R. Anderson, the inventor of the Gold Fibre screen who now makes the Minusa Gold Fibre by a new process. This order was obtained through the Cincinnati Theatre Supply Company, and being a little late had to be telegraphed to the Minusa factory at St. Louis.

Operators in Houston Strike for Higher Wages

A STRIKE among the motion picture operators was on in Houston, Tex., last week. As a result, either the show owners themselves or non-union men operated the machines.

At 3:15 o'clock today, practically all union moving picture machine operators walked out, demanding the employment of one chief operator at each theatre at a salary of $17.50 a week until January 1, 1916, when it shall be raised to $20.

A relief operator at $10 a week is also demanded. Negotiations between the union and the exhibitors have been going on for several weeks, but with no results.

Motiograph Outfit to Be Shipped to Arctic Circle

EDWARD KEMP, Commercial building, San Francisco, is fitting up a unique Motiograph outfit that is to be taken to Point Barrow, within the Arctic Circle, as soon as the ice breaks, and installed in a school there.

Acetylene gas will be used for lighting purposes and a number of changes will be made in the regulation outfit to meet the unusual conditions that will prevail there. A large list of film subjects is now being gathered together here to be shipped North with the projection equipment.

Indiana Roller Skaters to Be Ejected from Theatres

MANAGERS of Indiana moving-picture houses have received orders from the state fire marshal, telling them to stop anyone from entering their shows who is wearing roller skates.

The order came as the result of the spread over the state of the roller-skate fad and is in compliance with the state fire prevention laws.

State Inspector Will Oust Smokers from Booths

COMPLAINT has been made to C. M. Baxter, Ohio state inspector of picture theatres, that certain Cleveland motion-picture theatre operators are making a practice of smoking while in the booths, contrary to both state and city regulations and subject to a revocation of licenses.

Managers are in favor of eliminating all operators who indulge in this practice from the ranks of the workers.

would have been possible to install fully one-third more chairs than are in use. The three sections contain less than one hundred seats.

All of the other seats are from the factory of the American Seating Company, furnished through Webber & Co., 514 South Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal., each being twenty-four inches in width, giving sufficient room between the rows so that the largest occupant will be comfortable.

The seats are upholstered with leather, and the eight hundred installed represent a fortune for the average exhibitor of the small towns. The rear half of the seats are reserved for the twenty-cent admissions, the price for the loges is thirty cents, with a general admission of ten cents.

Spanish Leather Wainscoting in Auditorium

The auditorium has a wainscoting of Spanish leather, finished with an attractive frieze, in which are the lights of an indirect lighting system. Near the ceiling is the freize of free-hand paintings.

The ceiling of the auditorium is subdivided by beams, which make thirty sections. In the six passing over the center of the house are ventilators over which are placed suction fans to draw out the impure air.

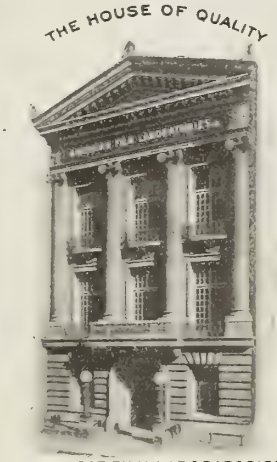
The screen is sixteen by twenty-two feet, finished with mirroroid, and has a patent tightening device which keeps it as taut as the head of a drum. On each side of the screen is a concrete statue lighted with ruby lights and over which a fountain plays. Back of these statues and above the screens are attractive scenic features which will be changed weekly.

To the right of the stage is a large comfortably furnished rest room for the lady ushers, program girls and cashiers. At the left is a room for the musicians and singer.

The rest rooms—for men and women on opposite sides of the vestibule—are finished with marble.

Before purchasing projecting machines and other equipment for the operating room, Manager Root made a trip to Chicago and New York City for the sole purpose of securing an equipment that would give the best results obtainable.

Installs Simplex Machines



With this end in view he purchased two Simplex projecting machines of the Kleine Optical Company, in Chicago; two double dissolvers and spot lights, of the Chicago Stage Lighting Company, Chicago; and a Martin rotary converter, which transforms a 220-volt alternating current into a 110-volt direct-current, making possible a perfect light.

The machine room, twelve by twenty-two feet, is also fitted with steel cabinets for protection of film not in use; an Elliott stamping machine for making stereopticon announcement slides; tools of all kinds; and affords the operator every comfort possible.

Attention was given to the construction of the room so that it would be perfectly ventilated, but at the same time free from draughts. One hundred and six feet is the full length of the throw.

A worthy feature added by the operator, E. W. Nichols, is an automatic device which closes all the projection and look-out openings, when not in use.

THEATRE MAILING LIST THEORY vs. FACTS

Suggestions in connection with circularizing motion picture theatres.

DON'T fool yourself into the belief that a cheap or borrowed mailing list, even if well recommended, is an economical investment.

In analyzing a number of mailing lists, I have discovered that they have been compiled through dovetailing lists that have been "swapped," resulting in an accumulation of "dead" theatres and a duplication of existing theatres—some under the name of the exhibitor, some under the name of the theatre, and some with only a street address.

Why not consult me regarding our service? I will prove to you that we can save you money.

Building and Furnishings

Typhoon Fan Keeps Florida House Cool

THE above illustration gives some idea of a most interesting and thoroughly unique method of cooling theatres and other public buildings. It might with great advantage be used for hotels, restaurants, etc. The illustration shows the cooling system used in the Montgomery Arcade, Jacksonville, Florida.

These giant blowers certainly look as though capable of titanic work and what they accomplish is in keeping with their appearance. A good idea of their size may be obtained by comparing them with the figure of the man to the left of the picture.

The building itself is one of the finest and largest in the south, exclusively devoted to motion picture plays and is thoroughly equipped. It is built by and under the management of the Southern Investment and Amusement Company, which operates a large number of theatres throughout the South.

The cut shows the blowers before being closed in with galvanized iron housings, which are provided so as to force the air down through the theatre as well as keeping out the daylight. The fans are located on the roof of the theatre, the air being blown down through the chutes, causing a perceptible breeze to be felt all over the auditorium and supplying a continuous flow of pure air—about twenty million cubic feet per hour.

The cost, however, for handling this amount of air with ordinary blowers or exhaust fans would be prohibitive were it not that the blowers used are very large in diameter and designed expressly for this work. In fact, it seems impossible that the small motors used would be able to operate these huge blowers.

During the cool season two small fans are used for ventilating the building, and the air thus forced into the building is heated when required by being blown over hot water coils, the water having been heated by illuminating gas, but minus the objectionable odor of gas.

It is the same system that the management provided for cooling the model theatres at all the international expositions held in this country. The apparatus was manufactured and the installation made by the Typhoon Fan Company, 1544 Broadway, New York, and was designed by Ernst Glantzberg, consulting engineer.

Posters for "Prohibition" Now on Exhibition

JOHN O'NEILL, the artist, has completed his work on the posters for "Prohibition," the feature production of the Prohibition Film Company, of 220 West Forty-second street, New York City. The posters have been finished and are now on exhibition, mounted, at the Prohibition offices.

Seldom has so artistic and complete a line of posters been finished. Specially striking is a twenty-sheet stand, showing the figures of the Demon Rum, the Devil, Temperance and Prohibition.

This is very artistic, and is sure to attract the eye. The four big figures, well executed, take up the greater part of the space. When used in the space usually allotted a twenty-four sheet stand, a four-sheet poster bearing the name of the theatre and date of showing may be placed at the end.

The selection includes two one-sheets, two three-sheets, two six-sheets and the twenty-sheet stand. All of them reflect credit on the artist and the Prohibition Film Company.

Greater Omaha Means Changes in Theatres; Increase in License Looms Up

THE consolidation of Omaha, South Omaha and Dundee, Neb., into Greater Omaha, one city, as provided by action of the last legislature, will affect a number of motion-picture theatre enterprises. The licenses of the South Omaha exhibitors will be increased to conform with the license exacted in Omaha.

Dundee, the exclusive residential district of the city, will in all probability be benefited by a motion-picture theatre—an enterprise the residents have long been reluctant about welcoming. A. C. Hartman, local promoter, has fought for years to get a theatre established in Dundee. Conforming with the village's rules, he at one time gained nearly every resident for the required distance from the proposed site and then found two of them had gone back with the forces against him, and he was shut out. Under the new arrangement this interesting fight will probably come to a close with Hartman the victor. He owns the site and is ready to build an ornamental theatre.

The management of the Empress theatre, in Omaha, has just finished spending several thousand dollars in a complete renovation and redecorating of the theatre. Painters, carpenters and cleaners were at work for two weeks, keeping busy days and nights, while the regular Empress show was being given at the American theatre, a legitimate theatre, nearby. Many more beautiful decorations were added.

The New Lyric theatre, of Sheldon, Ia., was formally opened last week. It is the best of such theatres in northwestern Iowa at this time and is managed by Buntley brothers well-known Iowa theatrical promoters. It is showing Universal films.

There are two lobbies. The outer one, with eight big plate-glass doors, is finished in mission style and mirrors and conveys an impression of rich splendor seldom encountered in a small town motion-picture theatre. Tile flooring is used throughout. The ticket booth is surmounted by plate-glass panels and a small French balcony. The floor is covered with heavy carpet, and full-roll chairs, finished in a silver gray, are used. The indirect lighting system, another new idea for small towns, is used. A matinee in the afternoon and two shows at night is the plan.

American Company Distributing Portraits for Lobby

THE American Film Mfg. Co. is supplying very attractive lobby displays in form of 14 x 17 portraits of its various actors personally autographed by each respective players. A normal charge is being made.

New Style in Construction Used in Omaha Theatre

WILLIAM HAYNES, a wealthy Omaha grain dealer, is at the back of the construction of a new motion-picture theatre, at 101 South Fortieth street, Omaha, that promises to be unique in the records of theatres in the central part of the country. The theatre seats nearly 300, the screen is in the front and the operator's room in the rear, and outside of the main building. To get seated the patrons must walk down side aisles, as the big, wide central aisle is cut off by a fire-chain, to be used in case of emergency.

Theodore Thomas, local motion-picture theatre man, will manage the new house, which is an ornamental building. The part of the city it is occupying is exclusive. Mr. Haynes, the present owner, insists in the newspapers that he is erecting the theatre just because he is a "movie fan" and wants a theatre nearer his home. He repeated the statement to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS correspondent.

"This idea in erection is being extensively followed in the east," he said, "and it will ultimately come to be the general plan followed here. It is much more convenient and safer. Of course, when the theatre is completed, I expect to turn it over to Mr. Thomas or some motion-picture man who will buy it and manage it. I think such theatres in this part of the country are excellent investments."

The new house will be opened to the public in a few weeks. It is of concrete and brick, declared absolutely fireproof, and is unusually well ventilated.

Lanier Building Theatre in Memphis

A HANDSOME theatre and store building is under construction in Memphis, Tenn., at Linden avenue and Bellevue boulevard, for James S. Lanier, a prominent druggist of Memphis. The structure will have a frontage of 75 feet by a depth of 100 feet. One side of the building will be occupied by Mr. Lanier with a suburban pharmacy, while the other side will be used by an up-to-date moving picture show. A winter garden, containing the largest dance hall in the city, is being installed on the roof, and is to be covered with glass. Around the roof will be erected a pergola, dotted with potted plants, flowers and vines in the summer.

Photoplay Theatres Here and There

JOHN H. KUNSKY announces that the name Strand will be used in connection with the new theatre which is now under construction at Grand River avenue and Fourteenth street, Detroit. On account of another theatre on the east side using the word Strand as a part of its name, it was thought that Mr. Kunsky would use some other name for his new west side house. Mr. Kunsky says that he had decided on that name for one of his theatres 18 months ago. He believes that its use now will in no way conflict with the east side house, where the word Strand is only a part of the name.

The new Strand will accommodate about 1,600 people and will be the largest exclusive motion picture theatre on the west side. Contractors will rush the work on this new playhouse just as soon as the excavation is completed, and it is anticipated that the same will be completed and ready for occupancy not later than August 15.

Mr. Kunsky now operates a chain of seven theatres in Detroit. The Strand will make the eighth and his new half million dollar theatre on Broadway will make nine, representing an investment of more than a million dollars.

Frank Mellon for the past ten months manager of the Gladwin Park theatre, at Jefferson and Gladwin avenues, Detroit, has resigned to become assistant manager of the new Knickerbocker theatre, also on Jefferson avenue. He is succeeded by Edward Murphy, one of the best-known managers in Detroit. Mr. Murphy has been associated with John H. Kunsky and was also manager for a few months of the New Empire.

$50,000 Theatre for Suburb of Detroit

A new $50,000 theatre for motion pictures is to be erected at once in Wyandotte, a down-river suburb, about 10 miles from Detroit. It will be on Biddle avenue, next to the public library. The construction of this new playhouse will be of concrete, brick and steel. In size it will be 75 by 120 feet.

The seating capacity will be 1,200, a small portion of the seats only being in the balcony, which will be exclusively for boxes. The Harris and Warren Amusement company is responsible for this new enterprise. It now operates the Marx theatre, which seats eight hundred. The members of this company are Herman Warren and Max H. Harris.

About forty members of the Michigan Theatre Corporation met at the Hotel Cadillac on Friday, April 23, and discussed plans for the future, President Blankmeyer announced that negotiations had about been completed with a number of eastern producing companies who would deal direct with the organization, thus eliminating the exchange man. He also reported that new members were being constantly added and that things were looking brighter every day.

Recent changes in Detroit motion picture theatres are: The Forest theatre has been leased to the Toledo Amusement company, which plan some extensive changes; the house was formerly operated by George W. Weeks. The Widner-Johnson company has taken the lease on the Kercheval avenue theatre; the Plaza Theatre company is now operating the Plaza theatre in Fairview, while Siggins and Bowles are operating the Royal Oak theatre in Royal Oak, also formerly controlled by Mr. Weeks. The Calvert theatre on Woodward avenue has closed.

Mr. Weeks is now without any strings and will devote his entire energies to the Universal Film company's Detroit branch, of which he is manager.

A new airdome for the summer season is to open at Iberville and Galvez streets, New Orleans, La., and its owner is J. F. Schmidt, who for thirty years conducted a bakery on this site. Mr. Schmidt is old in years, young in the picture business, but says he knows there is more "dough" in 'em than in bakery goods. He is installing two Edison late model projection machines and the United program service.

Building in the New Orleans Territory

The Dixie, Canal and Dryades, New Orleans, La., will be enlarged and remodeled to seat nine hundred people, which will double its present capacity threefold.

J. J. Fabacher, traveling representative of the United film service, out of New Orleans, is back, after a prolonged illness.

E. S. Moorman, of Baton Rouge, the capital of Louisiana, is erecting in the capital an up-to-date motion-picture show for colored folk exclusively. It is built entirely of concrete and represents a new idea structurally. The theatre is corner of St. Ferdinand and Government streets, and will throw open its doors May 9.

Airdomes are springing up over New Orleans suburban territory like the proverbial mushrooms. With the opening of the summer season, at least seven or eight new shows had been added to the Crescent City's already big list. There's a show at every corner, and sometimes two.

H. A. Wood, of Woodville, Miss., the little city being named after his family, is remodeling his motion-picture theatre. The American Seating Company has a contract to supply several hundred opera chairs which will replace the old wooden benches.

In preparation for summer business, the Princess theatre, Jennings, La., has installed revolving fans in all parts of the show.

Eight persons were killed in Birmingham, Ala., and twenty were injured when the east wall of the Steele-Smith structure crashed into adjoining buildings, pinning the dead and injured beneath its debris. The Steele-Smith structure had been recently destroyed by fire, with only the walls standing, and these were being removed as the preliminary step to the erection of Alabama's largest motion-picture house, noted at some length in a recent issue of the NEWS.

Catastrophe Caused by Wind Pressure

A rigid investigation is being made by the authorities. Building Inspector W. O. Matthews is quoted as having passed his opinions on the wall shortly before it collapsed as being "safe." The main facts brought out so far shows that the catastrophe was caused by pressure of a wind that was only of a 35-mile speed.

The new Pittman theatre being erected on the pier at Port Arthur, Tex., noted recently in the NEWS, was opened auspiciously on April 28.

The Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., installed an automatic ticket machine recently, and in carrying out a general plan of improvements was cleaned thoroughly throughout.

Houston, Tex., has its first woman exhibitor. She is Miss Elizabeth Johnson, formerly of Los Angeles, Cal. She purchased the Key theatre recently from A. E. Kiesling and will operate it. H. C. Norfleet will remain as manager, it is announced.

The Duchess theatre, on Grand avenue and Olive street, St. Louis, has been sold to M. Schoenberg, who intends to tear down the old building and put up a modern theatre and office, or hotel building. The Duchess was first a church, then it was made into a theatre, running vaudeville and motion pictures.

The property is situated near Film Row, where many of the exchanges in the city are located. As property is becoming more valuable every day in that neighborhood, the $16,000 rental produced yearly by the Duchess building when the theatre was running, was not in proportion to the value of the ground on which the building stood.

Mr. Schoenberg is said to have already received offers to lease a theatre such as he proposes to build, with preferably a hotel occupying the remainder of the building.

Oldham Opens St. Louis Hippodrome

Alf. V. Oldham, the new manager of the St. Louis Hippodrome, opened his house on April 25 with an all motion picture feature bill, presenting Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland." Mr. Oldham went to St. Louis from Louisville, Ky., and is an experienced theatrical man, having been actively engaged in the management of amusement houses in Louisville.

In some respects Mr. Oldham intends to follow the policy of the New York Hippodrome in offering the patrons of his house nothing but high class features, with perhaps the addition of good single reels of comedy or drama. "The Heart of Maryland" proved an excellent drawing card, running up the receipts beyond the ex-

Henry A. Pohlmann and Robert W. Kohlhauff have recently bought a lot 50 by 210 feet on Lee Avenue near Newstead avenue, St. Louis, on which they intend to erect a building that will cost approximately $15,000, and which will contain a motion picture theatre and two stores. Work on the building is to be started immediately, and the theatre is expected to open to the public early in the summer.

The West End Amusement Company is building a new theatre and airdome on Florissant avenue, in the extreme northwestern part of St. Louis. The airdome will be ready for business about May 10 with a program of moving pictures and some vaudeville.

The Lyric Skydome, at Delmar and Taylor avenues, St. Louis, opened with "Hypocrites," as the special feature of the initial bill, on May 1. The Lyric Skydome is a new place, and advertises as "The Garden Beautiful."

The Orpheum theatre is the name of a new picture house to be opened at Attica, Ind. Chase McDermod will be the proprietor and business manager. Willie Tinsman and Miss Ruth Van Reed will furnish the music, which will be piano and drums. Harry Kittle will operate the picture machine.

A new moving-picture show, The Elite, was opened recently in Huntingburg, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Willard are the proprietors. A splendid orchestra-piano and a Victrola furnish the music. The seats are comfortable and the furnishings of the house throughout were selected with a view of adding to the comfort, pleasure and entertainment of the public.

Activities in Indiana and Ohio

C. C. Hyatt, of Walton, Ind., has purchased a moving-picture outfit and has leased the Camden Opera House, at Camden, Ind., for three nights a week, where he will show pictures. Mr. Hyatt also operates a moving-picture show at Walton.

The Palace Theatre Company, Canton, Ohio, with $20,000 capital, has been organized by M. J. Grosjean, H. E. Hunker, J. Y. Skala, H. Behringer and Fred W. Ritzman.

Newark, Ohio, has a new picture playhouse—The Kozy—which was opened formally on April 24. John Tucker, owner of the building in which it is located, has leased it to William Wintermantle and William Kuhn. The house seats 400. Kriteron pictures are being shown, with Pathé pictures on Wednesdays.

The opening of the Orpheum theatre, Sharon, Pa., on April 23, under the management of Harry Durbin, proved a most successful affair.

The Majestic Theatre, on Edmond street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, St. Joseph, Mo., is to blaze forth as the Electric theatre not later than the first week of September. Meanwhile the building is to be remodeled on elaborate lines, and converted into a playhouse of some pretentions. There will be very little change in the front elevation of the theatre.

The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,900, with perhaps 700 seats in the balcony, and the others on the first floor.

The width of the auditorium will be increased by 18 feet, making the ground floor area 78 x 100 feet. The stage will be 60 feet wide, with a depth of 25 feet.

Plans have been filed with the building inspector for the remodeling of the interior of the Savoy theatre, Wilkesbarre, Pa., preparatory to the installation of a big, new organ. The work will start this week and will require about three weeks to be completed.

The Cliff Queen theatre, a large suburban house in Dallas, Texas, has been sold by J. W. Shivers to George M. Blackburn, formerly of Salt Lake City, Utah. The policy of the house will remain the same for the present. Mr. Shivers says he is going to California to see the sights and will probably not "do anything" until fall.

E. O. Kirkland has sold his interest in the Roseland theatre, Dallas, to his partner, J. N. Stewart, and as a sequel to the transaction, Kirkland has bought the Colonial, a suburban house in South Dallas, from P. G. Cameron. The Dixie theatre, Dallas, was sold recently by Mr. Rick to E. G. Caperton. Jesse Warden is still manager of the house.

Captain J. J. Hall is remodeling and reseating the Fifth Ward theatre, a suburban house in Houston.

E. N. Collins, who has the Dixie theatre and Garden airdome at Electra, Texas, will soon have a motion picture theatre at Thrall, Texas, with his own light plant and his own building.

The new house will seat about 500. Thrall is in the new oil field near Taylor, Texas, and now has a population of 250, but it is expected to reach a thousand or two in a short time.

Changes in Texas Theatres

The Princess theatre, Victoria, Texas, recently changed hands, F. A. Parson, formerly traveling for the Schumaker Grocery Company in that section of the state, taking over the house on February 15.

H. E. Vaughn has been appointed manager and has demonstrated his ability in this capacity by the large attendance his place gets.

The seating capacity is small and on the second show every day almost the standing room is taxed.

W. A. Bunnell and John Ray have let contracts for a new modern airdome at Decatur, Texas, and plan to have the house open April 20. The policy is pictures, with vaudeville and light stock occasionally.

Lionel Edel has been appointed manager of the Flash, a North Tonawanda, N. Y., theatre, and by booking "better" attractions is doing good business for the house.

The airdome proposition in Buffalo is a dead issue. There are none open here during the summer.

Buffalo, N. Y., theatres are commencing to see the advantages of advertising their attractions and are using more space than ever before in the newspapers. They are finding out that it is no use to book large productions without letting the public know about it.

Fire almost completely destroyed the Edisonia theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., last week. The damage will amount to $25,000, which is covered by insurance.

The Elmwood theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., last week celebrated its first anniversary. The theatre was elaborately decorated to represent a Japanese garden, a souvenir program was issued and a monster program presented to patrons.

Are your profits what they ought to be? —No.

Will the best music ever heard in a moving picture theatre help you?—Yes.

Then write to Chas. C. Pyle, Mallers Bldg., Chicago. He will tell you how to do the trick.

Artone Will Make Pictures of Song Hits

THE Artone Film Company has been organized in Detroit, Mich., with a capital stock of $100,000 to rent, sell and produce motion pictures. A feature of the new company will be that of making motion pictures of song hits or the picturization of songs.

In other words, the company will be able to offer theatre owners a vocalist who will sing latest songs while motion pictures describing the songs are thrown on the screen. The idea is certainly a new and original one. Everybody will recall the days of the colored slides that used to be shown by the ballad singers in the leading vaudeville houses.

The Artone company will make these pictures and will also engage the soloists, offering the complete combination to theatre managers. Already contracts have been signed with some of the leading music publishers in this country.

The officers of this new enterprise are men of prominence in the motion picture industry, who have studied the proposition closely, and who are sure to meet with success.

The president is William H. Goodfellow, a resident of Detroit for many years, and a pioneer in the motion picture industry in this country. The vice-president is Louis B. Jennings, a resident of New York, who is president of the American Film Laboratories, Inc., and vice-president of the Alliance Films Corporation.

The second vice-president is August Froebel, who has had considerable experience in both Europe and America covering every branch of the film business. The treasurer is William C. Canfield, a well-known Detroit young man, who is engaged in the investment business. The secretary is Francis Reno, a man of ability, who has been identified with the business for several years, and for the past six months has been Detroit manager of the Pathescope Sales Company, which concern recently gave up its Detroit office.

Making motion pictures of songs is only one branch of the business. The company will also have the United States and Canada rights to a number of foreign films which promise to create a sensation in this country. The first one will be "Princess of India," for which orders are already pouring in. The next will be "Nero," which is said to be on the order of "Cabiria," the scenes having been laid in Italy.

The company is now looking around for a suitable location upon which to build a modern studio. It is also planning to open a studio in the east.

Stanley in Quaker City Celebrates Anniversary

THE Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, is one year old this week and celebrates its first anniversary. Stanley V. Mastbaum, its manager, and leading spirit of the Stanley Company, has in one year jumped to the front ranks of the motion picture industry, making him now a national figure.

The Stanley was the first theatre in Philadelphia to raise the price of admission to twenty-five cents, and the standard thus set has enabled other houses to do likewise.

The Stanley shows first run Paramount program, interspersed with good comedies, educational and news films.

The orchestra alone is a musical treat, composed as it is of soloists captured from the leading musical organizations of the country. Two noted organists alternate with the orchestra in the musical program.

The following is the personnel of the Stanley Symphony Orchestra:

Conductor of orchestra—Harry W. Meyer (Philadelphia Orchestra).

Assistant Director—Albert F. Wayne (Chicago Opera Company).

Organists, Richard F. Bach (Stanley Symphony Orchestra); Rollo Maitland (Walnut St. Presbyterian Church).

First Violin, Alfred Lorenz (Philadelphia Orchestra).
First Violin, F. C. Cook, (Philadelphia Orchestra).
First Violin, David Nowinski (Philadelphia Orchestra).
First Violin, Benj. D'Amelio (Chicago Opera Company).
'Cello, Walter Schmidt (Stanley Symphony Orchestra).
Bass, John Fasshauer (Philadelphia Orchestra).
Flute, Hans Schlegel (Philadelphia Orchestra).
Clarinet, Albert F. Wayne (Chicago Opera Company).
Cornet, Fred Wagner (Philadelphia Orchestra).
Trombone, Wm. Schlechtweg (Philadelphia Orchestra).
Piano, Ignatius Kavanagh (Church of the Epiphany).
Timpany, Louis Eschert (Stanley Symphony Orchestra).

Theatre News From the Southwest

THE Olympic, Oklahoma City, has been sold by O. McLane to A. M. Goldstandt, formerly a clothing merchant. The new owner announces that he will enlarge the theatre and otherwise improve it, and that only feature pictures will be shown there in the future. A Radium Gold Fiber screen, such as is used in the Strand theatre, New York, will be installed.

Mr. McLane is interested in a motion picture theatre at Dallas to which he in the future will devote his time.

Last week the Metropolitan theatre, Oklahoma City, was transferred from stock to motion pictures, and the Overholser is now showing the Lyman H. Howe navy pictures, so that pictures now are the attraction at every local theatre, eight in all.

Fire which started in the Lyric theatre, Olive Hill, Ky., at 2 a. m. on April 23, destroyed the building at a loss of $7,000. There was no insurance.

The new Crystal theatre at Eighth and Main streets, Little Rock, Ark., was formally opened on April 15.

The Crystal theatre was the pioneer in the line in Arkansas. G. Jorgenson, who now owns a number of picture theatres in Texas, conceived the bold idea that a regular theatre devoted exclusively to motion pictures was a financial possibility, and in 1908 he put his idea to the test, with flattering results.

The Crystal has changed hands, and is now under the ownership of J. R. Carter.

Books Accordeon Player Over Picture Circuit

THE Piedmont Amusement Company, through its general booking manager, W. R. Wilkerson, recently completed negotiations with Pietro Diero, the accordeon player, to appear for a week in every house throughout its circuit, covering a period of ten weeks, as an added attraction together with its general run of feature pictures.

The contract offered Diero was, without doubt, the most alluring he has ever received, and although reluctant at first to accept, it was made so attractive he affixed his signature to the same. Pietro opened at the Piedmont theatre, Greensboro, N. C., Monday, April 19.

April 27, 1915.

Gentlemen:

If you are not now in receipt of two Motiograph Heads for repair you soon will be, I forwarded them to you yesterday. They have been in use for 4 years and I want them thoroughly overhauled, make them as near like new as you can, and for the —— sake rush this order regardless of cost and return by Express. I have two new —— machines in their place, but I can't get results. I have a record of having the best pictures in this vicinity, and I want to hold it. With the Motiograph I have been able to have a better picture than my competitors have had with —— and —— machines—so please rush the machines back and allow me to hold my record as my patrons are all kicking about the projection of the new machines.

Please rush as I am now satisfied the Motiograph is the best machine made.

Yours,
(Signed) ———. (Name given on request).

If a 4-year-old Motiograph gives better results than New Machines of other make—What about the Late Model MOTIOGRAPH? It will pay you to investigate.

How to Make Money
by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 17

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

Taking a Leaf From a Department Store's Sales Book

One of the wide-awake exhibitors handling the World Film program got an idea from a clean-up sale, which was held by a local store in which they offered the best sellers from different lines of merchandise.

He advertised a "best sellers week" in pictures.

From the World features which he had run, he picked the seven pictures that had appealed most to the people in his town and advertised that they would be run at his theatre, one each day, during "best sellers week" and give everybody in the town an opportunity to see the greatest pictures which he had had during the season.

The fact that he could only use seven features and that he used World Film for all of the seven, proved his faith not only in World Film, but in the argument which we have advanced for a year that a good feature will get more attention and more money when repeated than it did the first time.

Not only does this idea give you an opportunity to advertise the pick of great features, but it also will give you the benefit of the "word to mouth" advertising and the additional patronage that the features will draw.

One of the ideas which we have consistently advocated is to run a big picture more than one day. Three days' advertising and three days' showing make more money for the exhibitor.

For every picture fan who does see a big picture, there are three or four people who miss it for one reason or another. You can get them by giving them a chance to come the next day.

The advertising that every big picture receives will bring out a great many people who go only when something unusual is shown. Here are the proofs from people who have asked for re-runs.

"I cannot refrain from writing you about 'HEARTS IN EXILE.' If possible I would like this back by the 23rd of the month.

"J. A. TOMPKINS,
"Princess Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo."

"We have recently begun running your productions for several days each and have done this successfully with practically all of your recent productions.

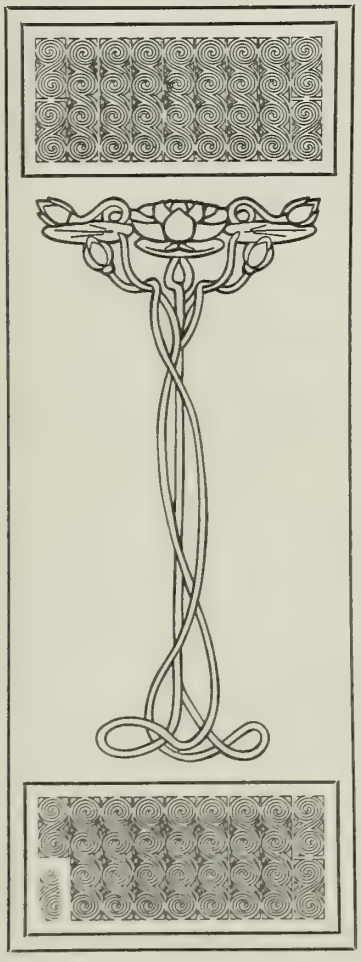
"Though our house seats more than 2,000, we find that a World Picture, properly advertised, will draw crowds for three or four days from a considerable distance.

"DAVID V. PICKER,
"Burland Theatre, New York."

"I consider ROBERT WARWICK in 'ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE,' one of the finest productions I have had. Will consider it an exceptional favor, if you will book it to us for return production.

"A. H. BLANK,
"Garden Theatre, Des Moines, Iowa."

"Critics said that they have never seen a better picture than BEATRIZ MICHELENA in 'MIGNON.' Would there be any trouble in booking this soon?



"S. H. FREEMAN,
"Princess Theatre, Urbana, Ill."

Here is a copy of a telegram:

"MIGNON RIOT CAPACITY HOUSE WANT A RETURN GIVE DATE LATER

"Dixie Amusement Company,
"Nashville, Tennessee."

I MUST LET YOU DO THE TALKING FOR ME!

THIS is my "Thank you!" to the exhibitors—everywhere. The letters you are writing me make me feel that my hope and your wish are realized. If the Thanhouser and Falstaff films deserve only one small part of the kind things you have said for them I am pleased—just pleased; that's all I can say.

¶When I read such telegrams as that from Mr. Graham, manager of Milwaukee's magnificent Butterfly Theatre, who tells me that my product fulfills my promises—why, pages of type become too weak to convey my feelings!

¶These are the sentiments that the Thanhouser and Falstaff releases will continue to justify.

A New Program Combining Quality and Economy

Associated Service

EACH WEEK TWENTY-ONE REELS — ONE FIVE-REEL FEATURE — FIVE TWO-REEL SUBJECTS — SIX SINGLE-REEL SUBJECTS—ALL COMEDIES AND DRAMAS.

This program will consist of the subjects made by seven successful manufacturing companies representing an invested capital of $550,000, whose products heretofore have been placed on the market by various releasing and sales companies.

By disposing of their products through releasing companies it was found the cost of prints to the Exchanges and State Rights men was materially increased. This not only increased the rental prices, but also made necessary the reduction of the cost of making the negatives.

In order to eliminate this unnecessary expense these seven manufacturing companies have banded together and will hereafter release their subjects direct to the exchanges. Such a plan means:

For Exhibitors—Big Reductions in Rental Rates

For Exchanges—Remarkable Decrease in Cost of Prints

For Producers—Additional Funds for Improving Subjects

Releasing arrangements are being perfected this week with exchanges in all parts of the country and the initial program is being planned. Announcement will be made in next week's issue of Motion Picture News.

In the meantime address all inquiries to

"THE GODDESS"

The Reviewer of the Dramatic Mirror is kind enough to say of the initial presentation of "The Goddess" at the Vitagraph Theatre:—

"The Vitagraph Company need not feel the slightest trepidation for the success of this, their first invasion of the serial field—for—judging from the introductory episodes, this picture will undoubtedly prove to be the greatest serial that has yet been produced. In the first place it has for a foundation a great big idea, and secondly—it is decidedly different from anything that has ever before been attempted. These two facts alone are enough to establish its success."

Mr. Reviewer merely reiterates our belief, which we have told you many times before.

The merit of the story is guaranteed by Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard and we need say no more than that the direction is by Ralph W. Ince with Anita Stewart and Earle Williams in the leading roles with publicity galore in all the leading newspapers.

Graustark, the Story of A Love Behind a Throne

¶He offered to lay down his life for the woman he loved!

¶No greater test of a man than this can be made. It is the supreme sacrifice.

¶What woman does not thrill to the love of a man willing to die that she might be happy?

¶What man is not carried to the loftiest heights of sentiment by such devotion and sacrifice?

¶All the world is akin and a really great love is the one emotion that stirs the depths of every heart. It is uplifting, enobling, inspiring.

¶This is the story George Barr McCutcheon tells in Essanay's six-reel photoplay, "Graustark." Grenfall Lorry, the young American, loves a princess. He is young, rich and has everything to live for. Yet because of his great love he offers his life to save a woman.

¶This is the emotion that stirs that indescribable something in all spectators and holds them tense and forgetful of everything else in the world. This is what lifts "Graustark" from the ordinary and stamps it a GREAT play.

¶ Essanay has studied public sentiment. It is marching to the tune of progress. It has discarded "old time stuff." It has leaped from the sinking morass of worn out theories to the solid ground of new desires.

¶ The public today demands clean photoplays. Questionable scenes offend many while plays of high moral sentiment please all.

¶ The public insists that all plays be of a high standard. One poor play alienates your spectators. Everyone must be up to the mark.

¶ The people now insist on real drama and comedy. They want plays that mean something, plays with a plot, plays that tell a story of real happenings of real people. The joys and sorrows and comedies of life are what interest all.

¶ This is what Essanay is doing. This is how Essanay makes money for you.

¶ Its plays are ALL clean. You see no Essanay rejections by the Censor boards. They are made clean to start with.

¶ Its plays are standardized. Each must come up to that standard before Essanay will release it. You can depend on an Essanay play every time. You take no chances of a poor play being mixed in with the good.

¶ Essanay plays are taken from stories and novels of the most popular authors. They are dramatized, not scenarioized, by real playwrights. Essanay insists on plays that are full of human interest.

¶ They must contain thrilling action and dramatic intensity. They must contain a human problem.

A Trade Paper's Field of Service

THERE are many, in this business, who do not know just what and why a trade paper is, and what it should be.

For their edification I give here a few letters, which "read between the lines."

THE first is from a busy man, the President of Maine Theatres, Inc., owners and lessees of dramatic stock and picture theatres.

He says:

"Interested in other lines of business as I am, it is very seldom that I am able to take the time to look through but casually any trade magazines.

"I feel, however, that your magazine is a credit to the moving picture business, and I can frankly say that I am reading same with more interest than I have ever taken in any trade magazine.

"I shall also see that our various managers in the theatre game in which we are branching out to a very considerable extent, will become permanent subscribers to your issue."

MANY trade magazines—in other trades—are "looked through but casually" by busy business men.

But the motion picture trade is altogether unlike any other trade—and so is its trade paper unlike any other trade organ.

Very excellent papers are published in the dry-goods, shoe, jewelry, grocery and other business fields. The dealer is a better and more successful dealer for reading them.

But—the point is—he doesn't have to. He is not compelled to remove their wrappers.

NOT so with the exhibitor of pictures.

He has to read his trade paper. He looks forward to it every week. He even asks for it "special delivery." There is no question about his tearing off the wrapper and reading it through.

And the reason is this: Unlike any other dealer, the exhibitor's stock in trade—his pictures—has a complete turnover every week. Each week, without fail, he changes [illegible] renews his stock.

[illegible] in the change the weekly trade paper is an abso- essential guide.

[illegible]TE these letters:

Kozy Theatre Company, Paducah, Ky.: "I cannot get [illegible] without the 'News.'"

s. A. Flannery, New Haven, Conn.: "I miss the 'News' much if not sent promptly."

rior Theatre, Richmond, Va.: "I have to rely upon n Picture News' each week."

Theatre, Flushing, Mich.: "We have got to have it."

WE have many more; almost identical in the statement. "I must have it"—hundreds of them, so many as to leave not a doubt that, away and beyond any other trade organ, the motion picture trade paper is a picture business necessity.

The exhibitor must have it.

BUT I would amend this by stating: He must have it, provided the paper meets all the reasons why he wants some papers so badly.

The motion picture trade paper must be a big, specialized, comprehensive, departmental service paper.

The old-style journal devoted generally and genially to a business won't do; mere reading matter won't do; personal write-ups to secure advertising won't do; mere typography won't do.

THE exhibitor wants and expects—correct release dates and competent reviews of all pictures; advertising service; projection and theatre accessory service; definite, first hand news from the production and exchange centers: new laws and court decisions; music helps; advertising announcements from all the manufacturers.

Everything must be accurate, clear and concise, nothing superfluous admitted. Your trade journal of today is a hand-book of indispensable information, handily presented.

IT is a big work, it takes a very large staff to give all this weekly information; but only in this way can a trade-paper be a regular and necessary part of the machinery involved in merchandizing films.

Otherwise, it is an expensive and unprofitable luxury to all concerned.

IT is because MOTION PICTURE NEWS is a service paper that it is a necessity and that we get such words as these:

Grand Opera House, El Paso: "It is the most up-to-the-minute motion picture paper. I am an old man in the business and have never found any of them that will take the place of the 'News.'"

Majestic Theatre, Charlevoix, Mich.: "Out of all the motion picture papers I get it is the BEST."

City Opera House, Centralia, Mo.: "The 'News' is the best picture magazine I ever took, and I have taken them all."

Grand Theatre, Valdosta, Ga.: "After receiving the third number of the 'Motion Picture News' we have decided that it is even better than our old favorite."

And hundreds like these!

Vol. XI May 22, 1915 No. 20

The Daily Press and Censorship

THE newspapers of Kansas are not disposed to permit the State censors of motion pictures to run amuck regardless, as MOTION PICTURE NEWS pointed out last week, even if those officials fancy they hold a special license to do so from the United States Supreme Court.

Nor is this attitude entirely confined to Kansas.

Very recently an attempt was made to establish a censorship of motion pictures at Fresno, the principal city of one of the most populous districts of California.

THE attempt failed. It failed because the newspapers of Fresno could not tolerate the principle of censorship and refused to countenance its establishment.

They met the "censorites" with a series of straight editorial talks to their readers, indicating censorship as unnecessary, unfair, and ineffectual.

The newspapers carried the day. The plea for censorship was rejected by the citizens of Fresno, and almost immediately afterward the city of Berkeley followed the example of her sister municipality and refused to have anything to do with such a movement.

THE following extracts from one of the editorials upon the subject in the Fresno Republican deserve high commendation for the clearness of their reasoning:

"Censorship, as an institution, is not wanted. A censor is by nature an autocrat, and should be resorted to only as a military measure.

"A single censor, or even a board of censors, would not accomplish what is wanted by those who object to the vulgarities of certain moving picture plays. Either the censors would lean toward one hobby, or to another, and would be a serious drag to the business.

"The judgment of either professional or of non-professional judges of pictures would be bad. A mere cataloguing of the objections made to various pictures would indicate how hopelessly different points of view are held, and how difficult it would be to find a board that could agree on a standard of judgment that would be sufficiently moderate to justify its own existence.

"WE do not think the objection that is raised that the picture houses have not time to make trial examinations of pictures is valid. Such haste in bringing in ill-considered pictures ought to be stopped by the managers, without being forced by law.

"Every manager should exercise his individual judgment on all pictures before he exhibits them, and carry his own responsibility of seeing that a praiseworthy standard of public taste is being attained. He can do it much better than either a paid professional critic, or a volunteer board of critics who do not understand stage performances or sympathize with dramatic art.

"The manager who admits that he merely caters to baser tastes in order to fill his house, should be put out of business, of course. The question is whether a board of censorship will get rid of such managers, if there are any such in Fresno. Would it not rather lead to a long series of wrangles, followed by a reversion to the present unhampered system with the public the general censor?"

IT must be a shock to such a lover of absolute authority as the self-constituted censor is, to find that the public press refuses to bow down to the image of censorship that he has set up.

He thinks that, because a legislature recognizes him by enacting a law permitting him to mind other people's business, he has become infallible and can do no wrong.

BUT he forgets that legislatures, even in a democratic form of government, do not always represent the people; that they have many reasons for passing laws besides the wish of their constituents; that you cannot remedy evils merely by making laws; and that a law badly enforced or applied can easily create a state of affairs worse than the one that existed before the law came into existence.

The self-appointed censor forgets, too, that it is the business of the press to see, report and criticise these things; that the press remembers though the legislatures forget; that ignorance, incompetence and stupidity are as severely condemned in the editorial columns as peculation and corruption; and that to be a real public servant requires something more than a love of office and a passion for dictating to others the conduct of their affairs.

THE newspapers of the country must, if indeed they have not already begun to do so, awaken to the fact that censorship of any kind, over any enterprise, is an unnecessary evil, at best, a last resort; and to the worth, permanence and dignity of the motion picture industry among the businesses of the world.

The Minneapolis Convention and Those to Come

THE Minneapolis convention, just past, will go down in motion picture history as a model convention.

In its total results, it constitutes an implicit challenge to the exhibitors who will gather at Reading, Pa., next month, and those who will come together at San Francisco in July, to make their conventions equal, at least, the meeting of the Northwestern exhibitors.

Pennsylvania has every reason to congratulate itself on the results achieved at Harrisburg since January 1. The National League, too, may look back upon the past year with very different feelings from those which animated its leaders in July, 1914.

Minneapolis Convention a Complete Success

Exhibitors from Six States Gather in Northwestern City for a Five-Day Assemblage that Proves to Be One of the Most Satisfactory of Exhibitors' Meetings—Green and Steffes Re-elected as President and Secretary—Many Excellent Accomplishments—Poster Situation Severely Criticised—Sixty Booths on Floor

Minneapolis, May 12.

A HARMONIOUS but militant and closely welded business organization that will work in every corner of six Northwestern States for the improved business and influence of motion picture exhibitors, that will fight the legal battles for the motion picture business in general and establish the motion picture play as the "legitimate" drama of the present day in the Northwest, is the result of the five days' convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the Northwest, May 3 to May 7.

The States are Iowa, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and northern Michigan.

In conjunction with the convention, the exchange men, manufacturers and publishers of trade papers conducted an exhibition which represented the last word in the film theatre equipment field, and the men in charge of the exhibits declared at the open meeting which concluded the convention that it was the most successful exhibition that had been conducted anywhere.

Notable Decisions Reached by the Convention

These are the notable things that the convention did after the old Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Minnesota changed its name and by-laws and became the Northwestern organization:

The delegates decided to center their efforts of the promotion of educational, and every other good quality of the films and to root out thoroughly every feature that is base.

They voted to ask manufacturers to tone down their posters, make them tell truly what is in the film and not to print posters that will cause adverse criticism.

Picture theatres are to be made comfortable, the entrances attractive and the shows clean and of a high grade.

Exhibitors will obey the laws that are for the general good and if they are reasonable. If they are not reasonable they will fight to have them annulled.

They will invite co-operation and receive suggestions and always work for a higher standard.

But all the time, first and last, they will fight unreasonable attacks, proposals for State and local censorships, Sunday closing, high licenses and all other legislation that smacks of graft or of hold up for city and State revenue.

While the State branches do these things, the vice-presidents in each State will take charge of active campaigns for extension. The sentiment at the convention was that if the motion picture exhibitors were solidly organized, there would be no more chance to hold up the business for high and unreasonable licenses than there would be to hold up the grocers and dry goods merchants.

The past work of the association in fighting evils, in giving commercial service to the members and in cementing the exhibitors into a strong organization caused the convention to re-elect the principal officers to carry on the work. There was little opposition to the re-election of Harry H. Green as president for a second term, and to the election of William A. Steffes as the secretary. The other officers elected are: Vice-president, V. B. Valleau, Albert Lea, Minn.; treasurer, O. C. Stelzner, Minneapolis.

Men on Executive Committee

The executive committee will be composed of James Gillowsky, St. Paul, retiring vice-president; D. W. Chamberlain, Minneapolis; H. P. Green, Minneapolis; W. A. Scott, Red Wing, Minn., and E. A. Nelson, of Duluth, Minn.

The vice-presidents for the States are: Wisconsin, J. D. Sherman, of Madison; North Dakota, J. M. Freeman, Hillsboro; South Dakota, C. E. Gates, Aberdeen; Iowa, J. E. Bolle, Dubuque; Montana, Mrs. Myrtle Vinton, Bridger; northern Michigan, D. J. Kulaszevicz.

The convention opened at 10 a. m. Monday with the great lobby of the West Hotel and the entire balcony crowded with exhibition booths, each in charge of a live wire. The dining room on the second floor was used as the meeting hall.

From the moment the doors were opened every inch of space not occupied by booths was crowded with spectators. It was conservatively estimated that more than 2,000 persons came to Minneapolis from out of the city to attend the convention. Many theatres were represented by four and five of their employees and these brought their families.

It was especially notable that the Civic and Commerce Association, the public business body that handles public affairs for the city was elated over the crowd and the convention in general and asked that it have its next meeting here.

President Green at the opening of the session in his hospitable manner welcomed the new members. Then requested D. W. Chamberlain and a committee to draft new by-laws and make such changes in the constitution as would make the association a Northwestern order. This was quickly done and then the convention was ready for business.

Trade Journals Thanked for Their Support

The first resolution passed was one recognizing the trade journals and thanking them for their support. They gave the privileges of the floor to the Motion Picture News at that time, represented by T. S. Mead, of Chicago, Western manager of the paper, and to the other trade papers. These men spoke for their papers and then with the completion of routine business for the conduct of the convention, the session adjourned.

BARTOLA COMPLIMENTS NORTHWEST EXHIBITORS AND THE "NEWS"

Chicago, Ill., May 8.

Editor Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—The writer has just returned from the Minneapolis convention and I am desirous of writing a word giving you our results and opinion of this convention.

In our estimation this convention was without a doubt the best Motion Picture convention that I have attended. The exhibitors in that section of the country are certainly alive. The manner in which they handled the convention was certainly wonderful. It seemed like everybody who had an exhibit there did business. We assured the management of this convention that we would take even a larger space next year and would not under any circumstances miss it.

The Motion Picture News certainly stands A1 with the exhibitors of the Northwest, and the comment was so favorable to your trade paper that we are more sure than ever that we have done the right thing in giving you our contract for space.

Very truly yours,
BARTOLA MUSICAL INSTRUMENT CO.,

California Books "Diamond" Solid for Sixty Days

First Time in Months That a Serial Is Run at a Broadway Theatre in Los Angeles——Hutchinson Pleased

Los Angeles, May 8.

THAT the faith of the southern California exhibitors in the drawing power of the serial picture is as strong as ever, is shown by the bookings made for the "Diamond from the Sky," the "Flying A" release of the North American Film company, which on the date of the release of the first episode was booked practically solid for sixty days.

The first run of this picture here is at the Woodley theatre, a Broadway house with nine hundred seats, where it is shown in connection with first run feature subjects of five or more reels. This is the first time since the early releases of the "Perils of Pauline," that a Broadway theatre has used a serial. Following the run for the week here the prints will be shown at San Diego, and will then go to smaller downtown houses, where the picture will find an immediate acceptance.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, with producing plant at Santa Barbara, was in Los Angeles the early part of this week, while on his way to the studio from Chicago, and expressed himself as overjoyed with the success of the serial today. He stated that twenty-one prints were needed for the New York City exchange and ten for the Chicago booking office.

"This indicates one of the largest runs of any serial," declared Mr. Hutchinson. "The popularity of the picture shows that the public appreciates a good thing when they see it."

Selig Plans 9-Reel Adaptation of "Mizpah"

A Company Will Be Sent to the Holy Land to Secure Atmosphere for Screen Version of Play by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

IN accordance with the determination of William N. Selig, that the Selig Polyscope Company shall be second to none in the worth of its productions, work is soon to be started on a massive nine-reel adaptation from the celebrated play by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, entitled "Mizpah."

Thousands of supernumeraries will be required in filming many of the scenes in this master photodrama, and the Selig company may send several actors and actresses to the Holy Land to secure atmosphere, as in the case of the filming of "The Ne'er Do Well," when a company spent some time in Panama.

"Mizpah" is one of the first of a series of big spectacles which will soon be put into production at the Selig studios. Colin Campbell has been chosen as director and Kathlyn Williams and Tyrone Power will have the leading roles.

A large cast of principals, including Wheeler Oakman, and about a thousand "extra" players, will support them. The settings are to be massive and will bring production cost up to the high-water mark.

When completed, "Mizpah" will be released as one of the Red Seal plays.

STERLING TO BE SEEN IN FAVORITE ROLE

Ford Sterling has returned to his old reliable make-up, that of the chief of police, and will be seen as such in the coming two-reel Keystone, "Our Dare Devil Chief," finished at the Los Angeles studio and shipped to New York this week.

ALLIANCE EUROPEAN AGENTS AMONG SURVIVORS

Word has been received by President Cobe, of the Alliance Films Corporation, that Edgar Hounsell, the head of the Anglo-American Film Company, and the sales manager, Edward "Waistcoat" Barry, of the English concern were among those saved from the disaster which befell the Lusitania.

Mr. Hounsell was thrown from the deck into the sea when the ship heeled over preparatory to its final plunge. He together with Mr. Barry, who had leaped from the ship with a lifebelt about his body, was picked up and landed on the Irish coast.

Several Alliance features were lost, including "Beulah," "Jack Chanty" and "The High Hand." These, however, were insured, and as duplicates were immediately shipped on steamers flying the American flag their first showing before English audiences will be delayed only a few days.

Spoor of Essanay Outlines Company's Policy

"Man Who Works and Seldom Talks," Reviews the Industry Since His Pioneer Days—Expects Great Changes in Next Few Years

Chicago, May 11.

RETURNING to his Chicago office from New York, where he, with other leading motion picture manufacturers, completed the work of organizing the V-L-S-E, to release special multiple reel photoplays direct to the exhibitor, George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay, and pioneer in the industry, consented to talk on the years of careful planning that made such special releases possible, and of the future of the photoplay. The man who works and seldom talks had broken silence.

"To the unitiated it might seem that this step was the work of a week," said Mr. Spoor. "Those who took active part in it know that it was the result of looking into the future years ago, of months and months of planning and hard work to perfect details. The final plans of organization were completed quickly, but the basis of these plans grew out of long and careful study.

"Essanay was making definite plans for feature releases more than a year ago. Photoplay rights on novels that had been stamped with the approval of the public and written by authors of world wide reputation were being purchased and the books put into dramatic form. Before the consummation of the plans several features had been completed and were ready to offer to the public.

"This is but one step forward in the line of Essanay policy. It is but one step forward in the progress of the photoplay industry. Other and greater steps will follow.

"The motion picture industry has gone through a more rapid evolution than almost any other. It now has reached a solid and lasting basis, but there is no limit to its continued advance. It is the man of today who is planning for the needs and demands of the future who will be making a success ten years from now, just as it was the man who dreamed of the possibilities of the present time ten years ago, who is in the producing business now.

GEORGE K. SPOOR

"In 1895, when I was first making pictures, anything that would move on the screen would pass. Moving pictures were a novelty and everything was accepted. Then was conceived the 1,000-foot film with some connecting idea, though loosely constructed, and the motion picture was born.

"This gave way to the photoplay of the present, a play with a genuine plot, a picture with a problem of human life to unravel. And the photoplay still is in the process of making.

"Essanay has fought to bring the photoplay up to its present standard, to make all its plays of consistent worth, standardized plays; to inject realistic action into its dramas and do away with the old time fake camera tricks. It has aimed to make its plays of high moral standard, to raise the artistic value and to better the photographic work.

"It is not content, however, to stand on this. It is looking into the future. It hopes to raise a standard as much in the next ten years as it has in the past. It is seeking to find what the public wants tomorrow, that it may be first on the ground to supply the new needs and the new demands."

Five More Stage Stars Join "NYMP" Companies

Frank Keenan, Willard Mack, Forrest Winant, Julia Dean and Truly Shattuck Enlist Under Kessel-Baumann-Ince Banner

Los Angeles, May 10.

ANOTHER series of important contracts was consummated this week for the Kessel & Baumann New York Motion Picture Corporation when Thomas H. Ince made arrangements for the appearance of Ince Features and Mutual Master Pictures of five prominent people of the legitimate stage.

Frank Keenan, known for his work in the stage productions of "The Warrens of Virginia," "Rose of the Rancho," produced by David Belasco, and since with Frances Starr in "Man to Man," will probably be the second of the five to work under Mr. Ince.

Willard Mack, of the present Broadway success "Kick In," and an author, producer and actor of note, is another engaged. Forrest Winant, late of "The Family Cupboard," and "Kick In;" Julia Dean, who appeared in "Within the Law," and since has been with the Famous Players; and Truly Shattuck, recent star of "Alma Where Do You Live" are others who have contracted with Mr. Ince.

Henry Woodruff is now playing at the studios in an Ince production, and Dustin Farnum and H. B. Warner will soon begin work in photoplays now being especially prepared for them.

The list of celebraties is perhaps the largest engaged at one time by an American producer and certainly bespeaks the confidence Messrs. Kessel, Baumann and Ince have in the future of the motion picture industry and multiple reel subjects or features. J. C. Jessen.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.

About twenty-five motion-picture theatre proprietors from various parts of Michigan gathered at the Hotel Cadillac last week to perfect plans for the Michigan Theatres corporation, recently formed.

The organization is to act as a clearing house for its members, eliminating the distributors and film exchanges. Although the original plan was to guarantee a producer the support of one hundred theatres, President A. W. Blankmeyer is of the belief that this can be increased to two hundred.

New Keystone Censor Law Before Governor

Daix Measure Passes Both Houses at Harrisburg, Repealing Present Autocratic Statute, and Making Many Concessions to Motion Picture Men—Board's Powers Considerably Curtailed by Two Last-Minute Amendments—Salaries of Censors Increased During Final Conference Over Bill

Harrisburg, Pa., May 12.

THE most important piece of legislation affecting the motion picture business before the present session of the legislature has been passed finally by both branches and is now in the hands of the governor awaiting his acceptance or rejection. It is the Daix censorship bill, which repeals the present censorship law, but substitutes censorship in a materially less objectionable form. While the Daix law increases the number of censors from two to three and provides positions for many more subordinates, it reduces the fee for the examination of a film from $2.50, as under the present statute, to $1, grants the right of appeal from decisions of the board, a right not conceded under the present autocratic form of censorship, and in a number of other ways grants a measure of relief to the motion picture interests, despite the fact that they lost their fight for the absolute wiping out of censorship.

Passed with Two New Amendments

The Daix bill was passed finally in the House early last week, along with the Maurer amendment. This amendment wiped out the provision that permitted the censors to put the ban on films that "tended to prejudice the public mind." The House's approval of this amendment made it necessary to send the bill back to the Senate for concurrence, and it was thought by some friends of the bill that this might endanger the chances of the whole measure going through the Legislature.

However, this amendment and another, offered when the bill was returned to the Senate, and further reducing the censors' powers by depriving them of the right to reject films that might "incite to riot," were finally approved by a joint conference committee of both branches of the Legislature, and only the governor's approval now is necessary for the bill to become a law. The conference committee also boosted the salaries of two of the proposed new censors from $2,000 to $2,500 and $2,400, respectively, the figures provided in the bill as originally introduced, but subsequently pared down in the House.

Reduction Gives Ample Revenue

Before the bill passed the House finally, one of the lawmakers raised the question whether the revenues that would come through a reduction from $2.50 to $1, in the amount of the fee to be charged for the examination of films, would be sufficient to make the board of censorship financially self-sustaining. To this inquirer it was pointed out that the revenues under the present law, which provides for a $2.50 fee per film, have been so great that there is a substantial surplus, exacted from the film makers through this fee, although censorship has not yet been in force for a full year. The exact amount of this surplus was not officially stated, but it is said to be about $100,000 in excess of all expenditures. This was enough to convince the lawmakers that the $2.50 fee was far in excess of what will be required to finance the needs of the board, and the bill was passed unanimously, the vote being 180 to 0.

The measure is backed by the present censors and is said to have received the stamp of approval of the administration, so that there is little doubt that it will be signed by the governor. It has taken the place of two other bills introduced in this session, one repealing the censorship act in its entirety, and the other making the fee for examining films only 50 cents. Neither of these latter bills will be passed.

What the New Bill Calls For

As finally passed the bill calls for a board of three residents and citizens of Pennsylvania, as censors, two males and one female, "well qualified by education and experience, to act as censors." One male member of the board shall be chairman and the female member shall be vice-chairman and one male member secretary. They shall be appointed by the governor for terms of three years. Those first appointed under this act shall be appointed for three years, two years and one year, respectively, the respective terms to be designated by the governor.

"The chairman shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars, the vice-chairman, two thousand five hundred dollars, and the secretary, two thousand four hundred dollars. Each member and employe of the board shall be allowed all expenses of whatever nature actually and necessarily incurred by him or her in carrying out the purposes of this act.

"The chairman shall appoint, with the approval of the governor, the following employes: Chief clerk, $1,800; assistant clerk, $1,500; assistant clerk, $1,200; two stenographers and typewriters, $1,000 each; two stenographers and typewriters, $720 each; one chief inspector, $1,500; three inspectors, $1,400 each; three inspectors, $1,200 each; one operator, an electrician, $1,400; two operators, $1,200 each; one operator, $1,000; two messengers, $720 each; one assistant operator or patcher, $600; one assistant operator or patcher, $480. The chairman, with the approval of the governor, may also appoint such additional employes as the work of the board may 'necessarily require.' The salaries of such additional employes shall not exceed $5,000 annually."

Scope of the Board's Powers

The bill provides that it shall be unlawful to sell, lease, lend, exhibit, or use any moving-picture film, reel or view in Pennsylvania unless the said film, reel or view has been submitted by the exchange owner or lessee of the film, reel or view, and duly approved by the state board of censors. The board is directed to examine all such reels or films and shall approve such reels or views "which are moral and proper," and shall disapprove such as are sacrilegious, obscene, indecent or immoral, or such as tend, in the judgment of the board, to debase or corrupt morals.

"For the examination of each film, reel or set of views of one thousand two hundred lineal feet the board shall receive in advance a fee of one dollar, and one dollar for each duplicate or print thereof, which must be applied for at the same time and by the same person. All fees received by the board and fines collected must be paid into the state treasurer.

"Any member of the board of employes thereof is empowered to prevent the display of a reel or view not approved by the board. Any person violating the provisions of the act, and is convicted before any magistrate, alderman or justice of the peace, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or more than fifty dollars for the first offense. For subsequent offenses the fine shall be not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars. In default of payment of the fine the defendant shall be committed to the county prison for not less than ten days nor more than thirty days."

The act is not to apply to any exhibition or use of films or views for purely educational, charitable, fraternal or religious purposes by any religious association, fraternal society, library, museum, public or private school or instituton of learning or by any corporation of the first class. The right of appeal to the common pleas court from a decision of the censors is granted under the bill as it now stands.

The Daix bill was officially placed in the hands of Governor Brumbaugh on May 6. Under the law the governor has ten days in which to sign or veto it, and if he fails to act on it either way in that time the bill automatically becomes a law. May 16 would be the last day for the bill to remain in the governor's hands, but as the 16th falls on a Sunday the final date is May 17.

The Daix bill, if it becomes a law, supplants the present censorship law and has the effect of putting the present two censors out of office. Of course, they may be reappointed under the proposed law, if the governor sees fit.

Will Breitinger Be Reappointed?

There is considerable interest being expressed among the picture interests as to whether J. Louis Breitinger, the present chief censor, will be reappointed in case of the Daix bill being approved by Governor Brumbaugh. It is recalled that some weeks ago the joint legislative committee of the exchangemen and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania asked Governor Brumbaugh to investigate the official conduct of Breitinger, alleging that he had overstepped his authority in office. The governor referred the complaint to the attorney-general department for investigation. The result of that investigation has not been made public, but the belief is expressed that the governor, in deciding whether to retain Breitinger as chief censor will be governed largely by the facts revealed by that inquiry.

"NATION" SHOWN 133 TIMES IN NEW YORK

"The Birth of a Nation" continues at the Liberty theatre, New York, where D. W. Griffith offers his mammoth production in the same manner that made it a sensation when originally given in this city.

The engagement has already assumed record proportions as its time at the Liberty is equivalent to a stay of eighteen weeks for an ordinary attraction playing eight performances a week.

Crowds Make Merry at Minneapolis High Jinks

Crowd Gives Itself Up to the Spirit of the Occasion and Enters Revels with Abandon of Youth—Prize Given for Best Comedy Costume

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Minneapolis, May 12.

THE social events of the Minneapolis convention of Northwestern Exhibitors were many and successful. The banquet on Tuesday night, May 4, at the Dyckman hotel, was attended by more than five hundred persons.

Otto N. Raths was toastmaster. The officers received an ovation, and then Charles M. Andrist, secretary to Governor W. S. Hammond, spoke of the motion pictures as educators, and C. E. Van Duzee reviewed the growth of the business, declaring that it was yet in its infancy. Mr. Sherwood, of Madison, told of organizing the association in his state, and W. J. Sweeney, president of the Illinois association, extended the greetings from his organization.

On Wednesday night the exhibitors and exchange men frolicked with the populace. At 11 p. m., when Minneapolitans are sometimes in bed, they were lined up on Nicollet avenue, cavorting in costumes and playing childish pranks. There was a parade in which motion-picture stars were imitated.

There were burlesque musical organizations and comely attractions galore.

The motion-picture theatres for once failed to make good and draw the crowds away from the streets. The crowds wanted to be the actors just once, and they were.

A. R. Nelson, of the United Film service, won the prize for the best comedy costume, and "Bill" Merrill, of the United, won in the group contest with his Kazoo band. The Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, drew the grand prize for the most handsomely decorated automobile. Harry Rowe, manager of the George Kleine attractions, won the prize for the best dress costume.

The women were entertained during the week by auto rides, theatres and visits to the art galleries in the homes of leading residents and the public galleries.

The grand ball in the main dining room of the West hotel closed the convention.

"Wife for Wife," Kalem, Set for Release May 31

This Three Reel Broadway Favorite, Featuring Wilmuth Merkyl, Will Take the Place of "The Haunting Fear," Announced in Recent Advertisements

INSTEAD of releasing "The Haunting Fear," on Monday, May 31, as was stated in the May issue of the Kalem Kalendar, and in recent advertisements, Kalem announces that "Wife for Wife," a three-act Broadway favorite feature will be issued on that date. "The Haunting Fear," will not be released until Friday, June 11, the company states.

The change was made because the issuance of the latter production on May 31, would have made it impossible for the Kalem company to adhere to its original plan which called for the release of a Broadway favorite production every other Monday. The June issue of the Kalendar, which is expected to be in the hands of exhibitors before "Wife for Wife," is released, will contain the synopsis of this feature.

"Wife for Wife," is the vehicle for Wilmuth Merkyl, a star who is well known to New York theatre-goers. He has appeared in such successes as "Sari," presented at the Liberty theatre; "Adele," which ran at the Longacre and Harris theatres; "Her Little Highness," staged at the Liberty theatre, and "The Debutante," in which Hazel Dawn was starred at the Knickerbocker theatre, early this season.

"Wife for Wife," written by John A. Stevens, is one of the best known plays dealing with the South, as it was before the war. It has had a long and successful career upon the boards. The fact that Kalem filmed the Broadway favorite production of it in Jacksonville, Fla., enabled that company to imbue it with the spirit of the part of the country in which the action is laid.

Associated Service Will Market for 7 Coast Studios

Bard Organizes Company Capitalized at $100,000, to Handle Films Made by Santa Barbara, Romona, Lindblom, Empire, Burke, Navajo and Banner Concerns

A NEW organization has been launched on the Pacific Coast under the name of Associated Service, for the purpose of marketing the pictures of seven producing concerns with studios in California.

Arthur Bard is at the head of the organization, which is said to represent a paid capital of $100,000, furnished by the coast exchanges for a period of six years. The producing companies represent an investment of more than $500,000. Mr. Bard is at present on his way East visiting various exchanges along his route, and contracting with them to handle the pictures on the program.

The seven companies merged under the one banner of Associated Service are the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, the Romona Film Company, the Lindblom Motion Picture Company, the Empire Film Manufacturing Company, the Burke Film Company, the Navajo Film Manufacturing Company and the Banner Film Company of Los Angeles, which concerns release their pictures under the Santa Barbara, Romona, Monty, Empire, Deen, Navajo and Banner brands.

The plants of the various manufacturing companies are already at work turning out films for the new program.

FEATURING PLAYERS IN PERSON

CENTRAL California motion picture house managers have taken kindly to the idea of featuring film actresses in person at their photoplay houses in connection with the presentation of films in which these particular stars had appeared to best advantage.

Recently Evelyn Selbie and Josephine Rector have appeared in houses within San Francisco, or a radius of 150 miles, and their presence, well advertised, served to bring record crowds to the theatres where they were billed.

Sometimes it is possible to book these players at a very reasonable figure. Floral offerings and receptions that go with these occasions serve to make the events pleasant to the stars and managers from other standpoints.

Nearby residents come quite a distance as a rule to witness these special nights or matinees, thus making for better business at the ticket offices.

Charles R. Holmes, who has a wide acquaintance among film people in California, reports excellent business on the tours of the actresses.

PLASTERS THE HOUSE WITH PAPER

ONE of the theatres in the North Side of Pittsburgh certainly believes in displaying its ware to the public and has done so with a vengeance during the past week. The theatre in question is the Elite.

In passing the theatre several days ago it was noticeable that more paper was used in the lobby than at any other theatre in the city, although the theatre is not one of the largest.

The paper used by this house for one day was as follows: Seven six-sheets, six three-sheets and fifteen one-sheets, together with all the other advertising slips that go with the paper and a host of fresh clean photos.

Universal pictures are shown. The management states he will not use other than fresh clean displays and the film company replies than on account of the way the paper is handled at the theatre and its quick return the management can get anything it wants at the Universal offices.

SATURDAY MIDNIGHT MATINEE PLEASES

THE management of Miller's theatre, Ninth and Main streets, Los Angeles, introduced a new one last week—a Saturday midnight matinee—which proved highly successful. All down town Los Angeles theatres enjoy a very good business on Saturday evenings, and most of the time it is impossible for them to care for the big crowds that wish to attend.

The innovation came as the result of very unusual business every evening during the first half of the week when the Fox feature, "The Nigger," and "The Exploits of Elaine," constituted the bill.

The attendance was so great that it was impossible to accommodate all, so Manager Fred Miller announced an extra performance to begin at 11:30. The attendance proved greater than the accommodations.

"The Nigger" was shown two consecutive weeks and the big attendance continued throughout the engagement.

DAILY EMERGENCY DRILL USED IN ST. LOUIS THEATRE

A DAILY emergency drill has been instituted at the Hippodrome, Sixth and Walnut streets, St. Louis, since Harry M. Earl has become manager of the house. At given intervals each day, when the theatre is cleared, the "safety first" drill is called for by a signal from Mr. Earl, and by this time the attaches of the theatre have become perfect in the drill.

The employes are also instructed in "first aid to the injured," and emergency cases of every description, and the plan is working out with amazing success. Mr. Earl has materially raised the standard of entertainment at the Hippodrome. The program maintained is vaudeville and motion pictures.

BOSWORTH'S BASEBALLS ARE BUSINESS BOOSTERS

THE latest advertising novelty from the Bosworth-Morosco offices is a baseball, to be distributed by exhibitors as a matinee booster, in connection with the presentation of their next release, "Little Sunset," a Charles E. Van Loan story, featuring Gordon Griffith, the child actor.

The balls are appropriately printed and will bear the compliments of the local theater. The demand for this box-office stimulator has already exceeded all expectations.

On "Help Wanted," featuring Lois Meredith, a novel car card, as well as a clever picture puzzle has been gotten up to create interest. The manner in which theatre managers are taking to these special publicity ideas plainly indicates their effect on the house receipts.

V-L-S-E PICTURES ANNOUNCED IN HANDSOME BOOKLET

MANAGER EDEL of the Strand and Palace theatres, Buffalo, signed a contract for the V-L-S-E service for the Palace Theatre, while the Strand will remain a Paramount house.

"Graustark" and "The Carpet from Bagdad" are among the attractions from the new service. The Strand and Palace are now putting out most attractive booklet programs, announcing the current and coming attractions. "The Goddess," the new Vitagraph serial, opens at the Strand, May 13, it being the first serial ever shown at this house.

Selig Arrives in Los Angeles to Attend Zoo Opening

The Colonel Will Remain Several Weeks to Watch Completion of His Million Dollar Wild Animal Establishment—Powers Reaches West Coast

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 10.

COL. WILLIAM SELIG arrived in Los Angeles, May 3, and will remain here for several weeks in order that he may personally superintend the completion of the public section of the million-dollar Selig Jungle Zoo.

Tyrone Powers and Mrs. Powers arrived here Saturday, and within a few days the production of a multiple reel subject, featuring Mr. Powers, will be taken up at the Selig studios. The title for this subject has not been announced, nor the supporting company or director. Mr. Powers will first be seen in the Selig Red Seal release, "A Texas Steer," which was filmed at the Chicago studio.

Martha Boucher, an actress of the legitimate stage, is making her first appearance in a subject being produced by Director Colin Campbell. This will be of two reels, and is from a scenario by Mr. Campbell. Following the making of this it is expected that sets for the next big subject Mr. Campbell will undertake, "Mizpah," will be ready for filming. The scenario for this subject, together with one adapted from Winston Churchill's "The Crisis," has been prepared by Lanier Bartlett.

The five reel subject picturing the wasteful and inhuman side of conflicts between nations, "The Hideous God War," from scenario by William E. Wing, and made under the direction of A. E. Martin, will be completed this week. Following this Mr. Martin will leave the Selig company and will take a long vacation, spending most of the time motoring through southern California.

Lloyd B. Carleton, for a number of years with the Lubin company at Philadelphia, as director, has been added to the Selig staff, and this week began the filming of "The Escape," an adaptation from the magazine story by Charles Belmont Davis, the scenario for the film being prepared by Emma Bell.

This will be made in three reels, and the leading parts will be played by Bessie Eyton, Edward Piel, Lillian Hayward and Edwin Wallock. This picture will also serve to introduce Mr. Piel as a leading man for Selig releases. He was formerly with Mr. Carleton in the east, and on the west coast has played with Santa Barbara and Majestic companies.

"The Isle of Content," a three reel drama, is being produced by George Nichols, with Al Filson, Eugene Paulette, Anna Luther, Howard Scott and Vivian Reed appearing in the principal parts. Of this cast the first three mentioned are all new people for Selig releases. Messrs. Filson and Paulette were recently of the Majestic and Reliance companies, and Miss Luther was transferred here from the Chicago studio.

Marshall Neilan, who since leaving the Kalem company, where he was in charge of production at the Hollywood studio, has been leading man for Lasky and Famous Players companies, has been engaged as director of production of the "Chronicles of Bloom Center" comedies, which will compose a series, one of which will be released each week. The cast for these will remain the same throughout the series.

"The Tiger Cub," a one reel wild animal story by Emma Bell, with Marion Warner, C. B. Murphy and William Scott in the leading parts, is being made at the Selig Jungle Zoo, under the direction of Louis Chaudet.

NEW STARLIGHT OFFICERS TO BE LOCATED AT YONKERS

The new executive and main branch of the Mittenthal Brothers Film Company, which is being built in connection with their studio at Herrito and South Waverly streets, Yonkers, is now completed, and was occupied by the firm on May 1.

The company will discontinue their New York office in the World's Tower Building on Fortieth street, so that both of the brothers may be close enough to the studio so that they may supervise the making of Starlight comedies for the United Program.

Famous Will Bring Out Many Plays of Frohman

Company in Producing Screen Versions of Late Manager's Successes, Numbering Hundreds, Will Try to Obtain Original Casts for Pictures

ALTHOUGH Charles Frohman's career as the leading theatrical preducer in the world ended so tragically on the "Lusitania," the great dramatic successes made possible through his energy and enterprise will be immortal—not only in the record of the printed and spoken word, but in a manner more physical and substantial.

Through his affiliation with the Famous Players Film Company, of which his brother, Daniel Frohman, is managing director, and which has already presented on the screen several of his dramatic properties, all the great Charles Frohman successes, several hundred in number, will be reproduced on the screen and thus preserved for posterity in essentially their original form.

Toward this end, and also because this was the often expressed wish of Charles Frohman in the discussion of the possibilities of the screen development of his plays, unusual efforts will be exerted by the Famous Players to obtain as many of the original casts as is possible in the film versions of these noted dramas.

With that unerring judgment and keen artistic appreciation that made him the foremost factor in the theatrical world, Charles Frohman sensed the vast possibilities of the silent drama, and was one of the first important theatrical managers to become allied with the new art.

His affiliation with the Famous Players Film Company shortly followed the alliance between that company and Henry W. Savage, and the interest he possessed in film dramas was already characteristically intense and sincere. With that devotion which he gave to all matters in which he was interested, it was commonly known that the Charles Frohman offices were already seeking for screen possibilities in the new plays they accepted for production, and the results of this policy will still be evident in the newer Famous Players—Charles Frohman subjects.

While firmly of the opinion that the appeal of the spoken drama would never diminish, he always emphasized the power of the screen to immortalize the genius of the great dramatic stars of the day. It is therefore of interest that his life work should itself in this manner find its greatest measure of immortality.

Pollard and Margarita Fischer Leave American

Director of Mutual Master-Pictures and His Wife Are Considering Offers from Three Companies, But Make no Definite Announcement of Future Plans

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 10.

DIRECTOR HARRY POLLARD and Margarita Fischer (Mrs. Pollard in private life) will, upon completion of their present subject, the latter part of this week, leave the American Film Manufacturing Company at Santa Barbara. They tendered their resignations some time back. Just what company these well-known players will be with has not been announced by Mr. Pollard, but it is stated he is entertaining propositions from no less than three companies.

For the past several months Mr. Pollard has been directing American Mutual Master-Pictures, and among the early releases will be "The Divinity of Motherhood," a more or less allegorical five-reel subject dealing with the question of race suicide.

A young woman—a prospective mother—is advised by an elderly society matron to resort to the use of drugs, and when about to take them, a drop falls on a plant and kills it. This action causes the young woman to defer the action, and that night her dreams take her to the garden of love. There cupid takes her through all parts of the garden, and finally permits her to enter the land of babyhood, where infants grow from flowers, and are delivered to and brighten homes of all classes.

The woman sees herself at the gates of heaven where she is refused admission. She is transported to the depths below and is given a glimpse of the hereafter of sinners. A particular feature of this subject will be the subtitles, all of which are of a poetical nature. The leading parts are played by Margarita Fischer and Joseph E. Singleton.

MACKENZIE TO FILM "THE GALLOPER" FOR PATHÉ

Pathé has secured the picture rights to Richard Harding Davis' novel "The Galloper," and Donald MacKenzie will start to work shortly to make a feature from it.

He promises a cast of more than ordinary merit in his picture.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

PEARSON OF OMAHA ENTHUSIASTIC OVER V-L-S-E

E. R. PEARSON, known throughout the central territory as former head of the General, Pathé and World exchanges at Omaha, Neb., has the following to say for the firm of Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., for which he is field manager from Kansas City, Mo., regarding its policies and his application of them in his territory:

"I am fully convinced that the four foremost manufacturers of the United States have every requisite at their command to make the highest class features possible. I am assured that no effort will be spared in making them. I feel certain that the moving picture patrons are very discerning and truly partial to all high-class features.

"Their patronizing theatres presenting such productions proves their careful discrimination. The exhibitor is very conscious of this discrimination, and is in the market for, and will be very glad of an opportunity to secure such high-class features as we have the pleasure of offering, and their patrons demand.

"I believe the exhibitor realizes that a truly high-class feature has taken genius and money to prepare, and that the producer thereof will have his liberal patronage, which when counted by the thousands of exhibitors will enable the manufacturer to make better and better productions. Thus, the exhibitor and manufacturer both not only keep pace with the rapid evolution of the business, but assist very materially in its advance.

"It has always been my custom to show my customers every courtesy, give them every co-operation at my disposal, to the end that their success means the exchange's success; hence in both I am vitally interested."

WEBSTER WILL BE IN CHARGE OF V-L-S-E IN BOSTON

THE Vitagraph - Lubin - Selig - Essanay, Inc., announces that arrangements have been completed for a new branch to be located at Boston, Mass. This will make the eighth distributing point for the features of the "Big Four," and will be in charge of Charles H. Webster, who is personally known to and numbers among his friends, over 75 per cent. of the exhibitors in the New England States.

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, is now in Boston negotiating for a suitable location for the offices.

The New England branch will supply the theatres in New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and in Connecticut, east of the Connecticut river. All of this territory has been taken from the New York office.

Announcement is also made of the permanent location of the San Francisco branch. These offices are located at 986 Market street, San Francisco, California, in charge of C. B. Price.

MARKOWITZ SUCCEEDS ALLEN IN LOS ANGELES

FOLLOWING the resignation of J. H. Allen, as manager of the Universal California Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Saturday, May 1, D. S. Markowitz, of Los Angeles, was selectel to manage the exchange by General Manager George Magie, of Universal City, who is also supervisor of West Coast Universal exchanges.

Mr. Markowitz, brother of M. L. Markowitz, manager of the San Francisco exchange, was formerly manager of the Los Angeles branch before it was sold to the Universal. Since that time he has been engaged in other lines of business akin to the work of managing an exchange and is well and favorably known throughout the territory. Mr. Allen, who was West Coast manager of the Warner exchanges before his connection with the Universal, has not announced his intentions, but it is understood he will go east, where he has several very flattering offers.

Joe Goldberg, formerly connected with the exchange, has been selected as booker and took up the work last week.

KRITERION OPENS NEW OFFICES IN MINNEAPOLIS

THE Kriterion company has found it necessary to open a new suite of offices in Minneapolis, and the equipment and artistic decorations of the new rooms in the Produce Exchange building will rival any offices of any kind in Minneapolis.

The Kriterion's business has grown rapidly in the last year and Fred S. Meyer, the manager, found it necessary to have an office that he can rely on to handle the increasing business. On the occasion of the opening Mr. Meyer entertained all of his employes at a banquet.

Many of the visitors to the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association made the offices their headquarters and resting rooms.

"GRAUSTARK" BREAKS RECORDS IN TEXAS CITY

WORD comes from C. A. Meade, manager of the Dallas office of the V-L-S-E, Inc., that "Graustark," the six reel Essanay feature, has broken all records at the big Hippodrome theatre in Waco, Texas.

Waco is an enthusiastic picture play city; the best of feature productions are shown there, and to break an attendance record is quite an achievement.

INTER-STATE FEATURE OPENS NEW OFFICE IN ST. LOUIS

THE Inter-State Feature service has opened a new exchange at 205 North Tenth street, St. Louis, and is ready to handle the business of distributing films with the utmost promptness. A feature is to be released each week by the company. Those now ready are: "Atlantis," six reels; "Lay Down Your Arms," four reels, and also the German War pictures.

A. Wittmann, who was formerly an exhibitor in St. Louis, has given up that end of the business and has been engaged by the Kriterion Film exchange of that city, as traveling representative. Mr. Wittmann has been an exhibitor for about eight years, and formerly managed the Monroe, the McKinley, and last summer the Paris airdome, which ran a very successful season.

Sam Schuman, who was formerly connected with the Kriterion exchange, is now traveling for the World Film corporation of St. Louis.

SAN DIEGO EXHIBITORS ATTEND "DIAMOND" TRADE SHOWING

SAN DIEGO exhibitors and those of nearby cities were given opportunity to see the first three releases of the North American Film Company's serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," at two previews given under the direction of Charles Cochard, who is managing the booking in Southern California and Arizona, when the films were shown at the Grand and Pickwick theatres, San Diego, April 24 and 25.

The trip in the Southern part of the State was a very successful one for Mr. Cochard and he succeeded in making a number of bookings for this big serial.

Upon his return to Los Angeles the early part of last week he received so many requests from exhibitors for another showing, that the second projection of the first three subjects was given April 27 at the Woodley Broadway theatre.

GOLDBERG LEAVES CASINO FOR NEW FIELD

EXHIBITORS in Michigan were surprised to learn last week of the resignation of Harry Goldberg, as general manager of the Casino Feature Film company, Detroit, which took effect May 1. Mr. Goldberg originally started in the moving picture industry in New York City. Two years ago he came to Detroit, representing an eastern film company.

When John H. Kunsky started his film exchange under the style of the Casino Feature Film company, he looked around for a live manager and succeeded in securing the services of Mr. Goldberg. Every exhibitor in Michigan is familiar with Mr. Goldberg, who is largely responsible for the success of features in this state.

He has always boosted features and has always advised exhibitors to show them. Mr. Goldberg is not ready to announce his future plans as yet. He will leave about May 8 in his automobile for New York, where he will remain for some time.

He has had a number of good offers to go with other film exchanges, but what he will probably do is to return to Detroit and open up an office, handling high-class features.

Edward Thaye, road representative for the Casino Feature Film company, also resigned and left May 1. He will accompany Mr. Goldberg to New York.

IRWIN PLANNING TRIP TO OPEN MORE EXCHANGES

TO relieve the Chicago and Philadelphia offices, which are already working to capacity, Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E will leave for Pittsburgh and Columbus at the end of this week, and if suitable arrangements can be made, he will establish branch offices in each of these cities.

While the Big Four expected a large volume of business, the direct booking system and the quality of the features have so interested the exhibitors that immediate action is necessary in reducing the territory covered by the eight branches already opened.

At the present rate, the eight offices will not be table to handle the volume of business when more features are released, and as rapidly as possible new offices will be established.

The old idea that the value of a feature decreases after it has been exhibited in any locality is being disproved in the case of the V-L-S-E features, now in screen evidence. In every instance where they have played return engagements, the value of the impression it made at its previous showing, has been demonstrated by capacity attendances.

UNITED BOOKING OFFICE SECURES 3 JACKIE SAUNDERS PICTURES

THE United Booking Office Feature Picture Company, Inc., with offices in the Palace theatre building, New York city, announces the securing of the booking rights for the United States and Canada of three new features, starring Jackie Saunders, "Reaping the Whirlwind," "Where Cowboy Is King," and "The Vengeance of the Wilds."

The company has also secured the state of New Jersey rights for Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter," and the New York state rights for "Les Miserables."

Branch offices have been opened in all of the principal cities.

KAUFMAN OF UNITED REPORTS BUSINESS EXCELLENT

ABE H. KAUFMAN, a former New Orleans supply man, who is at present manager of the Memphis office of the United of Louisiana, told his friends in New Orleans on a trip recently that business is excellent in Memphis.

The new Majestic, the $60,000 house in Main street, next to the famous Gayoso hotel, recently closed with Mr. Kaufman for the entire number of United releases for a year. They will begin when "The Eternal City" run is ended. In Little Rock, Sol Harris' house has installed the United program and in Nashville and Chattanooga business is likewise booming, says Mr. Kaufman. He has put on two extra men to help him in Memphis.

Walter L. Pavlowsky has been added to the Washington staff of traveling representatives. He graduated from the salesman's school.

Mr. Minkley until recently managed the Forest theatre. Some time ago Mr. Palley secured Herbert F. Fowser as traveling representative. Mr. Fowser was then president of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Mr. Palley also announces that the firm has opened a Grand Rapids office at 17 Hawkins building, which is in charge of Richard Broderick, formerly of Detroit.

The United Film Service company is a Michigan corporation, capitalized at $50,000, the principal stockholders being Mr. Palley and Dr. L. T. Schurrer.

FOX EXCHANGE IN DETROIT MAKES HEADWAY

GIVING credit where credit is due, the Fox Film Corporation is deserving of much praise for the "flying start" it has made during the short time that it has opened a Detroit film exchange.

The amount of business this firm is doing in Detroit and Michigan is positively amazing and astounding, considering the fact that it is only operating in that state for a comparatively few weeks. One thing in favor of the Fox Film Corporation is the fact that it has a live-wire on the job there in the person of Mayer B. Schlesinger, who has a long and successful record in the motion picture industry, having managed theatres as well as exchanges.

Mr. Schlesinger has appointed J. Friedman as a special Detroit representative. Mr. Friedman formerly managed the Victoria Theatre on Michigan avenue, owned by his father.

LANDECKER JOINS STANDARD FILM EXCHANGE IN FRISCO

J. LANDECKER, late of the United Film program, has been added to Jack L. Warner's Standard Film Company, San Francisco, with offices in the Mechanics building. He willl assist Manager Warner.

This concern is planning to organize a big producing company that will make slapstick comedies.

Sam Kleine, formerly with the United Film program, has also accepted a position with the Standard Film Company, as salesman.

"DIAMOND FROM SKY" SIGNED FOR 20 THEATRES IN INDIANAPOLIS

J. G. CONNER, of Indianapolis, representative of the North American Film Corporation, was in Louisville recently and signed up about twenty theatres for the new serial picture, "The Diamond from the Sky."

Exhibitors there who have seen the first few reels of this film are enthusiastic about it and expect to do a big business with this serial. The Novelty Theatre will have the first runs of this picture in Louisville.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen
Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May, 10.

VOCABULARIES of directors, photoplayers, technical men and especially the studio managers have been increased during the past week—or for that matter the past three weeks—by the creation of new curse words, and all because of the weather.

It could hardly have been more to the disadvantage of the makers of negative. When rain was not falling the sun was covered with heavy banks of clouds, and it has been almost impossible for exterior pictures to be made. At studios where artificial light is used it has been possible to make interior scenes, with the producing companies working night and day in order that no time be lost for exterior scenes when the light is right.

The "unusual weather" has caused the Universal to introduce a new department, the purpose of which is to signal to cameramen on all parts of the 400-acre grounds when not to make exposures. This is accomplished by raising a black flag to the top of the 100-foot pole on the laboratory building. On this are the words "DON'T SHOOT" in big white letters.

The flag is under operation at the direction of Lee Bartholomew, chief cameraman of the studios.

Plans are being made to entertain the Elks of California, at Universal City, on May 22. Features of the day will be a Rodeo on the ranch, followed by a barbecue and a Dutch lunch. Two prohibition bars will be installed for the occasion, and a special jail is being built where local judges will be imprisoned following their arrests on the grounds where they will be induced to go as guests of honor. All Los Angeles county dealers in justice have accepted the invitations and this is to be get-even day. During the day two comedies will be filmed with visitors playing important parts.

The Associated Ad Clubs of America subject from the hundred dollar prize scenario entitled "You Want Something?" is to be made in two reels instead of one and will be produced by Al. Curtis, of Joker brand, or Al Christie, of Nestor comedies.

Bosworth-Universal Serial

Now that the "Black Box" series of fifteen episodes has been completed, Otis Turner is to direct the making of Bosworth-Universal features of four or more reels, and this week takes up the making of "Shepherd of the Mines," an original scenario of four reels by Olga Clark.

This is the story of a minister who was induced to leave the pulpit of a fashionable New York church, by an aged friend of his father, to go to a mining town and work among the poor and uneducated people who badly need moral guidance. Hobart Bosworth will appear in the part of the minister supported by Helen Walcott, Adele Farrington and others.

William Worthington, who since joining the Universal stock company has been appearing in character and heavy parts of the special feature productions, is to direct the production of the former Turner company, which includes Herbert Rawlinson and Anna Little.

Mr. Worthington will continue to act as well as direct. The first story to be made is entitled "The Grail," which will be completed in two reels. This is a story of the regeneration of a man who finds his enemy dying on the desert. A vision of Christ aiding the helpless appears before him and the dying man is given aid. A love interest runs through the story, which is of a western character.

A comedy drama of one reel, "The Better Way," is being made for the Laemmle brand. The story is by Marion de la Parelle, and the principal characters, that of an unsophisticated shopkeeper and his adopted sister, are played by Sydney Ayers and Doris Pawn. The shopkeeper tries to ascend the social ladder but finding he is lacking in polish, rather than stand the jeers, returns to his first love, the adopted sister.

Jacques Jaccard, formerly director of the Kerrigan-Victor company, who has been at Santa Barbara in charge of the making of the serial picture "The Diamond from the Sky," has returned to the Universal and will again direct Mr. Kerrigan.

At the present time the leading man is very ill, but upon his recovery the making of "The Service of the Sword," from the story of the same title by George Bronson-Howard, will be filmed in two reels. This is the story of an American newspaper man aiding an heir to the throne of an imaginary principally to drive out impostors.

Christie's New Title

It is now Conductor Al Christie and not Director, for during the past week this maker of Nestor laugh capsules leased a nine-car Santa Fe passenger train and ran it up and down a twenty-mile track at will, incidentally filming "A Peach and a Pair."

Lee Moran appears in this as the chauffeur of a full sized Irish special—a handcar—attempting to run down the train on which his daughter, Victoria Forde, is eloping with Eddie Lyons. Another Nestor made this week is entitled "When Their Dads Fell Out," and the cast for this included Harry Reiter, Jack Conley, Billie Rhodes and Gus Alexander.

The Clark-Gauntier company is engaged in making the interior scenes for the two-reel mountain story, "The Mad Mate of the Primeval," exteriors for which were made in the Bear Valley region recently.

Clarence Badger has doped out another—number six of the series— "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" comedy for the Allen Curtis Joker company, and between showers these fun makers have been extremely busy applying the principles of pussyfootism to bring the criminal to justice.

During the absence of the leading woman of the De Grasse company, Miss Pauline Bush, who is on a honeymoon vacation with Alan Dwan, which is being spent aboard the yacht of Millionaire Spreckles of San Diego, leased for use in scenes for the Famous Players Pickford subject, "The

SCENE FROM "FATHERHOOD," FIRST UNIVERSAL-BOSWORTH FEATURE

Girl of Yesterday," a one-reel subject is being made.

This, "One Man's Evil," was written by Ida May Parks, and will serve to introduce Arthur Shireley, an Australian actor, who has been with the Kalem Glendale company, in Universal subjects. Other principals of the cast are Edna Maison and Ray Gallegher.

Working on Third "Coin" Episode

The Ford-Cunard company are now working on the third two-reel episode for the next Universal serial, "The Broken Coin." The castle of the ruler of the imaginary principality, around which the plot of this serial hinges, has now been built, and is one of the most elaborate exterior settings it has been the writer's privilege to see. The frontage of this has a width of more than one hundred feet, and has towers, domes, arches, et cetera, of oriental design.

"The Second Beginning," a two-reel story produced by Burton King and featuring Adele Lane, contains the story of how a young wife and husband were estranged, primarily by the ignorance of the woman of the ways of society into which she was introduced after her marriage. Miss Lane will be supported by Harry Linkey, Edward Sloman, and Gretchen Lederer. The latter, who was formerly of the Universal stock company, has been playing with the Vitagraph for the past several months.

The two-reel character study featuring Murdock MacQuarrie, filming of which was taken up last week, has been given the title "The Tinkerer of Stubenville," instead of "The Traveling Tinkerer," as previously announced.

The Henry McRae company is home from a tour with the Buffalo Bill-Sells-Floto circus, and are now working in the three rings, under the big top erected especially for interior scenes for "Peggy of the Circus."

The tent used is of the same dimensions as a real-for-sure "bigger and better than ever" aggregation, and the props consist of trained horses, acrobats, tumblers, and all the gold and red paint and flags that can possibly be worked in. The story is by Hugh Weir and will require three reels.

The Smalleys are making "A Cigarette, That's All," a two-reel drama from a magazine story of the same title. Both Lois Webber and Mr. Smalley are appearing in the picture, playing the important parts of man and wife who become estranged, when the husband finds a cigarette in the grate. An important part, that of the stenographer, is played by Dixie Carr.

Rain Delays Lasky Picture

The ball-room scenes in the palace of the King of Osia received the attention of the producing company filming "The Puppet's Crown," featuring Ina Claire, at the Lasky studio this week, and because of the weather conditions there were many delays occasioned by the necessity of taking the set down to prevent the costly furnishings from being ruined by the rain.

For an ordinary parlor interior this is not a big task, but when it is necessary to dismantle one that is 160 feet in length and 50 feet in width big loss is caused the producing manufacturer. In many of the scenes scores of extra people were used, all appearing in court dress. Friday, during shafts of sunlight, this company made thirty-five scenes in which more than three hundred extras worked.

Work was commenced last week on the filming of the Lasky-Belasco production, "The Fighting Hope," featuring Laura Hope Crews. The scenario, an adaptation from the original stage success, was prepared by the author of the play, Margaret Turnbull.

To cause an explosion that wrecks a building, erected within a glass studio, and still not injure one pane of the glass of the studio, was successfully accomplished at the Lasky studio last week for scenes in "The Clew," in which Blanche Sweet, and Edward Mackay play the leads, supported by Sessue Hayakawa, as the Japanese spy, and Billie Elmer the detective.

The plot revolves about an American inventor who discovers an explosive of great value to any government in time of war. The Japanese learning of this sent the spy to his laboratory where he secures employment as a servant, and learning the secret formula is to be sold to the Russian government, the spy wrecks the building, killing the inventor, himself and destroying the formula.

Work on Farrar Scenarios

The Lasky scenario department is busy with the preparation of scenarios adapted from the favorite grand operas of Geraldine Farrar, that all may be in readiness when the Metropolitan opera star arrives at the studio in June. Inasmuch as Miss Farrar's salary is the largest of any actress appearing before the camera, every effort will be made to complete as many productions as possible. "Madam Butterfly," will in all probability be the first subject filmed.

Charles Winneger, better known as Mr. Blanch Ring, has been engaged to appear in two and three reel subjects of the L.-Ko. comedies. Mr. Winneger came to Los Angeles, on Orpheum time, appearing with his wife in the sketch, "Oh, Papa!" It is not known what subjects will first be made, but it has been announced that Henry Lehrmann will personally direct all pictures in which this well-known vaudeville star appears.

The introduction of some new photographic effects has been worked out by Director William C. Dowlan, for the two-reel subject "Out of the Darkness," featuring Violet MacMillan, former "Oz" star. This Universal story, dealing with underworld life, depicts the reunion of a couple by the efforts of a cabaret singer.

The vision features, which are shown by the new mirror effects, show the thoughts of the singer in her fight to remain pure and keep out of the grasp of the clutching hand of infamy. She finally returns to her former home in the small western city to evade the temptations.

The Western Lubin players are engaged in filming the three-reel subject, "The Red Virgin," dealing with the marriage of an English nobleman, who in order to make claims for an English estate, causes his wife to believe their marriage was not legal L. C. Shumway appears as the father, Robert Grey the son, George Routh the heavy, and Helen Eddy plays the dual role of mother and daughter.

Whether a producing company will be sent to Japan, or all necessary settings for the filming of "The Darling of the Gods" will be made here, is to be decided within the next few days when the technical men complete estimates on the costs for the latter. As there are a large number of

JOHN EMERSON AND JEANETTE HANSON IN "THE FAILURE" (Mutual Masterpicture)

Japanese villas in and about Los Angeles and Pasadena, and there are hundreds of Japanese gardeners and many landscape artists competent to make perfect reproductions of scenes of Nippon, the latter way, it is believed, will enable the company to make the most desirable subject, as a visit to Japan would require the employment of Japanese as players for all the unimportant parts, and there is some doubt entertained as to whether this could successfully be accomplished there.

Griffith on Master Pictures

David W. Griffith is again actively engaged at the Majestic and Reliance studio after an absence for four months spent in looking after the showing of his recent thirteen reeler, "The Birth of a Nation," and is giving practically all of his time to the rehearsal of companies producing for the Mutual Master-Pictures program.

At the present time the subjects being made include "Pillars of Society," adapted from the Ibsen play; "The Fox Woman," from a novel by John Luther Long; "Her Shattered Idols," "The Failure," and "Up from the Depths."

"The Deadly Focus," a one-reel Reliance subject written by Frank E. Woods, manager of production at the R-M studio, is being made by Director Giles Warren. The rays of the sun artificially focussed on a given point brings about unexpected happenings. The cast for this includes Alfred Paget, Raymond Wells, and Claire Anderson appear in the important parts.

The attempts of a self-made man to force his son to adopt his mode of life and the direful results, are being pictured in a three-reel Majestic drama, being made under the direction of F. J. Grandon. Ralph Lewis appears as the father, C. E. Elliott as the son. The story is by Russell E. Smith.

Work was taken up last week on the filming of the second Ibsen play, "Pillars of Society," under the direction of R. A. Walsh. This play, written thirty-five years ago, contains a prophecy of the dramatist which has come true in practically every detail.

M-R Forms a Fishing Club

It was the belief of the author, as he expressed it in the character part of the leading woman, "Lona," to be played by Mary Alden, that woman in time would become independent of their husbands in the matter of support. Furthermore, women would become free thinkers. This subject will be made in four reels from the scenario by Mary H. O'Connor, for the Mutual Master-Picture program.

In "A Rightful Theft," a one reel Majestic subject, the finding of a coin bearing an ancient date, serves the principal character of the piece, the Widow Brown, to raise sufficient funds to prevent the holder of a mortgage on her home from foreclosing. Eleanor Washington appears as the widow, Mildred Harris her daughter, Paul Willis her son, and Charles Lee the heavy.

Members of the Majestic and Reliance producing staff have formed a Mutual Fishing Club, and leased a launch for Sundays throughout the summer, with the intention of catching all the fish in the Pacific, and particularly those that inhabit the waters near the Catalina Islands. R. A. Walsh holds the record to date, having landed a fifty-pound yellow tail in eight minutes.

A second company, under the direction of Nick Cogley, formerly director at Keystone and N Y M P studios, has been added to the producing staff of the Albuquerque company, and will make a one reel comedy each week, increasing the release of the Luna brand to two.

This week G. P. Hamilton is directing the production of "An Accidental Parson," in which a female inmate of an insane asylum escapes and plays the part of a minister with a mania for marrying people.

Before the real identity of the impostor is learned, she tied four knots for cupid, and was busy with the preliminaries for the fifth couple. Miss Dot Farley appears as the accidental parson.

Delayed by the unfavorable weather, the Charles Chaplin-Essanay comedy company, is still engaged in filming the two reel subject entitled "Work." Monday following a May Day floral parade, the most elaborate ever staged in Los Angeles, the Essanay star and company appeared on the streets to secure some big crowd pictures and nearly caused a riot.

As the word passed down street the crowds increased and it required the many extra policemen on duty to disperse the gathering, and they were not able to accomplish the work until many minutes after Chaplin and the other players had completed their work and departed.

Anderson at Essanay Studio

Hal Roach, formerly director for the Rolin Film company, has been made director of the second Essanay comedy company, and is finishing his first subject. The principals of the company are Marjorie Rieger, Bud Jamison, Jack Cherry and Harry Pollard.

G. M. Anderson spent Sunday and Monday at the local studio while on his way to Chicago, where he will remain two or three weeks. While here he stated that he believed a feature company would be added to the local studio and make multiple reel subjects for the V-L-S-E releases, but at this time it was not definitely known who the principals or director would be.

The present quarters of the company at 406 Court street are not proving of sufficient size, and within a short time the Essanay Los Angeles companies will be located in a new studio. Several different locations are now being considered and definite arrangements will be made upon the arrival of Mr. Anderson in Chicago.

Dan Sullivan, an assistant director with one of the Biograph companies, while aiding in the making of a scene, with the camera on one big rock and the players on another near by, was swept off by a mammoth breaker and in attempting to swim to the players was drawn into a whirlpool.

After being pulled down several times, he finally succeeded in clutching the rope thrown to him, and was pulled to safety. The most remarkable feature of the accident is that when Sullivan went into the water he was fully dressed, and when rescued all his clothing was removed except an under shirt.

At the time the company was making exteriors for a two reel smuggling story, "Wings of Fate," in which Allen Hale, Gretchen Hartman, Bill Nye and Viola Smith appear. The rescue of Sullivan was filmed by the cameraman, Charles Downs.

Another fisherman story, "The Changing

Sea," with Isabelle Ray and Frank Newberg, is being made by George Morgan. The Japanese fishing village near Santa Monica is being used for locations.

"The Price a Man Pays," is the title of a one reel society drama being filmed by George Reahm, with Augusta Anderson and Charles Perley as leads, for A B release.

Franklin Hall, leading man of the Biograph studio, successfully staged a thriller near Long Beach the first of this week, when he drove an automobile off a bridge into the Los Angeles river. This scene is for the two reel subject, "Mrs. Van Alden's Jewels," a modern drama in which Louise Vale appears in the name role.

Hal drove the auto down the boulevard at a speed of thirty miles an hour, and when he reached the center of the bridge he quickly turned the car at right angles and it went through the iron railing.

"Life's Law" Filmed

The Irish players were last week making "Life's Law," a one reel subject, the plot of which revolves about a fictitious invention. The leads of this Tony O'Sullivan subject are Clara McDowell, Charles West and Harry Carey.

A north woods story, "The Suicide," is being directed by Wray Physioc. Herbert Barrington plays the part of a dope fiend who ultimately takes his life. He is supported by Mary Pixley, Ivan Christy, Joe MacDermott and Walter Coil.

"Dollar Diplomacy" is a one reel comedy drama with Gus Pixley, Jack Mulhall and Irma Dawkins, the direction of which is in charge of Ed Morrisay.

After fixing the date for the Rodeo, to be given at the ranch of the N Y M P studio on May 16, it was recalled that the lease for the grounds was made on the same date five years prior, and the event will serve as the fifth anniversary of the founding of Inceville by Thomas H. Ince.

E. H. Allen, business manager of the studio, is in charge of all preparations, and is having the plateau, back of the studio, prepared for the event. This is fully two hundred feet above the Pacific ocean, and affords a natural ampitheatre for such an event. The menu for the barbecue has been made out by the Inceville chef, who will be in charge of preparation of the feed.

Busy on Mutual Masterpictures

Director Charles Swickard and members of the cast of "The Beckoning Flame," the five part subject for the M M P program, including Henry Woodruff, are spending this week on the Mojave desert, where scenes of caravans crossing the desert will be made.

When the production of the comedy drama of college life, "The Mating," is released, it should be very popular with Vassar alumni, for in this sets made from photographs of interiors of one of the dormitories of this famous institution are used. Bessie Barriscale is featured in this M M P, which is being made under the direction of Raymond B. West.

"Hearts and Swords," a two reel military melodrama with a Mexican locale, by Thomas H. Ince, is being filmed at the N Y M P studio this week. In this a girl takes the place of her brother, when he becomes ill, and attempts to deliver important messages to the commander-in-chief.

Lesser of Golden Gate Makes Rapid Rise in Filmdom

Man Who Also Manages All-Star Feature Distributors, Pacific Feature Film, Entered the Industry Seven Years Ago While Only a Boy

THE career of Sol L. Lesser, president and general manager of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., and Pacific Feature Film Corporation, has been, to say the least, phenomenal since his first connection with the motion picture business was less than seven years ago, while he was still a mere boy.

At the age of seventeen Mr. Lesser opened a small moving picture house in the Mission district, which he called The Union Nickelodeum. In the rear room of this theatre was laid the foundation of his large business. The great demand for the films caused Mr. Lesser to move to a more central location on Fillmore street, and subsequently to Golden Gate avenue, where the stock was enlarged and the Golden Gate Film Exchange organized, with the young man as its head.

For three years the Golden Gate Film Exchange remained at this location, continually increasing the stock and business connections. During this period there were only two programs of motion pictures being regularly placed on the market, one program by the General Film Company, the second by the Motion Picture Distributing Sales Company. The latter company was at that time experiencing some business difficulties.

Mr. Lesser foresaw the possibilities of an early dissolution of this company, and took a train to New York City, where he secured and brought back to San Francisco the best new releases of motion pictures of the Motion Picture Distributing Sales Company, which had gone out of business in the meantime.

After his return to San Francisco with the new films the business grew so rapidly that new and larger quarters were sought, the firm moving to 234 Eddy street, occupying the whole building, where he is now the working head and president of one of the largest motion picture film exchanges in the country.

Some of the past productions which Mr. Lesser has handled through his exchanges are Selig's "The Spoilers,," Vitagraph, Liebler's "The Christian," "Cabiria," Salisbury Wild Life Pictures, and many others. He is now handling all the past releases of the Alco Film corporation of California, and has just contracted for the output of the Metro Pictures corporation program and the George Kleine attractions.

Theda Bara and Company Go South for Fox Film

Director Powell Will Take Scenes for D'Annunzio's "La Giaconda," a Play Suited to Actress' Ability in Portrayal of Vampire Type

FRANK POWELL, of the William Fox producing staff, has left for Augustine, Fla., with a large company, headed by Theda Bara, the star of "The Clemenceau Case" and "A Fool There Was," to film the scenes of the latest Fox production, D'Annunzio's "La Giaconda." The play is intensely and fiercely dramatic. It contains the sirenic evil which is particularly suit to Miss Bara's remarkable powers in the Vampire type of character.

Few who saw her in "The Clemenceau Case" or in "A Fool There Was," can ever forget her striking performance of the two vampires of these screen dramas. D'Annunzio's heroine is different in degree but not in kind from these other two famous portraits which Miss Bara has contributed to the gallery of the silent stage.

This remarkable young woman, who possesses a type of beauty which is declared by artists and sculptors to be of an absolutely unique character, has become a literally international figure since first she burst upon us from Le Theatre Antoine, Paris, in the William Fox production of "A Fool There Was."

As Iza, in "The Clemenceau Case," she created even a greater sensation. Many of the newspapers throughout the country declared her to be the most wickedly beautiful actress in the world. Women besieged the theatres were "The Clemenceau Case" was being shown demanding to see the fatal end of the siren who had wrought such havoc in "A Fool There Was."

While Miss Bara declares emphatically that her true nature is very far from being that of a heartless Vampire, her reputation for splendid and artistic work in such roles, led to Mr. Powell's casting her for the evil genius in "Giaconda," whose beauty is as fatal as the deadliest poison.

Miss Bara is supported by a very strong cast of noted players, among them being Clifford Bruce and others of equal prominence. "La Giaconda" will be made a most notable production in every way and is expected to prove one of the most unique photodramas so far witnessed.

HOUSE WILL BE BLOWN UP FOR AMERICAN FILM

Director Ricketts of the American studios, has invited the general public to see a house blown up by dynamite for a scene in the four-part American distinctive creation, "The House of a Thousand Scandals."

A whole mansion has been erected for this special purpose, and as there is plenty of action in the scenes prior to the explosion, it is presumed that a large assemblage will be present to see the fun.

SPECIAL EVENT COMPANY NOW IN NEW QUARTERS

The Special Event Film Manufacturing Company is now installed in its new quarters at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

The company is equipped with a full line of motion picture supplies, and is prepared to contract for taking pictures of every description. Cameras are supplied by the day with or without operator.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

SUNDAY OPENING IS NOW LEGAL IN NEW YORK

THE Court of Appeals has upheld the contention of Justice Putnam, of the Second Appellate Division that the operation of motion picture performances on Sunday is legal. He goes a step further and declares, and is also upheld by the highest court, that the Legislature of the State alone has the general power to legislate against criminal offences.

The case rose in the city of Yonkers, where Wolden Kieley, manager of a motion picture theatre was arrested on Sunday, January 24, 1915. An admission fee of ten cents was charged for the performance. After his arrest Wolden through his attorney secured a writ of habeas corpus, this being allowed by Justice Almet F. Jenks, presiding judge of the Second Appellate Division the following day.

On March 12 the Appellate Division entered an order sustaining the writ and discharging Kieley from custody. It was the contention of John J. Finn, attorney for Kieley, that the ordinance of the city of Yonkers was invalid and unconstitutional. Kieley was manager of the Loweree theatre and was taken into custody while pictures were actually being shown.

There was but little delay in bringing the case to the attention of the Court of Appeals. The case was on the "order calendar" of the present term of court and was reached on April 14. The decision was handed down with others on May 4.

No opinion was written in the Court of Appeals, the order being affirmed. The opinion of Justice Putnam in the Second Appellate Division squarely disposes of the case and reads in part as follows:

The powers of the City of Yonkers, under its municipal charter, to regulate amusements and common shows, include a right to license an exhibition of moving pictures. The city ordinance (section 13), however, prohibits such a show on Sunday, and declares that every person violating this section shall "forfeit a penalty of not less than twenty-five dollars ($25.00) nor more than one hundred dollars ($100.00), in the discretion of the Magistrate convicting." The relator has been so arrested.

A license may be conditionally granted. It may be given subject to certain reasonable hours of opening and other limits upon its exercise. But the derivative power of a municipality to fine and imprison can only exist under, and in due enforcement of, authority clearly committed to the municipality. The intent that municipal corporations by ordinance can supersede the State law, will not be inferred from general grants of power, nor will such authority be held to exist as an implied or incidental right. As all municipal authority comes from the Legislature, the provisions of municipal charters, however broad, are subject to such restrictions as may be imposed by general laws.

The additional powers by Chapter 247, Laws of 1913, amending the General City Law, giving authority to enforce ordinances by affixing penalties, forfeitures and imprisonment, did not, and could not, surrender the general power to legislate against criminal offences, which remains in the Legislature.

The Legislature alone may command how Sunday shall be kept. Hence the City of Yonkers cannot independently compel and enforce Sunday closing, by means of fine or imprisonment, unless such prohibition is part of the law and policy as declared by the Legislature.

It follows that the writ should be sustained, and the relator discharged.

SUNDAY motion pictures in Rochester, N. Y., are now an assured fact, and they are planning to open their houses at once, as a result of the Yonkers case. The Rochester motion picture men, before the latter decision was handed down, had planned a determined move to have the matter decided in the courts, and the outcome has been favorable to them.

A test case was arranged, in which Maurice Lichterman was charged with violating the municipal code, prohibiting shows and circuses on Sunday. The Rochester men, as their Yonkers brother exhibitors had done, claimed this ordinance was not legal. The attorney for the defense said that there was no state law prohibiting the opening of picture houses on Sunday, and that the city ordinance under which the arrest was made is not legal, being in conflict with the city charter of January 1, 1908, which repealed the ordinance of 1904.

The picture men contended that the state legislature alone has power to close the motion picture houses on Sunday, and that it has not done so. The Court of Appeals decision settled both cases at one sitting.

Boston Censor Bill Passes Third House Reading

A COMPROMISE bill vesting unlimited powers of play censorship in Boston with the mayor, police commissioner and chief justice of the municipal court, has been passed to a third reading by the Massachusetts house. The original bill required that the decision of the censors must be unanimous; an amendment makes the vote of two censors sufficient to ban or limit a play or photoplay. At present censorship in Boston is vested jointly with the mayor and police commissioner, but they have power to stop only plays of an obscene or immoral nature. The compromise bill would give the Boston board power similar to that possessed by the authorities in other parts of the state; they can ban a play for any reason whatever.

The compromise is the result of the agitation incited by negroes opposed to Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which is still showing to big houses at the Tremont theatre, despite certain cuts ordered by the mayor. The 94 to 41 vote by which the bill was passed to a third reading, came shortly after the legislators had seen the play at a special showing. Those who appraised the play voted against the bill, so that the negroes are claiming the passage to a third reading as a victory for their side. But even they are not fully satisfied with the measure, and there are strong indications that the bill will be dropped later, especially since the mayor opposes it, and his power in the legislature is strong.

Meanwhile the situation has been further complicated by the presentation of an entirely new bill, proposed as a substitute for the Carstens measure, against which motion-picture men to the number of 500 protested at a hearing Wednesday. The new measure, in the language of one exhibitor, has the rest of the censorship plans "skun to death." It asks for the organization of a department of film censorship in the district police force. This department would consist of the chief of the district police and not more than five censors, one of whom shall be a woman. Then comes the master stroke in the censorship hysteria: The governor shall appoint another board of seven, one of whom shall be a wage earner and one a representative of the motion-picture interests, to make rules for the six censors.

These censors would examine every film offered for exhibition in the state and exclude all those they deem obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman or of such a character that exhibition of the film would tend to impair the health or corrupt the morals of children, promote lawlessness or incite crime. The right to appeal from the decision of the board to the Superior court is provided.

James A. Lowell, who presented this bill for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, says that a voluntary investigating committee had inspected 1,261 films in this state and found 235 of them objectionable. He says his bill is modeled after the Ohio law, on which the Supreme court has passed.

This measure, like all the others proposing censorship, is vigorously opposed by the film men, who have been accused of threatening a boycott of legislators who vote for censorship. They deny this. Organized labor has voted to stand with the film men. The Carstens bill is still before the legislature, and patrons of picture houses are still signing protests against it.

FORBID PRIVATE SHOWINGS ON SUNDAY EVENING

Director of Public Safety Porter, in Philadelphia, has made a decision which will prevent any theatre from having private exhibitions of pictures on Sunday evenings. The director holds that even when such exhibitions are limited to those holding cards of invitation they cannot be given in Philadelphia, for he fears such action may be an opening wedge for regular Sunday performances.

The edict was first put in force after the mob that tried to get in to the first private showing of "Hypocrites," at the Globe, had made a large force of policemen necessary to preserve order.

When the guests arrived the next week to see "The Heart of Maryland," at the Chestnut Street Opera House, they had to be sent back, the order to prevent the showing having been made too late for Manager McSween to notify all those invited.

BRITISH COLUMBIA EXERCISES SEVERE CENSORSHIP

Owners of films on the Pacific Coast, who occasionally send shipments to British Columbia, are very bitter in their denunciation of the manner in which their property is treated there.

In case the censor disapproves of any part of the film this is ruined by being stamped "Rejected in British Columbia." Rejections have been made of late on such unwarranted grounds that but few shipments are being made there, film owners not caring to run the risk of having a valuable film ruined.

Added to this are the war taxes, increasing costs of shipments to such an extent that almost prohibitory conditions prevail.

BILL WOULD ABOLISH TENTS IN ST. LOUIS

A bill prohibiting the use of tents for motion picture shows or theatrical performances, was introduced in the Board of Aldermen of St. Louis, on May 1, by Alderman Otto K. Koenig.

The bill contains a provision making it effective on September 1 next, if it is passed. Mayor Keil, in his annual message to the board some time ago, urged the abolishing of tents for shows, declaring that the use of tents for exhibition purposes should be legislated against, as they are hazardous in case of fire and panic.

IDAHO TOWN VOTES TO HAVE SUNDAY OPENING

Sunday closing was the chief issue in the city election at Nampa, Idaho, held on April 27.

A special vote was taken on the issue with the result that the citizens favored open theatres on Sunday and registered their sentiments in favor of open shows by a vote of three to one straight. Some 1,200 votes were cast at the election.

Nebraska Safe from Censor for Two Years

EXHIBITORS in the Omaha territory, except in Kansas, are congratulating themselves on narrow escapes from censor legislation. The situation in Nebraska is nipped by a welfare committee in Omaha, whose duties will be to censor motion picture films at the expense of the public, but they are not expected to create much harm.

In Iowa three bills started through the legislature. Through the quick and able work of the Iowa branch of the M. P. E. L. A., by State Secretary Eddy, the bills were led to a quiet, natural grave in the committees.

In Nebraska the exhibitors were started by a bill that was rushed through the house by a vote of 64 to 3 and threatened to speed through the senate in like manner. Exchange managers and a few exhibitors, hurriedly grabbing their coats and hats, rushed to Lincoln, the state capital, and the bill died in committee, on the verge of being rushed through the senate.

During the next two years, before the legislatures meet again, exhibitors are fervently hoping the public will be educated enough in the motion picture business to recognize it as a permanent influence for good and not a wild-cat enterprise with but a few years to live. The exhibitors are saying they realize that much of this educating of the public must come through themselves. It is said that plans will be matured to meet the situation.

New Jersey Judge Rules Against Fight Pictures

PICTURES of the Willard-Johnson prize fight at Havana, April 5, will not be seen in the United States if the decision of Judge Thomas G. Haight, in the United States District Court at Newark, N. J., is sustained by the higher tribunals. In seven typewritten pages, Judge Haight expresses the opinion that the constitutionality of the Federal statutes forbidding the carrying of the pictures between States and their importation should be upheld.

Benjamin F. Spellman, attorney for L. Lawrence Weber, of New York, who is seeking to exhibit motion pictures of the fight in Newark, has already announced that he will appeal the decision of Judge Haight to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Trenton, N. J. Judge Haight said he would sign papers for the appeal.

Spellman set up the plea that the Federal statute was unconstitutional, and argued that the government had no right to prohibit the importation of the pictures so long as Weber does not attempt to sell the pictures or the rights to exhibit them.

The statute referred to deals with the importation of fight pictures as articles of commerce, but Weber contends that he does not intend to commercialize the reels in the accepted sense of the word.

In his opinion Judge Haight did not touch upon the question of the morality of the pictures. The opinion deals alone with the statute which Judge Haight declares to be constitutional. Speculation is rife as to the action of the higher court in the matter.

Prize Fight Pictures May Now Be Shown in Alberta

MOTION pictures of boxing bouts and prize fights may henceforth be exhibited in Alberta. The ban has been lifted by order-in-council in an amendment to regulations under the theatres' act.

The regulations hitherto provided that no prize fights could be projected on the screen, but after the words "prize fight" there is now incorporated in the regulations "of a brutalizing nature." The amendment places the onus of deciding what films may or may not be shown, upon the censor. He will have to decide whether or not the films are of a brutalizing nature.

Further amendments make it an offense under the act to permit the attendance at any performance during school hours of a child of school age, unless accompanied by parent or guardian.

This decision clears the atmosphere for Alberta exhibitors to a considerable extent because since Luther McCarty was killed at Calgary, May 24, 1913, fight films have been generally taboo in Alberta, and only one series, the Ritchie-Welsh films, has managed to get past the censor. Many others, including the Johnson-Flynn pictures, have been under the ban.

THE EDISON COMPANY'S ACTORS IN A SCENE FROM "ACCORDING TO THEIR LIGHTS," ONE OF THEIR COMING RELEASES

NO VAUDEVILE ALLOWED IN INDIANAPOLIS THEATRES

Mayor Joseph E. Bell, of Indianapolis, issued an order to the police Sunday, April 18, in which he asked that the picture theatres which have been running vaudeville performances be prevented from putting on the regular performance as given during the week.

Mayor Bell had received a complaint that one theatre was advertising its regular performance. Investigation showed that several theatres have been giving regular performances on Sunday.

FARRAR BRINGS PRESTIGE TO FILM DRAMA

Action of Lasky Company in Starring Popular Singer Will Convince Last Doubters that Photodramatic Art Is Equal to the Speaking Stage—Only Exhibitors Taking Paramount Program Will Get Series of Pictures Featuring the Diva—Belasco Helped to Obtain Her Services

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, treasurer and general manager of the Lasky Feature Play Company, who is now visiting the studios in Hollywood, Cal., mainly for the purpose of completing arrangements for the productions in which Geraldine Farrar is to star under this management, prepared a statement just before his departure concerning the decision of the Lasky company to release the Farrar offerings exclusively to Paramount theatres and exclusively on the Paramount program. The statement is as follows:

"I would like to impress upon the exhibitors and moving picture patrons of America that we do not regard the engagement of Miss Farrar from a business point of view. If we looked at it in that manner we would never have consummated the arrangement. Our aim is the advancement of the moving picture art.

No Art Higher Than Photodrama

"Strange though it may seem, there are yet some people who regard photodramatic art as inferior to the art of the legitimate stage. By the engagement of Miss Farrar and the other notable stars we have recently announced, and by arranging productions of plays for which we have to pay small fortunes in royalties, we seek to convert the last doubters.

"We have taken it upon ourselves, as we believe our position in the field gives us the right to do, to make everyone everywhere understand that there is no dramatic art higher than the photodramatic art.

"We do not expect to make money with the productions that Miss Farrar does under our management. Miss Farrar receives the highest salary ever paid an artist in the world for film appearances during the eight weeks this summer, and the periods that she will work for us hereafter.

"We are just thankful that we have reached such a position that we are able to pay the salary cheerfully, knowing that this wonderful woman is entitled to every cent and that she is doing the entire picture art a favor by contributing to it her extraordinary prestige and genius.

Position of the Company

"If we were treating the engagement of Geraldine Farrar from a commercial standpoint there are many ways in which we could arrange for special distribution of these productions. But, on the contrary, we have determined that all the Farrar productions shall be released on the Paramount Program.

"The engagement of Geraldine Farrar is made by a strictly photodramatic firm, and is entirely for the advantage of the photodrama exhibitors and enthusiasts of America and the whole world. Paramount theatres will have Farrar, and no inducement in the gift of anybody can put them elsewhere.

"That is the way we feel about Paramount and the Paramount exhibitors. We know they have been trying to build up the finest audiences in America, and we are going to help them succeed.

"We cannot speak of Farrar, or of any of the advances made by the Lasky company, without speaking of David Belasco. It was partly through the help of Mr. Belasco that we were enabled to obtain the services of Miss Farrar, through arrangement with his son- in-law, Morris Gest. It has been largely through Mr. Belasco's help that the Lasky company has been able to come to the front in the comparatively brief time of its existence."

"The Lure of the Mask" Sets New Mark of Success

Picturization of Harold MacGrath's Best Seller by the American Film Manufacturing Company Proves Popular—Ricketts' Direction Well Done

HYPERCRITICAL reviewers often have put the question: "Why is a best seller?" For their answer they have but to lay aside musty volumes and see the filmed version of Harold MacGrath's "The Lure of the Mask," produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company.

In this newest of its output, all the many elements that combine to make a story a success, financially and otherwise, may be visualized to the satisfaction of even a reviewer of books.

Mr. MacGrath's novel has been done under Tom Ricketts' supervision, in four vigorous reels.

Harold Lockwood, as Jack Hilliard, the bored young New Yorker, with gold-lined pockets, is captivated by the voice which comes to his club window from foggy streets below. The wheels of the plot revolve. Lockwood, in a sort of "want-ad." romance, meets the beautiful singer, but, alas, her features are veiled beyond recognition. Elsie Jane Wilson, remembered for her excellent acting in "Everywoman," plays "La Signorina," the masked queen of the opera, and Sonia, the singer's unmasked self.

Hilliard, pursuing his fate and masked charmer to Italy, of course is successful in his quest, but not until a thrilling and altogether satisfying minor plot, has been worked out between Hal Clements, as Giovanni, and Irving Cummings, as the villainous Prince Monte Bionca. The minor plot is closely interwoven with the the major. In fact some of the strongest scenes in the film are built around the doings of these secondary characters.

The gay Bionca has ruined the life of Enrichetta, Giovanni's comely daughter. Later Enrichetta (Miss Lucy Payton) comes upon the prince and Sonia, emerging from a cathedral following their marriage. When Enrichetta tells her story, Sonia renounces the prince and takes to the operatic stage. After years of invalid misery, Enrichetta dies, and Giovanni, her father, swears revenge on the prince Bionca. He comes upon Bionca at Monte Carlo, where the prince has been living high on extorted money. The two grapple on a cliff high above the sea, and Giovanni's gleaming stiletto pierces the nobleman's heart.

At Bionca's death, Sonia, who legally is the Princess Bionca, is free to follow her heart's dictates with the dashing young New Yorker, which she does, in beautiful MacGrathian manner.

British Firm Guarantees World Film $200,000 a Year

Winik and Brock Obtain Rights to the Productions of the Company for all Foreign Markets Except the United States, Canada and Australia

RIGHTS to its productions for the entire world outside of the United States, Canada and Australia, have been sold by the World Film to Hyman Winik and Henry J. Brock. The deal, which was consummated by J. D. Williams, head of the World Film foreign department, guarantees the World Film corporation an income of $200,000 a year from its foreign sales.

Hyman Winik will be in charge of the London office of the new firm, which will be called the World Film Corporation of London, unless prevented by the British copyright law. In that case the firm name will be Winik, Brock & Co.

Offers have already been received for the British Isles, but it is likely that Winik and Brock will handle this territory themselves and dispose of franchises for other territory. Australia is at present being handled by Vogel and Howells, of Melbourne, but the Australian rights will revert to Winik and Brock in a year.

Both men are well known in the industry. Mr. Winik, who has just returned to New York after a western trip which took him to the Pacific Coast, brought the Johnson-Ketchel fight pictures to this country in 1909. He also owns three theatres in Tacoma, Wash.

Henry J. Brock makes his headquarters in Buffalo. He is general manager of the Mitchell H. Mark enterprises which operate eighteen large motion-picture theatres. He is president of the Radium Gold Fibre screen corporation. He is also managing director of the United Motion Pictures, Ltd., which controls ten theatres in the United States and Canada. Messrs. Brock and Winik are pleased with the outlook.

KALEM BURNS VESSEL FOR "LURE OF MAMMON"

Fania Marinoff, who is now appearing as Louka in Arnold Daly's revival of "Arms and the Man" at the Park theatre, New York, declares that she does not envy the lot of the average motion picture performer.

Miss Marinoff was engaged by Kalem to enact the role of Dorinda in "The Lure of Mammon." According to the story, the ship on which Dorinda is returning to America burns when but a day from these shores. The girl is one of the few survivors and is washed ashore on a rocky coast.

Kalem purchased a condemned vessel, had it towed out to sea and then set it afire. Miss Marinoff remained on board the doomed craft until actually compelled to leap overboard by the advancing flames. A heavy sea was running at the time, and the charming actress had a hard time of it before she could be pulled into one of the launches standing by.

"The Lure of Mammon" will be released by Kalem in regular service, Monday, May 17.

HOPE TO INTEREST EUROPEAN NATIONS IN "PROHIBITION"

England, Russia and France have now before them a proposal to use the feature film "Prohibition" to support their prohibition measures against alcoholics.

Robt. T. Kane, president of the Prohibition Film Corporation at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, this week, through foreign agents, has practically arranged for the showing of the picture as soon as copies can be dispatched to the countries named.

In the event of the film being adopted by the English Ministry, as proposed, the active film photographs of Lloyd George, Lord Kitchener and Winston Churchill will be substituted for the scenes in office action of Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Hon. Josephus Daniels and Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson.

"STEPPING WESTWARD" TO BE RELEASED JUNE 7

The two-part United western subject, "Stepping Westward," will be released on Monday, June 7. The scenario is by Reverend Clarence J. Harris. The story has a broad human appeal. The leading roles in the hands of Mabel Van Buren and George Larkin are characterized by splendid work on the parts of both these capable Ideal performers. The story runs from the Civil War up to the present time.

WORLD FILM BUYS SHUBERT INTEREST IN PEERLESS

The World Film corporation this week took the first step toward carrying out its policy of owning or controlling all its producing company by buying out the half interest held by the Shuberts in the Peerless studios at Fort Lee, N. J. This leaves the World Film corporation the full owner of Peerless. Other acquisitions will follow.

CHARLOTTE BURTON AS THE ADVENTURESS IN "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY," THE PICTURIZED ROMANTIC NOVEL OF THE NORTH AMERICAN COMPANY

JACK STANDING IS VERSATILE ACTOR

Jack Standing, the young Englishman who is featured in the "Road o' Strife" serial with Crane Wilbur and Mary Charleson, is one of the most versatile and finished actors in the Lubin studio and he switches from leads to heavies, from juvenile parts to old man characters, with equal ease.

Standing has little excuse for not being a good actor. His father, Herbert Standing, achieved a wide reputation abroad.

LIONEL BARRYMORE ADDED TO "ELAINE" STARS

Pathé has added to the cast of the new "Exploits of Elaine," Lionel Barrymore, celebrated brother of the famous John and Ethel Barrymore, and nephew of John Drew. It is a large aggregation of real stars—Arnold Daly, Edwin Arden, Pearl White and Lionel Barrymore.

This is not Mr. Barrymore's first appearance on the screen. He has had important parts in several big productions, but it is with the legitimate stage that his name has been most associated. He was broken into the profession by his uncle, John Drew. Among the famous plays with which he was identified were "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," "The Other Girl," Barrie's play "Pantaloon," "The Best of Friends," and "Sag Harbor," with James A. Hearne.

The Whartons expect to move the "Exploits of Elaine" company to Ithaca in a week or two, and take the future instalments on their fine new property in that place.

FRANK REICHER TO BECOME LASKY DIRECTOR

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has entered into a contract with Frank Reicher, whereby Mr. Reicher is to become associated with Cecil B. De Mille, director general for the Lasky company, and will be one of the leading directors of Lasky productions.

Though Mr. Reicher was born in Germany and won his first fame as an actor there, he speaks flawless English and has been in New York so long that he is regarded as an American artist.

Mr. Reicher's note as a stage director is largely due to his work in this capacity for the late Henry B. Harris. It was under his supervision that the most notable of the Harris dramatic offerings—especially those of the "modern" dramatic school—were presented to the public.

DESMOND WILL APPEAR IN MOROSCO FILM

William Desmond, one of the country's matinee idols who has been with Oliver Morosco for the past ten years, has been engaged by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, in Association with Bosworth, Inc., to appear on the screen opposite Leonore Ulrich, the popular little star at present appearing in "The Bird of Paradise" with big success.

Mr. Desmond played opposite Miss Ulrich in "The Bird of Paradise" for the past two seasons, and received much praise from the press and public through his splendid characterization of a rather unlikable role. "Bill" Desmond, as he is popularly known, has been around the world twice on tour, having in Australia one of the biggest special stock seasons in the history of the Antipodes.

A special exhibition of motion pictures of the Atlantic fleet was given at the Broadway theatre, in New York City, Thursday afternoon, when Admiral Fletcher and his officers were present.

The Standard Newsfilm Company provided the pictures. The Standard Newsfilm Company is a new concern, and is identified with various news film weeklies in Europe; it will shortly release an American edition in this country. The company also controls various educational films.

Offices are located in the World's Tower and the American Press Association buildings.

"THE WILD GOOSE CHASE" CHANGED TO MAY 27

The Lasky Feature Play Company announces that the release date of the production in which Miss Ina Claire makes her photodramatic debut, "The Wild Goose Chase," has been changed from June 3 to May 27. Broadway Entertainers in Kalem Night Life Scenes

Choruses and Dancers Who Amuse Habitues of New York's Famous Cafes Are Transplanted to "Maxim's at Midnight," a Replica of the Well-Known Restaurant

THE Kalem Company is now producing a multiple reel feature, entitled "Midnight at Maxim's," with plenty of local color, and thereby hangs a tale. For William Wright, of Kalem, on Tuesday, May 11, played the host to a part of writing persons and took them out to Cliffside, N. J., to enjoy the production of some of the more spectacular of the cafe scenes. Host Wright promised to show the visitors at least sixty beautiful chorus ladies. Well, he made good.

But to start at the beginning. The party, after lunch at the Astor, journeyed to Cliffside by automobile. The Cliffside studios, which were formerly an open air stage, and a large private house converted into dressing rooms, are being enlarged. A covered studio, with a solid roof, is being built adjacent to the open air stage and so arranged that a big scene may be photographed with the action partly in the studio and partly on the open stage. This is made possible by big folding doors, which compose one side of the studio building.

On the big stage Director George Sergeant was working on "Maxim's at Midnight." The interior of the famous metropolitan cafe had been reproduced with scrupulous care and the cafe employees brought over to occupy their respective positions.

A feature of the picture will be a careful representation of the musical revues now the rage in New York restaurants. The principals and choruses now being presented at Maxim's, Rector's, Bustanoby's and Wallick's were all on hand, and executed their various numbers before the camera while the principal players in the coming production were seated at conspicuous tables.

At least sixty persons, all Broadway favorites, took part in the production. "Midnight at Maxim's" cannot fail to afford an accurate conception of New York cafe life. This is the first time that the interior of a famous restaurant has been faithfully reproduced with the actual employees and entertainers in their proper places.

New York Motion Reduces Number of Small Pictures

Company Will Stop Making One Reel Keystones—No More One and Two Reel Kay-Bee, Domino or Broncho After August—Features Planned for These Brands

IMPORTANT changes in the Mutual Film corporation may be predicted from the incorporation at Albany of the Fulton Feature Film Company, the directors of which are Harry E. Aitken, the president of the Mutual Film corporation, and Adam Kessel, Jr., and Charles O. Bauman, the executives of the New York Motion Picture corporation.

It is announced this week that the New York Motion Picture Corporation will discontinue single reel Keystones. It is also announced that, beginning in August, there will be no more one and two-reel pictures made under the Kay-Bee, Domino or Broncho brands. Features only will be made, the brand names being retained.

The New York Motion Picture corporation will also make ten and twelve-reel features.

"The Sign of the Rose," a multiple reel feature made by the New York Motion Picture corporation, starring George Beban, will be presented in the fall at some Broadway theatre to be announced later.

The New York Motion Picture corporation is busy signing up big theatrical stars. No statement is yet ready, but Adam Kessel, Jr., has just returned from his trip to the Pacific Coast and some important announcements may be expected in the near future.

An intimation of the Mutual's policy may be gleaned from a recent interview given out by H. E. Aitken in Chicago in which he said that the Mutual will soon release a program of fewer pictures with features predominating. Mr. Aitken is now out of town, but will return to New York in about a week.

Thrilling Lion Charge Shown in Mackenzie Film

Rest of the Picture, Brought from Africa by Intrepid Modern Diana After Year's Big Game Hunt, Full of Other Animal Adventures

LADY GRACE MACKENZIE has just returned from a year's thrilling expedition after big game in East Africa. She is the first woman who ever penetrated so far into the depths of the African jungle and she has outdone Rainey, Roosevelt and all the other big game hunters in her achievements.

She has not only potted every known specimen of big game in that next-to-nature section, but she has succeeded, at great expense, in photographing them all under the most interesting conditions with a moving picture camera. The result is one of the best sets of big game pictures ever taken.

This Diana of today, this modern huntress par excellence, has four miles of film. In it will be found a wonderful lion hunt, showing a huge African lion charging straight at her; a furious rhino, accompanied by his mate, and countless pictures of elephants, giraffes, zebras, babboons, buffalos, apes and wild dogs. All are beautifully pictured and the charges of the hunted wild beasts are thrilling in the extreme. In one rare picture three hundred and sixty elephants are seen watering at a pool in the jungle.

The best of this vast assortment of film has been worked into a two and a half hours' entertainment, and will soon be seen at one of the leading theatres on Broadway, New York City.

"JUST OUT OF COLLEGE" UNDER WAY

The Frohman Amusement corporation has started on its new feature, "Just Out of College." Eugene O'Brien, now playing in "The Celebrated Case," Jack Boynton Sherrill, who was in "The Builder of Bridges"; Wright Kramer, late of "Androcles and the Lion"; Ben Hendricks, Marie Edith Wells and Kate Jepson have been cast for this breezy, bright comedy.

Mark Swan wrote the scenario and George Ade, himself, will edit the titles.

Ade has demonstrated a particular knack for humorous titles, highly diverting to the public.

HENRY KING MADE MARK IN "LEGITIMATE"

Star of "Who Pays?" Series, Balboa-Pathé, Was Picked by Henry W. Savage for Important Part in "The House of a Thousand Candles" After Actor Became Well Known in Stock—Was in the Harris Production of "The Lion and the Mouse"

HENRY KING, who is starred with Ruth Roland in the Balboa-Pathé series of twelve dramas, each propounding vital questions of life, is of the particular build and appearance that meets the general conception of what a matinee idol should be. His southern chivalry comes to him naturally because he was born in Christiansburg, Virginia, and received his education at Roanoke.

The stage attracted him at an early age, and notwithstanding the objections of his family, he joined the Arnold Stock company and toured the South. The following season he played juvenile leads with the Osman Stock company and went over the same territory traversed during his first theatrical engagement.

Developing rapidly he was chosen by Anna Boyle Moore to support her in a repertoire of Shakespearean plays, the most successful of which were "As You Like It," and "Romeo and Juliet."

One season with the College theatre stock company in Chicago, and he determined to face the great theatrical lions in New York. He was fortunate in being favorably received, and after two weeks in the American metropolis was cast as John Glennon in "The House of a Thousand Candles," which was given its premier performance at the Hackett theatre.

On the road this play was a splendid money-maker, due largely to Henry King's conscientious and convincing work.

For a time after this he devoted his talents to stock engagements, playing successively in Buffalo, N. Y.; Scranton, Pa.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Jacksonville, Fla., and New York City.

When Henry W. Savage produced "The Devil," he ran his discerning eye over a long list of eligibles and decided that Henry King was the man he wanted for the part of Karl Mahler. His choice was a happy one. Henry King was a hit from the beginning and he remained with this company an entire season.

The next year he assumed the character of Jefferson Ryder in "The Lion and the Mouse," and appeared under the management of the lamented Henry B. Harris, who went down with the Titanic. When this play was put on the shelf Henry King signed a contract stipulating that he was to be featured with Janet Waldorf in "Graustark."

In this production he scored so heavily that he was sought to play the part of Louis Neville in "The Common Law." After a record-breaking run this organization disbanded and Henry King's mind centered upon moving pictures. Lubin picked him to play leads and sent him to California, where he became a part of the Lubin western company.

Nearly eighteen months ago he joined the Balboa company, of Long Beach, California, under a three-years' agreement. During his association with the Balboa company he has appeared as leading man, with brilliant success, in more than sixty photoplays, all of which have been approved by exhibitors and the public everywhere. In view of the painstaking and intelligent manner in which he interpreted every role assigned to him, it was to be expected that he would be starred with Ruth Roland in the Balboa company's "Who Pays?" series of twelve three reel dramatic masterpieces. How well he is fitted for the role a glance at the mobile face portrayed in the picture forming the supplement of this issue will reveal.

His delineation of the difficult characters in "The Prince of Fame," "The Pursuit of Pleasure," "When Justice Sleeps," "The Love Liar," "The Feminine Law," "Today and Tomorrow" and "Houses of Glass," are revelations of true histrionic ability and show Henry King at his best. The eighth of the "Who Pays?" series will be "Blue Blood and Yellow," and the ninth, "The Fruits of Folly." The titles of the remaining three have not been decided upon, but they will maintain the high standard set by their predecessors, and when the series is finished, and the public have had an opportunity to pass judgment, the verdict will place Henry King among the foremost screen actors of the day.

Producers Insure "Diamond" Company for $300,000

Action Taken Because Cast Is Continually Called Upon to Go Through Dare-Devil Acts—Some Stunts Equal Daring of Professional Death Teasers

A $300,000 insurance policy has been written to cover the cast of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American's big continued photoplay for which Roy L. McCardell was paid a prize of $10,000.

In a picture of any length, and especially where the members of the cast are called upon to do dare-devil stunts, it is a matter of business judgment to protect them through insurance.

In "The Diamond from the Sky" the principals are required to take more risks than was ever done before in a picture. Ordinarily the principals are doubled in the death defying stunts by someone who makes a business of looking eternity in the face and never flinching. When this company was organized, and it was known there would be many stunts, professional death teasers applied for work.

For instance, Irving Cummings has driven within an inch of death in front of a fast express train in an automobile—so close that the cow catcher of the big locomotive tore off his fender.

And then the ride over the cliff, that comes in the third chapter of this pictured novel stunts, that it seems a man must hesitate to do. Yet willingly and anxiously do Miss Pickford, Irving Cummings, William Russell, Charlotte Burton, Eugenie Forde take a chance.

Miss Forde is acknowledged to be one of the most daring women riders in the West and has a record of bucking horses tamed, unusual for a woman whose success on the speaking stage was equal to her screen renown.

Mr. Russell did a fall off a horse going at a mad gallop the other day, the action requiring him to roll under the feet of the pursuing horses. Of course his life depended upon the ability of the riders chasing him to handle their horses in such a manner that he would not be trampled upon.

Miss Pickford rides a horse over a falling and burning bridge, a most dangerous piece of business and at one time crossed out of the scenario because of the great risk to the rider. But Miss Pickford insisted upon doing it; so, some time next week she will make the ride.

Universal Increases Scenario Staff to Fifteen

And Further Additions Will Soon Be Made—Gilmore Walker of Selig Polyscope Is Now Editor of This Department

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 10.

GILMORE WALKER, former scenario writer for the Selig Polyscope company, has been made editor of the Universal scenario department, and took up the work this week, succeeding James Dayton, who will continue on the staff as a writer.

Calder Johnstone remains as manager of the department, which has been further enlarged by the addition of Olga Pritzlau Clark, formerly of the American Film Manufacturing company studio scenario department, at Santa Barbara; F. McGrew Willis, a free lance writer formerly with the Balboa Amusement Producing company and the American; Smythe Addison, who has been on Hampton Del Ruth's staff at the Keystone, and Miss Ruth Baldwin, author of the scenarios for the "Black Box" series, who has been in London aiding E. Phillips Oppenheim in writing the serial story from the plots of the scenarios, and has now returned to resume her work at the Universal studio.

With these additions the staff is now composed of fifteen writers and readers, and it is understood, is to be further increased in the near future, with the arrival of Captain Leslie Peacock, author of "Neptune's Daughter," and other Universal successes, who is to be transferred to the West Coast studios from the Eastern headquarters in New York City.

Seeks Constructive Ideas for "Paramount Magazine"

Editor of Publication, Mrs. Jane Stannard Johnson, Outlines Policy in Talk to Members of Women's Press Club, New York

THE Women's Press Club, of New York City, recently extended to its members, actively engaged in literary work, an invitation to speak before the club upon their work and to submit samples of the books or magazines of which they were the authors or editors.

In response to this invitation, Mrs. Jane Stannard Johnson, of the Paramount Pictures corporation, who has editorial charge of "Paramount Magazine," said in part:

"When the invitation reached me to speak before this club upon my work, the first thought that came to me was, Why! my work isn't work. To be sure it is activity, but it is a very happy, joyous, delightful activity. There is no sense of work or weariness, and, no matter how difficult the immediate work may be, or how late the hours entailed in getting out a big story, or a big advertisement, I always feel as ready and as fresh as at the beginning of the day. In fact, the more difficult the work the more it appeals to me, and if it happens to be something particularly difficult, that is the thing I always love to take up.

"The next thought that came to me was, It is not my work. The work I am doing fits into a small niche in the plan of the universe. What I mean is, that when the thought of the world is ready for some step forward in progress, like the telephone, for instance, or the Marconi wireless, or the airships, someone appears who is inspired with the vision and inspiration and ability to put that idea into practical operation for the benefit of the world and for all mankind.

"So the world was ready for something better in motion pictures when the Paramount idea came, for universal good, which was to be introduced in better pictures, better theatres and better amusement for the theatre-going public, at lower prices than are charged for theatrical attractions, yet showing the same plays and the same stars as appear on the legitimate stage. This idea was crystallized in the form of Paramount Pictures corporation, which was organized to put these principles into practice throughout the United States. In connection with this plan it was, of course, necessary to have someone for the work I am doing, and as advertising manager of Paramount Pictures corporation and the editor of 'Paramount Magazine,' I am filling my own little place in this great system, which means not only betterment for the entire motion picture industry, but for the amusement-loving public as well.

"As the editor of 'Paramount Magazine,' which reaches several hundred thousand people monthly, it is my privilege to admit to its columns only such matter as will give its readers wholesome, constructive ideas to think about, while giving specific information concerning the extensive influence of motion pictures and up-to-date news of the important personages known and loved by the public who are engaged in motion picture activities.

"More especially do I cherish this privilege in connection with our house organ, 'Paramount Progress,' which reaches only the trade and the exhibitors who are conducting motion-picture houses.

"The advertising end is a very important factor, and here again the element of good has an immeasurable influence. The standard of Paramount advertising is the highest and everything admitted to the columns of 'Paramount Magazine' is carefully censored. In fact, no publication maintains a higher standard. That this influence is not confined alone to our organization is evidenced by an experience of last week. One of the largest publishers in the city, one of whose magazines has a circulation running into the million mark, has been accepting advertising that would not be admitted to 'Paramount Magazine,' advertising of such a class that we would not wish our advertising to appear in its company. One day the advertising manager of that house called up our agency to ask them what we had against their publication that we would not advertise in it. Then our agent went to the president of the company and frankly told him what the situation was, with the result that the president issued instructions that no advertising of that nature should again be printed in the columns of its publications—certainly a big step forward for the better class of advertising.

"So, it seems to me, that in whatever activities we may be engaged our principles for good and the radius of our influence are almost limitless."

"The Island of Regeneration" Makes Hit at Once

Success Largely Due to the Broad Human Sympathies Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady Was Able to Bring to the Vital Parts of Vitagraph Story

A WELL-BALANCED man is one who takes a general interest in the affairs of life and does not narrow himself down to one viewpoint.

Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady is a big man, big in many ways. He has shown it in his many novels, in his broad and expressive views of life, and shows it still more plainly in the picturization of his novels.

"The Island of Regeneration," produced by the Vitagraph Company of America, was an instantaneous success. Dr. Brady recognized at once the opening up of a broader field to portray his many-sided views of life; as an army officer, his life upon the sea, his experiences as a frontiersman and his administrations as a clergyman. The Vitagraph company presented the opportunity and medium, and he has entered into an agreement to write exclusively for this company.

Dr. Brady was the first writer of note to see the possibilities of motion pictures, and was not slow in taking advantage of them to give the masses a broader scope of life from his many-sided viewpoints.

He has many of his books now in process of reproduction in pictures; two of the most notable are "West Wind" and "Britton of the Seventh." Both of these portray army life on the Western frontier in the days of Custer and the Indians. Each is entwined about an episode of love, which gives a charm and intensity of heart and human interest to it.

Both possess an historic value, an insight into army life and a grasp of the semi-savagery of Indian opposition to the progress of the white man.

Dr. Brady does not claim that the picture is mightier than the pen, but most emphatically proclaims that the latter greatly augments the former, and what may not be clearly visualized in type is more readily conveyed through the eye to the mind by the medium of animated art, thereby photographing it indelibly upon the human memory.

SELZNICK CHERISHES HUBBARD SOUVENIRS

Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film corporation, and Jacob Wilk, publicity manager, cherish as mementoes of the Elbert Hubbard, who perished on the Lusitania, two copies of his work, "Great Philosophers," which he autographed and presented to them only a few hours before sailing.

Mr. Hubbard went through the World Film offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York city, and evinced a great interest in the working of the big offices, especially the profit-sharing system.

ALL CELTIC BEGINS THIRD COMEDY

Director Fitzgerald left with a company of players for Greenlawn, Long Island, N. Y., to make some exterior scenes for the next comedy release of the All Celtic Company, entitled "Rafferty at the Hotel De Rest," which he claims will be a hundred per cent. funnier than the two previous comedies recently released on the World Film program.

"BRITTON OF THE SEVENTH" ALMOST COMPLETED

The battle of the Little Big Horn, with Custer in his last stand against the Indians, is vividly pictured in "Britton of the Seventh," a screen adaptation of the Reverend Cyrus Townsend Brady's novel of the same name, now nearing completion by the Vitagraph company, under the direction of Lionel Belmore.

The Seventh U. S. Cavalry, stationed at Fort Abraham Lincoln, lends military atmosphere to the picture, while Rain in the Face and his band of Sioux warriors add the dash and thrills in their fights with the soldiers that keep the picture on the border land of melodrama.

The cast includes Eleanor Woodruff, Eulalie Jensen, Darwin Karr, Ned Finley, Harry Northrup, R. Peyton Gibbs and others. When completed it will be in five parts and listed as a Blue Ribbon feature.

PICKFORD FAMILY PLAY IN "FANCHON THE CRICKET."

"Fanchon the Cricket," the Famous Players release of May 10, is of unusual interest because of the fact that it not only presents Mary Pickford, the idol of the screen, in the title role, but that the supporting cast also includes Lottie and Jack Pickford, sister and brother of the popular star.

This is the first time since the Pickfords have been appearing on the screen that all three have been together in a single subject, and the production therefore possesses a unique interest aside from its great dramatic strength and the charm of "Little Mary's" exquisite portrayal of the title character.

The interest of this odd situation is further heightened by the fact that Lottie Pickford is at the present time a star in her own right.

GERTRUDE LE BRANDT SIGNS WITH FOX

Gertrude Le Brandt, a well-known actress who has appeared in leading parts under the management of George M. Cohan, the Shuberts, Klaw & Erlanger, the late Charles Frohman, Harrison J. Fiske, John Cort, and other noted producers, has signed with William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation, the first part in which she appears upon the screen being that of Carolina, the keeper of a Petrograd resort in the William Fox production of "A Woman's Resurrection," in which Betty Nansen, William J. Kelly and Edward Jose are starred.

Miss Le Brandt gives a very striking performance of this exceedingly difficult role, which is one of the most important in the entire supporting cast.

"HUMAN FISH" TO SWIM IN UNITED WATERS

The find of the photoplay season, Marvelle Spencer, Ideal ingenue, is a veritable water nymph, and may be seen any bright day at the Los Angeles beach, astonishing the natives with daring aquatic feats of high and fancy diving.

A scenario is now in course of construction by the Ideal editor, Mary Murillo.

The Staff of the Lubin Manufacturing Company

President of Universal Will Be Seen in Initial Episode Consulting Grace Cunard Regarding the Best Way to Find Lost Half of Coin

THE Universal's next serial will be "The Broken Coin." Grace Cunard and Francis Ford will play the leading roles. In view of the great popularity enjoyed by "Lucille Love," in which Miss Cunard and Mr. Ford also played the leading roles, President Laemmle recently granted permission to the Universal West Coast stars to produce and play the principal parts in the serial to succeed "The Black Box."

"The Broken Coin" will be the fifth serial which the Universal has produced. "Lucille Love," the first Universal serial, was followed by "The Trey o' Hearts" and the latter in turn by "The Master Key" and "The Black Box." Like preceding Universal serials, "The Broken Coin" will be confined to fifteen episodes of two reels each. The first episode will be released on Monday, June 21.

The complete cast of "The Broken Coin" follows: Count Frederick, pretender to the throne of Gretzhoffen, Francis Ford; Kitty Gray, an American newspaper woman, Grace Cunard; King Michael II, of Gretzhoffen, Harry Schumm; Count Sachio, of Grahaffen, Harry Schumm; Rolleaux, the foreigner, Eddie Polo; the Apache, Reese Gardner; the King's sweetheart,, Mina Cunard; King of Grahaffen, Mark Fenton; Prime Minister, Lew Short; Outlaw, Lew Short; Sachio's accomplice, Jack Ford; henchmen and servants to Count Frederick, Burton S. Wilson, Edwin A. Clarke, George J. Uttal, Vic Goss and Harry Mann; King Michael's servant, Bobby Vernon; Courier to the King of Gretzhoffen, Norman McNamee. R. E. Irish and Harry Maguire, Mr. Ford's expert cameramen, will film the entire serial.

For the first time on any moving picture stage, President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing company, will make his appearance in the intitial episode of "The Broken Coin." In the picture Miss Cunard will consult Mr. Laemmle regarding the best way to find the other half of "The Broken Coin" and Mr. Laemmle will do his best to tell Miss Cunard all about Laupheim, Germany, and the adjacent Balkan principalities.

If any one has doubts about Mr. Laemmle's thespian skill let him keep his eyes wide open when the first installment of "The Broken Coin" is released.

This first installment of "The Broken Coin" promises to be an all-star cast performance for besides Mr. Laemmle, Herman Richtenberg, "King of the Louisiana Swamps"; Al Christie, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Otis Turner, producer of "Damon and Pythias" and "The Black Box" serial, will take part.

The serial relates the adventure of Kitty Gray, an American newspaper girl, who leaves this country for Gretzhoffen, seeking the other half of a broken coin which she finds in a curio shop in San Francisco.

Miss Cunard wrote the scenario of the serial while Francis Ford was at work on the two Ford past releases, "The Madcap Queen of Gretzhoffen" and "The Mystery of the Throne Room." When Mr. Laemmle came west to open the Universal City on March 15 Miss Cunard submitted her scenario to him and after one brief reading Mr. Laemmle, who is famous for his quick, trigger decision, told her to go ahead with the serial.

"THE PRICE" FEATURES HELEN WARE

Catherine Carr, who wrote the scenario for the Cort Film corporation's screen production of "The Melting Pot," has just finished writing the picturization of "The Price," in which Helen Ware is to be featured by the Cosmos Feature Film company.

Mrs. Carr finished the script in record time, delivering it to the producers within three days after getting the commission to write it.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Twenty)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

ELAINE has another hairbreadth escape from death in this chapter of her adventures, but there is nothing tiresome about the situation because of its originality. So well constructed is the plot that there is an almost constant thrill, although there is no actual use of physical stunts.

Wu Fang decides to destroy Elaine in a fiendish way, and in order to carry out his plan he uses a dissolute girl, who slightly resembles Elaine, and who has an appearance of innocence which is quite convincing. She is walking past Elaine's home when she is "attacked" by two of the Wu Fang gang. Elaine comes to her rescue, and the plausible story she tells results in her obtaining a place as a maid in the Dodge home.

In what purports to be her trunk she brings a mechanical chair, which will not only clutch its victim, but will set the house on fire at a fixed time. This is placed in a garret room, where the maid has learned that Elaine will be looking over some old clothes. The plan works and Elaine is caught.

Meantime, the maid has stolen some of Elaine's clothes and lures Kennedy into a Chinese dive under the belief that his sweetheart has been kidnapped. There he is captured and informed of Elaine's impending death. Thanks to the detective's cleverness, he manages to escape from his terrible predicament in time to save Elaine.

IN THE GRASP OF THE ORIENTAL

Arnold Daly and Pearl White continue their good work, as do the rest of the cast. A noticeable feature of Edwin Arden's make-up is that he retains his Chinese appearance when wearing Occidental clothes.

MAUDE ADAMS' STARRING VEHICLE FOR MARGUERITE CLARK

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XVI

The Views of a Manager on This Vital Question—Charles Weigel, Who Heads the Exhibitors'-Owners' Association, in Cincinnati, Declares That the Fault Is Due to Lack of Co-operation Between Exhibitors, Exchanges and Manufacturers

LACK of co-operation between exhibitors, exchanges and manufacturers; divided views of these interests regarding the business and the tendency of exhibitors to give the public too much for a small admission price—these are the three outstanding evils in the motion picture industry today, according to Charles Weigel, one of the most prominent exhibitors of Cincinnati.

Mr. Weigel is secretary, treasurer and manager of the Alhambra theatre, is the head of the Exhibitors'-Owners' Association, a member of the local M. P. E. L. of A., and represents the motion picture industry in the Cincinnati Rotary Club. While he points out his views on the reasons for censorship and other deterrent influences on the business, his interview has a decidedly optimistic tone. He said:

"One of the chief causes of trouble in the motion picture industry dates back to five or seven years ago, when various men who had other business interests took 'a flier' in the motion picture 'game.' Theatres sprang up like mushrooms without any regard for existing economic conditions and the possibility of the business holding up.

"The seeming success of those who entered the business in this manner was due to the newness of the business itself. Within the last year and a half many of these so-called theatres have been eliminated, owing to the lack of business methods on the one hand and the lack of foresight in applying the lessons that should have been gained from the previous results of economic conditions in the various neighborhoods, on the other.

Too Many Reels for Small Price

"The greatest and most far-reaching evil that has menaced the business has been the tendency of this class of owners to give the public too many reels of poor quality for a small price of admission. The resulting harm has been that the people have regarded the amusement too cheaply. The industry in general has suffered from this cause to an extent that is hard to compute.

"However, the houses that have selected their programs carefully with a view to giving what was desired to their patrons, who have been educated to be more discriminating, and therefore demanded a higher class of productions, have continued in the same even tenor of their way, are still doing good business, and in many cases enjoy a better business than heretofore.

"It is just a question of a short time when those theatres offering lengthy programs for a small price—quantity without regard for quality—must pass out of existence entirely, as the public is realizing more every day the truth in the saying that 'no one is going to give you something for nothing'.

"Vicious films that have been shown in the lower class theatres have created undue activity on the part of civic organizations in every town throughout the United States. The anticipation of this activity has been growing steadily as time went on and was the cause of the introduction of the present law on the statute books of Ohio.

"Eventually theatres which have exhibited pictures of this kind will be put out of business for the reason that they will be unable to obtain the films which will appeal to their audiences. The steady advancement of the industry is nowhere more strikingly illustrated than in the manufacturers' studios.

"The constant raising of motion picture standards and the elevation of ideals will reach such a point in a short time that vicious and immoral films will be reduced to a minimum. This because of two reasons: The decrease in the demand for such films owing to the elimination of the theatres which cater to an ignorant, sensational and objectionable class of people from a moral standpoint, and the constant effort on the part of the big producers to make only pictures that are clean and wholesome. At such a time, and it is not far distant, censorship will be merely a name. There will be no further need for censors.

"It has been very evident that the most successful theatres are conducted by business men who appreciate the harm that adverse legislation may work upon their business. In many cases the investments in these theatres are so large that any thoughtless action on the part of those having the future destiny of the business in their grasp might work irreparable damage to the entire industry. The time has come when each and every person interested in the manufacture, sale, rental or exhibition of films must make it his duty to lend his every support to those individuals who are honestly and sincerely working for the protection and advancement of the business. This means a sacrifice of personal interest.

Manufacturers Must Look to all Sides

"By this I mean that the manufacturer must not look at the matter from his own point of view alone, but must consider it from the seller's, renter's or exhibitor's viewpoint as well. These various interests are so closely allied that any harm inflicted on one must necessarily work to the detriment of all the others.

"We hear protests from all sides relative to the unfairness, unconstitutionality, and so forth, of censorship. As a person vitally interested in this wonderful business and with the future interest of the business at heart, it seems to me that the time must eventually come when all these allied branches of the industry must stand shoulder to shoulder and face these problems, which from the very nature of the business and its possible effect upon the education and morals of the people, demands.

"The manufacturer in a sense feels that censorship works a hardship on his particular field of activity. The man who buys and sells the films probably is not so much concerned, nor is the man who rents them, for the reason that a person buying or renting these films does so at his own risk and must depend on the future to get his money in return.

"But the exhibitor, on the other hand, who in order to handle the product of the manufacturer, is in many instances compelled, in order to attract patrons, to invest many thousands of dollars in the construction of a modern theatre in a locality which previous to the advent of motion pictures could be had at very low rental. Since the motion picture has come to the fore, land rentals have in many cases been increased four and five-fold.

"Permit more drastic legislation to be passed whereby the exhibitor is compelled to show pictures which have been so badly mutilated that the story is disconnected, and what is the result?

Results of "Let-Alone" Policy

"This would mean a dissatisfied audience, and that would ultimately spell ruin to the exhibitor. The public will naturally inquire as to the reason for these conditions. On being informed that it is the result of certain reform movements instigated by self-appointed irresponsible persons in the various communities who have taken the responsibility of dictating to the public what is and what is not good for their morals, they will immediately see the result of their seeming lethargy in permitting such action to be taken without a protest on their part.

"So it behooves everyone interested in any way whatsoever with this threatening danger, to be on his guard in every way possible to prevent just such conditions as these from arising.

"A few persons in each community alone cannot do this. It needs co-operation on the part of the exchange man, the manufacturer and the exhibitor, and there cannot but be a very satisfactory condition resulting from this co-operation. Heretofore there has been a wide chasm between these factions, and the result is already apparent in many parts of the country today. The present Ohio censorship law is the result of a failure on the part of the exchange and the manufacturer to co-operate, and this condition was partly due to the fact that the manufacturer in many cases held himself and his business so far above those of the exhibitor, that the exhibitor was of necessity compelled to invite such legislation which would be the lesser of two evils as between municipal censorship and state censorship. Up to the present time this has been the exhibitor's fight, as the exhibitor knew local conditions better than the others. His knowledge is indispensable for co-operation of the right kind.

"As soon as the manufacturers, by co-operation with the exhibitors in the United States, learn of these conditions and work with the exhibitors to overcome any threatened adverse legislation which may be suggested, the better it will be for the interests of all parties concerned.

"If the manufacturer knew that the heads of various civic organizations throughout the United States are absolutely ignorant of the real attitude of the exhibitors towards bad pictures, he would have made it his business long ago to see that they were educated as to the real condition of affairs.

"I sincerely hope the time will come within the very near future when there will be a meeting of the heads of the various interests concerned and, instead of being the fight of the few, it will be the fight of an important majority."

At the Tuesday afternoon meeting Mayor Wallace G. Nye, who has always declared that the exhibitors are the best of all men in licensed callings, gave them a welcome.

The reports of the committees regarding the final wording of the by-laws, the credentials and other matters were attended to at Tuesday's session, and the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read.

In Wednesday's discussion of the posters and of the advertising matter in general Daniel Esselin, of Cloquet, Minn., hit a responsive chord when he asked for a toning down of the posters.

"Many persons have never been inside a motion picture theatre," he said. "They do not know that the shows are clean, entertaining and often educational. They judge the shows by the posters outside. I know of theatres that are almost hidden by posters that cause unfavorable comment. The business no longer needs flaming posters. I am in favor of doing away with posters altogether and substituting dignified enlargements. The theatres will look better and not a customer will be lost."

D. W. Chamberlain said he believed the manufacturers would be glad to co-operate.

Advocates Censor Committee for Association

J. D. Sherwood then said that he believed the association should have a censor committee of its own which would visit the theatres and ask the managers to eliminate posters or objectionable films when they found them. They will rarely ever find a film that is bad, but the posters could be discontinued with good results, he said.

James Gilowsky, the vice-president, and Mr. Steffes then gave a report of the legislative work by the committee appointed to take care of the association's affairs in the legislature.

Not a bit of legislation detrimental to the motion picture business had been passed.

Mr. Sherwood said that similar bills had been introduced into the legislature, but were killed there, and at the request of the motion picture men of that state, the Sunday closing laws were left to the city and village councils.

On Thursday the convention continued with an informal discussion of the ways to continue winning public confidence, listened to an address by Miss Beverly Bayne, of the Essanay Company, and then presented her with a loving cup. They did the same with Miss Vivian Martin, of the World Film Corporation, who spoke on Friday. Both of these young women graced the convention ball on Friday night.

The election of officers was Friday's chief business. After the election of officers Minneapolis was chosen as the next convention city. This was largely because the executive officers live here and because they would have more time to give to the work.

MARY PICKFORD TO STAR IN HER OWN STORY, "A GIRL OF YESTERDAY"

MARY PICKFORD will shortly be seen in a feature story conceived and written by her and now being produced at the western studios of the Famous Players, entitled, "A Girl of Yesterday," a novel American comedy-drama woven about all the mechanical marvels of our present-day life, in which the aeroplane plays a conspicuous part.

For the first time in their entire association with the screen, Mary Pickford and her younger brother, Jack, will in this production play together in their true relationship. In the golfing, riding and ball-room scenes that form an important factor of the story, eight of Southern California's most prominent society people play parts.

The aeroplane scenes will be conducted and participated in by Glenn Martin and already trial flights have been made by Miss Pickford in his new four-seated machine. It is planed to ascend about three thousand feet.

"FANCHON THE CRICKET"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WITH every appearance of Mary Pickford in a Famous Players release, nothing less than a small sensation is created. "Fanchon the Cricket" is no exception to this prevailing order. To predict success for the picture much resembles the well-known process of "painting the lily," for failure and a Pickford-Famous Players release have never met.

Miss Pickford's entry into the picture is effected by that young lady rolling down a hill in a most blithely undignified manner, and from that moment until the last when she is happily united with her lover, the five reels are truly delightful, imbued with the whimsical characterization given by the star.

The story is very slight, indeed it is drawn out. But in this case the density of theme seems almost a minor consideration. Fanchon is the granddaughter of an old woman who lives alone with the girl, and who by her peculiar habits has earned the name of "witch." Fanchon is despised by the villagers. She is a capricious, lively and gay little thing, but at times is unspeakably sad because she has no one to love her.

HAPPINESS AT LAST

In time, however, she so endears herself to the heart of one young man of the village, that he renounces his priggish sweetheart for "The Cricket." His father objects to his son's change of heart, but not after Fanchon has nursed the young man back to health from a dangerous illness.

The title role offers Little Mary innumerable opportunities over which to exercise her various shades of expressions. By them she so clearly defines joy, sorrow and many other emotions, that the part seems to speak. But all this is hardly necessary for everyone knows the star's inimitable ability.

Cast as her lover is Jack Standing, a most able foil for Miss Pickford. Lottie Pickford is this young man's former sweetheart, while Gertrude Norman is Fanchon's grandmother, Richard Lee, the young man's brother and Russell Bassett his father.

Few interiors are in the five reels. Beautiful rural settings are the backgrounds for almost every scene, well chosen and clearly photographed. The story starts out in a lively humorous manner, but with the progress of the action it grows more pathetic, ending, however, happily and pleasing. The director, James Kirkwood, is deserving of the greatest praise for his efforts so excellently achieved on the screen. The screen version is founded on the story of George Sand.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the first of a series of six pictures to be produced by the Universal-Burton King Company, featuring Princess Ibrahim Hassan in stories based upon her life while in the power of a Turkish prince. An American born, Princess Hassan underwent no little trouble after having been deceived by a Turkish prince.

These two reels, comprising the first episode of her adventures, are introductory in nature and set forth little plot development. An American actress is journeying in Turkey. A native prince sees her and falls in love with her.

She reciprocates his love. The prince's parents desire their son to marry a princess of royal blood. The deceptive prince sees that the two women look much alike, and as the bride is heavily veiled during the ceremony, they are successful in disillusioning the parents. Soon after this the real princess commits suicide.

Here the second reel comes to an end, but the first instalment has fulfilled the mission of all premier episodes and has awakened the interest. The main plot of this, "The Purple Iris," is quite clear, but the counterplots are rather imperceptible; after a few more titles have been added, these will doubtless be clear.

There is much that is impressive throughout the two reels. The Turkish harem has been laid with a noticeable attention to detail, the palace grounds are realistic and the whole is well photographed.

The acting is very good. Princess Hassan does well in the leading part. Edward Sloman displays despicable villainy as the prince. Others in the cast are Edna Maison and Carmen Phillips.

Nell Shipman is preparing the scenarios for the series and Burton King is attending to the direction. From all appearances the stories should be most interesting.

ADOLFI DIRECTED "A CHILD OF GOD"

"A CHILD OF GOD"—a Mutual masterpiece, reviewed in the May 8 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS—was directed by John G. Adolfi.

"THE ESTERBROOK CASE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EQUAL proportions of melodrama, mystery and crooks have been cleverly combined by Ouida Bergere, the author of "The Esterbrook Case," with the result that the three reels present an appearance most attractive. As a melodrama, the offering belongs among the best of such three-reel subjects, as it embraces all the successful essentials of that class of pictures, and less inconsistencies than we are accustomed to are apparant in the course of its development.

However, there are some stages of the picture that are open to debate. One may question why Ann came to murder her enemy without a weapon, why she fell into the hands of crooks after the murder, and also one may pick innumerable flaws in her story of the murder, because it fails to fit in with the partial facts given the spectator in the beginning. These different defects may not be noticed, and if they are, the interest is not diminished to any considerable extent.

On the other hand, there are many praiseworthy points in the picture. It is most gratifying to note that a chauffeur, who appears in several scenes, is more than a mere figurehead. He appears human, and refuses to stolidly gaze ahead when something exciting is occurring behind him.

The scenes are most characteristic. Those supposed to be laid in a Newport home are impressive, expansive and realistic. They are peopled with players who look the parts they are rendering. Fine photography predominates in these scenes, whereas in striking contrast are the dimly lighted and gruesome scenes laid in the den of the crooks.

The Vitagraph Company's description on the film, "a melodrama denouncing circumstantial evidence," combined with the fact that a quarrel and a murder follow one another in rapid succession in the first half of the picture, have the desired effect of producing a great amount of suspense, which is not at all diminished until in the end the young man accused of the crime is cleared by his mother's confession of the deed.

The cast is fully competent. L. Rogers Lytton appears as the society crook, Julia Swayne Gordon gives a tense performance as the guilty woman, while Garry McGarry as the accused man, Zena Keefe as his fiancee and Cissy Fitz-Gerald and Charles Kent as her parents complete the cast of principals.

"THE LURE OF THE MASK"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Parts)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THIS is an adaptation of one of Harold MacGrath's romantic novels. Naturally a romantic novel is based on a story which will not stand the acid test of probability. If the object of a motion picture be to make time pass pleasantly, this amply suffices, for it is a pretty subject with plenty of romance and considerable action.

Jack Hilliard, a young American, clean cut and manly, falls in love with a woman whose voice he hears singing an Italian aria in the fog under his club window. Finally he dines with her. But he must come and go, blindfolded. At the dinner she hides her identity behind a mask. Next day she sails for Italy with the American opera company and from Naples mails Hilliard the mask.

The lure of the mask impels Hilliard to follow. He finds her and the rest of the company, stranded, at Monte Carlo. Hilliard saves the girl from the attentions of Prince Monte Bianca, a dissolute young nobleman. Giovanni, Hilliard's servant, is looking for the man who betrayed his daughter, the man being the Prince.

When Hilliard is received by Sonia at her home, he finds out that Prince Bianca is her husband. But Giovanni removes the obstacle by killing the Prince, leaving Sonia and Hilliard free to marry.

Admirers of Harold Lockwood will enjoy his work as Hilliard. Irving Cummings gives an accomplished interpretation of the role of Prince Bianca. Elsie Jane Wilson is Sonia.

"EVERY TOWN"

(Universal Special—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY H. S. FULD

A STORY that deals with a prevailing evil, that brings the faults of non-up-to-date methods to view, yet withal carrying a plot all its own, without marring the moral it is to illustrate—such a story is "Every Town."

Doyle (Howard Crampton), proprietor of the Doyle Chemical Works, commissions his manager Duncan (Wm. Welsh) to silence the local newspaper, "The Clarion," which has just started a public exposure of the methods and products of the Boyd company. The editor (Alan Holubar) is forced to withdraw and gives Duncan a signed statement to that effect.

AFTER THE EXPLOSION

Brant (Hobart Henly) in love with Doyle's daughter (Frances Nelson) is a young man of means and leisure. His sweetheart tells him to go and "do something." Purchasing the "Clarion," and retaining the former editor, he resumes the exposure where it left off.

Doyle and Duncan conspire to squelch Brant and by securing the services of two thugs Duncan succeeds in blowing up the offices of "The Clarion" and severely injuring Brant and the editor. Duncan is killed by a falling wall, a direct result of the explosion.

In the meantime Doyle's daughter becoming ill, her father, believing "Sacco-Ozone," the main product of the Doyle Chemical company, to be a cure for tuberculosis, gives some to her. The family physician arriving at this time, exposes the harmful effects of Sacco-Ozone and Doyle is converted.

Realizing the harm he has done, Doyle endows a Sanatorium for tuberculosis patients and has his factory equipped with the latest sanitary devices.

A year later Brant marries Doyle's daughter and everybody is happy.

Superior acting on the part of the principals, realistic interior settings, and a gripping story make this one of the best offerings of the month.

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Parts)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

A COMPETENT cast, Charles Clary, Alfred Paget, Francelia Billington, Wilber Higby, Howard Gaye and Irene Hunt, interpret this adaptation of one of Ouida's most famous works.

The production is in costume, hoops skirts, wigs and ruffles predominating. The direction is excellent and the adaptation adheres closely to the original story.

Lord Strathmore, a woman hater, falls in love with "Lady" Vasavour. Bertie Errol warns Strathmore that she is an adventuress. The men fight a duel and Errol is killed. Strathmore adopts and rears Errol's daughter, naming her Lucille. At eighteen Lucille is a beautiful young woman. She loves her benefactor. Strathmore hesitates to propose to the daughter of the man he killed but, in the end, marries her.

Another plot runs through the story in the efforts of the gypsy girl to avenge the death of her sweetheart, which was caused by "Lady" Vasavour. The gypsy finally gets her revenge, though she follows the other girl all the way to England.

A big, ball room scene is very well staged.

Clary plays Strathmore. Paget is Errol, Francelia Billington is Lucille, Wilbur Higby is Vasavour and Irene Hunt the gypsy girl.

The picture is pure melodrama, punctuated by frequent deaths. Some of the subtitles are very melodramatic.

"COURT MARTIALED"

(Imp-Universal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Universal company has a great subject in "Court Martialed." It is a drama concerning imaginary military life, laid presumably in the headquarters of a French garrison. It is not a play in which great stress is laid upon the battle scenes; in fact, none of these appear. The plot revolves about the son of the commander of the troops, who is an officer.

He steals some vitally important papers from his father, that he may be able to pay off a gambling debt. Then he is for a time successful in incriminating his rival in love of the deed, but at length spurred by discoveries of his mother he confesses his guilt and suffers the consequences in court martial.

The burden of the acting throughout the three reels falls on the shoulders of Alan Holubar, who plays the son, Jules, and William Welsh, who carries the father's role. Mr. Holubar is a fine type for the French officer and his many heavy scenes are marked by performances of decided merit.

Mr. Welsh as the father is equally good. The mother's part is well taken care of by Lydia Knott. Hobart Henley has some difficult scenes to enact while suffering the undeserved tortures of an innocent man awaiting his death. Frances Nelson is pleasing as the girl, while Howard Crampton is the gambler.

The story is worked out well, its climax is effectively attained. The interest grows as the plot advances.

The situations throughout are powerful. A big point in favor of the story's magnetic power, is the fact that the father has been drawn as a man willing to see his son meet his death for disloyalty.

"OTHERWISE BILL HARRISON"

(Essanay—Two Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THE criticism that this picture borders upon the melodramatic dime novel is not an adverse one, for all the action takes place as the day dream of a young newsboy, and it is just the kind of a romance that a newsboy would be likely to weave around himself and his sweetheart.

One day, as he is selling a paper to his favorite customer, the little girl who lives in a big brick mansion, he reads over her shoulder that the Government has offered a big reward for the apprehension of a ring of dope merchants. At once he is transformed into Bill Harrison, Government detective, sent out to catch the band of crooks who are selling drugs.

He sees the girl as a reporter on a big metropolitan newspaper. The city editor has sent her out to secure evidence against this same band, and in her daring efforts she goes to a lonely house, where she is captured by the crooks; but who should be lying on a bench pretending to be asleep but Bill Harrison himself?

His rescue of her, with the aid of Ayurs, a faithful Japanese valet, is most thrilling. When he is later taken prisoner by the band the girl turns the tables by rescuing him. In the end both he and the girl catch them red handed after long and exciting chase.

CAPTURED BY THE DOPE MERCHANTS

Bill kisses the girl and wakes up to find that he is really kissing his little customer. She runs away and he goes along his route.

Joseph Totten and Ruth Stonehouse take the leading parts in this picture. They are equally natural and convincing in the two roles they each play—Mr. Totten as the newsboy and the daring Government detective, and Miss Stonehouse as the little girl and the plucky woman reporter.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Third Chapter)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE two thrillers given so much advance notice by the producers of this continued story fall in this chapter. They are so daringly sensational that they materially elevate this number from the two preceding ones in point of excitement. In fact, they are unusually breath-taking feats.

In both of these death-defying events Irving Cummings figures in glorious solitude. Loss of life must have threatened him in both instances. That fact is obvious and it is this pointed risk which Mr. Cummings ran while executing the thrillers that will be responsible for their unlimited power to excite and startle.

Leading up to the first of these sensational performances is a dare-devil chase between Mr. Cummings in a racing car and an express train. The road leads him across the railroad tracks.

The car just makes the crossing in front of the rapidly moving train. If he had been an instant later it is unlikely that Mr. Cummings would still be in the land of the living.

Following this the young man coming to a turn in the road is unable to swerve his car around, and consequently it plunges over the brink of a precipice. Mr. Cummings jumps while the car is in midair and the man and the machine land many feet below in the water.

The action which leads up to this point in the story is as follows: After Blair has killed old Dr. Lee he leaves the house and encounters Arthur, who is serenading Esther. He fires a wild shot at his cousin, who drops his mandolin and hat to pursue him.

Overtaking him, Arthur demands the cause of his haste. Blair insults Arthur and Esther, which leads to a duel. Blair falls and Arthur, believing he has killed his cousin, escapes to his house.

In reality Blair is only slightly injured. He soon recovers consciousness and, returning home, tells his mother everything. She decides to keep Blair in hiding, so that Arthur will continue to believe him dead.

The next morning Arthur's hat and instrument lying in front of the dead doctor's house lead the sheriff to believe him guilty of the murder. He is pursued, with the results already noted.

"LITTLE SUNSET"

(Bosworth, Inc.—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

BASEBALL fans, and the national game surely has millions of devotees, will delight in this picture. The baseball atmosphere is so evidently photographs of real players, real games, real crowds, real training quarters and the few players fit so well into the atmosphere that the spectator is carried from his seat back to the days when he played "scrub" out behind the barn, from there to the vacant lot games and, finally, to big league contests.

Also, the ball game scenes are so reproduced that a technical knowledge of the game is not necessary for an appreciation of the picture, although it undoubtedly helps immensely.

"Little Sunset," the red-headed mascot of the Apaches, co-stars with the "terrible Swede," the Apaches' slugger. Gordon Griffith, an excellent child actor, as "Little Sunset" will be dear to the hearts of the women and get many a smile from the men by his self-reliance and belief in himself.

Hobart Bosworth, the Bosworth of old, who played in "The Sea Wolf," is the "terrible Swede." This is Bosworth at his best. Joseph Ray is "Little Sunset's" ball-player father. Marshall Stedman is a perfect type as the manager of the Apaches and Rhea Haines has a small part as the mother in which she does well.

After the death of his mother "Little Sunset" travels with the Apaches. The "terrible Swede" is his idol. In the midst of a nerve-racking season "Little Sunset" falls ill. While he is away the Swede receives a summons to attend to some property. He leaves the team. "I could have handled that Swede. Gee! But this team goes to pieces when I'm away," said "Little Sunset" on his sick bed.

But the Swede discovered the difference between returning to his home town as a hero and as a quitter. So he was shamed into returning. He got back just in time to take "Little Sunset" out to the field with him and knock a home run, which won the game and pennant.

In addition to the unusual interest, the picture is so well produced that one feels he is watching actual occurrences. With the baseball season in the full swing, "Little Sunset" should be one of the most popular pictures released in several months. The story is by Charles E. Van Loan, one of the best known of big league baseball writers.

"BAD BUCK OF SANTA YNEZ"

(Kay-Bee—Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE personal magnetism of William S. Hart is almost immeasureable. Neither is it confined to an effect on just one class of people, for his pictures are universally popular. While not widely different from other Hart pictures, "Bad Buck of Santa Ynez" seems to embody all the good points which have been noticeable in his previous productions.

The story is of that sympathetic and heroic class which glorifies a bandit with a deed that costs him his life. While escaping from the sheriff's posse, Bad Buck comes across a mother and child whose husband and father has just died. Bad Buck scorns the mother's entreaties, but the little girl persuades him to escort them to their home, after burying the dead man.

Subsequently the child is bitten by a snake, and Bad Buck rides to town, risking the posse, for a doctor. Returning, he is mortally wounded, but he lives to see the girl pronounced out of danger by the medical man.

Playing the part of the child is Thelma Salter, one of the most talented of child actresses, while Fanny Midgley is seen as her mother. The dramatic power of the scenes enacted by Mr. Hart and the little girl is immense; in fact, the entire picture is most enjoyable from every angle. Great attention has been paid to detail among other things, the scene of the snake biting the girl is handled with an incredible realistic result. The scenes and photography are faultless.

"THE TWO NATURES WITHIN HIM"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE Two Natures Within Him," which will be released on May 20, is the first of the series of Selig Diamond Specials, three reel productions which will be released every Thursday from now on.

The play hinges upon the psychological phenomenon of dual personality, and while this idea is by no means a new one, it is in this case well handled and logically developed to the climax, supplying very good material for an interesting picture.

The work of Thomas Santschi, both as William Morris, the minister, and as the unscrupulous criminal, is convincing throughout. Bessie Eyton makes an attractive heroine and Franklin Paul plays the part of Muggey Blake, the crook, in a realistic manner. While the picture requires no unusual or complicated staging, its production is very well handled.

The scenario was written by Jules Eckert Goodman. The story starts in the home of a wealthy young minister who is devoting his life to the reforming of criminals under the theory that they are merely good men gone wrong.

He is engaged to the daughter of a surgeon, a specialist in mental diseases. One night a blow on his head administered by a prowling crook, blots out entirely his memory of the past and transforms him from an upright man with high ideals to a criminal with the lowest instincts.

For years, while he is plying the trade of a thief, his friends are unable to solve the mystery of his sudden disappearance. One night he returns to rob his former home. His sweetheart and her father are living there. Just as he is arrested by a policeman they recognize his identity, but he denies knowing either of them. At the same time Muggey, the crook who had hit him on the head, is arrested.

He confesses the truth and the surgeon realizes that the only hope for William Morris is an operation upon his brain. This operation proves successful, much to the joy of the surgeon's daughter, and Morris is restored to his normal condition.

"WHEN IT STRIKES HOME"

(Harris-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE story told in "When It Strikes Home" embraces a number of highly strung situations, enough in fact to invest the offering with sufficient appeal to well sustain the interest. Its theme is one that cannot help but draw largely upon the sympathies of the onlooker, as it is endowed with a noticeable smattering of double standard propaganda.

Under the direction of Perry N. Vecroff, the story has been well picturized. Its powerfully dramatic moments have been carried out with understanding. The settings are in every sense appropriate. Harold Miller, who photographed the picture has achieved good results also. Except for the hospital scenes which are over-lighted, the five reels present a pleasing appearance photographically.

Dick Hartley, under the influence of liquor, marries a musical comedy queen. When sober he and his father effect an annulment. Dick marries another woman. Vera, the actress, deserts her child, which is adopted by Dick, who is ignorant of its parentage. Many years later when the baby has grown to manhood, he is an accomplished physician. A rival of the young doctor learns that old Hartley is unaware of his relations with the boy he has brought up as his son. He attempts to prove that he is the son of a crook, but at the crucial moment Vera announces his parentage.

HARTLEY PROPOSES TO VERA

Edwin August appears as Hartley, and gives a consistently average rendition of the part, although at times he appears to have too much make-up on his face. Grace Washburn is melodramatically inclined as Vera, overacting in many scenes. William Baily is the son and Muriel Ostriche his fiancee. The rival of the young doctor is poor.

Save for the annulment of the marriage the action is clear. The inconsistencies in the story are many. The production is not a high class feature, but should provide fair entertainment for second rate houses.

"HOUSES OF GLASS"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE strongest plot which has been used in any of the "Who Pays?" series up to date makes this, the sixth of them, one of much force. None of the principal characters in the drama is guilty of anything improper, yet a combination of circumstances leads rapidly from blind jealousy to murder. Gossip is the cause of all the trouble.

Two married couples live in the same town. One pair are happy in their whole-hearted love. The other are mismated and are constantly quarreling. The husband of the latter pair sees the other man in what he assumes to be a compromising position with his stenographer when he is actually assisting her after she has been partly overcome by illness.

He tells his jealous wife, who takes pleasure in whispering a warning concerning the stenographer to the pretty young wife. In spite of herself her suspicions are aroused to such an extent that she enters an office which looks into her husband's, in order to spy on him.

While there she nearly falls from the window and is rescued by the man whose gossip had started the trouble. He is seen by his wife, who files an action for divorce, naming the entirely innocent woman as the correspondent.

Meantime the young husband has sent the ill stenographer and her father for a rest to his cottage at the shore, thus giving gossip another boost. As a tragic climax he learns of the divorce action, and seeing his wife talking with the other man, whom she has encountered by accident, kills him. Thus the happiness and lives of the young couple are wrecked by the remarks of evil-minded scandal mongers.

"A WOMAN'S RESURRECTION"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THE Fox Film corporation well knows the value of a good story in motion pictures. Especially valuable have been the adaptations from the works of Count Tolstoi, of which "A Woman's Resurrection," based on Tolstoi's "Resurrection," is the latest. On the strength of its story alone, this is a powerful feature. It has another excellent reason for popularity in the appearance of Betty Nansen in the leading role, ably supported by Edward Jose, William J. Kelly, Arthur Hoops, Stuart Holmes and Mrs. Brundage.

The scene of the story is laid in Russia. Miss Nansen plays Katusha, a young servant girl, whose betrayal by the Prince, played by Kelly, leads to her degradation. While she is leading a "life of joy" she is accused of murder and sentenced to Siberia for life. The prince is on the jury. His better feelings are stirred.

He makes the journey to Siberia with her and the picture ends with the spiritual resurrection of Katusha at the expense of her earthly body. Jose plays the faithful servant of the Prince. Hoops leaves the Famous Players stock company to give his usual polished, forceful work as the villain. Stuart Holmes has a small part for him but plays it well.

Some ground for carping criticism may be found in the atmosphere of the picture as directed by J. Gordon Edwards. The scenes are supposedly laid in Russia. The characters bear Russian names. Yet, with the exception of Miss Nansen, they are decidedly un-Russian in appearance, especially Kelly. The exterior scenes are as atmospheric as can be obtained in this country, no doubt. The main problem there is to place the camera so as not to photograph peculiarly American objects on the landscape.

But these are comparatively unimportant when compared with the strength of the story and the excellence of the acting.

INTERESTING REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS OF THE WEEK—ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Bobby's Bargain." (Biograph. Fri., May 21.)—A clever little boy and girl are the leading characters in this comedy drama. Bobby wants a little sister, instead of the numerous toys with which he is surrounded. When he has an unexpected chance to exchange some of them for a perfectly good baby he takes advantage of the chance. The results are a little surprising to him, but happy nevertheless. Jack Mulhall and Rea Martin are seen as Bobby's parents.

"The First Piano in Camp." (Biograph. Sat., May 28.)—The story told in this picture has been famous for years, and can be found in many volumes of Western stories.

It tells how a clever crook disguised himself as a broken old man, and after playing on the new piano which had arrived in camp he proceeded to collect most of the coin in the place and disappear.

It is a clever story and makes a good comedy. Sam Davis is the author. The leading parts are played by Joseph McDermott, Walter Coyle and Ivan Christy.

"The Cancelled Mortgage." (Biograph. Mon., May 17.)—A pair of bandits take refuge in the house of a poor widow. In gratitude for her help they give her enough of their loot to pay off the mortgage which is about to be foreclosed on her place. They next rob the land shark of the money after the widow has paid it to him. Later they are captured. Harry Carey and Barney Furey are the bandits and Claire McDowell is seen as the widow. A good Western story.

"Felix Holt." (Biograph. Tues., May 18.)—George Eliot's novel has long enjoyed a popularity which makes any criticism unnecessary, not to say impertinent. It here appears as number thirty-seven in the Biograph's series of two reel pictures. G. Raymond Nye is seen in the title role and Viola Smith as Esther.

The story which is well known to readers of good books, deals with the part played by Felix Holt in restoring a girl to an estate from which she has been kept by fraud, and in addition introduces a considerable amount of English politics. The time is the early nineteenth century.

"For Her Happiness." (Biograph. Thurs., May 20.)—An invalid husband, realizing the sad lot of his wife, who not only has to support him, but who has a chance for happiness with another man, kills himself. Augusta Anderson is the wife. Charles Bennett plays the difficult role of the invalid husband.

"Their Own Ways." (Edison. Tues., May 18.)—A young city couple go for a visit to the bride's parents in the country. Supposing that the old people are very much worn out by the dull routine of their life the city folks ask them to come home for a visit.

The old people make all sorts of breaks and finally convince their daughter that the simple life of the farm is the only sort which they like. Mrs. Wallace Erskine and John Sturgeon play the parts of the old rural couple.

"Chinks and Chickens." (Edison. Wed., May 19.)—An amusing slapstick comedy which concerns just what the name implies. The Chinks try to acquire the chickens by the method proverbially in favor with the negro race. This is little appreciated by the owner, and trouble follows.

"A Hazardous Courtship." (Edison. Sat., May 22.)—A supposedly confirmed bachelor suddenly decides to get married, and so firm is his determination that he proposes to five women of varied ages, sizes and appearance.

They all belong to an athletic club and discover his duplicity, or perhaps multiplicity is the word, and his punishment is such that he never wants to see another woman. There are many clever comedy incidents.

"Manners and the Man." (Essanay. Mon., May 17.)—A wealthy young man wagers that he can pose as a butler without detection. After a number of complications, he loses the wager but wins a bride in the daughter of his employer. Thomas Aiken, Joseph Totten, Beverly Bayne and Betty Brown appear in this picture.

"A Lesson in Romance." (Essanay. Three acts, Tues., May 18.)—A man disgusted with the designing girls of society and a girl equally disgusted with social lions supply the plot for this story. After several adventures, the girl learns that the gypsy chief who had kidnapped her is really a wealthy man disguised to win her love and she consents to marry him. The cast is led by E. H. Calvert and Lilian Drew.

"The Fable of the Two Sensational Failures." (Essanay. Wed., May 19.)—The Rutherford Wiltons had planned for Oliver Cromwell, their son, a career as a great diplomat. They had equally high aspirations for Eloise, their daughter. Some clever George Ade sub-titles and acting by Lloyd Holton and Ruth Stonehouse show how both the children according to the fond parents' dope sheets are great failures. Eloise marries a millionaire and Oliver saves his father from bankruptcy with the money he had earned in one week of teaching the ladies of society the newest steps from Argentine and the Barbary Coast.

"Sweedie's Hero." (Essanay. Thurs., May 20.)—Wallace Beery and Ben Turpin appear in this comedy which shows the ludicrous experiences of Sweedie as a mop artist. Among other things she mistakes the train of a woman's gown for a mop, rolls down ten flights of stairs and is saved from falling out of the tenth story window by a bell hop. She falls on his neck instead.

"Otherwise Bill Harrison." (Essanay. Two acts. Sat., May 22.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Liberty Party." (Kalem. Tues., May 18.)—This is an extremely entertaining specimen of the Ham comedies. Ham and Bud escape from jail and take refuge in a paperhanger's store. They answer a hurry call for a job of papering, and the work which they do is remarkable, to say the least.

Bud is happy to have the owner of the house object because in him he at last finds a man he can whip. Eventually their experience pall on the two cronies and they gladly return to their homelike jail.

"The Closed Door." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., May 19.)—Marin Sais as a girl detective is called upon to meet the tricks of an expert and clever crook, who is entirely without feeling.

He not only locks his wife up on a faked charge of insanity, but manages to trap the detective with her. The asylum is of course run by one of his partners in crime. In the end the two women escape and the crook is captured. Thomas Lingham makes a polished and effective villain.

"The Broken Train." (Kalem. Sat., May 22.) There is some very good thrilling action in this picture, belonging to the "Hazards of Helen" series.

The fearlessness shown by Helen Holmes as she drives an automobile between the moving sections of a freight train is responsible for an unusual amount of excitement, while again as she leaps from the car onto the freight train, the sensation created is one of admirable wonder.

As for the plot it is rather hazy at first, but becomes clear as the action progresses. It concerns two crooks who are at first successful in robbing the express company of some valuable jewels, but brave Helen puts a sudden and decisive stop to the proceedings.

"Jean of the Jail." (Kalem. Fri., May 21.—This is an Alice Joyce drama with that fair lady playing the daughter of a Mexican jailer. A noted prisoner makes his escape, but the girl's lover brings him back and the old man retains his job.

The escape and the subsequent chase of the bandit is played up with the result that a good amount of suspense is created. The picture is a reissue and features Carlyle Blackwell and Alice Joyce.

"The Jest of Jealousy." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., May 17.)—A Western drama written by Will M. Ritchie, with Frances Marion, Frank Mayo and Bruce Smith in the cast. A sheriff living on a Western ranch is about to lose his position as a result of his failure to catch Mexican Pete, an escaped murderer.

An Eastern man, friend of his daughters, who has been away at school, aids in running down Mexican Pete. It later develops that he is not engaged to the daughter as her Western suitor had jealously inferred from a letter written to him.

"Across the Desert." (Selig. Sat., May 8.)—A Western drama produced by Burton L. King from a story by F. M. Willis. It depicts a gruelling trip across the desert during which a man forced to choose between leaving a baby and some bags of gold decides to carry the gold, but later sacrifices his life to save the baby when his better nature triumphs. A good production of a morbid but interest-holding story.

"Love Finds a Way." (Selig. Wed., May 19.)—A picture of revolutionary days well produced by Thomas Santschi, with him and Bessie Eyton in the leading roles. The daughter of a crusty old Tory runs away with a captain in George Washington's army. Some passages in her mother's diary softens the father's heart, and he forgives her.

"Mr. Jarr and the Dachshund." (Vitagraph. Mon., May 17.)—When Mr. Jarr discovers that his dog has disappeared, and that his neighbor has one just like it there is trouble right away. After a notable battle Mr. Jarr triumphantly carries the dog away, only to find his own pup sitting at his door when he reaches home. The picture is number seven in the excellent comedy series concerning the Jarr family.

"Almost a Hero." (Vitagraph. Wed., May 18.)—A fresh masher arrives in a small town and soon finds himself in trouble which he has not the nerve to face. He induces another guest at the hotel to change rooms with him in order to avoid a delegation of villagers, who are coming to make it hot for him.

The innocent occupant of the room routs the whole party. A comedy with plenty of action. Margaret Gibson, Don Clark and Jack Mower are the principals.

"'Dimples,' the Auto Salesgirl." (Vitagraph. Thurs., May 20.)—Billy Quirk and Lillian Walker are the principals of this amusing comedy built around the "Flivver" automobile. Van Dyke is the agent for this make of car, while Dimples owns a big car, and a father of uncertain temper. Dimples takes a hand in the business of selling Flivvers and there is a sudden boom, followed by a happy elopement.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Gussle's Backward Way." (Keystone. Mon., May 3.)—One of the Syd Chaplin pictures with an Alpine setting. There is a wealth of humor in the reel, Chaplin effecting some incidental and original antics which are very funny. The scenes in which his trusty steed, a mule, is galloping along the road backwards, is a sidesplitter. There is nothing that is vulgar in this and much that is comical.

"Gussle Tied to Trouble." (Keystone. Thurs., May 6.) Another burlesque Alpine picture with Syd Chaplin playing the lead. While on the top of a mountain he disguises himself as a bandit and robs his companions, who discover his villainy later on. This is a very good comedy containing several scenes which take away the breath, as well as many more that heartily amuse.

"Naughty Henrietta." (Beauty. Tues., May 18.)—Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell play this comedy which shows how a coquette wins an attractive but confirmed bachelor by sending him each month a calendar adorned with her picture. Amusing, but rather silly.

"Love and Money." (Thanhouser. Mon., May 9.)—It is the American widow's plan to catch a foreign nobleman for her daughter, but an American wins her affections while his uncle marries the widow. Only a fair comedy. Familiar Central Park is given as a Paris scene.

"The Spell of the Poppy." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., May 9.)—An opium user, who plays a piano in a cafe, is sent abroad by a man of wealth to study music, and returns a successful performer, but still an opium smoker.

He deserts his former mistress and becomes the companion of a society girl, whom he induces to become an opium user. This girl's lover is warned by the jealous woman and succeeds in saving her from the hands of the opium fiend, Eugene Pallette is seen as the musician and Lucille Young as his mistress. Joseph Hennaberry is the hero.

"Flooey and Axel." (Komic. Sun., May 9.)—Flooey and Axel have become familiar through the newspaper cartoons dealing with their exploits. This is the first of their screen adventures. They try to help their artist creator to success in his love affair and in his efforts to land a job, but their well meaning assistance only brings more trouble. Portions of the pictures consist of animated cartoons. "Vic" Forsythe, the artist, appears as himself.

"Our Dare-Devil Chief." (Keystone. Two reels. Monday, May 10.)—A most humorous offering in which Ford Sterling appears in the title part, a role which long ago gained him fame and popularity. The chief is in love with the mayor's daughter, but is constantly getting into trouble with that high official.

Sterling's facial expressions are as humorous as ever, while there are many scenes of an original nature in the two reels. Minta Durfee plays opposite friend Ford, while the rest of the cast, including a number of burlesque crooks, is most capable. For a refined slapstick-burlesque this offering is very good.

"Son of 'the Dog.'" (Reliance. Wed., May 12.)—The Indian's son, while yet a young lad, is sent East to be educated. He returns to the West, accompanied by his wife and child many years later and practices medicine. The old Indian does not reveal his identity until he has rescued his grandson from a hostile Red Skin. Instead of being mortified when he learns his parentage the young man is very much pleased.

This is a heart-interest drama with Dark Cloud playing the Dog. There are a number of skirmishes between redskins and soldiers, which add a considerable amount of excitement. The young boy doesn't make a very good actor, yet his scenes with the old Indian are most sympathetic. The photography and scenes are excellent.

"Mutual Weekly." (Thurs., May 13.)—A view of the Panama-Pacific Exposition at night is an interesting feature in this reel. The fifty-seventh annual conclave of the Knight Templars in San Francisco and the ruins of the St. Paul, Minn., public library fire are timely topics. Scenes relative to the war comprise the larger portion of the rest of the number.

"The Greater Strength." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 17.)—This picture contains some beautiful scenery and is acted by a good cast with Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood as principals. A young doctor goes to a mining camp and there falls in love with a pretty school teacher.

After laying himself open to the accusation of cowardice by not protecting her honor when it is assailed, he proves his courage through overpowering the bully of the camp in order to perform an operation upon a child.

Some people may not see the nobility of character which made him use his strength only for the saving of life, but the school teacher is not one of these, so the story ends happily.

"The Heart of Princess Marsari." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., May 18.)—In which Marguerite Snow liberates her lover, who was arrested for murder, by discovering the real culprit. Not a very good drama as no motive is given for the murder.

The experiments with liquid air are interesting but bear no close relation to the plot. Jim Cruz appears as the father of the Princess in his old disguise of the mystic, while Harry Benham is the lover. The entire picture is reminiscent of the early "Zudora" episodes.

"At the Edge of Things." (American, W[illegible]d., May 19.)—A man thinking that he has lost [illegible] fortune in the slump of copper stock and [illegible] his wife has deserted him, is prevented [illegible] committing suicide by his butler, who [illegible] from at the crucial moment to rob his mast[illegible]er's safe in order to recuperate the loss that [illegible] the slump in stock has caused him.

The next day the broker learns his wife had left to try to obtain money from her father to carry him over. The stock rises in value so everything ends happily. [illegible] Day, Lythgoe, Vivian Rich and Jack Richardson play this drama, which is exciting, but not entirely convincing.

'The Operator at Big Sandy." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., May 19.)—The dance hall girl flees her home town after her father has gambled and lost her. In a neighboring town she makes her home with the station agent and his mother, learning to assist the man in his duties. So when the gambler shows up at the head of a gang of train robbers, she is able to save the day.

This is very well put on, and the final scenes are of a thrilling variety. The acting is excellent. Rhea Mitchell is the girl, Edward Brennan the gambler and Tom Chatterton the station agent, who finally marries the girl who caused his promotion by her heroic deed.

"Her Alibi." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., May 20.)—Still another story of the reformed girl with a questionable past. Matters turn out well, as usual. This story is all very good, but there have been an unusual number of them from the New York Motion Picture studios of late.

In this there are many thrilling scenes, and scenes which have the happy faculty of getting the spectator on edge, such as the breaking open of the jail and the escape of the prisoners.

Those scenes in which the girl is trying to keep the true nature of her past from her husband are productive of a great amount of suspense. Harry Keenan is the husband, Elizabeth Burbridge his wife and Frank Borzage her brother.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"Their Initiation." (Superba. Tues., May 11.)—A slapstick comedy of the most extreme type. A man who is fond of joining secret orders leaves a card to an initiation where his wife finds it. She decides to disguise herself and be initiated. Before the ceremonies are over she repents her hasty action. She is arrested and fined for masquerading as a man, while her husband is gathered in for entering his own house by a window.

"Business Is Business." (Ideal. One reel)—This is a slapstick comedy of a Jew who, after being forced out of the second hand clothing business, goes West and starts to work on a ranch. Needless to say, the boys have much fun with him, but his underhanded methods soon enable him to have a little amusement of his own.

"Bumped for Fair." (Superba. One reel.)—One hobo is knocked down by a motor car. The owner takes him home and gives him the best of care because of his fear of arrest. His pal tries the same stunt but it fails to work so well. Slapstick comedy of the most extreme sort.

"She Couldn't Get Away from It." (Luna. One reel.)—A crabbed spinster is angered by the rage for a popular song. She goes West to escape it, but finds everyone singing it. In an unexpected way the ditty leads her to adopt an orphaned baby, and broadened her life in many ways. Dot Farley plays the lead.

"The Smuggler's Daughter." (United. Two reels.)—An opium smuggler of the West has a daughter who inherits none of his criminal tendencies. When a revenue officer appears in the region she falls in love with him. Her romance ends happily thanks to the timely death of her unworthy father. There is a good scene showing the rescue of the girl from a runaway wagon, as well as some attractive Western scenery.

"War at Home." (Grandin. Two reels.)—Ethel Grandin, is, as is usual with this brand, featured in this picture. A young couple quarrel over a worthless dog which the wife insists on keeping. They separate for several months. The husband gets the dog again and starts home for a reconciliation. Meantime the wife has borrowed a baby to show her husband, but thinks better of the plan. There is no real plot, but some of the comedy situations are good.

"The Law of Nature." (Pyramid. Two reels.)—Edwin August and Iva Shepard are featured in this problem drama. It is the old story of the wife who refuses to have children. A divorce follows and the husband marries a woman whose ideals are in accord with his. The former wife has a child and is cast off by her paramour. She knows that she is about to die and leaves the child in her former husband's automobile, with a request that it be cared for. Then she dies knowing that her child will be looked after.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 166." (Wed., May 12.)—The most notable events in this number are: A View of the Lusitania; a remarkable series of scenes of the San Francisco fair by night; the arrival of the American Atlantic fleet in New York harbor; scenes along the lines of the annual Marathon through the streets of New York City conducted by the New York "Evening Mail," and society attending the races at Hewlett Park, L. I.

"Baby." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., May 17.)—The baby causes its father to neglect his wife, business and social duties, until finally the distressed mother manages to calm her delighted husband. Then one day he is called home suddenly, to find that three more have been added to the family, and the moral is, "Be content with what you have."

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby play the leads in this, and the former directed the work. The action may be classified as very fine and refined comedy until the somewhat rough finale is presented, which might easily be changed. Harry Myers does very well as the distracted husband, and puts over some fine pieces of comedy sure to be appreciated.

Miss Theby has a less humorous part, as in most of her scenes she is engaged in "bawling out" hubby, but in these she does well. The subtitles are cleverly written, and are in most instances framed in border of humorously conceived pictures which illustrate the written lines.

"Destiny's Trump Card." (Imp. Mon., May 17.)—The ex-convict as usual has a hard time trying to live straight, especially when he is a confirmed inebriate. With the aid of his wife and the lucky capture of two robbers he is cleared of a charge against him and resolves to lead a better life. Produced by William Garwood, who also plays the principal male part. Violet Mersereau plays opposite. An old story with a few new situations which ought to make it entertaining.

"A Day at the San Diego Fair." (Joker., Mon., May 17.)—The California Expositions have afforded the western comedy companies innumerable chances to procure novelty in setting and situation for their releases. For this reel Allen Curtis and his Joker company comprised of Max Asher, Gale Henry, William Franey and Milburn Moranti, journeyed to San Diego and made use of the sundry amusement resorts to create fun and laughter.

The comedians, it need hardly be said, are all capable performers, in their particular lines, and the humor in this reel is worthy to cause it to be classed with the truly excellent slapstick comedies.

"The Dancer." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., May 18.)—A dancer is successful in alienating the affections of a man from his wife and they are on the point of eloping when the woman discovers that the wife she is about to wrong is her own daughter. After a tremendous struggle with herself she gives the man up.

The situations in this are intensely strong, the acting very good, and the direction entirely suitable. Cleo Madison gives an emotionally expressive performance of the dancer, especially when the realization of her relationship with her lover's wife dawn's upon her. Joe King plays the husband and Agnes Vernon is a sympathetic wife. Charles Giblyn, also the director, appears as the dancer's partner.

Several spectacular effects have been secured in the cafe scenes, while all the sittings are most fitting. The photography is distinct throughout the whole picture.

"When Cupid Crossed the Bay." (Nestor, Tuesday, May 18.)—Two flirts set their eyes on a girl accompanied by her irate father. They flirt on the ship and at length she leaves her sleeping father for their company. After a lot of fun on land and water father gives his consent. Billie Rhodes, Jack Dillon, Neal Burns and Harry Rattenberry are in the cast. Al Christie wrote and directed the picture. Unusually pretty scenes. The laughs come thick and fast in this.

"From Italy's Shores." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., May 19.)—On arriving in America, the Italian and his wife are separated. Through a blow on his head the foreigner is rendered unsound in mind. His wife becomes a singer of no little repute. As time passes her husband is employed as a gardner, and at a lawn party he sees his wife singing. The sight of her restores his mind and all ends happily.

This was made for Universal by the Rolin company, with Roy Stewart playing the Italian. He and the other principals give pleasing performances. The picture is very good as regards photography and the scenes and settings are most appropriate, especially the garden party. The story is of the variety which will please those who care for subjects that sacrifice logic and realism to procure heart-interest and sympathetic presentation. It is not a picture to project before an intelligent audience.

"Love and Sour Notes." (L-Ko. Wed., May 19.)—Zu Zu, an accomplished musician and Nightingale, one of the bogus variety, are rivals for the hand of Peggy, and their rivalry leads to innumerable hot encounters. Billie Ritchie and Peggy Pearce are the leads in this slapstick which is of the terrific rough and tumble variety.

In the finale the two rivals are reposing on the roof of a church, which caves in, in such a realistic manner that one would imagine the two actors received injuries. This is not as good as the L-Ko forces can do, the funniest scenes being when Nightingale sucks a lemon while Zu Zu is playing a wind instrument, causing his thoraxial organs to contract.

"The Battle of Running Bull." (Sterling. Two reels. Thurs., May 20.)—A burlesque war offering, in which the cook of the regiment turns out to be the hero of the day.

The definition of the picture running under the main title is given as comedy-drama, but why the drama? There's not a bit of it in the story, which is evidently intended to be totally humorous. And as for that, the picture is very funny in a great many scenes of the second reel, and some few of the first.

It would make an excellent one reel subject, but as it stands some of the action tires because there is little plot to sustain the interest. The battle scenes, by the way, are very good. Perhaps this is where the drama comes in. Dot Gould and John Brennan are in the cast.

"A Fireside Realization." (Rex. Thurs., May 20.)—The husband who is prone to neglect his wife dreams that she elopes with another man, and on awakening he resolves to be more attentive. Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips appear in this offering, which although plainly old, furnishes a fair fifteen minutes' entertainment.

"Celeste." (Big U. Thurs., May 20.)—Three refugees from the war, a girl and her two younger sisters, are adopted by an American family. The girl marries the son of the house. This drama contains many actual scenes of the battle fields, which are blended in very well with those enacted by the players. The story will please although there is not a great deal to it. Muriel Ostriche appears as the girl, supported by Earle Foxe and Charles Ogle.

"Court Martialed." (Imp. Four reels. Fri., May 21.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"They Were Heroes." (Nestor. Fri., May 21.)—Through a mistake both of the two week-enders arrive at their host's house, while he and his wife are away. Each takes the other for a burglar, and many are the laughs until all parties are able to get together and explain.

Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde are the visitors in this, while Lee Moran is the host. On the whole the picture is a good comedy. The interest lags in a very few of the scenes, but the humorous moments are greater than the slow ones.

"When Love Is Love." (Rex. Two reels. Sat., May 22.)—The manager of a large concern has a dissolute brother who travels on the road for the same company. The brother steals some of the firm's money and the manager discovers the theft and the culprit, and in desperation is about to end his hard life, when the stenographer of the office who has won a large sum in a lottery, replaces his ticket with her own, enabling him to replace the stolen money. In time he realizes her sacrifice and love is the result.

This was produced by Joseph De Grasse with a selection of stars drawn from a number of Universal companies. Pauline Bush has a role, much to her liking, as the red headed and at first despised stenographer. William Clifford is the manager and Ray Gallagher his brother, while Agnes Vernon is their employer's daughter. The story was written by Ida May Parke, and due to the very good direction it should take well in any theatre.

"Diamonds of Fate." (Powers. Sat., May 22.)—A-man-about-town makes various attempts through his tool, an artist, to procure a model for his own, but each time he is frustrated by a worthy man, who finally marries the girl. This drama will please, as it is produced well and acted commendably by a cast including Sydney Ayres. Val Paul and Doris Pawn. It is well photographed and the scenes, most of which are interiors, are most appropriate.

THE BUILDER OF BRIDGES

THIS Gustave Frohman photo production is a drama by Alfred Sutro, strong and compelling when first enacted, and now increased in interest through the possibilities of the camera. The first screen appearance of C. Aubrey Smith has in support a powerful cast of experienced actors selected for individual fitness and including G. W. Anson, Jack B. Sherrill, Ed. R. Mawson, Fred Eric, Sidney Mason, Marie Edith Wells, Helen Weer and Kate Meek.

Scenic locations ranging from massive interiors to the swaying cable hoist of a huge bridge, contribute to the action without dominating it. Skillful stage technique is splendidly exemplified in the direction of George Irving.

Horsley Buys Two Educated Chimpanzees for Zoo

President of Centaur Obtains from Widow of Bostock Members of Anthropoid (a Long Word but Sometimes Useful) Family for His Collection

WITH the purchase of two educated chimpanzees from the widow of the late Frank C. Bostock, David Horsley acquired possession of the only performers that escaped his raid of several months ago upon the unmatched Bostock collection of wild animal actors.

The chimpanzees were the pets of Mrs. Bostock. Their superior intelligence over the rest of the anthropoid family with the Bostock aggregation had so attached them to the wife of the "animal king" that when Mr. Horsley completed arrangements with Harry E. Tudor, who represented the Bostock interests, for the purchase of the complete roster of animals, Mrs. Bostock emphatically declined to include her friends.

The accomplishments of these "chimps," who respond to the royal patronyms of King and Queen, are many. Besides riding motorcycles, playing musical instruments, and performing other difficult feats, King and Queen are aviators.

The initial attempts to drill the pupils into the methods of starting and raising the machine, to circle the enclosure, and to stop and to land, were fraught with possibilities for an excellent comedy scenario. In antics no animal is funnier than the ape, and these practice flights afforded so much amusement that White City Park was crowded whenever a lesson was scheduled. After weeks of effort, King and Queen were able to fly like professional aviators.

Intent upon using these finished comedians for comedy roles in his animal pictures, Mr. Horsley made such persistent effort to corral them that Mrs. Bostock finally acquiesced, and the purchase was made. Mr. Horsley now owns every performer of the Bostock Menagerie, known as the largest and most magnificent collection of animal actors in the world.

The first picture in which the animals, including King and Queen, will appear will be released very shortly.

COSTELLO PRODUCING 5-REEL FEATURE

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, May 10.

Frank J. Costello, manager and director of the Pacific Motion Picture Company, at San Rafael, has taken over the old Phoenix studio there, and is busily producing a five-reel feature "Under the Mistletoe Bough." Sadie Brown and Clinton Nye are playing the leads.

Mr. Costello, announces that he has secured the services of Josephine Rector, late of the Essanay and Yolo companies to handle all the scenarios of the Pacific Motion Picture concern.

"June" Voting Contest Is Extended to Canada

Women of the Dominion Want a Chance to Take in the Free Special Trip to California Offered by Reliance to Successful Contestants

THE "Runaway June" contest, with its coveted prizes of free trips to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, in San Francisco, and the San Diego Exposition, was extended to Canada this week by the Reliance Motion Picture corporation. The Reliance took this action at the urgent request of many Canadian exhibitors.

The demands of the exhibitors were preceded by great popular interest on the part of Canadian women in the contest.

The advertising and publicity of the "Runaway June" contest had aroused Canadian women and made them wish to be on the Reliance special California train. They made this interest practical when they began to demand of their theatres that the exhibitors run "Runaway June" and the contest in their theatres.

Canadian exhibitors at once got in touch with the Reliance corporation, and by the latter organization were placed in touch with the Serial Publication corporation which is marketing "Runaway June."

The extension of the contest to Canada means that one woman will be selected from each of the seven provinces by photoplay patrons. These Canadian winners will join the American winners aboard the Reliance special. The interest which the people of Canada are taking in the contest is operating there just as it is here.

Marc MacDermott as the Compelling Cavalier

Miriam Nesbitt as the Heroic Southern Girl

In The

3-ACT FEATURE WAR ROMANCE

"Sally Castleton, Southerner"

(A Civil War Story Without a Battle)

By Crittenden Marriott. Released Monday, May 24th—3000 feet.

Seldom is Marc MacDermott so happily cast as when the warlike cavalier roaming with his trusty sword ready to give battle to a nemesis Fate. And in depicting the girl, who excites our admiration by loyalty to cause and self-sacrificing devotion to principle, there is no exponent of temperament or character on the screen to equal Miriam Nesbitt.

In "Sally Castleton, Southerner," is a play which breathes with the powerful passions that drove men in the Civil War to heroic sacrifices. Marc MacDermott, as the soldier lover whom Fate has placed as a spy in a cause fighting against that of his sweetheart, gives a forceful and compelling portrayal that lifts it out of the classification of "acting." While Miriam Nesbitt, a Southern girl by birth, plays the fiery, loyal Southern lass whose love for her sweetheart is sacrificed to her cause, with that sureness of touch that distinguishes all her sympathetic characterizations.

Every week, in the Regular Service, Edison is putting out Features that are winning critic and Exhibitor alike, by reason of intrinsic worth—because they fulfill every acid test that a fickle pandered-to public can demand—plays that are powerful without resorting to the dregs of life—plays that strike home because they dramatize, to suspenseful degrees, life's most dramatic moments.

Bessie Learn, in a 2-reel of Feature strength, "According to Their Lights," gives a remarkable emotional portrayal of the unlettered pretty mountain lass, who reaches the depths of our hearts by giving her life in a grim tragedy of the hills. The suspense in this play will astonish. With Pat O'Malley, Margaret Prussing, Yale Benner, Charles Sutton and William West. Direction Eugene Nowland. Released Friday, May 28th—2000 feet.

Marc MacDermott in a wonderful picturization of mental anguish in "The Man Who Could Not Sleep." Direction John H. Collins. Released Wednesday, May 26th—1000 feet.

Wadsworth and Housman in the comedy "All Cooked Up." Released Tuesday, May 25th—1000 feet.

Raymond McKee, Dallas Welford and Yale Benner in a revival of the comedy "The Dumb Wooing." Direction Will Louis. Released Saturday, May 29th—1000 feet.

Motors

Once upon a time, in the days when automobiles were all the rage, there lived a man named Bill. Following the lead of others, Bill decided that he, too, must have a car. After a week spent in looking over different makes and models he bought a machine that in iridescent splendor ran a dead heat with the wonderful creations as illustrated in the advertising sections of the classy magazines. So impressive was its appearance that three of Bill's friends each bought a car of the same model.

The first fine day Bill started out for a spin. All went well until he reached a big hill. The car could not climb it. When Bill returned home he called an automobile expert who soon discovered that Bill bought style and appearance, without giving even the slightest consideration to the worth of the car's most vital part—THE MOTOR.

Bill had always been lucky and in this case luck did not desert him. A neighbor had seen him return with the car, which so struck his fancy that he offered the owner five hundreds dollars more than the original purchase price. Of course, Bill eagerly accepted.

Fortune, however, was not so kind to Bill's three friends who, finding their cars worthless with bad motors, sold out at a big loss.

This incident is parallel with a situation in the motion picture business today.

The film rage has brought Bill and his many friends into the game as exhibitors. They erect beautiful theatres and buy the finest equipment to be had, but overlook the most vital part of the scheme—GOOD PICTURES.

For a time their business is good because these fine theatres are a novelty, and the necessity of powerful driving force in the way of good pictures is not realized—just as Bill did not notice the defect in his motor while rolling along on a level road-way.

But with their theatres past the novelty stage, these exhibitors face an uphill climb to success, which they are unable to accomplish simply because they lack the motive power of good pictures to carry them on. Stalled at the bottom of the hill, unable to advance, they fail.

An occasional exhibitor proves an exception to the rule by making money with bad pictures, just as Bill made money selling a car with a defective motor. However, such results are a stroke of rare luck—they do not permit of repetition. The exhibitors who always succeed are those who combine the strong driving force of good pictures with the advantages of beautiful and comfortable theatres.

MinA Films furnish the power to help exhibitors climb the big hill to success. These one-reel comedies are smooth running in conception, high geared in action and strong in fun making.

A powerful one-reel MinA comedy released every Thursday on the General Film Program

MUTUAL MASTER PICTURES

In this adaptation of the famous and widely read novel, "At the Mercy of Tiberius" by Augusta Evans Wilson, a worthy criterion of film achievement has been attained.

The Thanhouser resources have been extended to accomplish the best effects in settings and dramatic values. The result compels conservative pride to give way to elation, for "GOD'S WITNESS" has surpassed all aims and expectations.

It is a distinct and refreshing departure from the prevalent conception of multi-reel requirements. Its tone is high, its appeal convincing, its types true and it moves naturally, smoothly and unerringly on to a terrifically tense emotional climax.

Wherever human hearts throb with the tempest and sunshine of existence there will "GOD'S WITNESS" find enthusiastic approval.

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS give their full measure of comfort by banishing "flicker" and making eye-strain practically impossible. From the exhibitors' point of view, they have been of value in making "those seats up front" as attractive as any other seats in the house and by giving sharper, clearer pictures with the minimum expenditure for electrical current.

Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

FAMILY THEATRE OPENS IN ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., has a new motion picture theatre, the Murray, a neighborhood house in the outlying district designed for evening performances only, except on holidays.

The theatre opened its doors a few days ago, with a great hurrah, and from the demonstrations heard it appears that there was a demand for it.

The new house is located on Murray street, a short distance from Lyell avenue. It was built to seat 1,000 people, of whom about three hundred will be located in a balcony.

INTERIOR OF THE MURRAY FROM THE STAGE

William A. Buckley, postmaster, is one of the owners of the new theatre, being vice-president of the Murray Amusement Company, which controls it. Joseph A. Kerber is president, and is managing the house. William McCormick is secretary-treasurer.

The theatre is of brick, with a plastic exterior and a handsome lobby. It has ample space on either side for runways and exits.

It is fitted out with a mirror screen and comfortable chairs, with a broad aisle down each side. Later on it is proposed to install an organ. For the present a piano and small orchestra furnish music.

On the opening day there were 2,000 paid admissions. That was on a Saturday. Since that time patronage has been excellent.

This is but one of several theatres in Rochester located out of the business district, and catering exclusively to neighborhood patronage.

Michigan Theatres Corporation Enlarges Scope

A DEAL involving a motion picture producing company capitalized at $2,000,000 and a chain of 3,000 leading motion picture theatres throughout the United States is now being engineered by A. W. Blankmeyer, of Detroit, president and general manager of the Michigan Theatres corporation. The plan is for the producing company to make two features a week for the theatres; the theatres, in their turn, to hold stock in the producing company. This was explained by Mr. Blankmeyer at the Hotel Astor, New York City, Saturday, May 8.

"The producing company has already been incorporated in New York State," said Mr. Blankmeyer. "Now we are establishing thirty circuits, each to contain 100 exhibitors. Several of these have already been organized and I think the rest will follow easily enough. Each theatre will own a franchise which can only be transferred with the sanction of the National Board of Directors. Thus no two theatress will be in direct competition.

"We will work two prints of each picture over each circuit, getting about 80 days' service out of each print. We have gauged our prices so that the first seven days will be $50 a day; the next twenty-three days, $25 a day; the next thirty days, $20 a day and the balance of the life of the picture $15 a day."

Minneapolis Exhibitors Pleased With Motiograph

DAVID S. ROGERS, one of Minneapolis's most prominent and progressive exhibitors, has been using two 1910 model Motiographs continuously in his theatre for five years.

He claims that both of these machines project as good and better pictures than any new machine he has seen. By lately purchasing new mechanisms at a small cost he expects that they will continue to do excellent work for a number of years.

Louisiana Automatic Musical Company Formed

THE Louisiana Automatic Musical Company, Inc., has been formed in Shreveport, La., by A. H. Westin, of Chicago, H. S. Levine, of Shreveport, and Alfred Livingston, of Chicago.

The company is to manufacture automatic instruments for film houses amongst other things.

Third Power-Baird Decision Handed Down

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, plaintiff vs. C. R. Baird Company and Chester R. Baird, defendants, before Judge D. J. Mayer, United States District Court, Southern District of New York, for infringement of Letters Patent No. 959,601 dated May 31, 1910, covering unfair competition in the sale of parts manufactured and sold by the C. R. Baird Company for use in repairing Power Nos. 5 and 6 projection machines.

"This case is much ado about almost nothing, but a fair modus vivendi can be established if both sides have sense enough to abide by it. Each has indulged in some self-laudatory trade talk as to the manufacture of parts, but with this the court is not concerned."

"There is no evidence to show that defendants have attempted to palm off their machine parts as those of complainant but, on the contrary, defendants, since the difference between the parties which severed thir relations, have openly pushed their own goods and insisted upon their merit and superiority."

"Let the public buy which they please."

"To avoid question, one sentence of the 'Greeting' in the circular should be amended as indicated:

"Original.—'We were the original manufacturers and believe the success of some machines has been owing largely to the fine parts of same having been made by C. R. Baird Company, though stamped by the machine maker with his name.'

"Amended.—'We were the early manufacturers of some parts of Power No. 5 and of one part of Power No. 6. We believe the success of some machines has been owing largely to the fine parts of same having been made by C. R. Baird Company, though stamped by the machine maker with his name.'

Caution Against Creating Wrong Impression

"The reasons for the suggested changes are as follows:

"While Baird, in my opinion, was the first important manufacturer of the fine parts of No. 5, he was not literally the original manufacturer and, as No. 6 has apparently substantially supplanted No. 5, any advertisement from now on should not be framed so as to give the impression that Baird made more than one part for No. 6."

"In the foregoing I am not to be understood as outlining the precise language to be used, for I am not a draftsman of advertisements, but I desire simply to convey the thought."

"Baird said in answer to my inquiry that he would do anything that I thought was fair."

"What I think should be done and what I believe I have the power to do, sitting as a court of equity, is to require that the existing circulars be destroyed and a stipulation be filed that circulars in future shall conform with this opinion—all as a condition for the dismissal of the bill. The rest of the advertising matter may or may not be trade libel, but there is nothing which constitutes unfair competition."

"Of course, unfair competition may exist without intent but where, as here, in my opinion, there was not any intent whatever to be unfair, I think there should be no decree provided that defendants, by their conduct, will show their good faith by accepting the conditions which I have pointed out."

"I have noticed from time to time how decisions of courts in cases of unfair competition are advertised in trade journals and otherwise, and I should be quite unwilling to make a decree here which would, in any way, reflect upon or injure either side to this litigation."

"What I have outlined that I think ought to be done, is in the hope that these parties will have no occasion for further litigation on this branch of the controversy, and that both shall have the fullest opportunity to get all the business possible which they can capture by fair methods and fair competition on the part of each of them."

"If the condition indicated is complied with, the bill will be dismissed without costs; if the condition is not complied with plaintiff may have a decree enjoining further publications in the particulars mentioned."

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

J. R. F., Ashtabula Harbor, O.—We have two Power's 6-A machines and are using direct current projected upon a Masterlite screen, but we find great difficulty in seating our patrons in the front rows, due to a flicker in the picture which I cannot eliminate except by running the machine at a high rate of speed, which spoils the action in most of the pictures. Kindly advise what kind of a shutter I may use to overcome this difficulty. Projection distance is sixty-one feet.

ANSWER: Two conditions of things come to mind that may be the cause of the trouble. The shutter may be one and the reflecting medium the other. If it is due to the shutter, using one having a larger area of open space would be advised from the fact that it will hold the light on the screen for a longer space of time intervals. The persistence of vision will more than endure the time interval the light is cut off, and flicker be thus eliminated.

With some reflecting surfaces the light at all angles is not equal, and when projecting upon such a surface the tendency will be from this defect to increase the flicker, or, more exactly, give rise to it. As a suggestion to determine if the screen medium is at fault in this case, you may place, with temporary fastening, one of the poster sheets, with its back turned toward the lens over the regular screen.

Then project a picture. Moving from one side of the house to the other, you can readily see the difference in the two screen mediums. If both show the flicker, it cannot be from fault of the screen, and the trouble would seem to be one of shutter arrangement, or its proper adjustment.

Trouble With the Screen

H. E. R., Onoka, Minn.—I am having trouble with my projection and would like to receive advice as to the cause and what may be done to overcome the difficulty. The projector is a Power 6-A, motor driven; projection distance one hundred and five feet, and with the lens furnished with the machine it gives a picture twelve by thirteen feet.

The screen is one of a regular stock from a concern in Minneapolis. It was necessary recently to recoat it with a white solution. The condenser is of the concave-convex behind, a double-convex in front.

The current is from a G. E. rectifier forty amperes tube. The carbons are five-eighths cored above and one-half solid below.

I have a rectifier adjusted up to the next last notch, line voltage is one hundred and ten volts, sixty cycles, A. C. The difficulty is that the picture looks hazy and I cannot obtain a sharp focus. Before the curtain was repainted I had no trouble about focusing.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

I have cleansed the lenses and made sure of the correct placing of the lenses inside the mount. The slide projection on this same screen is sharp. Once in a while I get a picture to show up as sharp as a person would want.

It cannot be the film, as I see the same film in other places and they are all right.

ANSWER: It is advised that you work along the line of attack assuming the light is at fault; that is, you have not sufficient candle power for the projection distance and size of picture.

It may be forty amperes flowing in the arc circuit is sufficient when lenses and lamp are in the best of adjustment. Then, it may be you are not getting one-half the light from this strength of current, on the screen, to illuminate the picture sufficiently for good definition of the figures. First, you might try some kind of a reflecting surface placed nearer the objective lens.

If placed at a point one-half the distance from the lens, you can obtain results giving four times the intensity of illumination. The statement that you occasionally obtain a film to give good results bears out this fact. The intensity of light on the screen is the cause for the hazy appearance of the projected picture. The films that show up to standard are apparently the films having less density, or those not printed so deeply. The slide projection follows along this same line of reasoning, too, in that these are sharply reflected from the same surface.

The reason you have not had the same trouble before can be explained by the fact that the first screen surface had a better coating. The recoating of the screen must be of poorer material, or improperly put on, and only reflects a more intense light.

Select one of the poorest film subjects and try out the plan of placing a small screen nearer the lens. Then try this same screen placed over the regular screen. Your recourse in the matter of getting better light on the screen surface would be to again have the surface painted or coated, or, work a rectifier tube of greater amperage, say, the fifty ampere tube.

You might possibly improve the light by using one-half-inch carbons on top and seven-sixteenths below, when using the forty ampere tube. The statement that you were satisfied when the screen was first received, would suggest that you fix up or obtain a new screen, as being the easiest way out of the difficulty, and more economical, too, in the point of electric power.

Why Second Focus Is Sometimes Necessary

P. G. A., Newark, N. J.—While I am projecting films, and after I have once obtained a good sharp focus on the screen, it is necessarp to readjust the objective lens to obtain a sharp focus after several hundred feet of film have been run through the machine.

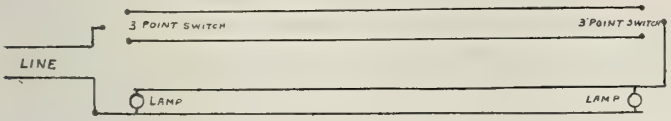
After once getting a focus on the screen I do not know why it is necessary to again make a new adjustment, and would like to know if the reason for this can be given?

ANSWER: It is obvious for each and every point in distance at which the projecter is set up, there is a certain focus lens, and a certain position of this lens to obtain a certain sized picture. In other words, there is a definite relation between the three factors, namely, the film, the objective and the screen.

Going a little further, the film means the vertical plane upon which the object to be projected is held. As you must have observed, the very slightest movement of the objective throws the picture on the screen out of focus. Leaving the objective in a fixed position a slight movement of either of the other two factors will also throw the picture out of focus.

This movement is in proportion to the relative distances on each side of the objective. The distance to the film from the objective is so small in comparison to the other distance to the screen, a movement of only the one-thousandth part of an inch of the film will cause the picture to be out of focus. Hence, the necessity of altering the objective to the varying thickness of film stock. The films have to be placed with the photograph turned away from the objective.



This brings the thickness of the film stock between the photograph and objective. If you place the photograph, or emulsion side of the film, toward the objective it would not be necessary to alter the lens from time to time, but in this position the lettering will appear reading backwards.

When projecting lantern-slides it is also necessary, from the varying thickness of the glass, to focus each slide. Some slides will not require to be altered as much as others.

Signal Between Stage and Booth

L. C. K., Cincinnati, O.—I want to install a signalling device from the projection room back to the stage. What would you recommend? Can a lamp be used in some way instead of a bell and battery?

ANSWER: The use of an incandescent lamp, either of low voltage or the regular 110 volt, has several advantages over the use of a bell and battery.

By using two three-way switches and two lamps a system of signalling having the advantages of silence and return signals may be installed. The accompanying diagram illustrates the proper wire connections.

Also, when the button is pushed the signal is set until the person signalled pushes the other switch button and the light goes out. In this way you do not have to wait, but can go about other work and a continuous silent signal is calling without further attention to it.

Kleine Optical Company Performs Projection Feat

ONE of the most remarkable projection feats in the annals of picture making was performed by the Kleine Optical Company at the big White City Amusement Park, Chicago, last week. The Kleine Optical Company succeeded in throwing a picture a trifle over 186 feet amid a blaze of light from the thousands of electric lamps in the park.

The great white tower rises to a height of 475 feet, has at its base a band shell into which the picture was projected. The thousands of lights on the tower, which can be seen for miles, were entirely overcome.

Oil Paintings of V-L-S-E Stars Prepared

AFTER carefully examining the work of a number of prominent artists, the V-L-S-E has made arrangements for special oil paintings made from enlarged portraits of the stars appearing in the big features.

The Pictures are intended for permanent lobby display, and are in two sizes, 30 x 40 inches, and 36 x 60 inches, mounted on compo-board and framed in handsome three-inch gold frames.

The artistic excellence of the work, the perfect reproduction and warm coloring, recommend them as the richest of theatre decorations.

Through the arrangements made with the artist, exhibitors booking the V-L-S-E productions will be able to secure these pictures at a very reasonable price.

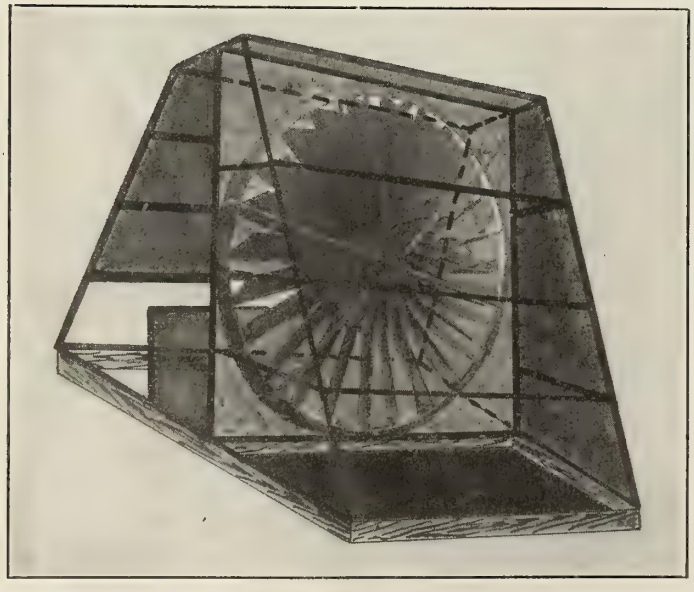
Vitagraph Issues Unusual Posters for "Island of Regeneration"

DURING the past year considerable attention has been given to the matter of improving the paper for multiple reel productions, and the composition and quality of the posters prepared by the Vitagraph for its V-L-S-E release, "The Island of Regeneration," is a striking example of what can really be accomplished with care and thought.

All the paper for this big subject is printed in soft warm pastel shades, but so arranged that, while harmonious and pleasing to the eye, the reds, yellows and blues stand out and command attention.

The figures are all idealized paintings, representing scenes from the film story; the minor details on the stills from which the artist drew his inspirations are eliminated and artistic color combinations substituted. This brings out the principal figures in bold relief.

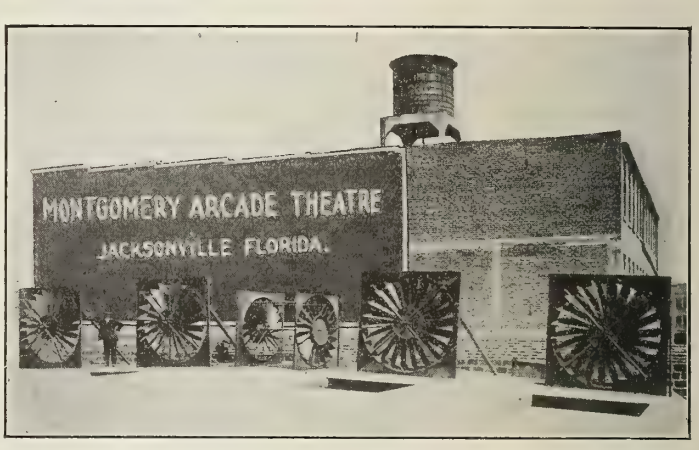


Paper of this kind is expensive, but it is appropriate to the dignity and present standing of the picture art. It will attract the class of patronage the picture deserves, and in fulfilling this mission, it is well worth the expense.

At the Vitagraph theatre in New York, "The Island of Regeneration" broke all house records on its merit alone. With the aid of this attractive paper to boom the run, it is expected that new attendance figures will be recorded wherever it is presented.

Typhoon Blowers Installed In Madison Square Garden

A CONTRACT has just been closed for cooling Madison Square Garden with typhoons. The Madison Square Garden opens for motion pictures May 22, and will be the alrgest building used for exhibiting moving pictures in the world, having a seating capacity of 12,000.



The picture below is inserted to show the Typhoon Blowers when fully installed and enclosed in their rain and light-proof galvanized iron houses, permitting the air to be blown through openings in the roof and thence circulated throughout the entire auditorium. The following illustration shows the blowers on the roof of the Montgomery Arcade, Jacksonville, Fla.

It was the Typhoon System that so successfully cooled the Motion Picture Exposition at Grand Central Palace last year in July's hottest days with the Palace overcrowded.

Typhoon Blowers will provide sea breezes at the New York Roof Garden and will prove a source of great pleasure to its crowds of patrons during the coming summer.

The scheme for cooling was designed by Ernst Glantzberg, consulting engineer of the Typhoon Fan Company, 1544 Broadway, New York.

It is of fireproof construction, cost $75,000, and will have every convenience for the patrons for the production of good film plays.

The same high-class entertainments that have made the Lyric popular will be selected for the Calhoun. Mr. Schwie has promised the residents of the district the best that the firm field offers. The theatre opened May 1.

The demand for Motiographs has kept several shipping departments working overtime for the past month, and they are still far behind in filling orders.

Lafayette, Ind., is Without a Theatre

The new Dreyfuss theatre project failed to succeed and Lafayette, Ind., will be without a new theatre. Enthusiastic business men urged Mr. Dreyfuss to build a theatre instead of a flat, as he had decided to do. First night tickets were to be sold for $25 but less than one-third of the required number were sold. Since the burning of the old Dreyfuss theatre, Lafayette has had no theatre large enough to accommodate big shows.

U. E. Slifer, of Macy, Ind., has purchased the Temple moving picture theatre, located in that city, from Mrs. Cy Palmer, of Peru. Mr. Slifer took possession at once.

The playhouse will again be under the management of Thomas Ladd. New seats are being put in for the comfort of the patrons. Climbing vines are being planted and suspended from the roof supports. Beds of flowers will decorate the interior. Tiny colored electric lights will twinkle from the roof of the dome behind the climbing foliage. The orchestra pit is being enlarged also.

The Palace theatre, at Shelby and Rupp streets, a few doors from the new Shelby theatre, is closed. The equipment and good will of the Palace was purchased from Frank Schoeffel by the South End Amusement Company, which operates the Shelby, and it was decided to close the older house. Mr. Schoeffel will continue in the business as manager of the Hilltop theatre.

Hidalgo, Los Angeles, Reopens

John E. Searl, owner of the Sunbeam theatre at Hemet, Cal., is building an airdome at San Jacinto, and for this has purchased a Powers 6-A projector and Powers inductor. He plans to open his place of amusement about the middle of the month.

The Hidalgo theatre, on North Main street, Los Angeles, which has been closed for several weeks, has been fitted with new furniture, and a new Powers 6-A, and was this week opened by J. O. Johnson. This theatre is in the Mexican quarter and a five cent admission is charged.

Manager Gooding, of the Hurley theatre, Hurley, N. M., has purchased a Powers 6-A for his house from the Los Angeles General Film company exchange.

Plans are being made for the early opening of a new motion picture theatre in Belfast, Me., under the management of Charles E. Eaton. Belfast is on the shores of Penobscot Bay, and has a large summer population. The new house will seat about 350, and Mr. Eaton has contracted with the N. E. Universal Film Exchange, Inc., for the full program.

Carpenters, painters and decorators have worked overtime on the Rex theatre, and have succeeded in making of Houston's biggest photoplay house one of the most attractive structures in Texas. The management recently installed four luxurious smoking boxes, which have caught on with those in Houston who like to woo the lady nicotine while enjoying the movies. Five cents admission is not the least of the Rex's paying policies.

Contracts were closed recently by the Isis theatre in Houston, Tex., with the Ford Motor Car Company by which the Isis will show each week the Ford's news events.

New Theatres Under Way in San Francisco

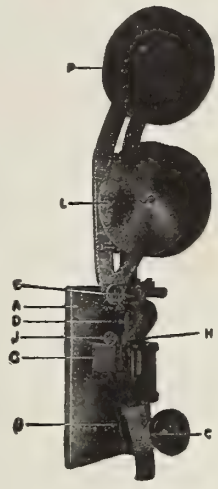
A new theatre is being erected at Sausalito, a suburb of San Francisco, by William Elliott, former owner of the Swastika theatre of that city. The new structure will be ready for occupancy within a short time.

J. Davis, for many years with the Haight Street theatre, San Francisco, has opened a theatre at Pacific Grove with Andy Lavelle.

The new theatre being erected at Forty-first street and Telegraph avenue, Oakland, Cal., will be opened under the direction of Charles Moser as soon as completed.

An airdome with a seating capacity of about five hundred persons will be erected shortly at Visalia, Cal., by W. Thompson, who conducts the new Theatre Visalia at that place.

The Turner and Dahnken circuit is pushing plans for its new theatre at Sacramento, Cal., and announces that work will be started in time for the building to be completed early in 1916.



The Cosy theatre, on Fillmore street, near McAllister, San Francisco, is now being operated by W. E. Legg.

The title of the Louisa J. Melrose property in Main street, Tarrytown, N. Y., opposite the corporation building, has been transferred to Leslie Van Scoy, of New York City, who will erect a model theatre and roof garden to be ready for occupancy by July 1.

The frame buildings at Nos. 205-207-207½ Hamilton street, Allentown, Pa., have been completely razed, preliminary to the erection of a modern motion picture theatre on the site. Daniel Meeker is building the theatre.

Haverhill, Mass., is to have another theatre devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville, to be erected in the rear of the

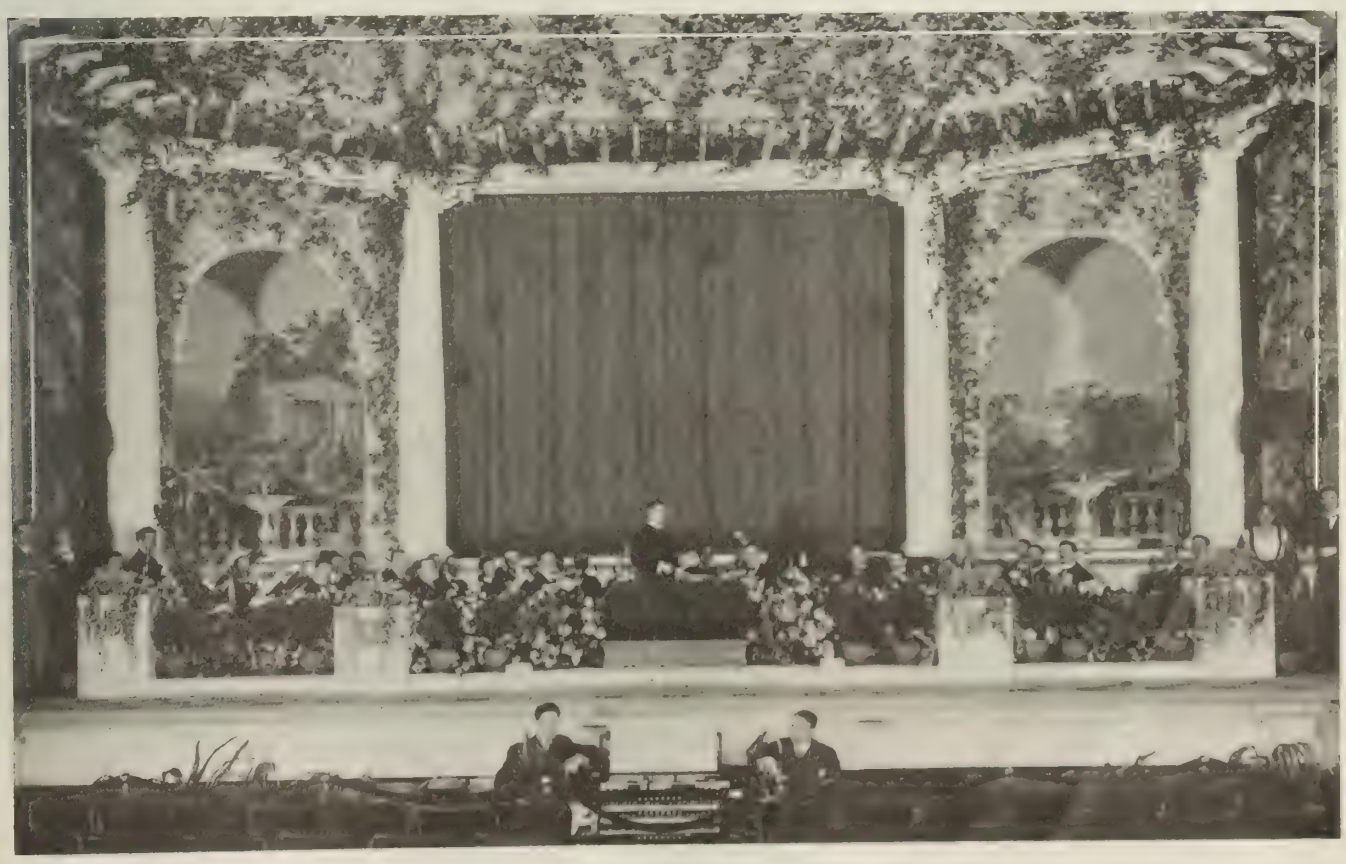
CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

The Stage of the Strand Theatre in Summer Dress

THEATRE owners generally might well adopt some general scheme of stage or screen setting on a par with the one shown herewith of the premier picture playhouse of the country—the Strand, New York. For a summer setting it would be hard to find a more suggestive combination than this product of the brain of S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the theatre.



The whole setting breathes an atmosphere of coolness. The fountains at the side, the Italian pergola setting, the flowers intertwined on the roof and along the front of the stage—all tend to make one think of outdoors.

The entire ensemble of effects was first designed by Rothapfel. The Lee Lash studios built the setting, Philipelli, of the General Flower Decorating Company, did the floral decorating, the fountains are from the Electric Fountain Company, and Kliegel Brothers arranged the lighting effects.

The double curtains, hanging in the centre and covering the screen, are of a dark green with a design in bronze, and they raise silently and disclose the screen ready for the picture.

A white trellis forms a striking background for different colored flowers, the red and the green of the roses predominating. In its entirety this piece of stage decorating is a masterpiece.

On the stage, seated, in this photograph, is the orchestra led by Carl Eduarde, on whose right is S. L. Rothapfel. Standing on each side of the console board of the large Austin organ are Messrs. Sisson (on the right) and Brigham (on the left), the organists.

S. L. ROTHAPFEL, HIS MUSICAL STAFF AND THE ORCHESTRA OF THE STRAND THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY

Whiteside Free from Technical Faults in Music Scene

THE musical realism which has been a part of the technique in the taking of the scenes for "The Melting Pot," has extended to more than the actual playing of a symphony by an orchestra of one hundred men in the "bit" showing the concert hall. It has even gone to the work of Mr. Whiteside and his leading woman, Valentine Grant, when the two are supposed to be playing together.

In an important scene the two play Felix Borowski's second mazurka. Mr. Whiteside, who does not play the violin, was so thoroughly drilled by Miss Grant that he went through with the entire number with proper bowing and finger work.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION ABSORBS SHUBERT FILM AND ITS PEERLESS STUDIOS

The greatest corporation in the world is the United States Steel Corporation, because it owns and controls every phase in the making of its steel products.

World Film Corporation is the strongest of the feature producers, because it owns and controls every phase of its picture industry.

World Film is the only established feature program releasing regularly, which not only owns its own exchanges over the country and controls its entire policy—but also has its own sales force.

World Film has recently acquired all the Shubert interests and the entire ownership of the Peerless Studios, which have produced the greatest features released on World Film program.

Through its own exchanges and its own sales force it can feel the pulse of the consumer's demand and the exhibitor's needs, and by controlling its own producing branches it can apply the ideas that must be enforced in order to produce the greatest features which will bring to the exhibitor the greatest revenue and at the same time create the biggest consumer demand.

For the present we are offering

"The Eagle's Nest"

in 6 parts, which is playing to packed houses in all parts of the country. "The Eagle's Nest" featuring Edwin Arden and Romaine Fielding is one of the most picturesque and thrilling dramas ever shown on the screen. The scenic effects are notably beautiful, having been photographed principally in the world famous "Garden of the Gods."

Also

from the celebrated play of the same name by George Ade, featuring Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer. "The College Widow" is unquestionably the greatest college picture shown. It comprises an exciting football game, a "snake dance" of nearly 10,000 students and the most sensational fire scene ever pictured.

The Lubin LIBERTY BELL feature for release June 7th is Cecil Raleigh's successful comedy drama

with the popular and famous star, Rose Coghlan, in the cast.

Listen to What George Ade Says of "The Slim Princess"

Mr. George K. Spoor, President,
Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Hazelden Farm
Brook, Indiana.

My dear Mr. Spoor:—

¶ A few years ago I visited the Turkish and Egyptian regions which stand undecided between Europe and Asia. At that time every young woman in America was trying to compress herself into a slender figure, but I learned that in the Mohammedan Orient the fat and roly-poly maiden was still the acknowledged type of beauty.

¶ I wondered if some slender Turkish young thing who was not only impossible but downright hideous, according to the standards of her own country, might not escape to the new world and find herself transformed into a raging success.

¶ In order to prove that female loveliness is whatever we choose to admire, I wrote a story for the Saturday Evening Post and called it The Slim Princess. Later I amplified the story and put it into a little book published by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. Then Henry Blossom made the book into a play, with music by Leslie Sturat, and Elsie Janis starred in the play for two seasons.

¶ To prove the abounding vitality of the Princess I must say that she seems livelier than ever in the pictures just made by the Essanay Company. I like Mr. Blossom's photo-play and I like Ruth Stonehouse as Kalora and I doubt if your company has ever turned out cleaner and truer specimens of photography.

¶ I am writing to thank you for letting me see the pictures and to thank you for having such dandy pictures for me to see.

Sincerely,

George Ade

Essanay's Progressive Policy Reaps Tremendous Success

¶ Essanay is advancing daily in the improvement of the quality of its photoplays and in the number produced. Its output nearly has been doubled in the past few weeks. It now is producing 12 or more reels a week. Besides the regular six releases each week, including a two and three act drama, it is producing one and two reel Essanay-Chaplin comedies, and four, five and six reel features, released direct to the exhibitor through the V. L. S. E.

¶ This means a great increase in its working force. Essanay has added one more company to the two already at the Niles, Calif., studios. It has established a new studio at Los Angeles, where Charles Chaplin is working. It has a large company at Chattanooga, Tenn. Another company with an all star cast, is located in Michigan. Still another is going to the Atlantic Coast, while many new players have been added to the force at the Chicago studios. This means local color and realism in all Essanay photoplays.

¶ Viola Allen now is working at the Chicago studios in producing "The White Sister," the greatest work of F. Marion Crawford, in which this world famous star made such a signal success on the stage. June Keith, William Buress and Johnny Slavin have been engaged and are at work with the Michigan company in producing Charles Hoyt's great stage success, "A Bunch of Keys."

¶ Essanay is purchasing the very best novels by world famous authors for its photoplays. These include Henry C. Rowland's great series on "The Adventures of Dominica," "The Blindness of Virtue," by Cosmo Hamilton, in which Edna Mayo stars, "The Man Trail," by Henry Oyen, and scores of other equally popular and noted works of fiction.

About Stories

THE phrase, "Better pictures demand better stories," is so well known to all, so freely bandied about in the business today that it has become a trite remark. And, it is to be feared, it is largely that and nothing more.

THERE is no argument, of course, against good stories. Everyone wags his head sagely and says:

"Yes, that's right, we must have good stories, must have them. The story's the thing," etc., etc.

But how many producers of pictures are seriously facing the "good story" situation? Some; too many are not.

AN analogy has been often drawn on this page between magazines and pictures. We are too apt—all of us—to class the picture constantly with the stage.

We judge of it only as a competitor of the spoken drama.

AS a matter of fact the motion picture is quite as much an illustrated story as it is a piece of pantomimic acting. It will never quite take the place of the written word, nor of the spoken word, though in many respects it will excel each. But it is—or should be—just as literary as it is dramatic.

And it does—or should—compete quite as much with the magazine as with the stage.

There is no particular reason for making this point here except to emphasize more clearly to the producer the kind of stories the pictures of this day and hour demand.

THIRTY years ago we had but one or two magazines which published excellent stories and a great many which printed the highly sensational, cheaply melodramatic kind. The latter were read by the bulk of our adult population, as well as by boys and young women.

Today that situation is completely changed. The bulk of our population is now freely supplied with many ten and fifteen-cent magazines of a high order of fiction. One weekly, which purchases the best output of the world's story writers, has over ten million readers. The circulating libraries, too, have introduced good fiction to the millions.

OF course, there is still a large field for cheap fiction, and it is being supplied. But it is far from being the largest field—far from it. The big reading field today comprises the great middle class of the country, which makes up the great millionfold bulk of our population, and these people are educated up to the very best stories obtainable today.

They are sharp critics, these readers. They want pictures up to their established fiction standards. They won't stand the cheap kind; they'll laugh at them and stay away. They go hunting the good kind, and once they find them pray that the pictures will remain long enough so that their friends may see them.

IT is regrettable, but it is a fact, that up to a few years ago, the large percentage of pictures released were of the same ordinary adventurous, or sentimental or funny character of the fiction in our popular publications of thirty years ago.

These pictures satisfied a great many people, though the novelty of the motion picture was largely a drawing card; they satisfy many people now, just as our cheap fiction does.

But they don't and never will satisfy the great majority of the people who today must support the theatre and this industry.

WHAT is to be done then, to get good stories?

Simply this: Pay the price.

Deal with, and only with, the accredited scenario writers of the day and pay the price that will only secure their best efforts. Go directly to the best magazine writers and get their work by paying at least what the magazine will pay.

These prices are not exorbitant. They have been established through practical experience in a much older field.

IF a writer of an excellent two-reel comedy asks two hundred dollars for it, pay it, and be thankful; otherwise he'll get as much or more from the fiction editor who is looking hard for just such a story.

These are the only writers who can furnish good stories.

THE several thousand misguided amateurs and incompetents whose ambition is to write scenarios today couldn't get their work into the cheapest publications in the country.

Unfortunately, they are being aided and abetted by "scenario departments" designed wholly for the amateur; and their ranks are constantly swelled by the notorious, fake "scenario schools."

* * *

TO the producer's reply that the picture cannot stand the added expense of a good story, there is but this to say: Cut down elsewhere.

Cut the exorbitant salaries of the directors and the star.

Cut the exorbitant overhead.

Cut out the foolishly extravagant settings. Cut anything but the story.

If that is cut, then you cut the heart and arteries of the picture. This is a serious matter. The story is the very crux of the picture problem today.

Vol. XI May 29, 1915 No. 21

Where Do the Newspapers in YOUR Town Stand in Regard to Censorship?

THE newspapers of the United States will play a leading part in the censorship fight from this time forward, or Motion Picture News is greatly mistaken.

The editorial in the Fresno, Cal., Republican, cited on this page last week, is proof of the more than passing interest that is being manifested by editors in more than one state where censorship of motion pictures has been or is being agitated.

Nor is this fact the most significant phase of the new attitude of the nation's press on the question.

THE newspapers—or the overwhelming majority of them—will be found on the side of the motion picture and against censorship. It can hardly be otherwise.

The motion picture is too closely affiliated with the publishing field—with the magazine and book fiction field—to permit the publisher of a newspaper or a magazine to be indifferent to a menace that strikes so close to his own business.

RIGHT here is the opportunity of the exhibitor and the exchange man.

Every exhibitor and every exchange man can combat censorship for himself, in his own territory, whenever the necessity arises, with the aid of the newspapers.

The expedient is as legitimate as the method of employing it is simple.

LET representatives of the theatres and exchanges, in any territory where censorship is a threatened or an actual condition, wait upon the newspaper editors of the community and arouse their interest in the question.

The indifferent of the press has hitherto been a powerful factor in favor of the censor party. But once the press is awakened to the importance of the situation, their indifference will be exchanged, as it was in the case of the Fresno Republican, for an unmistakable opposition.

GIVE the newspapers the past history and the present facts of the censorship movement. If your files of Motion Picture News are complete, you will find all the necessary data there.

The history of the Ohio censor board, the John Barleycorn case, the "past performances" of the Pennsylvania censors, the Chicago censors, the Mayor of Boston and other officials and boards that have essayed to mould motion pictures "nearer to their hearts' desire" will be found in the back numbers of the News.

Supply the newspapers with this necessary perspective of information, acquaint them—if they need to be acquainted—with the class of pictures being produced today for the theatres of the country, with the progress of the business in every respect during the past five years.

FINALLY, ask the newspapers to see that broad-mindedness and enlightenment decides the issue, and not hysteria, nor prejudice, nor ignorance.

Ask the newspapers to cooperate with the motion picture men in educating the public to a sense of what censorship has meant and will mean, if it is permitted to continue and to spread.

Urge the newspapers to have the case of Motion Pictures vs. Censorship tried before the public as a jury.

It was done in Fresno, Cal. It was done in Berkeley, Cal. It can be done wherever censorship lifts its head. Such an appeal can hardly be in vain.

The Preservation of the Frohman Successes

IN connection with the appalling fate of the Lusitania and the great gravity of the international situation created, it is significant to note the remarkable prominence given by the daily press of Europe and America to the death of Charles Frohman.

It is a striking and unmistakable tribute to a great man who was also beloved by every single person who knew him, particularly those of the profession in which his was a predominating influence.

We need not speak here of Charles Frohman's creative work in the drama. But it is distinctly important to note and it is most fortunate that through his connection with the Famous Players Film Company, of which Daniel Frohman is managing director, his dramatic successes and even his stars and casts will be preserved for all posterity in essentially their original form.

The Trade Convention of the Present Day

THE leaders of the motion picture business can look back upon the Minneapolis convention, just concluded, and look forward to the Pennsylvania convention to come, with a feeling of confidence that the exhibitor conventions of the present are places where business has taken the place of bickering, idling and petty politics.

The convention is now a profitable investment for the manufacturer of film and accessories. His time and money are no longer wasted there. It is an equally profitable investment for the exhibitor who attends them. Never before have there been such conventions as Minneapolis was, as Reading promises to be. Never again, we hope, can there be such mock conventions as formerly disgraced the industry.

GOVERNOR SIGNS PENNSYLVANIA CENSOR BILL

Daix Measure Repeals 1911 Law and, While Retaining Many of Its Features, Offers Numerous Concessions to Film Men—Three Censors Now Instead of Two, and Lower Fees—Rumor Breitinger Will Be Retained; Breitinger, Mrs. Niver and Oberholtzer New Censors—Stein "Equal Rights" Bill Passes Senate

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., May 18.

GOVERNOR MARTIN J. BRUMBAUGH, on Monday, May 17, signed the Daix motion picture censorship bill, which thereby immediately became a law. It takes the place of the law of 1911, which has been operative since June 1, 1914, and repeals that measure.

The new law, however, retains many of the features of the 1911 law to which motion picture interests have taken exception, but nevertheless the new law is a considerable gain over the old in many important respects, as viewed from the angle of the motion picture interests.

Among the chief gains are the fact that it reduces the censorship fee from $2.50 to $1 for each film examined and gives the film men the right of appeal to the court from the decision of the censors—a right that was denied under the 1911 law which made the censors' ruling final and supreme.

Censors Increased from Two to Three

The new law increases the number of censors from two to three, increases their salaries very materially and greatly adds to the number of subordinate employees. The film men are hoping that with the additional help thus provided to the censors the picture interests will be relieved of the financial burden of keeping up projection rooms in which films offered for censorship have been examined in the past.

The censors, under the new law, are to be appointed by the Governor, and the subordinates are to be appointed by the censors subject to the Governor's approval. Governor Brumbaugh has always maintained great secrecy in advance of making appointments to state offices and so it has been impossible to get any intimation from him as to who will constitute the new board.

There seems to be a pretty strong impression, however, among officials at the capital and other interested persons that J. Louis Breitinger, the present chief censor, will be retained despite the hostility the picture interests have manifested toward him. It is known that he wants the job at the higher salary and it is recalled that he was constantly in communication with those interests in the legislature that framed and put through the Daix bill. This bill originally was drafted in accordance with the views of Breitinger and it is known that he was consulted by the administration interests at various times during the bill's stormy passage through the legislature.

Amendments Forced on Breitinger

The amendments that were made in the Daix bill in the interests of the motion picture business Mr. Breitinger was told he would have to accept. That is understood to have been because the administration was forced to take some recognition of the organized picture interests that for a time were clamoring for Governor Brumbaugh to take the Chief Censor's scalp.

Although the Daix bill became law as soon as the Governor signed it, and although under the terms of the measure it is effective at once, the motion picture news correspondent has been advised by the Attorney General's department that the old board will continue to run the censorship affairs until the Governor announces the appointments to the new board.

The Senate, on the night of the day the Daix bill was signed, passed finally the Stein "equal rights" bill which gives negroes the same rights in theatres and "all places of amusement or accommodation" as white persons. The vote was very decisive, being 33 to 11 in favor of the measure. The bill already had passed the House by a big majority and although it goes back now to the lower branch for concurrence in several Senate amendments, it is practically certain to be approved by that body in its changed form and to go to the Governor for his approval or rejection.

Governor Appoints Censors

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., May 19.

Governor Brumbaugh today appointed J. Louis Breitinger of Philadelphia, Mrs. E. E. Niver, of Charleroi, and Ellis P. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, as the new motion picture censors under the Daix censorship law, which became a state statute on Monday.

Afraid to Offend "Colored Brothers"

It was a case of the politicians of both branches of the legislature being afraid to offend the colored voters who have to be reckoned with in large numbers in most counties of the state.

The bill is one of material importance to the motion picture interests, as many disputes resulting from the segregation of negroes in certain parts of theatres have occurred and in some cases resulted in fines being imposed on theatre men. The Stein bill draws the lines closer on the theatre men than the existing law.

The bill as passed by the House provided a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500 or imprisonment or both for violation of the law. As amended in the Senate, however, the maximum fine is placed at $100 and the imprisonment clause is omitted.

The bill says that "all persons within the jurisdiction of the state shall be entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages and privileges of any public place of accommodation, entertainment or amusement," subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law and applicable alike to all persons. No person being the owner, lessee, proprietor, manager, superintendent, agent or employee of any such place shall directly or indirectly refuse, withhold from or deny to any person any of the accommodations or privileges thereof or directly or indirectly publish, circulate, issue, display, post or mail any written or printed communication, notice or advertisement to the effect "that any such accommodations shall be withheld from any person" on account of race, creed or color or that the patronage or custom thereat of any person belonging to or purporting to be of any particular race, creed or color is unwelcome, objectionable or not acceptable, desirable or solicited.

Private Communication Not Prohibited

"The production of any written or printed communication, notice or advertisement purporting to relate to any such place and to be made by any person" connected with such place "shall be prima facie evidence in any civil or criminal action that the same was authorized by such person. Nothing in the bill shall be construed to prohibit the mailing of a private communication in writing sent in response to specific written inquiry.

"A place of public accommodation, entertainment or amusement, within the meaning of the act shall include any inn, tavern or hotel whether conducted for the entertainment of transient guests or for the accommodation of those seeking health, recreation or rest; any restaurant, eating-house, public conveyance on land or water, bath house, barbershop, theatre, theatorium, nickelodion, motion picture house, and music hall."

Sheehan Meets Exhibitors at Dinner in 'Frisco

Event Promotes Harmonious Feeling Among Theatre Managers in California Showing Fox Features—Seventy-Five Guests Royally Entertained at Portola Louvre

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, May 17.

In order that Winfield R. Sheehan, the galvanic general manager of the Fox Film Corporation who has been on a transcontinental tour of the Fox exchanges, might personally meet as many exhibitors as possible in San Francisco and vicinity, a dinner was arranged by the Fox company for the exhibitors of Fox features in the State of California during Mr. Sheehan's recent visit to the San Francisco offices, 107 Golden Gate avenue.

William J. Citron, the San Francisco representative of the firm, and Harry Leonhardt, the Pacific Coast manager, exerted every effort to make the dinner, held at the Portola Louvre restaurant, a big success. Entertainment was furnished by members of the Orpheum and Empress theatres companies of San Francisco and speeches were made by practically every exhibitor present, assuring William Fox, through his representatives, Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Citron, that the name of William Fox on a picture placed it in a class by itself.

Most of the seventy-five guests spoke in glowing terms of the wonderful success they had scored with such William Fox features as "The Clemenceau Case," "The Nigger," "The Thief," "Samson," "Kreutzer Sonata," "Princess Romanoff," "Children of the Ghetto," and other Fox features. The object of the meeting, which was marked by great harmony and enthusiasm, was to foster a get-together spirit among the exhibitors of California and the representatives of William Fox. The menu served at the banquet was exceedingly elaborate, and every exhibitor who was present to sing the praises of the Fox Film corporation and the William Fox features, was loud in his expressions of delight at this method of establishing the entente cordiale between exhibitors and the producing firm whose pictures were showing.

"KENNEDY SQUARE" HAS BACKGROUND OF 1850

Baltimore in 1850 furnishes the background for F. Hopkinson Smith's drama, "Kennedy Square," that S. Rankin Drew is producing from his first big scenario as a full-fledged director for the Vitagraph company.

"Kennedy Square," with its delightful Southern atmosphere, lovable characters typical of the period in which the scenes are laid and beautiful scenery, will be made doubly attractive by a heart-interest element in a love story that is refreshingly sincere, and the enactment of its characters by a cast that includes Charles Kent as St. George Temple, Antonio Moreno as Harry Rutter, Muriel Ostriche as Kate Seymour and Raymond Bloomer as Langdon Willetts.

"Kennedy Square" will be a five-part Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature that will have its initial showing at the Vitagraph theatre, New York City.

LUBIN DIRECTOR BORROWS BATTLESHIP

George W. Terwilliger, the Lubin writer and director, recently "borrowed" the battleship Alabama, which is at League Island Navy Yard, Philadelphia, and took a number of scenes on board. As a return compliment Mr. Lubin gave the officers and crew a moving picture show and smoker this week and the occasion was a gala one at the navy yard.

The big battleship was decorated with flags and special lights, a screen was hoisted on the foreward deck and the projecting machine was placed on the turret, just over the two big thirteen-inch guns. In the front row sat Rear Admiral F. M. Helm, Commander Lyon, officers from the other ships, and a number of the Lubin officials.

Back of them were hundreds of sailors and their friends.

LEAGUE READY FOR CONVENTION IN READING

Zerr, First President of Pennsylvania Body to Be Made Chairman of Committee in Charge of Convention, Tours State—Herrington, National Vice-President of Pennsylvania, Issues Stirring Call to Exhibitors—Many Philadelphia Exchange Men Plan to Go—Trip to Atlantic City Is Part of Program

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, May 19

BEN H. ZERR, president of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, is the first president who has also been made chairman of the committee having in charge a state convention. Mr. Zerr is owner of a picture theatre in Reading, in which place the convention will be held on June 7, 8 and 9.

He has been all over the state in the interests of the convention, visiting Philadelphia several days last week. Great enthusiasm is already prevalent in Reading, and is being aroused all over Pennsylvania.

Hon. Ira W. Stratton, the mayor of Reading, its board of health, chamber of commerce and citizens generally are actively boosting the convention and all it stands for, the mayor having sent a personal letter to Mr. Zerr, complimenting the Pennsylvania League on its high moral standing in the motion picture line.

The principal business of this convention which will meet in Rajah Temple, Reading, will be the further elevation of the picture industry and the elimination of objectionable features.

The Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, at its weekly meeting on Friday, May 14, appointed the following delegates to the convention:

Jay Emanuel, H. Green, Dr. S. M. Morris, M. A. Benn, Jack Delman.

Many Philadelphia exhibitors and exchange men have announced their intention of going The Lubin company will have a contingent of about two hundred and a special car has been chartered to carry the party, which will arrive at Reading in time for the big ball on June 7.

The Philadelphia Exhibitors' League have decided to make Sunday, July 18 Moving Picture Men's Day at Atlantic City. A car will be chartered and the affair will be made an outing for the league.

Tickets, including meals, will be only three dollars, and many fans are expected to take advantage of this occasion to get in closer touch with their favorite amusement and its purveyors.

Many cameras will be clicked on the company, so those who go will later see themselves on the screen.

The committee in charge comprises the president of the league, Charles Segall; H. Berman, Jack Delman, Dr. S. M. Morris, Jay Emanuel, S. Woodward, A. H. Nace, H. Green, N. Fischer, D. Sablosky.

Fred J. Herrington, national vice-president of the league for Pennsylvania, and one of the foremost state leaders, has sent the following rally broadcast through the state:

To the Exhibitors of Pennsylvania,

ORGANIZE!ORGANIZE!ORGANIZE!

If you are a reader of the trade journals, you are aware of the good work we have done at the present session of the law-making bodies of this state, in regards to the censorship of motion pictures and the committee on legislation has fought a good battle and won a victory. But that is not all. If we had the support of the majority of the exhibitors, we would have been in a position to have got many more concessions from the members of the legislature. If we had a membership of one thousand, instead of two or three hundred, we would be in a position to show the power of our screen when those gentlemen are out for re-election. There is no doubt we could have "secured the absolute" repeal so necessary to the life of the industry.

But it is never too late to learn. So let us be up and doing. As the state convention will be held at Reading, June 7 to 9, we ask every exhibitor to arrange to attend. There are many things of vital importance to come before the exhibitors at that time. Now don't let the other fellow do it, as that has been the habit in the past. We want you to understand that it is your duty to be there. Help the few that have had to do it in the past.

We expect to have with us at this convention, Hon. Governor Brumbaugh, Hon. Boies Penrose, United States senator, and many of the members of the senate and legislature, who will address the state convention; also officers of the department of labor and industry. There will be big doings, and we want to make it the largest gathering of motion picture men that the state has ever had. It is up to you to make it a success. Let our slogan be "On to Reading."

There is no excuse for the exhibitors in the eastern end and central part of the state for not attending, and the west will do her part. So cast aside your little personal bickerings and come along and help swell the crowd.

Yours for one big successful convention,

Fred J. Herrington,

National Vice-President of Pennsylvania Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

Edison Policy Changed to Three Releases a Week

Less Output But Better Quality, Is Slogan of Plimpton—Five Reel Feature, "The House of the Lost Court," to Be Seen on Paramount Program

WHAT is taken to be a marked change and a departure in the policy of the Edison company is the almost simultaneous announcement of the releasing on the Paramount program of a five-reel feature, "The House of the Lost Court," which Edison has had in preparation for two months, and a change of weekly program; so that, in point of number, there will be fewer releases.

"The House of the Lost Court" is from the book by Mrs. C. N. Williamson, who has thrilled her readers with stories of weird adventure and mystery plot, and features Viola Dana. The film is now being shown at the Broadway theatre, New York. Miss Dana, not so long ago, when playing leads in Broadway productions, was hailed all over the country as "Broadway's Youngest Star," she then being not much more than a child. It was Miss Dana's remarkable work in the three-reel feature, "The Stoning," that brought forth such encomiums from all sides.

In the cast of "The House of the Lost Court" are included practically all who were in "The Stoning," and it includes many of Edison's most talented players, besides Miss Dana, Gertrude McCoy, Sally Crute, Helen Strickland, Robert Conness and Duncan McRae.

This departure appears to be an Edison entry into the long feature field, released on other programs than its own. Heretofore the few long features that company has produced, have been released through the special feature department of the General Film company.

The change in the weekly program also seems to reflect the sentiments recently expressed by Studio Manager Horace G. Plimpton, who stated that, in his belief, one of the greatest factors militating against marked improvement of the photoplay was the exigency of the frequent or daily release, compelling companies to work under pressure, so that often the best in them could not be put forth.

The new program will eliminate the Tuesday one-reelers and the alternate Monday three-reel features, all three-reel features hereafter being released Fridays. On Friday, June 11, however, there will be released on the regular program Lee Arthur's famous stage comedy-drama as a four-part feature, this being found necessary because of its containing so much good material. From time to time, when the story warrants it, the Friday three-reeler will likely give place to a four-reel feature. This will mean but three releases a week, one reel on Wednesday, a feature on Friday and a one-reeler on Saturdays.

This will, Mr. Plimpton believes, give the production end more time to consider and perfect each picture so that each film may have all the care and attention of a feature picture.

THIRD BRET HARTE PLAY WILL BE RELEASED JUNE 28

"A Phyllis of the Sierras," the third Bret Harte photoplay to be produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation, will be released on June 28 through the World Film Corporation.

The picture will be remarkable not only for the magnificence of its interior sets, but also for the grandeur of the redwood country in which the exteriors are now being filmed.

UNITED PHOTO-PLAYS STUDIO COMPLETED MAY 20

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, May 18.

The new $75,000 Chicago studio of the United Photo-Plays Company will be finished and ready for work about May 20.

Harry McRae Webster, the director, is busy taking exterior scenes for his six-reel feature, "Victory of Virtue," by Penelope Knapp, which is to be the first release of the company.

This week he took several of the actors to Starved Rock, Ill., and next week about twenty-five of them go to Washington, D. C., where the White House is to be used as a background in some of the pictures.

Madison Square Garden Becomes a Film Theatre

Most Famous Show Place in the United States Will Open with "The Sporting Duchess," a Six Part Lubin Liberty Bell, on May 22

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York City, the most famous show place on the continent, has been converted into a motion-picture theatre, and will open its doors May 22 with the six-part Lubin masterpiece, "The Sporting Duchess."

The selection of "The Sporting Duchess" as the opening attraction is a triumph for the Lubin company and the V-L-S-E program. Every film company producing features had sought the distinction of having one of their pictures selected for the initial showing, and the decision of the management to book the six-part Lubin reflects greatly to the credit of the director and the stars, as well as to the Lubin company and the "Big Four."

The immense arena, that has been the scene of the greatest triumphs for Barnum and Bailey's Circus, has been transformed into seating accommodations for twelve thousand people, and the selection of Lubin's "The Sporting Duchess" as the opening attraction is particularly appropriate, owing to the magnitude of the production and the subject of the play.

Madison Square Garden has always been the home of the higher sports, and this play, with its atmosphere of the race course, horse show, and the sporting pastimes of the smart set, is a fitting feature to inaugurate its opening as a motion-picture theatre; and Rose Coghlan and Ethel Clayton are as well known to the general public as Madison Square Garden itself.

A coincidence worthy of note, is that Miss Coghlan appeared at the opening and closing of the famous Wallack's theatre in New York, and through her appearance in "The Sporting Duchess" will again be identified with the opening of a famous show place.

The new enterprise will be operated under the name of The Arena Innovation Shows.

Essanay Improves Quality and Doubles Output

Company Establishes New Studio in Los Angeles and Will Open Another on Atlantic Coast This Summer for Plays with Eastern Setting

IN line with his policy of progress, George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay, is rapidly pushing forward Essanay's capacity for production and in the last few weeks has almost doubled the output of films.

Essanay is now putting out more than twelve reels every week. This has been done by increasing the number of directors and companies while increasing the quality of the films constantly. In addition to the six regular weekly releases, including a two and three reel feature, it is getting out one and two reel Essanay-Chaplin comedies, and four, five and six reel features, which are being released direct to exhibitors through the V-L-S-E.

To produce the extra releases, Essanay has added largely to its force at the Chicago studio, Viola Allen being one of the leading players recently secured. It has added an extra company at Niles, Cal., studios; has opened a new studio at 147 North Hill street, Los Angeles, and has a company playing at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Another company will be established on the Atlantic coast this summer to take special plays requiring an Eastern setting.

A company of Essanay players has gone to Dowagiac and other Michigan towns where Charles Hoyt's success, "A Bunch of Keys," is being produced by an all star cast. This is one of the first photoplays ever produced in which all the leads are stars.

Essanay has engaged three new stars to take leading roles in this rollicking four-reel comedy. June Keith takes the part of Miss Teddy Keys; William Buress that of Grimes, while Johnny Slavin will take the role of Snaggs.

Other parts will be taken by prominent players already connected with Essanay. The towns in which scenes will be taken besides Dowagiac are Diamond Lake, Cassapolis, Pogagon and Eau Claire. The scenes of the comedy are laid in small towns and it is in line with Essanay's policy to secure realism in all its plays that it will employ these rural settings.

Patin Organizes Company to Handle Educationals

Pharos, Capitalized at $50,000, Will Furnish Theatres, Churches, Schools and Institutions Pictures, Including Scenic, Travel, Industrial and Scientific Subjects

TO produce and handle educational motion pictures the Pharos Film Company, with offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, has been incorporated for $50,000. Claude M. Patin is the president and general manager.

The purpose of the Pharos Film Company is to show educational subjects in motion pictures in theatres, churches, schools, clubs, institutions, Y. M. C. A.'s and homes all over the country. The range of subjects will be wide, including travel, scenic, industrial, animal life, plant life, microscope work and all pictures of educational value.

The Pharos Film Company has on hand at the present time a library of more than 1,000 subjects made by the leading companies of Europe and America. These include the famous Eclair Scientia pictures. Camera men are stationed in every part of the world, including ten in America, for it is planned to take many subjects of interest peculiar to this country. These men are not mere photographers, but are also scientists, physicians and chemists. They are using special scientific cameras and lenses made by the Paris Eclair Company.

It is an acknowledged fact that the demand for scientific and educational subjects, such as the Pharos Film Company will handle, is rapidly increasing. Such pictures are now felt to be an indispensable part of a well-balance theatre program. This move may be traced to the Strand theatre. The policy of the Strand, as guided by S. L. Rothapfel, demands a scientific or educational picture every week. The same holds good for the New York Hippodrome under the guidance of Edward Temple. Mr. Patin holds contracts with both the Strand and the Hippodrome whereby the Pharos Film Company alone will supply these subjects to these two leading theatres.

RIGHTS TO FORBES' SUCCESSES GO TO LASKY

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company announces that it has acquired the photodramatic rights for two of the greatest comedy successes ever produced on the American stage—"The Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman," both by James Forbes and both originally produced under the management of the late Henry B. Harris.

"The Chorus Lady" brought James Forbes into the very foremost ranks of American dramatists, establishing his present reputation, and also did much for the fame and fortune of Henry B. Harris.

"The Traveling Salesman," also by Mr. Forbes, followed "The Chorus Lady" and attained a success of equal proportions. "The Chorus Lady" and "The Traveling Salesman" are the first pieces of James Forbes to be obtained by any firm for photodramatic production.

Biograph Reissues Equal to Present Day Films

Pictures Directed by D. W. Griffith in 1911, 1912 and 1913 Contain Players Whose Rise in Popularity Since That Period Confers an All-Star Cast Distinction Upon These Early Releases—The Photography, Technique and Action Are Equal to 1915 Standards

PARAPHRASING the opening lines of "The Old Oaken Bucket"—how dear to the exhibitor's heart are the old Griffith Biographs!

A private showing of the first six of the one and two-reel pictures which D. W. Griffith directed for the Biograph Company of America in 1911, 1912 and 1913, and which are to be released weekly on the General Film program, starting Friday, June 11, was held recently at the old Biograph headquarters at 11 East Fourteenth street, New York City.

Times have changed all right. The names of Griffith and the more prominent players now appear on the screen. These pictures surely establish Griffith as the father of the present-day motion picture technique. The cut-back and close-up are liberally used.

The photography, too, is strictly high class. This is important. It was to be expected that the technique, action and acting would be fully up to 1915 standards, but some doubt was felt over the photography until it was seen on the screen. But even then "Billy" Bitzer was getting photography which ranks ahead of the average photographic work of today.

Powerful One Reel Subjects

A wealth of sentiment hovers around these pictures. It is safe to say that everyone who was in the business at the time they were first released will remember at least one of the first six releases: "The Battle," "Love in an Apartment Hotel," "Fighting Blood," "The Sands of Dee," "A Timely Interception" and "Broken Ways." They are all masterpieces in one reel.

In "The Battle" and "Fighting Blood" is seen the same masterful technique which produced "The Birth of a Nation." These are far more pretentious than any single reel pictures being made now-a-days. When they were produced it was possible to get far more returns on a single-reel picture than it is now. Hence it was possible to spend far more money. And Biograph spent money just as freely in the Griffith days as it does now. These were the pictures which made the "A. B." brand name the standard of the world.

Special interest attaches to the players. Most of the actors and actresses who were mere cogs in the machinery when these pictures were produced are now established stars. In addition, as seen in these re-issues, they have their youthful freshness and vigor. Many who are now established stars or producers are seen in small parts or "suping."

Those Featured in "The Battle"

Blanche Sweet, Robert Harron, Charles H. West and Charles Mailes are the featured players in "The Battle," the first release. In very small parts are seen Walter Miller, now an established actor; Dell Henderson, now a director; Christy Cabanne, now a director; Spottiswoode Aitken, now an established actor, and Wilfrid Lucas, now a director. "The Battle" is a mighty costly, crackerjack one reeler. Trench fighting, hundreds of soldiers, spectacular falls, and all the Griffith effects are seen.

An imposing array of stars is seen in "Love In an Apartment Hotel," the second release. They are Mae Marsh, Eddie and Jack Dillon, Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Walter Miller, Robert Harron and Harry Carey. Kate Toncray, still with Biograph, and Matt Snyder, now retired, have small parts. Think of getting all those stars in a single reeler NOW. "Love In An Apartment Hotel" is a little gem with romance, drama and comedy well mingled.

Other Famous Stars Seen

The first time battle scenes were ever made, photographed from a distance, showing a large area of action, was in "Fighting Blood," the third release. The stars are Robert Harron, Florence LaBadie, Kate Bruce, William J. Butler and George Nicholls, who is now a director. Francis J. Grandon, also a director, was playing a soldier. "Fighting Blood" is on a par with "The Battle." It is one of those grand old pictures, remembered by all.

Mae Marsh made her screen debut in "The Sands of Dee," the fourth release. Other players are Robert Harron, Edwin August, Claire McDowell, Chrystie Miller, Charles H. Mailes and Grace Henderson. This is a beautiful picturization of the poem of the same name by Charles Kingsley.

Chrystie Miller, now retired, had one of his best character parts as the father in "A Timely Interception," the fifth release. Lillian Gish, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Harron, Joseph McDermott and William J. Butler are in the cast. This is a rural drama with a well-worked-up climax and plenty of heart interest.

Henry Walthall and Blanche Sweet are at their best in "Broken Ways," the sixth release. Robert Harron, Mae Marsh and Harry Carey play the less important parts. This is a Western road-agent picture done in true Griffith style.

About thirty more pictures will be released, chosen from more than three hundred subjects which Griffith directed for the Biograph company. G. D. P.

Sheehan and Balshofer Arrive in Los Angeles

President of the Quality Pictures Corporation, Accompanied by Bushman, Looks for Studio Location—Fox General Manager Also Investigating Sites

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 17.

LAST week was an important week from a standpoint of new and significant arrivals in the photoplay colony on the Pacific Coast.

Principal among the newcomers to the coast film circles, perhaps, is Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Quality Pictures corporation, who reached this city on Monday. Mr. Balshofer was accompanied by Francis X. Bushman, late star of the Essanay company, and a large contingent of players. Bushman, as has been announced, is to be starred by the Quality Pictures corporation, whose productions will be released exclusively through the Metro service.

It had been originally planned by Balshofer to locate his company in what is known as the old Sterling plant in Holywood, but this property is now being occupied by Features Ideal, Incorporated and their companies.

Just where Balshofer and his company will drive their stakes is not definitely known, but it is rumored, on what purports to be good authority, that it is the organization's intention to use the old Oz studio, also in Hollywood.

A second important newcomer was recorded with the arrival of Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film corporation. Mr. Sheehan was accompanied, it is learned, by a staff of producers, actors and stage hands. He is casting about for a suitable location, which, when it has been obtained, will immediately be utilized for the production of feature pictures.

Robert Warwick, the actor, is the third person of note to have arrived in the Southland during the current week. Mr. Warwick comes as the representative of William A. Brady, and will take steps, in the near future, it is understood, toward the establishment of a Western plant. The former Broadway legitimate star, it is believed, is to be in complete charge of the west coast operations.

Bronx Exhibitors Dissatisfied with Cinema Club

Hold Mass Meeting Under Auspices of Motion Picture League, Local No. 1, and Elect New Officers—Ochs Makes Address

A MASS meeting of Bronx exhibitors was held Thursday, May 13, at the Art theatre, 1077 Southern Boulevard, New York City, under the auspices of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, New York Local No. 1.

The purpose of this meeting was the reorganizing of the Bronx exhibitors, since it had been found upon a thorough canvass of the above borough that the exhibitors were dissatisfied with the Cinema Club officers.

Lee A. Ochs, the president of New York Local No. 1, presided. He made a short address, followed by brief addresses from Mr. Harris, the former attorney for the Cinema Club, and Herman Hoffman, an attorney of Manhattan.

A general discussion followed, several exhibitors voicing their grievances against the officers of the Cinema Club.

Mr. Harris offered to help the Bronx exhibitors and give them free legal service until such time as they were financially able to compensate him.

Next followed an election of officers for the Bronx branch of New York Local No. 1. D. B. Picker, of the Burland theatre, was unanimously elected president. Charles Goldreyer, of the University theatre, was unanimously elected vice-president. A. B. Samuelson, of the Art theatre, was unanimously elected secretary. Thomas Howard, of the Claremont theatre, was unanimously elected treasurer.

MONTE CARLO REPRODUCED FAITHFULLY BY RICKETTS

The Monte Carlo gambling scene in "The Lure of the Mask," the film version of Harold Mac Grath's successful novel, is considered one of the best of the many gaming scenes that have been filmed. Director Tom Ricketts, of the American force at Santa Barbara, is justly proud of his achievement in reproducing to an absolute exactness the scene from the most famous temple of chance in the world. This will be one of the big scenes in the play.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

MOTION PICTURE BOOKKEEPING MADE SIMPLE AND RELIABLE

J. V. Bryson has utilized his wide experience as a successful exhibitor and exchange man in preparing a unique system of bookkeeping for motion picture theatres.

It is designed to meet the needs of the exhibitor in such a practical way that it works almost automatically in accurately recording a thorough day by day history of the exhibitor's business.

The often abused saying that "a child can operate it" can be used truthfully in this case. A few figures entered at the close of business each day accurately show every cent of receipts and disbursements, keeping the theatre owner constantly posted as to whether he is operating at a profit or loss.

Under the stress of competition, the up-to-date exhibitor realizes the necessity of applying efficiency to his business, and an accurate bookkeeping system is the first requisite of efficiency. General bookkeeping applied to the picture theatre is most complicated, consequently the thinking exhibitor will realize the value of this specialized system designed to meet his particular needs by one who knows through practical experience.

PORTRAITS OF STARS ON LEATHER FOR SOUVENIRS

THE Utley company, Holyoke, Mass., launched a most promising patronage and attendance campaign on May 15. The plan consists of issuing portraits of screen players on leather for the use of exhibitors in attracting patrons to their theatres.

These souvenirs, designed for distribution among the public by managers of motion-picture theatres, are artistic reproductions of film stars on leather, suitable for making pillows, table mats, portieres and other decorative articles for the household The pictures, interesting and instructive, as well as useful for purposes of decoration, constitute novelties which cannot help appeal to all fans.

The souvenirs are made of genuine leather, measure 2 x 2⅝ inches, and are perfect reproductions in color of stars. Art borders and embossed panels add to the attractiveness of the mementoes.

The names of the players and the names of the producing companies featuring them appear on each novelty. Larger pieces, 4 x 5¼, can be purchased from the theatres at a nominal fee for use as center pieces.

The Utley company has formulated a comprehensive campaign for the guidance of the exhibitor taking the service. It issues heralds describing the novelties theatre patrons can make with the photos on leather.

One-sheet posters, 28 x 42, will be furnished for display outside the theatre, and can be bought at ten cents apiece.

In addition to these, attractive slides have been manufactured as an aid to the exhibitor. There are five different designs, one with reading matter and four with illustrations of the novelties in colors. These can be purchased by the exhibitor at twenty-five cents each, five for a dollar. The Utley people have obtained the co-operation of the publicity managers of film manufacturers. Considerable newspaper advertising will be given the plan, supported by the use of booklets, cards and bills.

The scheme has the endorsement of such companies as the Mutual, the General Film, the Universal, World Film, the United, the Alliance and Lasky.

SPECIAL POSTER FOR COMING STARS

ONCE more the Hipp theatre, of Omaha, Neb., has stepped to the front as about the livest livewire advertiser in its part of the country. During the last few weeks it has not only occupied the theatre pages in the Sunday papers with reading matter, but has trained the local newspapers to accept pictures of screen stars to run alongside the photographs of stars who will play in the "legitimate" houses during the week.

Now special attractive little poster pamphlets, containing a "scare" notice on the front page, the present program on the inside and the "coming" features on another page, are being issued regularly and distributed where they will be most effective.

For instance, one day this week a pamphlet was issued saying that Dustin Farnum, playing in "Captain Courtesy," was coming to town at the Hipp. Copies of the pamphlet were put in every restaurant, every store, every public building and in the court house, every juror's, judge's, bailiff's and reporter's desk and chair contained one of the little pamphlets.

Needless to say, such enterprising advertisements filled the theatre. With the coming of warm weather and the lazy indifference of the springtime, that is no easy matter, as every exhibitor well knows.

COSTUMED DOLLS REPRESENTING CHARACTERS IN WINDOWS

MANAGER E. N. DOWNS, of the Knickerbocker theatre, located in the extreme East End of Cleveland, has just started a novel window display in the heart of the down town shopping district, showing what film productions are being exhibited at that house.

The window of the old Siegel store, adjoining the Statler Hotel, Euclid avenue and East Twelfth street, is used for display purposes. A replica of the Knickerbocker stage is in the window. Costumed dolls, representing the principal character of the feature films shown at the theatre, put the scene into relief as though presented on the screen.

The first display of dolls represented Blanch Sweet and House Peters. Changes will be made simultaneously with the changes at the theatre. A huge sign calls attention to the fact that the Knickerbocker is making the display. It has proven a great success, according to Mr. Downs.

AIDS SOCIETY WOMEN TO FEED INDIGENT

EVERY day for the past week Mrs. W. D. Smith, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, of Birmingham, Ala., and other prominent society women, stood anxiously watching crowds entering the Majestic theatre.

"We need money to feed thirty families," Mrs. Smith said, "which we personally fed last week, and there are many more."

The Woman's Auxiliary has entered into an arrangment with the Majestic whereby part of the receipts are turned over to charity. Ten cents admission is charged, and the added incentive of doing a good deed besides seeing a good show has brought the public in large quantities.

BUNNY DAY AT ALL THEATRES

FUNNY BUNNY, John-o'-the-films, dead in the flesh, but with the public in spirit, made Houstonian hearts happy again one day recently in that progressive Texas city. On this day the Isis, The Queen, Pearce, Zoe, Rex, Star, Gem, Dixie and Key theatres showed films in which Bunny was starred.

These nine photoplay houses co-operated in giving Bunny fans a chance to say "Good-bye, John." The plan worked well, it is said, and many fans went from one theatre to another that day in order to get a chance to see the famous comedian in as many films as possible.

EMILE CHAUTARD FINISHES BRADY PLAY

Emile Chautard is one of the best known French directors. He has just finished making the Brady photoplay, "The Boss," in which Holbrook Blinn and Alice Brady are starred.

M. Chautard is a graduate of the French Eclair studios and has been associated with such noted artists as Rejane. He has played at the Gymnase and the Vaudeville theatres in Paris. M. Maurice Tourneur, who is well known to American picture fans because of his making of the Robert Warwick picture, "The Man of the Hour," and the Vivian Martin, "The Wishing Ring," was formerly a member of the same company in which M. Chautard appeared. When "Alias Jimmy Valentine" was originally produced in Paris, M. Chautard played Valentine, while M. Tourneur acted as stage manager.

HARLAN ABOUT TO SIGN WITH SELIG

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, May 19.

It is rumored that Otis Harlan, comedian, will sign a contract with the Selig Polyscope company to appear in Selig comedies under the new Red Seal brand. Otis Harlan is known as one of the wealthiest of stage stars. His home is in New York. He achieved an enviable reputation throughout this country as a star in the late Charles Hoyt's comedies. He also supported Elsie Janis in "The Vanderbilt Cup" and has appeared in many other productions of high class.

It is said that Harlan will soon arrive in Chicago to begin work in the Selig Chicago studios.

All But Three of Twelve "Who Pays?" Given Titles

Photo Dramas, by Will M. Ritchey, a Former Newspaper Man, Now Scenario Editor for Balboa, Are Based on Novel Conceptions

THE twelve scenarios for the Balboa-Pathé "Who Pays?" series were written by Will M. Ritchey, and all but one of them were based upon dramatic stories that were his own original conception.

Edwin Bliss was engaged to novelize these photo-dramas and did so with skill. Strange to say, this task completed his life's work. Death overtook him shortly after he had turned in the last manuscript.

Will M. Ritchey, the Balboa company's scenario editor, is a graduate from the ranks of newspaperdom. He has been writing photo-dramas four years and has contributed more than two hundred to the screen.

He possesses a keen dramatic mind, a sharp sense of continuity and visualizes so perfectly that any first class director can achieve wonderful results. The "Who Pays?" series was the greatest assignment ever given to him, but he performed it with such ability that in future none will dispute his attainments.

Before beginning work on the "Who Pays?" series Mr. Ritchey made a six-reel dramatic picturization of "Beulah," Augusta J. Evans' famous American novel, and this was screened with Henry B. Walthall in the star part. "Ill-Starred Babbie," a picturization of Will H. Whalen's sentimental book, followed. This picture play has been finished and will be released with Miss Jackie Saunders in the stellar role.

"When the Wheel Turns," another Walthall feature, was also scenarioized by Mr. Ritchey. In the "Who Pays?" series all but three of the twelve have been titled and are ready for the exhibitor. "The Price of Fame" is the first. Then, in the order named, are: "The Pursuit of Pleasure," "When Justice Sleeps," "The Feminine Law," "Today and Tomorrow," "Houses of Glass," "Blue Blood and Yellow" and "For the Commonwealth."

V-L-S-E Holds First Directors' Meeting in New York

Occasion, Though Informal, Resulted in Maturing Plans Important to the Industry —Expect Future Releases Will Surpass Present Production

THE first gathering of the "big four" since the memorable meeting that created film history by the V-L-S-E affiliation, was held in New York last Tuesday.

The occasion was an informal director's meeting and no official business was transacted, but it is understood that plans of great moment to the industry were discussed, and action on them will be taken later.

No definite statement has been made as to the nature of the big things hinted at, but rumor has it that when an announcement is made later, the film world will get a still further view of how well the old leaders anticipate the needs of the exhibitor.

It can be authoritatively stated, however, that the attractions released during the first quarter on the V-L-S-E program, big as they are, will be surpassed by the features now being produced or in preparation.

Walter W. Irwin, general manager, said after the meeting that under the present system of direct booking the responsibility of the V-L-S-E companies does not cease when the picture has left the studio.

The interest of the company follows each feature for the life of the film, and in consequence, nothing of value to its successful exhibition is left undone. This means that every detail from the selection of the subject to bringing patrons to the theatres has the careful consideration of master film men, and, naturally, the matters considered at the board meeting covered every phase of the motion picture business.

"In reality," continued Mr. Irwin, "the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay companies are presenting their big feature productions direct to the public, and this makes personal thought, attention and extreme care imperative."

Work on New Keystone Studio Is a Rush Job

Contractors Are Displaying Beaver-Like Energy in the Completion of a Stage, Scene Docks and Property Rooms on Half a City Block

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 17.

THE half of a city block on Allesandro street, Los Angeles, immediately across the street from the present Keystone studio, purchased several months ago by Kessel and Baumann, is this week the scene of great activity, for a local builder has made a contract to have a stage 100 x 200, a garage of sufficient size for eight or ten big autos and trucks, and scene docks and property rooms completed by the latter part of next week.

Work was taken up on this plant the latter part of last week, and every effort is being made to push it to completion by the scheduled time. Later it is the intention of the company to install another tank, approximately 30 x 50 feet, below the stage level, which will be used for making water pictures.

This mammoth stage is to serve as an auxiliary to the present one, and will afford ample space for at least six companies to work there at one time. No dressing rooms wiill be built at this studio, the company having but recently installed sufficient to accommodate the players of the conconstantly increasing stock company.

With this additional stage room, which will be fitted with all props and sets necessary, it will be possible for Managing Director Mack Sennett to increase his producing staff to double its present size.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 17.

PLANS are being prepared by William Horsley, builder of Universal City, for an additional interior studio for Universal companies. The past several weeks of rainy and cloudy weather have caused the officials to see the need of such additional interior stage space which will enable them to save thousands of dollars heretofore wasted in waits because of the weather. The new artificially lighted studio will be along the same lines of the present one at Universal City, but it is understood it will be much larger.

The matter of entertaining the beautiful girls of America who come to Universal City about June 10, on a special train, has been placed in the hands of M. G. Jonas and H. L. "Buck" Massie. It is expected there will be about seventy-five young women in the party and the two men in charge, promised that they would go the limit arranging for the big week for the distinguished visitors.

The past week Rena Valdeze, formerly of the Fiction Pictures and Ideal Features, has been added to the 101 Bison stock company and Gretchen Lederer, who was leading woman for the Laemmle brand, but who has been with the Vitagraph company at Santa Monica for the past six months, has returned to the Universal.

GLADYS BROCKWELL (Majestic)

Director Robert Z. Leonard and Harvey Gates are preparing a scenario for a four-reel subject which will be of the nature of an autobiography of Owen Kildare, based upon the poem, "My Mamie Rose." Mr. Leonard is just now completing the Memorial Day three-reel subject quoted, "Shattered Memories," and upon its completion, will take up the four-reeler.

Kerrigan Recovering from Long Illness

J. Warren Kerrigan has been ill for the past several months and underwent an operation early this week at one of the local hospitals. He is now on the road to recovery, but it will be several weeks before he is able to return to his studio work.

The Henry McRae, 101 Bison company went to San Diego the early part of this week, where they will make three Indian subjects, using the exhibit of the Sante Fe Railroad at the Exposition for settings. All of the subjects are by Dr. H. G. Stafford. The first to be filmed, "The Hand of Ti-Ra-Wah," will be made in the Hopi Village. The second subject will be "The Heart of Waseka," which subject will consist of two reels.

FAY TINCHER IN "ETHEL'S ROMANCE" (Mutual-Komic)

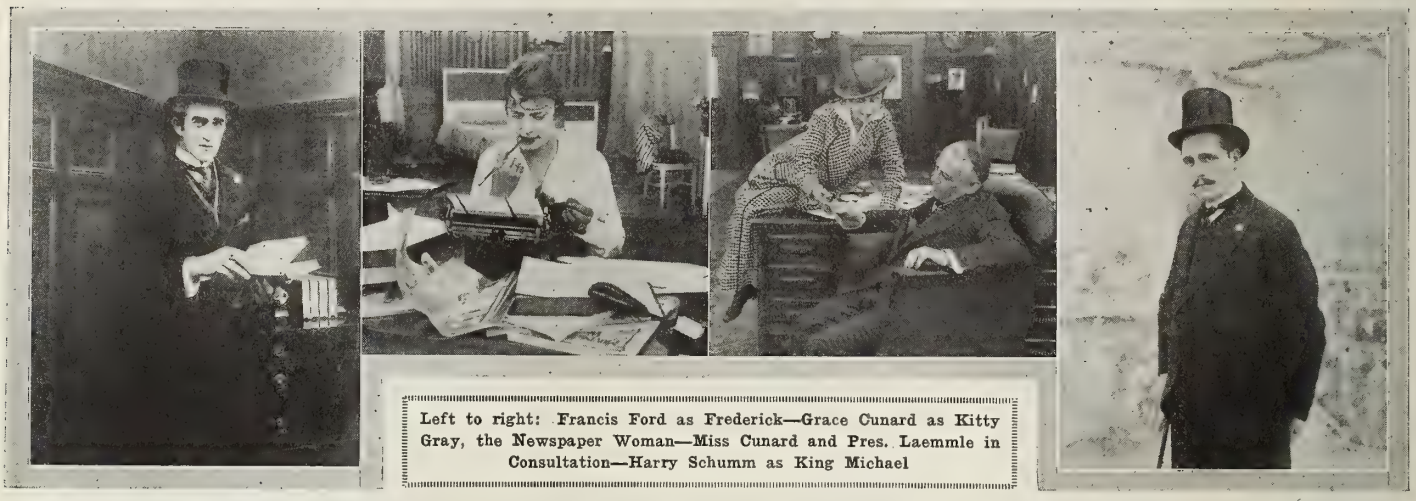
"The Advisor" is a two-reel subject dealing in political intrigue, being made by the Burton King Big U Company. The story is that of politicians attempting a frame-up on the young attorney, who is a candidate for public office. For a time the plans of the plotters are carried out, but in the end the young attorney is successful in restoring his home to a happy condition, completely out-witting his enemies. Adele Lane appears in the role of the attorney's wife.

Cressey Making First Picture

William M. Cressey and Blanche Dayne, of the Big Time Vaudeville team of Cressey and Dayne, began work this week on their first Universal subject. This is the adaptation of one of Mr. Cressey's vaudeville sketches and will be released under the title, "Lack of Virtue Is Its Own Reward."

Besides the two vaudevillians the cast will include Adele Farrington and the subject will be filmed in two reels under the direction of Robert Daly. Cressey appears in his well known character part, that of a backwoods farmer.

FRANK REICHER



The Power company is making a two-reel subject, "The Sinner Must Pay," from a scenario by Ida May Parks. The cast for this is made up from the Universal stock in the absence of Miss Pauline Bush—Mrs. Alan Dwan—who is absent on a honeymoon vacation. "The Sinner Must Pay" is a melodrama dealing with factory conditions and life in a Western mining town.

Allen Curtis Joker company is still busy with the making of a two-reel comedy for the Associated Ad Clubs of America from a scenario written by Stella Anne Ellis.

"Her Own Blood," a one-reel subject with scenario by Edward Sloman, who appears in the part of the heavy, has just been completed by the Big Z company. This is a western story dealing with a ne'er-do-well who won the confidence of the sheriff's sister and induced her to aid him in escape, following gun play at a card game.

The 101 Bison company has completed a two-reel subject by Hugh Weir, "The Joys of a Man." This is a melodrama dealing with attempts of discontented former employees who resort to all means in their efforts to thwart the plans of their successor, the new foreman.

PRESIDENT CARL LAEMMLE, OF THE UNIVERSAL, AND THE LEADERS OF "THE BROKEN COIL" SERIAL CAST

Left to right: Francis Ford as Frederick—Grace Cunard as Kitty Gray, the Newspaper Woman—Miss Cunard and Pres. Laemmle in Consultation—Harry Schumm as King Michael

For scenes in this subject, a number of big explosions were made; one destroying a store house and another a string of box cars. This subject will serve to reintroduce Betty Schade. Miss Schade will be remembered as the star performer in a series of water pictures made at Honolulu about a year ago by Mr. McRae and company.

Nestor Comedy Deals with Spiritualism

The experiences of the young lover who calls at the home of his sweetheart, where all members of the family are spiritualists, forms a series of comedy situations for the Nestor subject, "When the Spirits Move," written and being produced by Al Christie.

Eddie and Vicky appear in the juvenile parts with Lee Moran as Professor Bunk. The other Nestor company is making "When Hubby Grew Jealous," a one-reeler, in which hospital scenes and accidents serve as a basis for comedy situations, and how a second-story man was induced to lead a square life was indicated in the Victor brand subject, "The Trust." Lon Chaney appears in the part of the crook and May Sisson as the wife.

A crook story, in which the desire of an underworld man to keep the history of his past life secret from his family, forms the principal part of the plot. "From the Shadows," a one-reel subject by Ben Cohn, is being produced by Frank Lloyd for the Laemmle brand.

"The Ways of Men" is a two-reel subject portraying the perfidy of a young man who tried to follow the dictates of his own conscience and the whims of his ambitious mother. Ultimately, by the aid of fate he was successful.

Hobart Henly appears in the juvenile role and Cleo Madison is featured as a model in the cloak department of a large store.

The old story of "love will find a way" has been revived again in the one-reel film entitled "Our Baby" from scenario by Leonora Dowlan, being made by Director W. C. Dowlan, at Universal City. This is a story of a secret marriage of a pair of love-sick college students and shows the means they used to get into the good graces of their parents.

Lund Begins Producing for Universal

O. A. C. Lund, formerly of the World Film Corporation producing staff, who came to the coast to make subjects for Fiction Pictures, has been employed by the Universal and last week took up his first work there. Plans for the making of a number of big subjects using stage stars of national reputation, are being made, and it is understood that Mr. Lund will have charge of producing some of these pictures. Charles Hunt will be retained as Mr. Lund's assistant.

Francis Powers, the well-known producer who came to the West coast to direct for the Dramatic Feature Company, has been added to the producing staff at the Majestic and Reliance studio, and has taken up the filming of "One Who Serves," from the scenario by Frank E. Woods. The story provides a number of old dramatic situations dealing with the life of a crook and his home ties. Included in the cast are W. E. Lowrey, Richard Cummings and Catherine Henry.

"Unwind It" is the title given the Komic brand being made last week which will serve to introduce a new striped gown. Heretofore the dress of the leading woman of this company had horizontal stripes, but the new gown is one of perpendicular stripes. The new one, all cameramen on R-M lot claim, is equally as good for use in focusing as any opticians card ever invented.

Juvenile Detective Comedies for Mutual

The Majestic juvenile company is making "Her Film Hero" in which Billy Jacobs appears in the name role, supported by Olive Lord and Gordon Griffith. Olive, the leading woman, has a desperate case on her film favorite. The true lover resorts to the use of candy, but is unable to win the attentions of the dame until an accident occurs which permits him to show his courage contrasted with the cowardly actions of the filmer.

It has been decided to make a series of juvenile detective comedies for the Mutual program and E. A. and M. A. Franklin are now producing the second, entitled "Dirty Face Dan." Violet Radcliff appears in the title role and George Stone is Detective Dick.

How the tables were turned on a real estate bunco man forms the plot in "Payment in Full," by William Parker, a Reliance subject being made under the direction of Giles Warren. Frank Bennett and Anna May Walthall appear as the victims and Jack Cosgrave as the real estate dealer.

"The Celestial Code," a two-reel Reliance, from scenario by Bernard McConville, has for the theme the disappearance of important military papers. The task of ferreting out the thief by the Secret Service Department affords numerous thrilling situations. Miss Irene Hunt and George Walsh and Dark Cloud have important parts.

Reproduce Bowery at Lasky

Scenes of a wreck, caused by the collision of a traction car and an automobile containing seven people, in which five lost their lives, were filmed here Friday afternoon for the "Universal Weekly," at two o'clock, and a special print was made and shown that evening at the Symphony theatre, one of the large Broadway houses, where the Universal program is shown. The camera work was in charge of Will Uhlman, president of the Static Club.

A two-reel subject, entitled "The Unpardonable Sin," an adaptation from the story of the same name by Andrew Mack, was filmed last week at the Features Ideal studio. This will serve to introduce a new leading woman of this company, Louise Hamilton, who shares honors with Norbert Miles in the leading parts. This is a drama of an unpleasant domestic life wherein a husband becomes infatuated with his own daughter.

Two street corners from New York City's Bowery have been built at the Lasky studio, as it was impossible to find cobble stones, lamp posts, and other land marks on any Los Angeles locations. The two corners were built under the direction of Technical Director Buchlin from photographs made for the Lasky company and are reputed to have the exact atmosphere in every detail, with the exception of the odor. The sets, three stories high, were made especially for the filming of "Chimmie Fadden."

Samuel Goldfish is spending the week at the Lasky studio, having arrived last Saturday from New York City, and with Mr. Lasky is making plans for productions to be filmed in the near future, and especially those in which Geraldine Farrar will be starred.

The next Bosworth-Universal four-reel subject, which was originally titled "The Shepherd of the Mines," is now known as "The Scarlet Sin."

Russ Powell, for three seasons appearing in the part of "Masscroff," captain of the Bulgarian soldiers in the Whitney production, "The Chocolate Soldier," arrived in Los Angeles Friday for an engagement of several months with the National Film corporation, and will be featured in four and five reel comedies produced by Bruce Mitchell.

He will make his debut on the screen in "Tale of the Night Before," a four-reel subject in which Bill Parsons, late of the legitimate stage and Rena Rogers, formerly leading woman with the Thistle company of the Crown City studio, appear in promient parts. The story is by Anthony Caldeway, who is also appearing in the cast.

Will Produce Semi-Fairy Tale

Harold Ostrom, assistant manager of the Oz Film Company, departed Saturday for New York City where he will spend several weeks in the interest of the company. He took with him the first print of the recent production, "The Grey Nun of Belgium," featuring Catherine Countess.

H. C. Mathews and company, including Elsie Albert and Baby Early, who are making juvenile subjects for the Universal program, have completed the first subject for this release, "In the Heart of a Shell," a one reel semi-fairy tale.

The company has spent several weeks in the making of this because peculiar lighting effects were needed in the making of a number of scenes. Mr. Mathews and his principals were recently honored by the "Woman's Home Companion" editors, when seven of their subjects were named in a list of fifty, purporting to be the best films to be shown children. The company has been making juvenile pictures for five years and fairy story films for three years.

During the most terrific storm to visit the Pacific coast in the past few years, that of Friday, April 30, members of the Balboa producing company under the direction of Bert Bracken made scenes on the rocks off Point Fermin at a time when the wind registered a velocity of seventy-two miles an hour.

With nothing to prevent them from being swept out except their holding onto the rocks, the players made it possible to secure some thrilling scenes of the giant breakers passing over them.

"Wind, Waves and Wrecks"

The camera stationed high up on the sheer cliff had to be protected by umbrellas and canvas while the scenes were taken. The same day the Harvard, the largest Pacific coast passenger steamer returned to the harbor here after attempting to start on its regular trip up the coast.

The scenes made here will be used in the three-reel fisherman story, "Winds, Waves and Wrecks," dealing with the lives of castaways on a desert island. The players were Crenne Grant, Joice Moore, Bruce Smith, Philo MacCullough, and Henry Stanley.

Number nine of the "Who Pays?" Balboa-Pathe series, "For the Commonwealth," is being finished this week. This is a political story portraying a frame-up by ring leaders to thwart the success of a prominent young reform leader. Number ten, now ready for filming is entitled "The Pomp of the Earth," reveals the farce of civilization by showing the eternal struggle for success and self aggrandizement and the sacrifices made to accomplish the desired ends.

GRACE CUNARD AS THE HEROINE IN THE UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURE, "THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMING"

The scenarios are by Will M. Ritchey and the direction is in charge of Harry Harvey.

D. F. Whitcomb, formerly scenario editor with the Liberty company at San Mateo, and the Keystone here, is now assistant to Editor Will M. Ritchey at the Balboa studios.

Rolfe Companies Disband

The first of the Rolfe companies disbanded last Saturday, following the completion of the five-reel subject, "Fighting Bob," and on Sunday Director Jack Noble, Charles Horan, his assistant, H. O. Carleton, cameraman, and Howard Truesdell, heavy character actor, departed for New York. At the New York studio of the company, at Sixty-first street and Broadway, the filming of "The Right of Way," featuring William Faversham, will be taken up at once.

Perhaps no studio force has been delayed more than that of the Selig Jungle Zoo. It so happened that practically all of the pictures being made required special outside sets, and because of this every producing company is far behind with its work. No new subjects have been taken up since the early part of last week. At the Edendale studio directors Colin Campbell and E. J. LeSaint are engaged in making multiple reels subjects.

Tom Mix, daring director of Selig western pictures has been absent from his work at the Glendale studio because of injuries received while taking part in a Rodeo given in connection with the Feast of Flowers during the past week.

Mix and his band of cowboys, who by the way won many honors at the ten-day meet, were taking part in a chuck wagon race when the team of the other entry became uncontrollable and dashed into the Selig ('49) Special. Mix was knocked from his horse and picked up in an unconscious condition after the wrecked wagon had been lifted off of him.

For a time it was feared he was injured internally, but later it was found his only serious injury was a broken arm.

Beal Joins Selig

Frank Beal, late director with Features Ideal, has been added to the Selig producing staff.

Director Raymond B. West, Miss Bessie Barriscale and company producing the N Y M P Mutual Master-Picture, "The Mating," are spending this week at Ontario, where a village church of peculiar design is being used for a number of scenes in the early part of the story.

Prince Surrey, the East Indian nobleman, who came to America to learn of the making of motion pictures, has been especially engaged to supervise the decoration of all settings for the Oriental subject, "The Beckoning Flame," the interiors of which are now being made. True replicas of Calcutta palaces, made especially for this subject, are reputed to have cost several thousands of dollars.

An artificial avalanche of snow was staged this week on Mount Baldy, by a N Y M P company for a scene in "The Ace of Hearts," a melodrama with a locale of the north woods, produced by Walter Edwards, who appears in the leading part.

A pretty romance is blighted by the murder of the girl's father, and suspicion falls on the lover until a piece of a playing card is found in the dead man's hand. The officer searches out the party who had been playing with the father, and finds him in his cabin.

There a struggle ensues and the officer is all but over-powered when the avalanche strikes and carries away the house, killing the murderer but not injuring the officer. The scenario is by Richard V. Spencer.

William S. Hart is giving his attention to the filming of "Cash Parrish's Pal," the story of the reform of a western bandit whose pal "peaches" on him when he learns he is going to follow the "straight and narrow." Mr. Hart is supported by Clara Williams and a well balanced cast.

LEVINE ARTICLES ISSUED IN BOOKLET FORM

H. Z. Levine, formerly with Universal and Fox, has brought out in a neat brochure of thirty-one pages a number of articles analyzing conditions in the industry which he contributed to various trade papers from time to time. These articles record the observation of a film expert, the fruits of seventy-five thousand miles of travel here and abroad.

Two articles in particular indicate Mr. Levine's comprehensive grasp of conditions in the industry, "An Analysis of the English Market," and "The Period of Transition—the Feature Program." An article on "Exchange Management" is also fruitful of suggestive ideas on the subject it treats.

THRILLING BATTLE SCENES IN "AFTER DARK"

Fred "Bing" Thompson, the World Film corporation director, took some very pretentious battle scenes with hundreds of soldiers at Sheepshead Bay on Sunday, May 9, for the coming World Film feature "After Dark."

Night firing with howitzers was among the scenes photographed. "After Dark" is a William A. Brady feature. Alec B. Francis plays the part made famous by Mr. Brady himself on the speaking stage. Dorothy Green and Norman Trevor are also in the cast.

Illness Cannot Check Activities of Thomas H. Ince

NYMP Director, Ignoring Shattered Collar Bone and Internal Injuries, Makes Screen Examination of "The Reward," from Invalid Chair

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 17.

A SHATTERED collar bone and internal injuries are not sufficient to prevent Thomas H. Ince from keeping in touch with the production work at the NYMP studio. His last work at the studio was on the cutting of "The Reward," a four-reel Mutual Master-Picture, but he had not completed this prior to the auto accident in which he all but met death recently.

The cutting was completed by E. H. Allen, Mr. Ince's assistant, and upon its completion he requested that he be permitted to give it screen examination before it was shipped to the New York laboratories. A projecting machine was purchased and installed, then the injured man, propped up in his invalid chair, saw the finished product. Then he gave it an O. K.

But the nurse in charge of the convalescent was quick to see that Bessie Barriscale, star of the subject, did not properly handle a baby in several scenes. So several retakes were ordered.

Again Mr. Ince requested the nurse to forget her duties when he learned of an opportunity to contract for two additional stage stars, and while the lady of the white cap had her back turned, he signed contracts that will bring Jane Grey and Hale Hamilton to the NYMP studio for special engagements.

Miss Grey has appeared in Broadway productions for the past several seasons, following a stock company experience of several years, during which time she played in a number of the country's best houses. Hale Hamilton is remembered as the successful personification of J. Rufus in George M. Cohan's "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." With these two additions the list of stars engaged number fourteen. Special stories are being written for each celebrity.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 18.

THE Florida Motion Picture company, with offices in the St. James Building, has taken over the former Edison studio in South Jacksonville. Lights are now being installed. A new stock is being formed with Mabel Hamilton in the leads. Their other company now at the Riverview studio expects to start work on slapstick comedies this week. The first picture will be entitled "Love in Bingville" followed by "Mrs. Casey's Flats."

The Lubin company under the direction of Arthur Hotaling will leave for Atlantic City on the sixteenth. The members of the company had begun to feel like permanent residents.

The Kalem company is at present working on interiors on account of the weather. With their set of portable lights, they can use most any room for a studio. Mr. Vignolia and his company will return to New York in a few days.

Some representatives of a northern concern were looking at property near the city and will likely build a studio within a few weeks.

Dr. Gaston Day, M. D., one of the most prominent physicians in the city has become a film actor and joined the Florida company.

The Mackay-Green Company is very busy making commercial pictures.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

LILLIAN HAMILTON PUTS THRILLS IN SMUGGLER PICTURE

It is due to the fearlessness of the leading lady of the Premier company, Lillian Hamilton, that "The Smuggler's Daughter," an unusually well produced western drama, which will be released on the United program May 28, is filled with a number of thrilling situations.

SCENE FROM "THE SMUGGLER'S DAUGHTER" (United)

Miss Hamilton drives a runaway team of horses dragging a lurching prairie schooner over a perilous road overhanging a mountain torrent, and jumps, only after the lines have snapped and the terrified horses are beyond control, into the arms of a horseman who overtakes the van from the rear. "The Smuggler's Daughter" promises to be a popular western release on the United program.

"ETERNAL SACRIFICE" FOUNDED ON NOBLE THEME

Nearing completion at the Lubin studios in Philadelphia is one of the most unique and vitally interesting feature pictures that has ever been made there. It is called "The Eternal Sacrifice" and was written and is being produced by George W. Terwilliger.

Throughout the entire story Terwilliger has subtly shown the entire range of sacrifices the mother either has to, or is willing to make, for her young. To get the proper backgrounds for the play Terwilliger and his company have traveled thousands of miles. Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalfe are to be featured in the production.

"MILLIONAIRE BABY" WILL BE RELEASED MAY 31

"The Millionaire Baby," dramatized for motion pictures by Gilson Willets from Anna Katherine Green's wonderful story of mystery and adventure, will be released as a Red Seal play, by the Selig Polyscope company, on Monday, May 31.

The Red Seal production is in six acts. Miss Grace Darmond, said to be the youngest leading lady in motion pictures, will make her initial appearance in a Selig Red Seal play. She supports Harry Mestayer, who takes the leading male role.

INA CLAIRE MAKES DEBUT IN LASKY FILM

Ina Claire, the Broadway star, will make her first appearance in photodrama under the management of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company in "The Wild Goose Chase," released on May 27.

"The Wild Goose Chase" is based on the comedy of the same name by William C.

INA CLAIRE IN "A WILD GOOSE CHASE" (Lasky)

De Mille and is in line with the strictly high class comedy productions recently made by the Lasky concern.

"The Wild Goose Chase" is a humorous romance of confused identities. Two young people, Betty and Bob, are ordered by their parents to marry "mates" they have never seen. The reason is that the grandparents of Bob and Betty, who are very rich old gentlemen living in France, have offered to provide large amounts of money if their grandchildren will wed one another.

Bob and Betty naturally resent this, and both leave their homes. Betty joins a barnstorming theatrical company which is in need of a Juliet and Bob, running across the same company and seeing Betty, makes haste to become an actor also.

As they are both using false names and have met only on one previous occasion they do not understand that each is the mate, destined by their grandparents, for the other. It is not until after they have pledged their love under distressing conditions as members of the theatrical troupe, which has been locked up in the County jail, that they discover their respective identities.

The conclusion is, of course, a happy one. The cast of "The Wild Goose Chase" includes in addition to Miss Claire, Tom Forman, Theodore Roberts and other favorite members of the Lasky company.

MINNIE BERLIN STARRED IN "THE LAST CONCERT"

As Edna, daughter of the old musician in "The Last Concert," a four part Mutual feature produced by Ellis F. Glickman at the Thanhouser studios, Minnie Berlin, the young Thanhouser-Mutual star, furnishes a delightful characterization.

"The Last Concert" was prepared for the screen by Mr. Glickman, who, for many years, has been associated with the legitimate stage and who is widely known for the many Yiddish plays he had produced

In "The Last Concert," Mr. Glickman portrays the part of the old musician. Music furnishes the theme of this highly delightful silent drama of the heart and home, which is interspersed with plenty of romance and humor.

The cast of "The Last Concert," besides Miss Berlin and Mr. Glickman, includes such well-known screen players as W. H. Harriman, Arthur Bauer and Lucy Payton.

Helen Case Joins Knickerbocker Star Features

Actress of Talent, Who Has to Her Credit a Long List of "Legitimate" and Screen Successes, Begins with "The Kick Out"

KNICKERBOCKER Star Features, releasing three-reel feature dramas on the General Film company's program, has secured a leading woman of unusual personality and ability, and one with an enviable record of screen work.

Helen Case, recently with the Vitagraph company and one who has been seen with very important releases of a number of companies during the past four years, has brought to Knickerbocker Star Features much clever talent and skill, the result of much hard work and successful experience on the stage in vaudeville, musical comedies, heavy dramas, besides screen work with several of the largest producers.

With the Vitagraph company, she proved herself such a horsewoman that she was sent to the western Vitagraph company, with whom she took the leading parts in all dramas calling for daring and spectacular riding.

In "The Thumb Print," "The Legend of the Black Chasm" and "The Picture Writer," Miss Case was at her best and won many laurels. In "The Thumb Print" she was the first leading lady with Earle Williams.

Miss Case was also leading woman in all of the military dramas of the Kay-Bee and the Broncho companies, following her engagement with the Vitagraph. Afterwards she joined the 101 Bison company of the Universal and did all the heavy riding acts, calling for fearless action and great daring.

Miss Case played in one Pathé release, taking the part of Mrs. Morton in "Mrs. Morton's Birthday," playing with "Mac" Barnes, with whom she is now playing in the first release of Knickerbocker Star Features.

B. A. Rolfe chose Miss Case over many available actresses for his great feature "The Cowboy and the Lady," for the Metro features.

Besides a very flattering record of screen work, Miss Case has appeared on the stage in many successes, one of which was "The House on the Bluff," under the management of Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr.

She was also with the stock company of the Marloe theatre for a year and a half, followed by a successful engagement with Poli's stock company, Waterbury, Conn.

In Knickerbocker Star Features, Miss Case will be called upon for most difficult roles. At present she is engaged in the first release, "The Kick Out," playing the part of the mayor's daughter, with Ralph Stuart as the mayor.

PURE FOOD SHOW A PART OF ADE PICTURE

General Manager William Sherrill, of the Frohman Amusement corporation had planned using the actual setting of the annual Pure Food Show for the big scenes of the food exhibit of George Ade's "Just Out of College," but as there will be no show this year, an especially large set which will house the exhibit, is now being constructed, over at Fort Lee.

It will contain display booths of the various commodities that go to make up a modern food exhibit. It is in this set that the wealthy pickle manufacturer is driven out of business by the youthful collegian, who wins the hand of the beautiful daughter.

Merkyl, Kind to Animals, Draws Line at Snakes

Startling Experience of Kalem Star with a Rattler in Filming of "Wife for Wife," Sours Him on All Exhibitions of Reptile Affection

WILMUTH MERKYL has always believed in being kind to dumb creatures, but the star in the three-act Broadway Favorites feature, "Wife for Wife," now draws the line at snakes. Henceforth they need not expect the slightest consideration at his hands. His experience with this rattlesnake that figured in "Wife for Wife" is responsible for this.

Exhibitors who saw John A. Stevens' famous play during the years that it appeared upon the boards, will remember that the two principal characters are George, the mulatto slave, who seeks revenge for a fancied wrong, and Edward Walton, his master. The latter part was played by Mr. Merkyl, while that of George was enacted by John E. Mackin. The snake's role was filled by what probably was the largest and ugliest snake in the State of Florida.

Cautioning Mackin to hold the snake firmly in back of the head, the Kalem producing director waved his hand and the scene commenced. Mackin, snake clutched in his hands, advanced toward Merkyl, who sat in a cushioned chair with his hands bound behind his back.

Merkyl instinctively shrank back as Mackin waved the snake before his eyes. It was fortunate, for the rattlesnake's head darted forward, its fangs burying themselves in the cushion upon which Merkyl's head had just rested.

Mackin promptly jerked the snake loose. The reptile thereupon struck at the Kalem player. Again it failed of its purpose because the fangs, barely missing Mackin's arm, tore a hole in his shirtsleeve. A minute later and the rattler was the deadest snake in Florida.

Another rattlesnake was obtained shortly afterwards, and although this reptile seemed to be of a mild and forebearing disposition, Merkyl and Mackin saw to it that the fangs were extracted before the scene was filmed.

THE SLAVE'S REVENGE IN "WIFE FOR WIFE" (Kalem)

Like the Broadway Favorites features which have preceded it, "Wife for Wife" will be released by Kalem in regular service. The release date is Monday, May 31.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

FRISCO EXCHANGES RESPOND TO CONDITIONS

LEON BOREIS, manager of the San Francisco branch of the General Film Company, has returned from a business trip to New York, where he went to confer with the officials of the company. During his absence the affairs of the local exchange were looked after by District Manager Aiken.

W. R. Sheehan, general manager of the William Fox Film Corporation, spent the greatest part of the past week in San Francisco, looking over the field in the San Francisco Bay region and meeting exhibitors using the Fox film service.

To enable him to meet exhibitors from outside points a beef steak dinner was tendered by the local exchange in his honor. It was attended by almost one hundred representative theatre managers in that district, several coming from San Joaquin and Sacramento Valley points. Mr. Sheehan plans to remain on the Coast for several weeks and will return to New York about the middle of June.

The San Francisco office of the California Kriterion Film Exchange, 111 Golden Gate avenue, is closed, and it is not known when it will be reopened. Dave Bershon, who had charge of this exchange when it was opened was with the firm but a short time, when he was succeeded by W. W. Ely, who has since left.

G. A. Metcalfe, who conducts a large theatre equipment and supply business, has moved his offices and warerooms from 153 Eddy street to 117-119 Golden Gate avenue, into the Film Exchange building, San Francisco. Here more than double the former space is at his command and the place is being fitted up with new fixtures throughout, including display cases made to special order. As soon as the main floor is placed in proper shape work will be commenced on the fitting up of an exhibiting room in the spacious basement.

The Mutual Film Corporation has outgrown its quarters on Turk street, San Francisco, and is attempting to make arrangements with property owners whereby a strictly fireproof building will be erected for its special needs in the vicinity of the present exchange.

It is anticipated that these arrangements will be concluded at an early date and that work will be commenced on a new structure this summer. The business of this concern has shown a steady growth for many months past and, despite the extensions and alterations that have been made from time to time, the present quarters have proved inadequate.

George Chamberlain, proprietor of the Independent Film Exchange, San Francisco, has left on an extensive automobile tour of the State, the purpose of which is to get into touch with exhibitors in places not often reached by booking representatives of film exchanges.

He will first cover the Coast counties, north of San Francisco, and will then journey south through the San Joaquin Valley as far as San Diego. When it is realized that California is more than eight hundred miles in length it will be seen that this will be quite a trip. Mr. Chamberlain is accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Geunther.

LAMBSON OPENS EXCHANGE IN LOS ANGELES

A. T. LAMBSON, until recently affiliated with the Seattle office of the Fox Film corporation's exchange, arrived in Los Angeles last week, preparatory to opening an exchange office for the service of southern California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

Mr. Lambson has not yet decided upon a location for his office, but it is expected that another week will see his business in full swing.

EXCHANGE MANAGERS ORGANIZE IN NEW ORLEANS

IMPELLED by the imperative necessity of organization to fight the censorship question and many other detrimental subjects which will come up at this month's session of the Louisiana legislature, the exchange managers of New Orleans have at last perfected an association which will do things.

There was held a meeting in the office of Paul L. Ford, manager of the United Service, of Louisiana, and every exchange man attended. Previously there had been two other meetings, but nothing really definite towards an organization had been done. At the meeting the Film Trades Club of New Orleans was launched, with these prominent exchange men as officers:

E. Auger, Mutual Film corporation, president; Al G. Shear, Consolidated Film and Supply Company, vice-president; Paul L. Ford, United Service of Louisiana, treasurer, and George Morgan Cheney, secretary.

E. C. Kirkpatrick, Southern Paramount Pictures company, and Karl Bugbee, World Film corporation, were named directors. Others in attendance included S. T. Stephens, Fox Film and Meyer Simmonds, Apex Film. Mr. Ford presided as temporary chairman and Mr. Cheney acted as secretary. Mr. Cheney, who is correspondent for a motion-picture trade paper in New Orleans, has been responsible for much of the enthusiasm shown, and has been a willing worker in the cause.

The dues were set at ten dollars a month, which has proven eminently satisfactory. It is stated that the exchange men's association will co-operate with the newly-organized exhibitors' association, in matters affecting jointly both the exchange men and the exhibitors. With two strong organizations in New Orleans, something this city has never before had, depressing influences do not loom half as largely as previously.

Another meeting was held recently, the thirteenth, and a letter from the Film Exchange Board of Trade, at Los Angeles, directed to Paul Ford, president of the organization, was read. The letter offered any assistance that might be in the power of the Los Angeles exchange to give. A vote of thanks to the coast body was passed.

A dinner at Noy's restaurant, in the older part of Spanish Fort, New Orleans' lakeside resort, was arranged for the following Saturday. Al. G. Shear, manager of the Consolidated, was the instigator of the event.

ACTIVITY AMONG THE ST. LOUIS EXCHANGES

HENRY SLOCUM, assistant manager of the General Film company, St. Louis, has just returned from a trip through Missouri with the report that business never was better all through the territory visited by him.

R. L. White, manager of the World Film corporation in St. Louis, makes a weekly visit to each of the theatres using the World Film service. Mr. White accompanies one of the salesmen in an automobile, which enables him to make several calls in one evening, and the results from these personal calls more than justify the time and money expended, as many of the higher class theatres are adding World Film features to their programs.

Nat I. Brown, of the Minusa Cines Products company, is away on a business trip for his company, and has placed Minusa screens in many theatres since he left two weeks ago.

FRISCO EXCHANGES WANT PAYMENT IN ADVANCE

THE Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco has decided that the losses sustained by its members on account of extending credit to exhibitors must be stopped, and has advised theatre owners that commencing with May 24 all the exchanges affiliated with this body will demand payment in advance for all film rentals.

Statements will be mailed to exhibitors one week in advance of the date booked for showing, and in case payment is not received the films will be sent C. O. D. Poster statements, falling due one week later than film bills, will be arranged to accompany the second film statement.

It is announced that this rule will not apply to certain exhibitors only, or to certain sets of exhibitors, but to every individual renting film from the exchanges affiliated with the Board of Trade, these numbering about twenty. While some exhibitors look upon the new ruling as being to their interests, in that it will tend to eliminate much unhealthy competition, others who always pay their bills promptly do not relish the idea of being called upon to make payments in advance. Several indignation meetings have been held in Davis Bros.'s Poster Exchange to protest against its enforcement.

V-L-S-E BUSINESS IN PITTSBURGH EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS

THE Big Four, otherwise the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay companies have opened their consolidated offices in 115-117-119 Fourth avenue, and it is said for the first day they have done more business than they expected.

The offices are the largest in that section of the Fourth avenue district and the service that the company is able to give their customers seems to be of the best. The employees have been told that courtesy and quick work is the motto of the office, and all of the employees are supposed to look after their customers in the quickest and best manner possible and be courteous at all times.

George Balsdon, a well known motion picture man of that section, opened the offices and will remain there some time to get things going smoothly.

It is understood that Mr. Balsdon will leave Pittsburgh after several weeks, and go westward, where he will open several branches in other cities. A large projection room will be installed in the new offices shortly where the exhibitors can have the reels run off and see what they are getting before they sign their names to contracts.

QUAKER CITY EXCHANGE NEWS

GEORGE W. BENNETHUM, of the Fairmount Feature Exchange, announces that a new schedule of prices has been arranged for Philadelphia exhibitors for the summer months beginning with June.

The Foreign Film corporation has made arrangements with the Metropolitan Booking Office, 1316 Vine street, to handle all its releases in the territory controlled by this exchange, which included eastern Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky and District of Columbia.

Beginning May 15, two "O. K." comedies a week, one Minerva subject and one Inter-Oceanic feature a week will be released through the Metropolitan. Harry Bryan, the Metropolitan manager, announces a number of bookings on these films.

Arthur C. Meehin, has been made office manager of the World Film. The World Film comedies, with New York stars, are taking well in Pennsylvania.

Jack Levy, of the Fox Film company, has just returned from a very satisfactory trip through Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and the Wyoming valley, bringing back with him many large contracts.

No. 229 North Twelfth street is a fine new building, a stone's throw from "Film Alley," as Vine street is familiarly dubbed. This modern structure now houses on its first floor the permanent Philadelphia home of the V-L-S-E, with J. S. Hebrew in charge. Although still in the throes of "moving day," business is being transacted with a rush.

On May 17 three representatives began to push V-L-S-E productions in the territory controlled by this office, which comprises Pennsylvania, east of Lock Haven, N. J., Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia and North Carolina.

SUMMER OUTLOOK GOOD FOR MAINE

MORE than two weeks of heavy and almost constant rains, which have just given way to something approaching decent spring weather, has taken money from the pockets of the managers of the motion picture houses in Maine and more especially in the smaller places, where the outlying population has to be depended upon to swell the receipts.

Maine roads are not the best and traveling has been almost at a standstill, some of the theatres finding it necessary to shut down and wait for better conditions.

"Things are looking brighter now," says A. L. Ehrgott, manager for the Bangor exchange of the General Film Company, who keeps in constant touch with the film situation in this part of the state. "Business, with good weather, will pick up right along.

"We are going to have a good summer business in Maine this year. Because of the trouble over across the water there will be a large influx of tourists to this state this season, and the motion picture houses are preparing to take advantage of the increased business."

ELLIOTT MADE ALLIANCE MANAGER IN BOSTON

P. B. ELLIOTT, lately connected with the New York exchange of the World Film Corporation, has been made manager of the Boston branch. Mr. Elliott's experience in the film business dates way back to the old "show days" when he was manager of theatres in western New York and Ontario, Canada, and worked in stock and repertoire.

Realizing the great future in amusing the public with the silent drama he entered the fold of the World Film Corporation in their Indianapolis office. After being there for five months his ability was recognized, and he was brought to the New York office, where working only six weeks has been promoted to the responsible position of manager of the Boston office.

THIRD ALLIANCE CONFERENCE HELD

LAST week saw the third conference of the Alliance exchangemen, to be held under the auspices of Presidet Cobe. Among the matters taken up for consideration by the exchangemen was the general business condition of several distributing territories. The trend of public taste, and the "Star" question were also discussed.

Felix Feist, the head of the Celebrated Players Exchange, in Chicago, made a special trip East to be on hand.

Herman Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Company, of Boston, was there. Among the other exchangemen present were M. H. Blackwell, president of the All-Theatres, New York State Alliance distributors; S. S. Webster, manager of the All-Theatres, Buffalo office; Harry Schwalbe, Electric Theatre Supply Company, of Philadelphia; Philip Adler, Alliance representative in Cleveland, and Max W. Herring, of the Alliance Exchange in Pittsburgh.

Everyone stated without exception that his receipts were larger during the last month than during any other month.

UNDER the hand of W. L. Merrill, manager of the United Film Service for Minneapolis, Minn., the new United exchange for Sioux Falls, S. D., has been firmly established and placed under the management of G. M. Hecklin.

Mr. Hecklin is well known in his territory, having been manager of the Sioux Falls exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation.

HENSELY SUCCEEDS MATTINGLY

DIRECTORS of the Universal Film Company have selected L. L. Hensley, chief booking agent for this state to succeed the late C. D. Mattingly as manager of the Oklahoma branch offices. Mr. Mattingly died recently as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident. C. A. Maddox, now connected with the Kansas City offices, succeeds Mr. Hensley as chief booking agent.

BARR MAKES YEARLY CONTRACTS FOR WORLD FEATURES

JACKSON, Miss., has been put on the film map mainly through the efforts of Maurice F. Barr, a former newspaperman, now traveling out of New Orleans, representing the World Film Corporation.

Mr. Barr went to Jackson, closed with the Istrione theatre for the World features for a year, and then placed a half page of publicity matter in each of the Jackson newspapers.

V-L-S-E OFFICES IN PHILADELPHIA COMPLETED

EXHIBITORS in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, Delaware, North Carolina, and New Jersey will be interested in learning that the new quarters of the Philadelphia branch of the V-L-S-E at 229 North Twelfth street, have been completed, and are now occupied by J. S. Hebrew, and his staff.

FRISCO CLUB ELECTS FOX FEATURE USERS MEMBERS

HARRY LEONHARDT, the hustling Pacific Coast representative of the Fox Film corporation, whose headquarters are now at the new Los Angeles offices of the firm, at 848½ South Main street, Los Angeles, Cal., has inaugurated a new club for exhibitors in California. More than one hundred and seventy-five exhibitors are enrolled in the new organization, which is known in the trade as the William Fox Booster Club.

The Booster Club members are automatically elected and their membership becomes permanent after they have played "Samson," featuring William Farnum, and Theda Bara in "The Clemenceau Case." After proving themselves good and worthy members of the Booster Club they will be initiated into the Fox Feature Club of California, which is now one hundred and fifty strong in the city of San Francisco alone.

Mr. Leonhardt, who was formerly associated with the B. F. Proctor interests in New York, has built up the business of the Fox Film corporation on the Pacific Coast to immense proportions since he has been manager of that territory. In one week alone the San Francisco offices of the firm booked thirty-one new accounts.

The same remarkable business is reported from Sacramento, Los Angeles, San Diego, Stockton and other large California cities. Mr. Leonhardt reports that the entire Pacific Coast is solid for Fox features.

INAUGURATES JITNEY BUS DELIVERY

A JITNEY bus film delivery service is the latest innovation in local filmdom and comes with the organization between Washington and Baltimore of a real transportation business. For some time past some little difficulty has been experienced in getting shows from or to the cities named, and each shipment carries with it an express charge ranging from thirty-five to forty cents or more.

The new service, originated by Frank Durkee, one of the leading exhibitors of Baltimore, will include one round trip between the cities daily. Collections will be made from the exchanges in Baltimore and also at the new company's office shortly before midnight and the start made at one o'clock in the morning. Upon arriving at Washington deliveries will be made of the Baltimore consignment and at the same time there will be picked up those film cases that are to go back. The charge for this service will be in the neighborhood of twenty-five cents per film case.

MINNEAPOLIS KEPT BUSY DENYING CHAPLIN RUMORS

THE General Film company's Minneapolis offices have had to detail employes especially to answer telephone calls regarding Charles Chaplin and rumors of his troubles.

Every person in Minneapolis has long before now been told by a friend, who "heard it on good authority," that Charles Chaplin was dead. The newspaper offices, theatre managers and the film office were besieged by callers. They demanded to know the truth.

The result has been to send more persons than ever to see the Chaplin Essanay films, for they fear that each one will be the last.

VAN HUSAN BUYS RIGHTS OF WILLIAMSON UNDERSEA FILMS

F. A. VAN HUSAN, manager of the Laemmle Film Service Company exchange, of Omaha, Neb., has bought the state rights of the Williamson submarine moving pictures and has started in Omaha, showing them at the Gayety, a burlesque house, for one week. The Gayety, following the week of those pictures, may continue in the motion picture field throughout the season.

Van Husan is extensively advertising his new picture throughout the state. This is not the first time he has undertaken such a venture, and heretofore he has always made a success of it.

OMAHA EXCHANGE HAS A "FILM DOCTOR"

BILLY TRITES has been established as inspector in a new department of the Laemmle Film Service Company at Omaha. He will be a regular "film doctor."

When he sees that films coming from a certain theatre are scarred or injured in some way, indicating something wrong with the machines of the theatre, he will go out and look them over and make the necessary repairs.

He will also be the judge as to just what is needed to repair damaged films. This is Manager F. A. Van Husan's idea, and he is certain it will be a winner.

GOLDSTONE IN LINE FOR A PRIZE

P. H. GOLDSTONE, formerly with the Des Moines, Ia., Mutual exchange, and then with the World Film Corporation's exchange at Omaha, Neb., with E. R. Pearson, has succeeded to the managership since Pearson's resignation, to accept a territory managership with the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc.

Goldstone is pointing with pride to the fact that the Omaha office of the World company has jumped from fourteenth to sixth place in the column of exchanges. As his company, besides paying on the profit-sharing basis, gives prizes to the exchange gaining the most each two weeks in gross collections, he is confidently expecting a prize for his office.

Owing to the crowded condition of the building now occupied it is impossible to install the vaults and a new location is being sought.

MR. ALEXANDER, the New York representative of the Fox Film concern, came into Denver last week from Salt Lake for a conference with Winifred Sheehan, the general manager.

Mr. Alexander reports the big American theatre of Salt Lake has made arrangements to contract Fox Feature Films by the week which will accord them by far the longest run of any features released in the Mormon city.

BILLIE BURKE TO STAR UNDER N. Y. M. P. BANNER

The announcement comes from the offices of the New York Motion Picture Corporation that Kessel and Bauman have engaged the services of Billie Burke for a feature screen production. Miss Burke, one of the most popular comedy actresses on the American stage, has for a long time declined various offers to appear before the camera, prefering to devote her entire efforts to the legitimate. Her final decision to forsake the footlights for a time and appear in films lends to the screen one of the stage favorites of the day.

Miss Burke's contract calls for only one picture comprising five or six reels. However, she emphatically states that she will appear only in productions manufactured by the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The name of her first picture has not yet been disclosed, but in all probability her debut into the ranks of film stars will be by way of a comedy-drama.

It was several years ago that Miss Burke first came into prominence playing the stellar role in "Love Watches." From that time until the present she has been starred in many plays, most all of which have been remarkably successful. Of the large galaxy of stars who appeared under the management of the late Charles Frohman, Miss Burke is easily one of the most liked.

$200,000 THEATRE PLANNED FOR BOSTON

East Boston, Mass., is to have a new motion picture theatre which will surpass anything of the kind in that section. J. Shapiro, of 92 White street, has engaged F. Norcross, of Boston, as architect, and the new theatre will be located at 26-44 Bennington street.

It will cost $200,000, making it one of the finest around Boston. It will consist of two stories and the entire building will be devoted to the theatre interests. The seating capacity will be 2,500.

Bernard, Rollicking Comedian, Signs with Famous

Actor Who Made Thousands Laugh in Stage Successes with Long Runs May Make Screen Debut in "The Dangerous Maid"

THE Famous Players Film company has secured the services of the popular comedian, Sam Bernard, reputed to be the highest-salaried comedy star on the stage today.

SAM BERNARD

This fact possesses added interest because of the numerous efforts made by leading feature concerns for a long time past to induce him to transfer his talents to the screen.

Mr. Bernard will make his screen debut in an adaptation of one of his stage successes, probably "The Dangerous Maid." The best known of his characterizations are those of Schmaltz in this play, Conan Doyle in "The Man in the Moon," the Khedive of Egypt in "The Casino Girl," Adolph Klotz in "The Belle of Bohemia," Twanks in "The Silver Slipper," Max Hoggenheimer in "The Girl from Kay's," Schmaltz in "The Rollicking Girl," Mr. Hoggenheimer in "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer," Ludwig Knoedler in "Nearly a Hero," Herman Schultz in "The Girl and the Wizard," and Herman von Schellenvien in "He Came from Milwaukee."

Through the media of these celebrated comedies, Sam Bernard has made hundreds of thousands laugh. With the wider latitude of screen circulation, millions will now be enabled to follow his side-splitting adventures, his never-ending series of humorous difficulties, and his inimitable methods of comedy portrayal.

His introduction to the motion picture public, aside from being one of the most notable acquisitions to the screen to date, will undoubtedly extend his vogue as appreciably as it will attract new patrons to photoplay theatres.

SEELYE IS WITH V-L-S-E AS ITS ASSISTANT MANAGER

C. R. Seelye, formerly director of sales for the World Film corporation has now taken up the duties of assistant general manager at the V-L-S-E offices, 1600 Broadway, New York.

JOHN MASON APPEARS IN "JIM THE PENMAN"

John Mason, the distinguished American star, and "Jim the Penman," the dramatic success of two continents, by Sir Charles L. Young, are simultaneously introduced to the motion picture public in the Famous Players release of June 3. "Jim the Penman" is one of the most notable characterizations of the present dramatic era, and the role is forcefully suggested by the vigorous art of Mr. Mason.

Although John Mason's initial appearance before the camera is in itself an important screen event, the production attaches added interest because the supporting cast includes the leading man and woman of two current Broadway successes. These two important members of Mr. Mason's screen support are Marguerite Leslie, leading woman of "Outcast," which recently played a triumphant engagement of several months at the Lyceum theatre, and Frank Perry, leading man of the dramatic sensation, "On Trial." The cast is further distinguished by the presence of Harold Lockwood and Russell Bassett.

HORSLEY COMES TO AMICABLE SETTLEMENT WITH POWERS

The object of David Horsley's flying trip from Los Angeles to New York last week is now made apparent by the announcement that an amicable adjustment of the differences existing between Mr. Horsley and P. A. Powers had been made, and that their former business relations, dating back to the genesis of the film industry, had been re-established.

Thus is ended a dispute that originated in the early days of the Universal, and was for months bitterly fought.

Try to Saddle Censorship on Illinois

Special to Motion Picture News

Springfield, Ill., May 19.

CENSORSHIP for Illinois looks likely now. Senator Olson's bill, providing for a board of censorship, has reached the third reading in the Senate of the Illinois General Assembly and will come up for passage shortly.

In the house, Representative Curran's bill, which is almost identical to the Olson bill, has been reported out favorably by the committee on license and miscellany, and action on it is expected shortly. Representative Turner also has a censorship bill, which is still before the committee on license and miscellany.

The fight is being led by Chicago members. Representative Thomas Curran, of Chicago, introduced the proposed measure in the lower branch, and Senator Olson introduced it in the upper branch.

Representative Curran's bill, which is known as House Bill No. 815, and is the same as Senator Olson's, creates a board of three members, to be appointed by and under the authority of the secretary of state, with the approval of the governor.

The secretary of state also is to select the secretary of the board and the other employes as well. It provides a salary of $2,000 a year for the members of the board.

Dollar Charged for 1,000 Feet

The duties of the board will be to examine and censor all motion-picture films to be shown in the state, and these films must be stamped and approved before they can be shown. Before the pictures can be shown in any theatre there must be flashed on the screen "Approved by the Illinois State Board of Censors," and the number given.

A fee of one dollar will be charged for each reel of 1,000 feet or less, and one dollar a foot for every foot over 1,000 feet. The receipts of the board shall be turned in to the state treasury every month.

The board shall pass only such films as in their judgment and discretion are of a moral, educational or amusing and harmless character. Such films shall be stamped as approved.

The bill gives the board permission to work in conjunction with similar boards of other states as a censor congress, and films passed by any member of the congress will not have to be approved by the Illinois board, but may be shown upon payment of the regular fee.

The bill provides a penalty of twenty-five dollars to three hundred dollars fine or thirty days to a year in jail, or both.

An appeal clause is included in the measure which permits companies whose films are rejected to appeal to the Sangamon county circuit court against the decision of the board.

The bill is to become effective ninety days after the act takes effect, after which date no films can be shown unless passed by the board.

While two other bills, providing for state censorship boards, have been introduced, indications are that the big fight will come on the Curran and Olson measures.

Representative Turner, of Chicago, has introduced a censorship board bill (House Bill No. 762) in the house. Senator Denvir, of Chicago, also has introduced one (Senate Bill No. 393) in the senate.

NEW ORLEANS WOMEN'S CLUB INVESTIGATING FILMS

The Era Club, New Orleans, one of the strongest women's suffrage organizations in the South, the largest in point of membership, is out with a determination "to investigate motion pictures in Louisiana with a view of eliminating those that are not desirable." Their annual meeting was held this week, at which new officers, women socially prominent, were elected, and as soon as they got in office, these officers took the several questions, principally among them being censorship.

After appointing a committee to investigate the difference between the state and city liquor laws, the club then decided to appoint a like committee to look into the censorship question. No report has yet been made thereon.

Union Boycott Sustained by Montana Judge

ALL Montana gaped when Judge J. M. Clements, of Helena, announced his findings in the recent trial of the boycott case of the Musicians' Union of Butte, Mont., and the Empire theatre. The judge refused to issue an injunction pendente lite, restraining the Musicians' Union from displaying a banner declaring the Empire theatre unfair to organized labor as they had been doing.

The decision was a complete surprise and is of paramount importance to every picture man in Montana. The case will be appealed to the district court. Judge Clements, immediately after giving his decision, refused to make an order suspending his own order until such time as the Supreme Court of the state would rule on the question. As a result the boycotters are free to continue their campaign against the Empire theatre.

The case is of far-reaching interest. Chas. L. Dickman opened the house as a picture theatre. He installed an electric piano. As the house had a seating capacity of more than four hundred and fifty the local union demanded a five-piece orchestra. He pleaded that the income was not sufficient to maintain that number and his house was boycotted.

He took the matter into the courts. For three weeks the case was fought out before Judge Clements, of Helena, who was called in to preside. Hundreds of witnesses were examined on either side, to show the evil influence of an unfair sign or otherwise. Judge Clements took the matter under advisement about ten days ago.

Under the ruling boycott is allowed so long as no act of violence, menace or threat is used.

CURFEW LAW BOBS UP IN PENNSYLVANIA

The curfew lay bugaboo is again looming up before the Harrisburg (Pa.) motion-picture exhibitors. For more than a year a curfew ordinance has been pending before the city council, but owing to the opposition that has been raised to it in behalf of theatre and other interests, the councilmen had refrained from action on it, and the proposed ordinance seemed destined to remain indefinitely in a pigeonhole.

However, the Harrisburg Civic Club, a reform organization composed of women, has renewed the agitation in favor of passage of the measure and has been bringing such pressure to bear on the councilmen that they have been forced to bring the bill out again for consideration.

A public hearing has been arranged for some day next week, when John Fox Weiss, former district attorney, will appear before the councilmen and argue for the passage of the ordinance. Whether the motion-picture interests will take part in the public hearing has not been made known.

Councilmen, professing to know, say that it is likely that the measure will ultimately be adopted in a somewhat modified form. The ordinance as originally presented called for all children, fifteen years old or less, unaccompanied by adults, to be off the streets by nine o'clock each evening. This will probably be amended to make the age limit fourteen years for boys, leaving it at fifteen for girls. The motion-picture men are viewing with considerable concern the plan to try to force the measure through, as they fear it will materially curtail their business.

EXPRESS COMPANIES WANT RATES CHANGED

The Interstate Commerce Commission will investigate into the reasonableness of the request of the Adams, American, Southern, and Wells, Fargo and Company expresses made some time ago for a readjustment of the present rate structure, at a hearing to be held in Washington, D. C., in the matter of express rates, practices, accounts and revenues on May 26.

A petition bringing this about was filed with the commission by the express companies named some time ago. In their statement they declared that although they have, since February 1, 1914, when the present rates went into effect, enjoyed an increased business, due in part to the retirement from the field of the United States Express company, their gross income from the business done has not, and will not be sufficient to enable them to remain in business.

In the ten months following the date named, they declared they had suffered a deficit of nearly three million dollars. They state they have increased the efficiency of their service to a considerable degree; to reduce their present standard would work an injury to the shipping public.

COMPEL STATE TO RESTORE LICENSE FEE

The fight of George H. Roth, Charles Roth and Robert Rappold, exhibitors of Philadelphia, to obtain restitution from the state of license fees illegally collected from them by the Philadelphia city treasurer on two motion picture theatres in that city, was won last week when Governor Brumbaugh signed two bills passed by the legislature directing the auditor general to return the amounts of the fees to them.

The two Roths, as owners of the Star motion picture theatre, 2713-15 North Fifth street, Harrisburg, Pa., and George H. Roth and Mr. Rappold, as owners of the Owl theatre, 2807-9 North Fifth street, both in Philadelphia, in the case of each theatre paid twenty-five dollars that was "illegally demanded and collected" by the city treasurer's office as a state license fee. It was established to the satisfaction of the legislature that they were not liable for the payment of these fees as their theatres were used exclusively for the exhibition of motion pictures.

All efforts to obtain restitution had failed until the matter was brought to the attention of the legislature by Representative Hackett who succeeded in having the bills passed which were signed by the governor. The legislative enactments are based on the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Fannie C. Spiers, in October, 1911, upon appeal from a ruling of the Common Pleas court of Philadelphia County.

FILM WEDDING OF VAUDEVILLE COUPLE AT ROLFE STUDIO

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 17.

A studio wedding was the social event of the week at the B. A. Rolfe plant recently, when Mr. Rolfe gave the bride, Beatrice Hoover, to H. B. Shipley, while a record of the event was made on a film.

The couple are members of "The Bride Shop" company, appearing as a headliner on the Orpheum bill here this week, Mr. Shipley being the manager. Mr. Rolfe wrote, staged and owns "The Bride Shop," which has now been in vaudeville for two years. This is the first marriage among the company's personnel.

ELAINE IVANS, GRAND OPERA STUDENT, IN MINA COMEDIES

To be prepared for Grand Opera, but because of ill luck, to land in film drama, would, as a general rule, bring to a young artist no end of discouragement. This was Elaine Ivans' fate, but she shows no discouragement; in fact, she even confesses to being glad that fate was unkind to her and forced her to rely upon the silent drama as a means of livelihood.

Miss Ivans started life in the most fortunate circumstances and not only received the best musical education here, but also studied with the best masters in Europe. However, at the height of her career her father lost all his money and she was forced to return to America.

Immediately upon her return to New York, Miss Ivans began to seek the means of capitalizing her fine dramatic and vocal training. One morning when she went to keep an appointment with an opera producer, she met a prominent motion picture magnate.

He saw the photographic possibilities of her face, and when he learned that she had dramatic training, made her a flattering offer. Miss Ivans was a success in pictures from the start.

Some time ago Miss Ivans joined the Mina Company, which has of late been making a name for itself as producing comedies of the better kind.

LICENSE BILL PROPOSED FOR ST. LOUIS

A bill requiring an annual license of five hundred dollars to be paid by all motion picture exchanges and film renting concerns, was introduced in the Board of Aldermen on May 7 by Alderman Scholl.

The bill has not been passed, and has provoked much opposition and criticism.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XVII

John R. Freuler, President of the North American Film Corporation, Sees Too Much Sameness in the Plots of Today—He Predicts the Time, Not Far Distant, When the Public Will See Real Talking Pictures—Fly-By-Night Companies Bane of Industry

"WHAT'S the matter with the motion picture business?" asked John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film corporation, producers of "The Diamond from the Sky," in his Chicago office lately. "Well, about the only thing that is the matter with it at present is that this is the time of the year that the uninitiated and the inexperienced try to find something the matter with it, and the remedies for, the supposed ills." Mr. Freuler laughed.

"Like all other businesses whose growth has been rapid there are bound to exist flaws, but these flaws will be searched out and righted in the general run of things. The motion picture business is the last one to feel the effects of bad times and while we have gone through an extraordinary period, business depression has been felt in comparatively few places by the motion picture interests. I honestly feel that just ahead there are golden times, especially for the exhibitor.

"One thing that will have to be remedied by all the companies is the sameness in plot and idea that exists in the majority of the productions. The producers must work out new ideas and stop paraphrasing, if I may put it that way, the other fellows ideas. To give an example as to just what I mean let me cite you something that the Mutual people are doing.

"We have given all our directors orders to watch the enunciation of the actors and to learn lip reading, for I believe that in a few years to come we will have real talking pictures, inasmuch as the audience will be able to follow all the conversation on the screen.

"Of course we will have to develop our actors up to the point where they enunciate a good deal more clearly, and the theatre-goer will have to learn lip reading. All this, of course, will take time, but we are already laying our foundation. The screen fan has even anticipated the producer, and already the film patron can interpret such expressions as "Go!" "I will," and so forth, with comparative ease.

Erroneous Impressions of the Business

"If he can do this now when so little attention is paid to the speech isn't it logical to think that he will be able to understand entire conversations, when this end is developed with the same care that the pantomime actor developes his pantomime?

"It is angles such as this one that we want to search out and develop and it will be a long time before anyone can complain about a lack of opportunity in this business.

"An erroneous impression that so many people, even people who are in the business and should know better have, is that there are huge sums of money to be made in the business, and that the only thing necessary to do to make it is to hire actors at any sort of a fabulous salary and turn out a production or two.

"These fly-by-night producers as I term them, because none of them last very long, pay ruinous salaries, as has been demonstrated in a number of cases. The only result of their misguided attempts to corral all the talent available is that the cost of production for the established producers is temporally driven up.

"We find such a condition existing at the present writing when the producer finds the cost of his production mounting up and up with no appreciable increase in the quality of the production. The result is that the exhibitor has to pay more for his program.

"Actors are getting more money today on the screen than they are on the stage, and this will continue to be the case despite the protest of the theatre manager as to what is going to happen to the actor who appears in films.

"There are a number of excellent business men among the actors, but the majority, sad to say, possess only artistic ability and nothing in a business way. It is these that do not appreciate the value of being connected with a responsible concern, and who are tempted away by the bait of high salaries offered by concerns who are not responsible.

One Actor's Experience

"Take, for example, a case which was brought to my attention not long ago. An actor had gained popularity with an established company which was paying him a salary of $300 a week, for 52 weeks in the year. Along came a fly-by-night concern and bid $1,000 a week for his services.

"The $1,000 bait dazzled the actor and he threw up his job with the established concern and went with the fly-by-night. At the end of four weeks the fly-by-night concern busted owing the actor three weeks salary.

"It took him six months before he was able to get a job anywhere near as good a position as he had when he quit as the producer had lost confidence in him and the star had lost prestige through non-appearance on the screen.

"Now in a case like this both the actor and the producer were losers. The actor losing in salary and the producer in having to go out and develop another man to take the actor's place with the public. These things, of course, are all going to work themselves out, but the exhibitor can help a good deal by sticking to the established programs which he has taught his audience to look for and on which he should realize on the advertising he has given them.

Right Kind of Advertising

"Then there is the matter of advertising. Producers have at times run a bit wild in their advertisements to exhibitors, they have not all secured the exhibitors' confidence in their advertisements which is so necessary if the advertisements are to be successful.

"The producer has not worked out the method of telling the great general public what he has and what he should do to back up his advertising to the exhibitor.

"The producer should utilize two mediums of advertising, one that reaches only the exhibitor and the other the one that reaches only the general public and it is to these two that he should confine himself.

"In this way he can tell the exhibitor what he has, and incidentally he can tell the public what wonderful people there are on the screen, and what wonderful plays there are being written. for the screen actor to play in.

"Your producer has his advertising to the exhibitor well in hand, and he has learned which mediums reach only the exhibitor without any waste circulation. He now has to perfect his method of reaching the general public, and I think that within the next year you will see this problem worked out satisfactorily.

"Taken all in all the photoplay business is a mighty fine business and if we will all be contented with fair profits and not expect to make a fortune in a month or a year, I think that none of us will have any complaint to make, no matter whether the rest of the country is experiencing a business depression or not."

BLANCHE SWEET MAKES THIRD LASKY APPEARANCE

"Stolen Goods," which is to be released by the Lasky Feature Play Company, through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, on Monday, May 24, is the third photodrama in which Blanche Sweet has appeared for this company.

It is stated that her two previous Lasky successes in the Lasky-Belasco production of "The Warrens of Virginia" and "The Captive," are much excelled by the new offering.

"Stolen Goods" is a five-reel subject based on the famous emotional drama of the same name by Margaret Turnbull. A portion of the action is laid among the Red Cross hospitals of Europe, the time the present.

In addition to Miss Sweet, the cast of "Stolen Goods" includes, House Peters, Cleo Ridgley, Sydney Deane, H. B. Carpenter and Theodore Roberts. The production was made by George Melford.

PRINTS OF "CARPET FROM BAGDAD" LOST ON LUSITANIA

A number of films of "The Carpet from Bagdad," shipped to England, France and other foreign countries, were lost when the "Lusitania" was torpedoed by a submarine. The "Carpet from Bagdad" films had been ordered by foreign governments for the entertainment of the troops who seek relaxation from hard fighting via the motion picture route.

State Rights Buyers After McKenzie Animal Picture

Friends of Titled English Woman, Impressed by Educational Attributes of Film at Charity Showing, Persuade Her to Let Public See Reels

LADY MACKENZIE, who has just returned from a year's successful quest for big game in East Africa, declares that her hunting pictures abound with the "thrill of battle," and that tremendous risk was taken to obtain these interesting pictures of wild animals.

One of the greatest thrills in the film is the charging lion, which, hunted to his lair and driven out by the natives, dashes at top speed, straight at the intrepid huntress and her companion, a native African. Had the man hunter stood his ground as did Lady Mackenzie, she would doubtless have been killed, but he weakened at the last second, when he saw that he had missed the huge beast and held an empty gun, turned tail and ran. The enraged beast chose the fleeing human to the steadfast one and, leaping past Lady Mackenzie so close that it brushed her empty gun, sprang upon the man and was clawing him when Lady Mackenzie, reloading swiftly, placed her gun against his side and fired, bringing him to earth.

Another thriller of almost equal intensity is a charging rhinoceros. This great animal, accompanied by its mate, charged straight at Lady Mackenzie and was brought down by her only a few feet from the camera. The film is remarkable for its close-ups. The photographer was no weakling, either, for he was in the thick of the fight all the while, whereby the pictures profited greatly.

Announcement will be made shortly of the taking by Lady Mackenzie of one of the leading theatres of Broadway, New York City, for a summer season. One of her hunters who accompanied her into the depths of the jungle will describe the hunt as the pictures move along, and on the opening night, which probably will be June 7, Lady Mackenzie herself will be present to make a few introductory remarks.

Since the announcement of the organization of the Lady Mackenzie Film company, a week ago, its officers have been besieged with those who are desirous of obtaining state rights or of leasing individual portions of the film, of which there are about 35,000 feet.

Enough of this for an entire evening's entertainment has been culled for the New York engagement. Lady Mackenzie had no idea of having her films shown to the public, taking the camera men with her on the hunt merely to obtain a durable record of her achievement; but so great was the success of her charity showing for the benefit of the British war fund at Nairobi and for that of the Scats' Sanitarium that her friends persuaded her to let the general public see them. Hence her decision in bringing the pictures to America.

Fox Article Explains Aids to Increased Profits

Film Theatre Managers Urged to Read Forthcoming Number of the "Exhibitors' Bulletin" for Helpful Hints on Policy to Be Inaugurated by Company

THE forthcoming issue of the "Exhibitors' Bulletin," the house organ of the Fox Film corporation, contains an article of vital interest to every exhibitor in the country.

In this article William Fox, of the Fox Film Corporation, sets forth the full details of one of the most attractive propositions that a manufacturer of features has ever offered to the exhibitors of the country. In order for exhibitors to take full advantage of the opportunity which is fully explained to them in this article, the are urged to "clip that coupon."

Mr. Fox's proposition embraces the most daring and tremendous service proposal that any producer has made to date. The article, in which the new policy is explained at considerable length, and yet crisply and tersely, answers every possible question the exhibitor is liable to ask concerning the new William Fox policy, and also meets with irrefutable logic every objection the exhibitor is liable to make.

The new William Fox plan for aiding the exhibitor to make money is extremely simple. It is based upon Mr. Fox's own experience as a practical exhibitor and producer and owner of a chain of the handsomest motion-picture houses in existence, and embraces the results of his intimate knowledge of the needs of the exhibitor.

The plan has been maturing for some time, and is not the result of a hasty conclusion. Every detail of it has been thoroughly and painstakingly thrashed out and the announcement of its readiness has been postponed until the present time, in order that there might be no unsatisfactory delays, and that the machinery of the new William Fox policy might be in thorough working order before the button which sets its wheels in motion was pressed. Every exhibitor who reads the forthcoming number of the "Exhibitors' Bulletin" is therefore urged by Mr. Fox to "clip the coupon."

HEADLINE FUNFILMS WILL FEATURE LILLIPUTIAN STAR

The Headline Amusement Company, which recently entered the moving picture field, has located its executive offices in the Fitzgerald building, 1482 Broadway, New York.

The intention of the company is to specialize in one-reel comedy films to be known as the Headline Funfilms.

The first picture will have a well-known Lilliputian comedian as its star, and it is said it will appeal mostly to the women and children, which will undoubtedly make it a big matinee attraction.

J. R. Smith, formerly a well-known book publisher and advertising man, is president of the Headline Amusement Company and is surrounded by a staff of well-known and experienced film men.

KANE OF PROHIBITION OFF ON BIG TRIP

Robert T. ("Bob") Kane, of the Prohibition Film Corporation, is leaving New York within the next few days on an extended tour of the United States and Canada for the purpose of closing contracts which are being held in abeyance for territorial rights on his company's big feature, "Prohibition." Mr. Kane will make practically every important motion picture trade centre in the country, going south to the Gulf of Mexico and west to the Pacific Coast.

The Prohibition people have been quite successful in their campaign with the big feature and are in possession of satisfactory offers for practically all available territory. Just as soon as the contracts have been signed the prints of the feature which the various territorial rights buyers wish to buy will be delivered and the picture will be released throughout the country.

Mr. Kane announces that just as soon as "Prohibition" is in the hands of the territorial rights men, another big feature even more timely in its subject matter will be produced, the same capital promoting it.

WELL-DRESSED CROWDS PACK BROADWAY THEATRE

The Broadway theatre, New York City, under its new policy of high class motion pictures and superior music has been playing to capacity houses all the past week. It is building up a patronage from among the most particular and critical theatregoers in the city.

Night after night the boxes are occupied by people in evening dress, while the orchestra and balcony are crowded with fashionably attired people. It has been the purpose of the Broadway from the beginning to attract the highest and best, and the result is most gratifying to the management.

BERNSTEIN READY TO LAUNCH NEW PROGRAM

Perfection of Plans Will Result in a Releasing Schedule of Twenty-eight Reels a Week, a One-Reel Comedy and a Three-Reel Feature Every Day, Production to Be Conducted on the Pacific Coast, and Distribution Through Thirty Proposed New Exchanges

ISADORE BERNSTEIN is back in New York City, after a stay of nearly two years on the Pacific Coast as general manager of the Universal's producing activities there. Further "Bernie," as he has been known through the length and breadth of this motion picture industry for, lo, these many years, is planning to do big things on his own hook. Let him speak for himself:

"I am planning to issue a new program," said Mr. Bernstein, when seen at the Lyndeman Hotel, 205 West Fifty-fourth street. "Don't say I am going to positively. I never yet tried to deceive anyone, and the matter is not yet absolutely settled. But the persons who will be interested in it are so ready to get in that I believe it will soon be an actuality.

"I say I am planning to issue a new program. But I know full well that there is only room for three. Mine will make four. But only three will survice, and mine will be one of the three.

Plans Six Features a Year

"My plan is to release a one-reel comedy and a three-reel feature every day, making twenty-eight reels a week. The producing end will be conducted entirely on the Pacific Coast. I wouldn't make pictures anywhere else. The pictures will be distributed through thirty new exchanges. These won't be acquired or picked up, but will be brand new exchanges, starting fresh.

"In addition to the pictures on the regular program, I plan to make six big productions a year. These will be about eight reels long and will feature the players seen in the program pictures.

"My idea is to pay more attention to the authors than has yet been given them. I have already signed up twelve well-known authors. But I don't plan to have them write the producing scripts. They will write a fiction story, as they have been accustomed to doing, and the scenarios will be written by scenario writers.

"I feel sure of the success of the new program, for it will make its stand on quality alone.

"I feel rather pleased with the confidence placed in me by the persons interested in the new program. Perhaps I may say it comes in recognition of my work in the motion picture industry.

"Lifted Himself by His Bootstraps"

"Since I went with the Universal on July 2, 1913, as general manager for that company on the Pacific Coast I feel I have accomplished a lot. I had sixteen producing companies under my supervision. I think this is the largest number ever under any one man. I know how to make pictures, and I have proved that fact.

"I worked very hard on Universal City. I don't believe I have had more than four hours' sleep a day since it was first planned. My biggest asset right now is what I know about the motion picture business, and I believe that very soon you will see another program on the market."

Isadore Bernstein surely has had an interesting career. As he puts it himself, he was "kicked up," not raised, on New York's East Side. At the age of three he went to work, helping his mother. At five he was a full-fledged newsboy with a route extending from City Hall to Avenue B and Houston street. At fourteen he got his first paying position as a printers' devil on the "Christian Herald." He learned his letters and how to read and write while working in the composing room.

At nineteen "Bernie" wrote his first article. He took it in to Dr. Talmadge, who was then the editor of the "Christian Herald. Young Bernstein was immediately taken into the editorial room and given a desk. Dr. George A. Sandison, the present editor of the "Christian Herald," took up the young man's case and advanced him so that, at the time of his resignation, he was an associate editor.

While he was on the staff of the "Christian Herald" "Bernie" was busy with settlement work. For a year and a half he was athletic instructor at the Five Points Mission. Then he was superintendent at the Boys' Institute, which receives more than 32,000 men and boys a year.

It was through his connection with the Boys' Institute that Mr. Bernstein entered the motion picture business. Many of the boys under his care were motion picture fans and so he began to take an interest.

"Bernie's" start in the business was as clerk and solicitor with the Improved Film Supply Company, in East Fourteenth street. In 1910 that company went out of existence and "Bernie" started a junk exchange, the Sterling, in Union Square. From this he went to Harrisburg and opetned the Union Film exchange, which was bought out by local capital.

In Film Business

Coming back to New York, "Bernie" was manager of the Paramount Film Company, at 60 West Fourteenth street. When this went under in 1912 through the dissolution of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, he worked for the Yankee Film Company, owned by Bill Steiner and Herbert Miles. He went with Steiner and Miles to the old Republic Film Company, at 145 West Forty-fifth street. Then followed his connection with Pliny P. Craft and the Monopol Film Company, from which he went to the Universal.

Mr. Bernstein's training has been varied and practical. He knows photography, the dark room, scenario work, directing, acting, advertising, publicity work and the duties of an executive through his own experiences. Now he expects to go it alone with his own big company backing his efforts.

Industrial Concerns Know Value of Film Publicity

Motion Pictures by Showing the Entire Process of Manufacture Enables a Customer to "Walk Through the Plant in Fifteen Minutes"

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER induced Carl Laemmle, founder of the Imp company and now president of the Universal Film corporation, and R. H. Cochran, now vice-president of the same, to take up the industrial business with him and formed the Industrial Moving Picture company, says the "Western Trade Journal."

Like everything else in the way of a new idea, the new concern had anything but a path of roses, but at the end of two years was "on its feet," and the vigorous campaign to convert big manufacturers to the value of the moving picture for advertising purposes finally produced results.

All this was done by Mr. Rothacker, for he had to "paddle the canoe" himself, because his associates had their hands full with the unprecedented expansion of the Universal, so about two years ago his partners had to withdraw, and Mr. Rothacker became president of what is today the largest industrial film manufacturing concern in the world, with an immense plant, and cameramen working in all parts of the country and elsewhere, for that matter, as the contracts demand.

The advertising moving picture might be said to have its basis on a modernized version of an old adage, "Moving pictures don't lie."

They show the entire process of manufacture from start to finish—every detail just as it was done—and with it the manufacturer takes his plant to the customers instead of dragging them to the establishment and, in the space of probably fifteen minutes, shows them what it might take three days to see if they went to his place and walked about it.

To give some idea as to how the large concerns for which the company in question has produced films, we might mention the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, Postum Cereal Company, Du Pont Powder Company, Northern Pacific Railroad Company, Peabody Coal Company, U. S. Gypsum Company, Old Taylor Whiskey Company, U. S. Brewers' Association, International Harvester Company, Peabody, Houghteling & Co., Mayer Brothers, Phoenix Horseshoe Company, H. J. Heintz Company, Chicago Board of Education, Illinois Panama-Pacific Commission, German Kali Works, Sprague Canning Company, Universal Portland Cement Company, and a list of others that would take several columns of this paper to fully enumerate.

Romantic Spots of Spanish Main Offer Film Chances

Cartagena, Colombia, Is Surrounded by Walls Erected in the Reign of Philip II at Cost of $59,000,000, Now in Almost Perfect Preservation

MOTION pictures have not attained the popularity in Cartagena, Colombia, that they enjoy in other parts of South America, according to Consul Hazeltine. There are no manufacturers or exchanges, and only two theatres, one of which is rarely used. One theatre shows French films two nights a week. The admissions charged are very reasonable considering the quality and length of the films.

During the calendar year 1914 cinematograph supplies were imported into Cartagena to the value of $936, of which $850 came from France and the remainder from Germany. Most of the films shown here are said to be entered at Barranquilla. The import duty on developed films is $5 per kilo ($2.27 per pound), gross weight; the duty on unexposed films is $0.10 per kilo ($0.045 per pound), gross weight.

The films are purchased and resold when possible. American films are not shown, although there is little doubt that sensational western dramas would prove popular.

The opportunity for American producers does not exist, however, in the sale or rental of films, but rather in the manufacture of historical films.

Cartagena has the most romantic history of any city of the old Spanish Main. The remarkable walls, which are said to have cost $59,000,000, were constructed during the reign of Philip II of Spain, and today they are in a perfect state of preservation. Some of the forts have been destroyed, but several are in excellent condition.

The ancient Palace of the Inquisition (now private property), completed in 1706, is also in excellent condition. The picturesque fort of San José at Bocachica, dating from 1698, has scarcely been touched by the passage of years. The Castle of San Felipe, begun in 1630 and completed 27 years later at a cost of $11,000,000, but now in ruins, is situated on a hill overlooking the city and harbor. These and other historical structures give Cartagena a scenic background not excelled in all Latin America, but nothing has yet been done to turn these advantages to practical account.

Interested firms may communicate with this consulate and photographs will be submitted upon application. The names of the two local theatres and their managers may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce or its branch offices, Washington, D. C.

Extra Votings Are Allowed in "June" Contest

Reliance Company Arrange Plan for Admitting Exhibitors Who Have Not Inaugurated the Scheme Until After the Run of the Eleventh Episode

WHEN the free-trips-to-California contest started there were many exhibitors who were already running "Runaway June." A great number of these began the contest late. They are now writing to the Reliance expressing joy that they entered the contest. They tell of unusual experiences in running the contest after the serial had begun in their theatres.

The Reliance plan which was worked out in response to the demands of exhibitors permits any exhibitor to start the contest with any episode of the serial up to and including the eleventh and they can continue the contest on terms of equality with the theatres which begin the contest with the first episode. This is accomplished by means of extra votings at which the film is not shown.

The exhibitors who have tried the plan, write to the Reliance that they have found many profitable uses for the extra votings.

One Philadelphia exhibitor whose theatre is in the shopping district found that his matinees were not well patronized as the neighboring department stores occupied too much of the attention of Philadelphia women. He had run six episodes of "Runaway June," before he began the contest, so a number of extra votings were necessary. He writes that he is holding these on what would be otherwise dull afternoons.

The serial is not shown on these occasions but the women vote for their candidates. He says that his afternoons have now become crowded affairs, even when there is not voting. The contest drew the women to the theatre in the afternoon and they discovered that it was a very pleasant thing to go to a photoplay matinee and rest during a wearisome round of the shopping district.

This Philadelphian's lead was followed at once by five other exhibitors in the shopping district, each of whom reports similar benefits. And, strange to say, the competition which thus developed is not harmful competition at all. It is, on the contrary, highly beneficial. For the women who are intent upon seeing their favorites get a free trip to the California Expositions, promptly entered their candidates in some of the other theatres. So after the supporters of a given candidate vote for their chosen one in one theatre they go to another and vote again.

SHUMWAY ABLE TO PLAY ANY PART

Appearing in one play as a dashing juvenile lead, in another as the vindictive and despicable villain, and playing character parts depicting men of all ages and conditions, has been the work of L. C. Shumway, one of the most versatile members of the Western Lubin Company at Los Angeles, Cal., for the past eighteen months.

Eighteen months ago Shumway joined the Lubin players at the Los Angeles studio, and it was not very long before he was one of the most popular men there. Among the recent releases of the Lubin pictures in which he created the leading roles may be mentioned "The Candidate for Mayor," "Lure of Car Wheels," and "Sealed Orders."

CHAPTER OF "GODDESS" MAKES HIT AT VITAGRAPH THEATRE

Chapter II of "The Goddess," the Vitagraph serial, has made a pronounced hit and added a distinctive interest to the program of the Vitagraph theatre, New York City, last week. The two parts that comprise Chapter II are announced for the week and are a logical continuation of

ANITA STEWART

Gouverneur Morris' fascinating story that was begun a week ago.

Anita Stewart as Celestia, "The Goddess," and Earle Williams as Tommy Barclay, are introduced in this chapter and begin their adventures that make the story. To Ralph W. Ince belongs the credit of production, Miss Stewart and Mr. Williams being ably supported in the enactment by Paul Scardon, Frank Currier, Thom Brook, Charles Wellesley, Lillian Burns and others.

LADY MACKENZIE'S APE LIKES CELERY

Among the live wild beasts which Lady Mackenzie brought back from East Africa along with the film of her big game hunting expedition is a small, black and very active young ape.

Whenever she issues from her apartments in the Hotel Belnord at Eighty-sixth street and Broadway, Toto, the coal-black Simian, accompanies her in her car. He prefers to ride with the chauffeur, as he can see more in the front seat, and usually he entwines himself about the driver's neck.

He was riding out the other day when he spied on the sidewalk a laborer returning home to dinner with the marketing. A tempting bunch of celery leaves protruded from a paper bag in the man's arm. Toto made a flying leap for the celery without a second's warning to the chauffeur.

The shock caused the chauffeur to loosen his grip on the steering wheel and the machine crashed into a heavy truck, staving in the radiator and breaking the windshield. The driver was slightly cut by the broken glass.

MAY MARKS PARAMOUNT'S FIRST BIRTHDAY

Twelve Months of Activity Constituted a Period of Progress—Service Embodying the 30-Days' Cancellation Clause Proves Popular—Establishes System of Reports Indicating to Executives of the Company the Kind of Pictures in Demand

IN the latter part of May, 1914, the Paramount Pictures corporation was organized with William W. Hodkinson as president and Raymond Pawley as treasurer. The company, among other things, offered exhibitors a welcome service in its liberal contracts.

While a manager contracted with his exchange for service to be used not less than one month, the agreement carried a thirty days' cancellation clause.

That the idea was considered a good one was evidenced by the fact that when the first picture was released on August 31, a great many theatres throughout the United States had signed the contract and began using Paramount service on that day.

Thousands of theatres since then have contracted for the service and the number is constantly increasing.

Increased business made necessary the production of more and better feature films. The Famous Players Film company, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company and Bosworth, Inc., the three producing companies, were called upon to increase their output sufficiently to provide two releases weekly provided by the Paramount program.

This, of course, the producers were able to do with the assurance of efficient distribution through the Paramount company, and from that day until the present time these producers have continually striven to improve their output of pictures. This has been evidenced from month to month by the grade of pictures produced and by the famous stage stars who have been signed for in motion picture productions appearing on the Paramount program.

Another thing of the utmost importance to every branch of the industry was the installation by Paramount of a system of reports whereby the exhibitor himself is the man whose opinion decides what kind of pictures shall or shall not be on the program.

A committee to select the pictures was deemed inadequate, therefore, a system of reports direct from the exhibitor was installed. By these reports coming daily from exhibitors using the service, the executives had in hand definite information concerning the kind of pictures in demand As the result of this system the releases of the seventh quarter were better than the first quarter, while the releases of the third quarter showed an improvement of 5 per cent. in quality. This system of exhibitors' reports is daily increasing in efficiency.

Besides these fundamental policies not necessarily known or visible to the industry as a whole, the company has accomplished other things which stand as material evidences of its activities. The national advertising campaign is something that has been the talk of the entire industry. The intention in planning the campaign was to carry such advertising as would benefit exhibitors and exchanges. The mediums used in the beginning were the national magazines and Paramount 24-sheet stands.

Thus began the building of patronage and prestige and reputation for Paramount Pictures. Within a few months this campaign was aided by a house organ, "Paramount Progress."

Almost simultaneously the company issued "Paramount Magazine," with a distribution of 300,000 copies. It is now sold on the newsstands throughout the United States, and has a constantly growing paid subscription list.

Later the company added to its service weekly releases of travel pictures. In 1914 an expedition of five cameramen was sent to South America to secure pictures of its people, industries, and wonderful scenery.

There is no diminution in the activity of the Paramount Pictures corporation nor in the scope of its achievement.

Cyril Maude, English Actor of Note, Joins Morosco

His Finished Work in "Grumpy," "The Second in Command," "David Garrick," and "The Little Minister" Widely Known to American Audiences

CLOSELY following the departure of George Fawcett, the well-known metropolitan star, for the Morosco-Bosworth studios, at Los Angeles, comes the announcement that this organization has signed another star of wide repute, to appear in pictures under its trade-mark.

Cyril Maude is the latest acquisition of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company, in association with Bosworth, Inc. Mr. Maude is a star of international repute. In this country his work in such triumphs as "Grumpy" and "The Second in Command" have made him popular with metropolitan audiences here.

Mr. Maude's career has been unusually active, and includes many successful tours on the other side as well as in this country. Born in London, he obtained his dramatic instructions under Sir Charles Cartwright and the late Rona La Thiere.

His first appearance on the stage was in Denver, Col., as the servant in "East Lynne," after which he returned to England, and there appeared for the first time at the Criterion theatre. Realizing the possibilities in Mr. Maude, a noted theatrical manager starred him as Sir Benjamin Backbite in that well-known English production, "The School for Scandal."

He next toured the United States as Squire Chivey in "David Garrick," later entering into partnership with Frederick Harrison at the Haymarket theatre, London, the association lasting until 1905. During this period he produced and was starred in many notable successes, among which are "The Little Minister," "Manoeuvres of Jan," "She Stoops to Conquer" and "The Second in Command."

While in Europe George Tyler, the theatrical manager, signed Mr. Maude to appear in this country again. His success here was instantaneous. The screen vehicle for Mr. Maude has not yet been selected, but it will no doubt be one of his biggest successes on the theatrical stage. Work on this photoplay will be commenced the early part of next month.

BERST ENTHUSIASTIC OVER SELIG BUSINESS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, May 19.

J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope company, recently returned from a business sojourn in New York City. Mr. Berst is enthusiastic over the outlook for business through the new V-L-S-E, Inc.

"That the exhibitors are appreciating the high class productions being released through V-L-S-E, Inc., is putting it mildly," asserted Mr. Berst in an interview.

"The first Selig Red Seal play released through the new incorporation, 'The Carpet from Bagdad' may ultimately reach the popularity attained by 'The Spoilers,'" said Mr. Berst.

"Opinions from public, press and exhibitors are highly complimentary. The second Selig Red Seal play, 'The Millionaire Baby,' dramatized by Gilson Willets from Anna Natherine Green's wonderful novel, will, according to present indications, also attain the high tide of popularity.

"You may say that the Selig company is hesitating at nothing to make its Red Seal plays, its Diamond Specials in three reels, released in the General Film company's regular service, and the Selig productions in one and two reels."

LILLIAN HAMILTON FEATURED IN WESTERNS

If you ask Lillian Hamilton, the dainty and attractive little leading lady of the Premier company at Santa Paula, Cal., whose deeds of daring before the camera for the United program have held many an audience breathless, what is her greatest ambition in life, she will answer without hesitation "to make people happy," "to make people laugh and forget their worries."

LILLIAN HAMILTON

And that is just what Lillian Hamilton has been doing for "years and years." (she won't tell us how many, but at least five) ever since she went into the motion pictures and before.

Miss Hamilton began her career of radiating happiness and good cheer in South Haven, Mich. Her home was near Chicago, and even as a child, when she was taken to the city to see children's plays, she longed for the day when she would be able to make people laugh and cry as the stage children did.

Miss Hamilton is being featured in western pictures at the Premier studios, and her appearance is coming to be eagerly watched for wherever the United program is shown.

CREDITORS' EQUITY SUIT IS BROUGHT AGAINST KRITERION

Samuel Strasbourger has been appointed receiver of the Kriterion Film corporation of 1600 Broadway, New York City, with authority to continue the corporation's business. This action was taken by Justice Mayer in the Federal District Court as a result of the creditors' equity suit brought by the Alhambra Motion Picture company of Santa Barbara, Cal. Strasbourger is bonded for $5,000.

The Alhambra Motion Picture company has a claim of $2,231 for negatives purchased by Kriterion. Other companies and persons joining in the action and the amount of their claims are: Reynolds Printing company, $600; C. K. Film Manufacturing company, $3,000; Atlantic Film Manufacturing company, $2,500; and Aubrey M. Kennedy, $8.844. Mr. Kennedy was president of Kriterion. B. E. Clements was vice-president and general manager.

Selig Tour Offers Many Advantages to Writers

Gilson Willets, Novelist, Historian and Successful Photoplay Author, Who Has Aroused Interest in Special Trip to California, Considers Event Rare Opportunity

GILSON WILLETS, novelist, historian and author of hundreds of photoplays, has written an interesting letter to the Selig Polyscope company on the subject of the forthcoming visit of the Selig Movie Special to California. In part he says:

"Through my recommendations a number of authors, not only photoplay authors but writers of fiction, are contemplating the tour of California aboard the Selig Movie Special. I booked my reservation several weeks ago.

"I am of the opinion that the visit to Los Angeles, the mecca of motion picture production, the opportunity to see motion pictures in production, the personal meeting with motion picture actors and actresses, the chance to converse with motion picture directors and to ascertain just what they require in the way of plots and technique, the becoming acquainted with the colony of photoplay writers on the Pacific Coast through the instrumentality of the Photoplay Authors' League, all these items are worth many times the small cost of the seventeen days' journey.

"'Photoplay schools,' so called, charge nearly that sum for a series of impractical lessons. On your trip the ambitious writer, whether he be a novice or professional is certain to absorb atmosphere, make acquaintances, and by observation acquire more knowledge of the art in seventeen days than could be obtained otherwise in seventeen years.

"This forthcoming journey will be of estimable value to all photoplaywrights. The more the merrier and the more profit to all. The Selig Polyscope company stands behind this tour, and there isn't an author in the newer literary profession today that can say that the Selig company does not fulfill all promises, and more." Others have made similar communications of their approval.

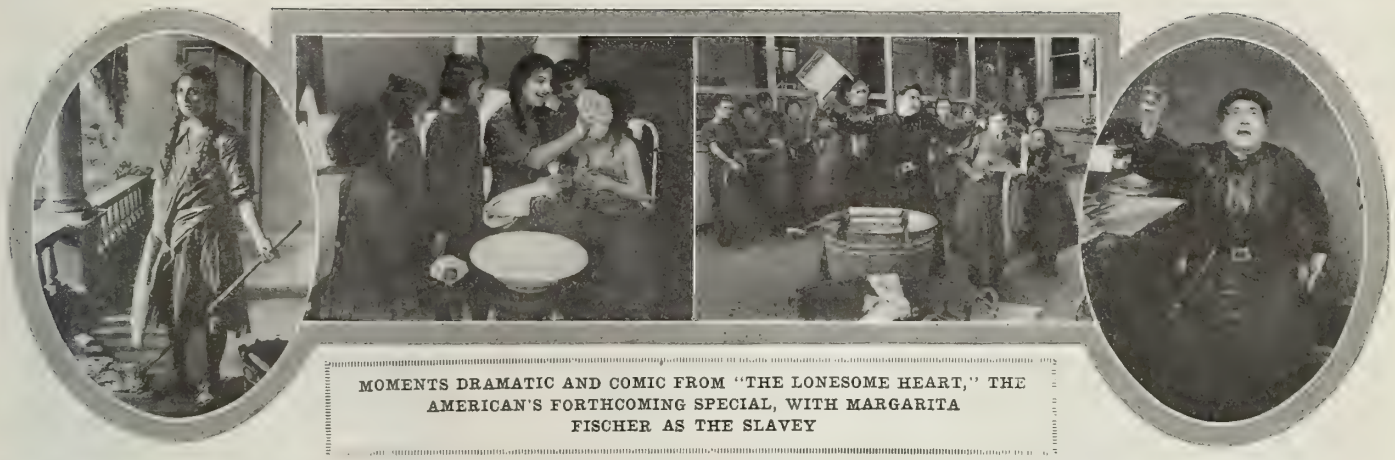
EARLE A. DYER.

La Pearl, MinA Star, Long in Sawdust Arena



Famous Clown, Starred in Fifteen Reel Burlesque Serial for Release on General Program, Was with Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey for Years

HARRY LA PEARL is the first and greatest of the clowns to desert the sawdust arena for the screen. He has been placed under a long time contract to appear exclusively in MinA films, released on the General Film program.

Harry La Pearl grew up among the white tops, starting with his father's show, the La Pearl Circus, famous a generation back. Harry made his first appearance as a bareback rider, and went through the various specialties of the business as an eccentric dancer, tumbler and aerial performer and ending his circus career as the most famous clown in the world. For two years he was principal clown with the Ringling Brothers Show, after which he was chosen as chief producing clown of Barnum and Bailey.

After two years with Barnum, La Pearl was featured at the Hippodrome, New York, and left them to join MinA films. A special cast of the best clowns chosen from several prominent American circuses has been engaged to support La Pearl in his film productions. Jimmie Hyland, the comic tumbler; Spooks Hansen, the globe-trotting clown; George Zammette, of the famous Dollar Troupe; Bob Jordan, Jimmie Corbley, Johnny Mayon, Charley Johnson, Nat Berk and George Williams are some of the pantomimists whose names will be readily recalled by all who are familiar with circus performers.

Mr. La Pearl is soon to be seen on the screen in a fifteen-reel serial, burlesquing the present-day sensational serials.

MOMENTS DRAMATIC AND COMIC FROM "THE LONESOME HEART," THE AMERICAN'S FORTHCOMING SPECIAL, WITH MARGARITA FISCHER AS THE SLAVEY

Trade Compliments "News" on Its Decided Stand

Editorial Entitled "Protect the Exhibitor," Which Appeared in Issue of May 15, and Fearlessly Deals with Conditions Requiring Improvement, Strikes Right Chord

THE editorial entitled "Protect the Exhibitor," appearing in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of May 15, has struck a responsive chord throughout the industry. Exhibitors, exchangemen and manufacturers unite in expressing approval of its views.

William W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures corporation, gives his unqualified endorsement of the stand taken by the NEWS, and compliments the publication on its exhibition of couraging in calling attention to a situation felt by everybody for some time. His letter follows:

"I am writing to say that your editorial in the last number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS did me more good than anything I have read for a long time. Not only because the writer agrees with the statements you made, but more particularly because your paper is the first that has had the courage to come out openly and take this stand.

"While, as you know, Paramount was the first concern to put into practical operation the regularly released program and the first to incorporate in its policy better pictures, better theatres, better patrons and higher admission prices, you also know that the trend of the entire industry today is toward these principles. The finger of progress has for the past year been strongly pointing producer and exhibitor to these better standards.

"Notwithstanding these pertinent signs of the times, yours is the first paper that has taken a decided stand for these principles.

"As we see it, you have outlined the future of the industry very comprehensively, and my prediction is that there will be wider and wider acceptance of these ideas. Paramount heartily endorses your editorial and extends congratulations, not only upon your foresight but also for the courage of your convictions."

Al Lichtman, of the Al Lichtman Film Booking Agency, New York, has also given enthusiastic expression to his approval of the sentiments voiced by the NEWS. Mr. Lichtman's letter follows:

"I read with great interest your editorial in the May 15 issue of your live publication, and take this means of expressing my appreciation of your "up-to-the-minute" summary of the film situation.

"You have hit the nail on the head, and the sooner all concerns realize that the day is gone for quantity handled in a haphazard manner, the sooner will the industry be standardized and each production obtain its just returns purely on its merits."

JOSE, OPPOSITE BETTY NANSEN, PLAYED WITH BERNHARDT

Edward Jose, who appears as a co-star with Betty Nansen and William J. Kelly in the William Fox production of "A Woman's Resurrection," Count Leo Tolstoi's remarkable story, has had a varied career. He commenced his stage life in the company of Sarah Bernhardt in Paris. Years of hard work in provincial companies followed, but at last young Jose's ability began to make itself evident, and he became one of the company of the Theatre Francais. His endowment of dramatic talent resulted in his being offered the part of Cyrano De Bergerac, which he created.

Among his audience on his opening night was the great Bernhardt herself. At the close of the big act of the play she sent for Jose to congratulate him. Then it was Jose's opportunity to tell her that he had for a brief period been a member of her company.

She recollected the incident, and said laughingly, "So it appears that you did have some sense, after all." An engagement with Mme. Bernhardt as her leading man followed, and then Mr. Jose decided to tour America at the head of his own company, as he speaks English with great fluency and ease. He met with such success in this country that he decided to stay here.

NATIONAL CARBON AND DYER PLEASED WITH CONVENTION

The success of the convention and trade exposition held by the Northwest Exhibitors' Association, in Minneapolis, has made itself evident to the manufacturers. In addition to the complimentary letter of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, printed in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, in which Charles C. Pyle, general sales agent of the company, expressed appreciation of the manner the convention was handled by the association management, other firms have evidenced a feeling of satisfaction over the action of the convention managers.

The National Carbon Company, which had booth 6-7, sent the following letter to the Northwest Association:

"We consider this convention the best at which we have exhibited our products. From an advertising point of view, it has paid us one hundred per cent. As to the actual business obtained, it was very gratifying. The time and money expended have been more than set off.

"We want to express our appreciation and extend to the officers who have worked so hard in promoting and running this convention our heartfelt appreciation. Many thanks to Harry Green, William Steffes."

The booth was in charge of I. B. Crissman and W. C. Kunzmaner.

Another letter, from W. J. Dyer and company, was also enthusiastic over the success of the convention. It read as follows:

"From the standpoint of an exhibitor, we consider that the Moving Picture Convention, held in Minneapolis May 3-7, was a very great success, sufficiently to justify our taking space again."

Farnham, on Peace Aid Mission, Writes of War

Former Manager of All-Star, Abroad to Obtain Pictures of Destruction Wrought by Contending Armies, Writes of Ruins in Senlis

Special to Motion Picture News

Senlis, France, May 1.

THIS peaceful little village of Senlis, in the farming area of France, about twenty-five miles from Paris, not many months ago, was a happy, typical little French village inhabited by three or four thousand peasants. Now it is a waste and barren stretch, consisting of one main street, the Rue de la Republique, and so few people that meeting one of the sad and mourning inhabitants really occasions surprise.

Some interesting photographs taken on March 20, will convey an idea of the devastation and ruin which followed in the wake of the invasion of this French territory and the march on Paris by the German army, commanded by General Von Kluck. And it may also be remembered that this same general came right back again over this same territory in his retreat from the same objective.

We have been on a tour taking us through this wrecked village of Senlis on to Campiegne and to Soissons, which we entered more or less hastily, owing to the merry little rattle of howitzer and shrapnel, which kept singing along and bursting just outside this small city, so near the capital.

As yet there is comparatively little havoc wrought in Soissons, but it has suffered its share from fright, you may be assured, and any minute the artillery range finders may decide upon its total destruction.

Phil Klein and myself have seen some mighty exciting moments, and I firmly believe that there has never been a better opportunity offered to any subjects of a neutral country to observe this great conflict at close range than that which has been granted us.

Our mission being of international consequence and import, we have indeed been received with all accord possible, and there has been placed at our disposal most unusual accommodations and facilities for us to bring back to America a most complete and exclusive record of this world strife.

What we may observe will undoubtedly be a great education and, on our return to America, I believe we will be the first to bring back an unbiased and complete motion picture of the great world struggle, the awe and terror and destruction of which the American people have not yet begun to realize.

J. W. Farnham.

Selig Supplies Dailies With Play Stories in Plates

Leading Lady of Productions Released Under the Red Seal Brand for the V-L-S-E. Program Will Novelize Each Subject

THE Selig company is supplying daily newspapers with an illustrated story in plate form of each of its Red Seal attractions, especially written by the leading lady of each production, and hundreds of exhibitors have written the V-L-S-E, and the Selig company for further particulars.

Several hundred others have availed themselves of this attractive advertising feature, but evidently quite a number did not thoroughly understand the offer, and for their benefit, the plan is again explained.

The story of "The Carpet From Bagdad," and the interesting incidents that occurred during its production, has been written by Kathlyn Williams. The story is intensely interesting, and over the signature of this popular star, has great value, both as a news story and as an advertising feature.

The Selig company has had the story set up in type and cast into plate form, all ready for printing. Proof sheets will be sent to all exhibitors booking the feature, and they may show it to the editors of their local newspapers and request its publication.

Where the editors agree to publish the story, the exhibitor by writing or telegraphing direct to the Selig company at Chicago, may have the plate sent direct to the newspaper, without any cost to either the newspaper or the exhibitor.

Stories will be written on all Selig Red Seal features by the principal star in the production, and requests for the plates should be addressed direct to Selig, and, as the publicity department suggests, it is better to telegraph instead of writing. It is quicker and certainly worth the cost of a telegram.

Maddock, of Rolfe, Pleased with Canada Conditions

CHARLES B. MADDOCK, a member of the B. A. Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., who has made a tour of the Canadian and West Coast exchanges releasing Metro Program subjects, spent several days in Los Angeles recently with Mr. Rolfe, and departed for the East by the southern route. On the way he expects to spend some time with the several companies renting Metro subjects.

The trip through the Northwest and West was for the purpose of getting acquainted with the people who will handle the subjects of the Rolfe company, and to personally investigate the conditions of the field with regard to feature films and the kind of subjects the Rolfe company has in the past produced.

Conditions in the United States are rapidly improving with the exhibitors and the exchange men, Mr. Maddock found, and he was very much pleased with the decidedly optimistic view of the Canadian men of the motion picture industry. He believes the film market in Canada will continue to improve from now on.

SELL THE PROPS IN "MELTING POT" SCENE

Director James Vincent, who handled the big scenes in "The Melting Pot" for the Cort Film corporation, had an amusing experience when he put on some market scenes in which he used a crowd of lower East Side people.

He placed some likely looking men in charge of the piles of vegetables which were to be offered for sale during the run of the scene. Then he went away for a short time. The men in charge of the stalls must have done a good business, for when the scenes were about to be taken Mr. Vincent found that the "market" had been sold out and all the "props" eaten.

He learned afterward that the stuff had been sold for cash at from two to six cents.

TRADE SHOWING OF WILLIE RITCHIE PICTURE NEXT WEEK

The Gotham Film Company, Inc., will give a trade showing of "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan" in New York next week. This picture, in four parts, featuring Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion of America, and Betty Marshall, known as the Gotham Fashion Plate, contains three hundred vivid scenes founded upon the story of the same name by Helen Van Campen in the "Saturday Evening Post."

REPRINT TRADE PAPER VIEWS IN VITAGRAPH PRESS SHEET

The Vitagraph company of America has utilized the opinions of both the daily and the trade papers for press sheet matter on "The Juggernaut" and "The Island of Regeneration," two features to be released through the V-L-S-E combine.

The press sheets on these two subjects contain extracts from many reviews on the pictures, together with a synopsis of the story and two or three illustrations. The opinions of the quoted papers constitute excellent press matter for advertising purposes.

PERIOLAT LOOKS LIKE REAL GYPSY IN "DIAMOND"

George Periolat offers in "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American's $20,000 prize photoplay, one of the most interesting and effective characterizations shown thus far on the screen—that of Luke Lovell, a gypsy.

Mr. Periolat's genius in make-up stands him in good stead, for as the accompanying picture shows, this might be a likeness of a real gypsy rather than of an actor made up as one.

GEORGE PERIOLAT AS THE GYPSY IN "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

Mr. Periolat went into pictures five years ago, his first work being with the Essanay. He later joined Selig and finally the American, which company he left to go with the Universal, where he was leading man to J. Warren Kerrigan. He returned to Santa Barbara when "The Diamond from the Sky" was being prepared.

REX INGRAM JOINS FOX FILM ACTORS

The latest addition to the ranks of the directing staff of the William Fox Film corporation is Rex Ingram, formerly of the Vitagraph forces. Mr. Ingram will be associated with J. Gordon Edwards in the new Betty Nansen production on which work has already been commenced.

The new photoplay on which the tragedienne is now at work is radically different from "The Celebrated Scandal," "Anna Karenina," and "A Woman's Resurrection," in which she has been already seen. It is an unusually powerful drama of modern life in France, and deals with the undying affection of a mother for her daughter, in the face of almost overwhelming intrigue and tragedy.

The title selected for this photoplay is "Mother Love," and the drama itself was conceived and written especially for Miss Nansen by Mr. Ingram after he had made a long and painstaking study of the great actress and her methods. Miss Nansen is supported by a company of dramatic artists headed by Stuart Holmes and Arthur Hoops.

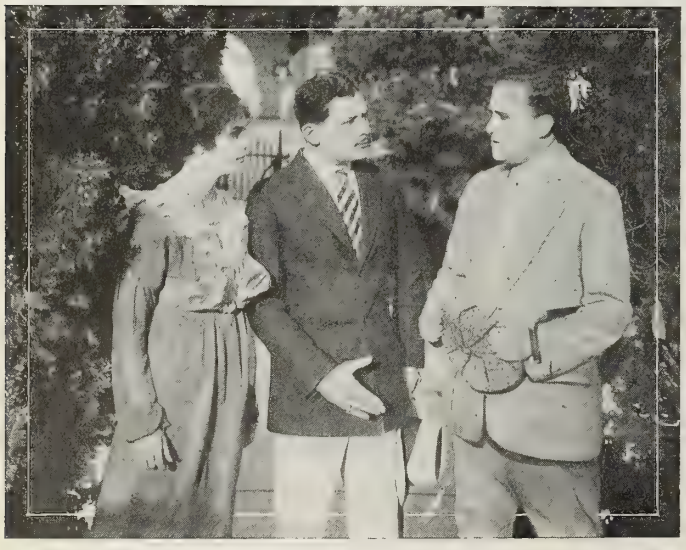
MURIEL MEETS HER RIVAL MURIEL GOES TO SEE HER SICK CHILD THE HUNTING SONG

"THE MOTH AND THE FLAME"



(Famous Players-Paramount—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FEW stories have such dramatic power as the kind which pictures a woman blindly in love with a man of shady morals. In "The Moth and the Flame," this theme is the foundation of Clyde Fitch's drama, which was so successful on the stage and which is considered by many one of the best if not the best of his plays.

The human interest qualities in the story, which grow with ever increasing rapidity as the plot develops, are of the most sympathetically powerful variety imaginable. The climax which caps the greater part of the action is extremely forceful.

The man is about to be married to the girl, the minister has uttered the conventional words to determine if there is anyone among the witnesses who offers an objection to the union, when the other woman announces her presence, upholds her statement by the man's confused anger, and with her little boy.

"AT LEAST LET US BE FRIENDS"

Afterwards the girl marries another most ardent suitor, and with a gratifying scene of the other man reconciled with the woman he had betrayed, the picture closes.

Playing the role of the deceived girl who discovers the man's perfidy just in time is Adele Rey, who gives an expression and pleasing performance in this leading feminine part. As her intended husband, Stewart Baird, renders a heavy part with considerable ability, while the other woman is played by Irene Howley. The suitor is Bradley Barker, while others in the cast are Arthur Donaldson, Edward Mordant, Dora Adams and young Maurice Stewart.

It is of interest that this production is Sidney Olcott's first picture done for the Famous Players. On the whole he has made a very fine offering. The photography is good and the lighting well attended to, while the settings are most appropriate.

The fact that several unnecessary scenes are apparent during the four reels does not detract from the story's interest at all; they serve as a relief from the tension that most of the scenes create.

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS"

(Lubin Liberty Bell Feature—Six Parts)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WHEN a noted star of the stage is suitably cast in a photoplay, there is a great pleasure in seeing her on the screen. One's remembrance retains the flavor of the spoken play, and zest is added to the film production.

Rose Coghlan fits her part in "The Sporting Duchess" like a glove. Her maturity of face and figure spoils no illusions. The Duchess needs no svelte form or baby face. As to acting, we all know what Miss Coghlan can do in the legitimate. She is also excellent in the silent drama.

With this star there are other satellites equally noted in their respective fields, equally well cast in this play, which gives scope for so many emotions, such a wealth of picturesque and exciting scenes. Director Barry O'Neill does not let any opportunity slip by in making this excellent scenario of Clay M. Green's (adapted from Cecil Raleigh's work) into a well rounded whole.

Ethel Clayton and George Soule Spencer could pass anywhere for the real Lord and Lady Desborough, besides acting the emotional scenes, so that your heart aches with and for them. Rosetta Brice is cast for the adventuress so often she must have numerous characters of the kind up her sleeve. She certainly makes the scheming Vivian Darville seductive here. Ferdinand Tidmarsh aids and abets her villainy like a real villain. Joseph Kaufman shows the soft-hearted victim of Vivian so admirably you cannot help exclaiming, "Poor Rupert Lee, why cannot he see through that woman!"

Little Brooks McClosky is a dear Harold Desborough, really crying when he must leave his mother. He has a good nurse in Ruth Bryan. Then there is James Daly and Clarence Elmer and Alan Quinn and Frankie Mann and Charles Brandt and Florence Williams—good every one, in all they do. Why, even the extras ride and hunt and dance and flirt as if they belonged to society.

And the story? Well, that is a tale of the English smart set, who are human, like the rest of us. The Desboroughs get into trouble, through Muriel's jealousy of her husband. Vivian Darville and Captain Mostyn fan this into a fierce flame through innuendo and false evidence for their own evil purposes. Rupert Lee is the weak tool of the woman, but in the end helps bring the divorced Desboroughs together again.

The Duchess being a kind-hearted woman as well as a "good fellow," is also a "deus ex machina" and uses her money to save Desborough from financial ruin and her good offices to save the young couple from spiritual destruction.

The buying of the Desborough house, Clipstone, and Desborough's winning the Derby marks the climax of the whole plot. But, Oh, my, before that, we have a hunt with the dogs in full cry, a hunt ball with its cotillion, a horse auction at Fattersalls, a coaching party, the actual horse race and a dozen other incidents, replete with tense emotion.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA LOSES PRIZE DOG

BEATRIZ MICHELENA, star of the California Motion Picture Corporation, is mourning the loss of her prize-winning collie, "Dixie," who was poisoned at Boulder Creek, where she and her supporting company are now engaged in filming "A Phyllis of the Sierras."

"THE BOSS"

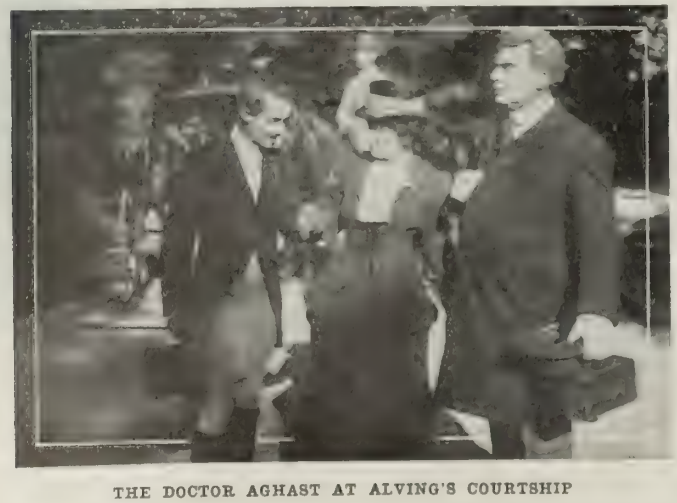
(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FEW legitimate actors have made a more striking debut in films than Holbrook Blinn in this picture. The leading role is one peculiarly suited to Mr. Blinn. Michael Regan is a man who fights his way to wealth by the most dogged and determined sort of fighting. He wins out over apparently insurmountable obstacles, but his life is not one which is calculated to make a man tender hearted or sympathetic. Yet in the end it is seen that there is a fine generous side which is only brought out after some unusual happenings.

As can be imagined, the role of Regan is not an easy one, yet Mr. Blinn handles it with an ease and success indicative of years of experience before the camera. Alice Brady makes an attractive heroine, an interesting feature being the fact that her father produced the drama on the legitimate stage a few years ago. Another fine characterization is that of Archbishop Sullivan by William Marion. Other members of the cast are: Charles Abbe, Fred Truesdell, Bert Starkey, Douglas McLean, R. B. Mantell, Jr., and Julia Stuart.

Regan, a loafer and hanger on at water front saloons, suddenly becomes inspired to work, and through his wide acquaintance with the dock workers succeeds in building up a tremendous freight handling business. In the course of his rise he comes in contact with the Griswolds, father and son, who have formerly had a monopoly of the same sort of work.



In order to save her father Emily Griswold marries Regan, but then tells him the reason. Although they live in the same house they practically never see each other until a dock strike gives Emily her chance to bring out Regan's good side. Before the trouble is over she has fallen in love with him, and there is a happy conclusion. There are many fine scenes and some original stunts, such as a view of a prize fight from directly overhead. The mob scenes in particular are well handled.

"GHOSTS"

(Reliance-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

AS a dramatic feature "Ghosts" is one of the best productions seen in many a long day from every angle—strength of story, acting and care and detail in production. Henry Walthall has the most prominent part. His interpretation of Alving, the roue father, and Oswald the son who inherits the father's taint, is to the screen what Richard Mansfield's Baron Chevrial in "A

THE DOCTOR AGHAST AT ALVING'S COURTSHIP

Parisian Romance" was to the speaking stage. The only difference is that Mansfield attained reputation through his Chevrial, while Walthall has already won his spurs in many productions.

Alving, a roue, marries eighteen-year old Helen, despite his doctor's warning. Alving dies, a victim of his excesses, when Oswald is nine years old. As Oswald grows up, his mother picks out for his wife a girl of his own station. But the horrible part is that the girl's mother was Alving's paramour, and the girl herself is Oswald's half-sister.

This only the doctor knows. Common decency to the living forces him to bare the fact to stop the marriage. Oswald, through his inherited taint, goes insane. His mother comes home one day to find him sitting on the floor playing with the sunbeams.

She runs for the doctor. During her absence Oswald takes poison. For her consolation the mother can only turn to the physician who has been her life-long admirer.

Ibsen wrote the drama by the same name from which "Ghosts" is taken. The theme is his. For those who are not Ibsen students let it be said that "Ghosts" resembles "Damaged Goods" in being a study in inherited taint, and resembles "The City" in the relationship between the young folks. Yet in plot it resembles neither.

"Ghosts" is not a pretty story. But it is a forceful story, and one which will create thought and talk, and that's the kind of a picture which people go to see twice, and about which they tell their friends. George Nicholls, the director, has produced it with great care and without a flaw in the costumes or stage settings.

For dramatic strength it is in a class with "The Avenging Conscience." Don't think that Ibsen is being classed with an ordinary motion picture though. "The Avenging Conscience" was taken from an Edgar Allan Poe story.

To round out the comment let it be said that Mary Alden as the girl, the young wife and the aged mother, lived up to her reputation, was a fine actress and a good character woman. Juanita Archer did well with an unsympathetic part, that of Alving's paramour. Al Filson played the physician.

"UNDER THE CRESCENT"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Chapter Two)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NY confusion which may have resulted from the rapid introduction of so many characters in this first two reels of the Princess Ibrahim Hassan series is completely banished from the spectator's mind in this, "The Cage of Golden Bars." The characters assume a definite place in the story, and consequently the picture is of more interest than heretofore.

The mob which is introduced in the Mosque scenes is well handled both while supposed to be at prayer and later when in angry pursuit of the escaping woman. There are some bad bits of photography during the two reels, but not enough to mar the enjoyment of the story. The prison scenes are purposely dimly lighted.

A brief synopsis of the action follows. Shortly after being tricked into the marriage with the Turkish prince, the American woman realizes her husband's duplicity, realizes that she is supposed to remain within the Harem for the rest of her life, and enjoy none of the privileges which the Turk promised her.

In the prison below the castle is the dancer who was betrayed by the Prince. Next to the cell in which she lies with her baby is a young American, a former friend of the actress who has been imprisoned as a spy. After quite a bit of planning these three escape from the palace, but what next befalls them is left to be pictured in the succeeding episode.

Edna Maison is seen as the dancer, while William Dowlan plays the American. The rest of the cast of principals remains the same.

"THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMING"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FRANCIS FORD and his raging horde of supernumeraries, everyone of which excels in the art of pugilism, have long been amazedly looked upon in sundry releases on the Universal program. For terrifying realism the numerous fisticuffs he has staged stand in a class by themselves. For these four reels it has outdone by far all his previous exertions in this line.

War scenes, grim, horrible and bloody, have been consigned to a large portion of the drama. These are supplemented by others, hand to hand struggles between Sepoys and English, and later the Scotch. There are encounters so crowded in realism of action, results and expressions, that to conceive their being merely played for the camera is next to impossible.

Mr. Ford should receive all the more credit because practically the entire picture is comprised of battle scenes of one kind or another. It must have been a hard task to arrange them in such a manner that they would sustain the interest instead of tiring the observer. The story is very slight.

(Above) THE SLAUGHTER OF THE ENGLISH WOMEN
(Below) AT THE END OF THE WAR—ITS RESULT

In brief, the daughter of an English general serving in India is made the prisoner of one Nana Sahib. Her rescue, and the vengeance meted out to the Indians by the English, requires the rest of the picture. It is effected, but after all is over thousands of men on both sides are killed, including the girl's father and sweetheart, a member of the Scottish regiment.

To single out some scenes of the strife for particular attention is difficult. However, the fight through the walls of the stockade, the massacre of the women, the miraculous ride of the messenger, including his fall off a swinging bridge, and again the panoramic battle scenes, are worthy of special commendation. But the rest are fitting examples of all that is modern and excellent in picture warfare.

Grace Cunard, who wrote the story, appears as the General's daughter, while Mr. Ford himself is seen as the merciless Sahib. Harry Schumm looks heroic as the Scotsman. The photography and lighting are excellent. The Indian atmosphere is very well achieved by means of the costumes and the various settings.

And by the way, like all war films, this one makes an ardent appeal for peace. To see enacted horrors which we read of at the present time, horrors that are true and unshorn of any of their terror embraces the most hearty peace plea imaginable.

"THE SLIM PRINCESS"

(V-L-S-E—Essanay—Four Acts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Essanay company has been busy for some time turning out one reel George Ade comedies, and no doubt remains as to their success. Their comedy qualities have ranked them high in the class of refined picture humor. "The Slim Princess," founded on George Ade's successful play of the same name, presents four reels of practically pure unadulterated comedy development, much resembling these popular one reel offerings.

As in the smaller pictures much of the humor depends on the subtitles, which are used profusely but not unnecessarily. To delve into an analysis of the renowned wit of George Ade is superfluous, as its effect has been well proven in both magazines and pictures. Suffice it that the greater number of the subtitles are good for laughs.

But on the other hand, the comic possibilities of the story itself have been grasped with an understanding by the leading players. Neither have the ridiculous situations in the plot been often pictured heretofore, and the combination of refreshing incidents and capable acting is gratifying.

The story concerns a Turkish count whose court believes beauty is confined to fat girls only. Popova, the tutor of the count's children, nurses a secret hatred for his master and so keeps one of his charges thin by feeding her pickles. Of course she is really beautiful while the other is not so at all. But then the American puts in an appearance and remains until he has made the slim princess his wife.

The chief comedy role is played by Wallace Beery as Popova. His opportunities are many and he makes use of all of them. Francis Bushman and Ruth Stonehouse are ideally suited for the lovers. Henry Dunkinson is the count, while others in the cast are Terza Bey, Bryant Washburn and Lester Cuneo.

The story is rather slow in getting started, and at times there is noticeable padding, such as displaying scenes in the capital of the

THE SLIM PRINCESS AT HOME

United States as was the case with "Graustark." But the humor in the story is great enough to eclipse such faults, and while careful cutting would benefit the picture, it stands very well as it is. The photography and settings are very good.

CUPID BUSY IN PHILADELPHIA

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Philadelphia, May 19.

CUPID is busy projecting several Philadelphia film men on his mirror screen, Hymen being the feature most popular at this writing. Jay Emanuel, treasurer of the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League, secretary of the Reel Fellows, general manager of the Exhibitors Booking Office, and manager of the Ridge and Windsor theatres, announced his engagement to Bella Flock of Philadelphia at a reception held last week at the home of the bride elect. The marriage will take place in the early autumn.

James Brennan, the chief auditor of the Stanley Booking Company, will be married on June 6 to Katherine Duffy of Philadelphia.

"IN THE DAYS OF FAMINE"

(Vitagraph—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NOTHING sensational or startling is portrayed in this drama of the Northland. Merely a plain story which fulfills in every respect the Vitagraph company's description of it as "heart-interest." The story was written by James Oliver Curwood and produced by Theodore Marston. The combination has proved a most admirable one.

The entire action takes place in the far north. Every exterior which appears is a scene made while the snow was lying deep on the ground. These are all well photographed. The absence of static is noticeable, while free from glare, they do not tire the eye. The few interiors which are staged are realistic in every sense of the word.

The story starts in 1889, when the plague raged in the north. Jan, a young French-Canadian adopts a child orphaned by the fever. Twelve years later when the girl has returned from school, Jan finds himself in love with her.

He and Lieutenant Walker of the Northwest Mounted Police set out on a trip. Before they leave Jean writes a note intended for Jan, saying that she will marry him on his return. By mistake she puts this in Walker's pack who is overjoyed at the news. On the trip Jan is seriously wounded, and finally giving himself up, he tells Walker to return, as the girl loves him. Walker discovers the truth when he sees the girl, and a rescue party headed by Jean sets out to find Jan, after which all ends happily.

James Morrison gives a fine performance as Jan, while Dorothy Kelly as Jean in her later years does very well. George Cooper as Walker and Donald Hall as the factor complete the small cast of principals.

"GOD'S WITNESS"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HERE is Edwin Thanhouser's first contribution to the Mutual Masterpictures, and, one is happy to say, it lives up to the high standard of consistent excellence which Mr. Thanhouser outlined for himself when he returned to take up the reins at the company which bears his name.

"God's Witness" is essentially a dramatic story. It builds up and up to a climax which is unusual and startling, and leaves legitimate room for a pleasant ending. The scientific end of the picture involves the photographing, by a stroke of lightning, of a man's death, through which death the heroine is accused of murder. This phenomenon is entirely within the bonds of reason, according to the opening sub-title. Once that difficulty is bridged the story is logical enough.

Beryl, played by Florence La Badie, is accused of murdering her grandfather, with whom she had quarreled on the night of his death because of his refusal to help her mother who was lying ill. The trial is going against Beryl when Bertie, her brother, appears. He testified that he, too, had called on the grandfather that evening, that there had been a quarrel, and that the old gentlemen had seized an andiron to strike him when he was killed by a bolt of lightning. Bertie's story sounded thin when Lennox Dunbar, a young lawyer, rushed into court bearing a pane of glass on which the lightning had photographed the way the grandfather met his death.

Brother and sister are exonerated, and Beryl and Dunbar are left to be happy together. Morris Foster played Bertie, and Harris Gordon is Dunbar, the whole cast being excellent.

The scene of action is laid in the South, the players being sent there for the exteriors. The action and acting is very convincing and the climax surely is novel and exciting.

"IN THE DARK"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THIS time the eternal triangle has a fourth side, thereby bringing more complications to the situations and an added element of interest to the story.

Adrian Gil-Spear has written a strong scenario which Director Joseph Kaufman has put into a picture bound to interest those fond of thrilling moments. Love and jealousy, revenge, false friendship, mistaken judgment, the mighty hand of science, all have their share in this drama, which hovers on the borderland of the melodramatic.

Rex Mansfield (Joseph Kaufman) and Edith, his wife (Ethel Clayton), have struggled up from poverty to fame and fortune, partly through Rex's skill as an artist, more largely through Edith's sacrifices as a wife.

At the pinnacle is Julie Duval (Rosetta Brice) wonderful and beautiful, an actress and foreigner. Small wonder that the painting of her portrait absorbs the artist, while his wife eats her heart out in silence until Leo Lechmeer (Jack Standing) enters with insinuations about Rex and love making for the neglected wife.

When Julie Duval realizes at last that Rex's interest is for her artistic value and not a lover's passion, she blinds him with acid and leaves him to his fate.

Edith doubting his story of an accident, is egged on by Lechmeer to believe the worst, and in desperation agrees to fly with the tempter. Before this can be consummated the irony of fate brings Doctor McVickar (Charles Brandt) on his way to operate on the artist's eyes in time to run over and kill Leo Lechmeer.

Complications arise from Edith's presence in Lechmeer's apartments, but in the end all is smoothed out, the artist's sight is restored by a wonderful operation, the actress disappears and the husband and wife live happily ever after, while the bone of contention, the picture, is thrown in the scrap heap.

Joseph Kaufman's impersonation of the blind artist has an individuality deserving much commendation. Ethel Clayton, always good in sweet womanly parts, makes the best use of her opportunities here in the stronger role of the suffering wife whose troubles drive her to desperate measures.

Rosetta Brice has always, or almost always, to act the part of an unscrupulous woman, but as she makes such a good one, we cannot help enjoying her delineations.

"ON BITTER CREEK"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

FAMILY feuds are a blessing to the scenario writer, giving him many thrilling plots. Usually the feud ends in marriage between the factions.

In this scenario, by Emmett Campbell Hall, a double marriage of the middle-aged as well as young lovers is the happy solution of the ancient quarrel, but before this devoutly desired consummation is effected, there is hate and revenge, misery and heartache, misunderstanding and separation, and a whole generation of fighting between Yancys and Kirbys living on opposite sides of Bitter Creek.

A covered bridge belonging to Yancys is the bone of contention, and Clay Yancy swears a strange oath after his love quarrel with Caroline Kirby, that no Kirby can ever pass that bridge until a woman of their house buys freedom with a kiss.

Twenty years of feud and then the courts decide the toll is illegal which causes Clay Yancy in fury to decide on blowing up the bridge. A semi-villian is found in Jed Jolliver, in love with young Virginia Yancy, who, however, has already secretly married young Robert Kirby, their love having blossomed at a "co-ed" school in spite of fate and family. The bridge is blown up by Jed who is conveniently blown to eternity with it. The young couple escape the peril and are happy. Caroline Kirby and Clay Yancy are reunited by a kiss over the remains of the old bridge. A new one is built, and the Yancys and Kirbys are friends forevermore.

Justina Huff in this play has a chance to depart from her usual character of a sweet young girl. In the latter part of the story she has grown twenty years' older. She rises to the occasion and acts Caroline Kirby as well in her maturity as in her youth.

Edgar Jones, always good as director and lead, keeps his usual reputation here

George Gowan, Edwin Tilton, Jack Delson and Hilda Twogood fill the remaining parts.

"THE NEW EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathe—Episode Twenty-one)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

ORIGINALITY has been the keynote of the entire Elaine series. In this chapter the novel effects introduced are of particular interest, and this in spite of the fact that there is the strongest sort of a story.

The use of a ferret to draw a wire through a wall or conduit is fairly well known, but this is probably the first time that the interesting process has been shown on the screen. The fact that the wire is one which connects Kennedy's room with a hiding place of the Wu Fang gang by a detectograph naturally strengthens the effect.

However, Kennedy is not so easily fooled, and before he makes any remarks which would supply the Chinese with information he discovers the receiving end of the device, and then carries on conversations which serve his own plans and completely fool the Orientals.

The discovery of the detectograph, as well as of the poisoning of his pipe stem is due to an arrangement by which the presence of anyone in his room and their movements during his absence can be traced. A special rug is sprayed with a secret solution and another spraying after his return brings out all the footsteps of anyone who may have been in the room during his absence.

At the opening of the instalment Elaine receives two bunches of roses, red and white, the warning from Wu Fang that either Kennedy or her aunt must die. She can decide by placing one or the other of the bunches of flowers in the window. In order to lead the attack to himself Kennedy secretly puts the red flowers where they are seen by Wu Fang's watcher. An extraordinary series of adventures follow, but thanks to Kennedy's genius he not only wards off danger but captures the whole band except Wu Fang himself. Even Long Sin is made a prisoner, and the great Chinese criminal is thus left without his helpers. His escape, however, hints at new dangers to come. The instalment is entitled "The Listening Ear."

"THE DARKENING TRAIL"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

ONCE upon a time, as all regulation fairy stories begin, Western pictures exceeded all others in popularity. Now comes "The Darkening Trail," an Alaskan picture, which should be just as popular in these enlightened days as were any of the old Westerns, for this picture has that magnum desideratum known as heart interest. It also has the excellent work of

STURGESS REFUSES TO WED

William S. Hart. If any one man can "put over" a likeable frontier character Hart is the person.

Hart plays Yukon Ed, who loves Ruby McGraw, the proprietress of an Alaskan store, played by Enid Markey. Jack Sturgess arrives in Alaska, having left home suddenly to avoid marrying a girl. Ruby loves him. Yukon Ed, who loves Ruby, sees that the pair is married by bringing a minister and a brace of revolvers around.

But Sturgess is a cad, through and through. When Ruby lies ill, instead of going for the doctor, he plans to take her savings and make his escape. Yukon Ed goes for the doctor, but the medico arrives too late. Ruby's soul has gone.

Ed hunts up Sturgess, places a revolver in his hand, and advises him to go and meet Ruby along "the darkening trail," a new way of telling a man that his healthiest move is to kill himself.

Sturgess' character is well outlined in the opening reel by scenes at a gay cabaret with a girl played by voluptuous Louise Glaum. These scenes are so well played up that one wonders all through the picture when the girl of the cabaret is going to turn up again. But she never does.

All the same "The Darkening Trail" is a corking good feature, with a heart interest story and fine Alaskan atmosphere.

"SALLY CASTLETON, SOUTHERNER"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

IN at least one way this picture may be called a decided novelty, since it is described on the leader of the first reel as "A Southern picture without a battle." The avoidance of scenes showing fighting is an extremely sensible thing in this film. First of all there is no need of them since the action of the story furnishes an abundance of thrills. Further, battle scenes in a three reel regular program picture either mean ineffectual ones, or else a heavy drain on the manufacturer to provide spectacular views. A plot such as the one in this film allows the maker to avoid both of these difficulties.

THE WOUNDED UNION SPY IS DISCOVERED

The four principal parts are well handled, being played by Edison favorites. Marc MacDermott is seen as the plucky Union spy, and Miriam Nesbitt as his Southern sweetheart. Bessie Learn is the latter's sister and Pat O'Malley the Confederate officer to whom she is engaged.

A clever Union spy in the course of his work becomes acquainted with the Castleton family. His identity is discovered by the younger girl's sweetheart, and the older daughter starts a flirtation with him in order to learn his secrets. She falls in love with him, and instead of betraying him becomes engaged to him, and aids in his escape. In getting away he is compelled to wound the fiance of the younger girl. This causes a temporary wavering of faith on the part of his sweetheart, but she soon forgives him, and the war being over the two men become fast friends.

"THE OTHER SELF"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

A STORY of the Jekyll and Hyde variety which makes an interesting film and gives Velma Whitman scope for versatility in depicting Anna Anson, the good, as well as her wicked personality —Ruby Queen.

The part that repels one in this scenario by Julian Louis Lamothe, is the fact that the girl's own father, Bill Anson, is her evil genius and works his hypnotic power to make her as Ruby Queen, his tool and decoy in the gambling establishment over which he presides.

The adventures of the girl in passing from one self to the other, and her final release from the spells of her father, form an absorbing tale which, however, would have been made stronger if she could have mastered the impulse by her own strength of will instead of being released by her father's death.

Melvin Mayr as Alan Reed, the young doctor in love with Anna, who rescues her from physical as well as mental peril, is well taken by L. C. Shumway. Leila Parker acts the mother's spirit, which cannot always overcome the evil genius of the father. Malvin Mayr takes the father's part with good results to the picture. Leon D. Kent produced the play. Others in the cast are Adelaide Bronto, George Routh and George Merrell.

"THE UNBROKEN ROAD"

(Life Photo—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

A STORY of American political life, with a strongly dramatic situation, "The Unbroken Road" is a picture which will hold the attention of any audience. Besides the political features of the plot, the pathetic experience of Constance Turner, the heroine, will inspire both sympathy and admiration.

The leading role is a strongly emotional one, a fact which makes the selection of Mary Nash for it a fortunate choice. Miss Nash has enough screen successes to her credit to insure a satisfactory rendition of such a part.

The others in the cast are all well suited to their roles. Alexander Gaden is seen as John Radford, the governor, while Arthur Morrison has the important part of Charles Garvan, a politician. Others are William H. Tooker, Joseph Baker, Charles Graham, Thomas O'Keefe and Sue Balfour.

Constance is the ward of John Radford, and has a young girl's infatuation for him which he does not suspect. Later she is tricked by the son of a political boss into a mock marriage. When the youth's father hears of the affair he manages to have the girl sent to jail on a trumped-up charge of burglary.

Meantime, Radford has been elected Governor and pardons Constance, against the wishes of the boss, who promptly seeks to prevent his renomination. Another politician agrees to fight the boss and insure Radford's re-election if Constance will become his mistress. After the election the Governor shows the man that only sorrow can come from this, and realizing that his love is a clean one, he marries the girl.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Twelve)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS chapter, entitled "'Neath Iron Wheels," brings all the important characters of the serial back to America, this time on the Pacific coast. Quest had previously made Craig captive and when arriving in San Francisco, puts him in charge of an officer en route to New York.

But Fate again takes a hand. The train is wrecked and Craig makes his way to a camp of cowboys who are engaged in rounding up the cattle. He applies for the position of cook, and while not being a great success in the culinary art, he soon endears himself to the boys by playing the violin after the day's duties are over.

In fact he gains such a strong hold on the sympathies of the cattlemen, that when Quest comes to make him prisoner, they refuse to give him up. Instead they allow him to escape to Mexico.

Previous to this instalment the character of Craig has been delineated as bad and the character of the professor as good. Here a noticeable change takes place. Craig constantly pleading innocent, is steadily gaining the spectator's sympathy, while the sly and stealthy actions of the professor seem to stamp him as the perpetrator of the numerous crimes that have been committed during the preceding numbers of the story.

"IN THE PURPLE HILLS"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS picture to be released on May 24, is one of the better type of the old western drama, full of thrills and melodramatic action. The audience who used to flock to see this sort of a picture a few years ago will be interested in seeing what an improvement perfect photography and the use of modern effects make in the presentations of such a story.

As just one instance, the exterior night scenes are really taken after dark. The only lights used are those coming from the windows and doors of the adjacent cabins, and out of the semi-darkness can be seen flashes of rifles and revolvers.

A DIABOLICAL REVENGE

Joseph Galbraith in the role of Sheriff Crosby makes his debut to American films. His acting at all times is strong and of an excellent character. Vivian Rich as the heroine, Harry Von Meter in the character role of John Ogle and Jack Richardson as a villain, all perform their parts very ably.

The story serves to carry along a series of real thrills and will hold any audience in breathless attention.

Briefly it deals with the hatred of a western outlaw for a sheriff who captured him. Years later the outlaw escapes and plans a diabolical vengeance. While the sheriff is in town the escaped convict gags and ties his wife to a bench in front of a shot gun so arranged that the opening of the door on the sheriff's return will discharge the gun into his wife's body. After many moment's of suspense and a fierce hand-to-hand combat in which the enraged sheriff throws his enemy over a cliff, the audience will breathe a sigh of relief to find that the wife will recover.

The scenes are mostly exteriors, of beautiful western scenery, perfectly photographed. In addition, the whole production is well staged.

"THE HOUSE OF THE LOST COURT"

(Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

PERHAPS the most striking features of this picture are the originality of the plot, and the skill with which the suspense element has been introduced. When a man supposedly hanged some years before is seen living in a secret apartment in his own home it is bound to result in the closest attention, and a genuine interest in the incidents which have made this strange situation possible. Such is the situation of the principal in this picture.

The excellence of the story is accounted for by the fact that it is a dramatization of the novel of the same name by Mrs. C. M. Williamson. The thousands of readers of this book will be much pleased to see it on the screen.

The picture was made at the Edison studios under the direction of Charles J. Brabin. Gertrude McCoy appears as the unfortunate Elinore Vane, While Viola Dana makes charming Delores Edgerton. The emotional and weak-will Nina Desmond is played by Sally Crute. Robert Conness and Duncan McRae are seen as the Elliott brothers, the former being the one who escapes death so strangely.

Sir Anthony Elliott and Elinore Vane are secretly engaged, but during a visit his brother wins the girl's affections away and marries her. Nina has fallen in love with Anthony, who has saved her life. On the eve of his departure for America Nina openly begs Anthony to take her with him, but he refuses, since he has no affection for her. Meantime Elinore has decided to leave her brutal husband and comes to Anthony to ask also to go with him to America. In the stress of her emotion she kills herself with a paper cutter, and Nina, who has been in hiding during the call accuses Anthony of murder as a revenge.

The unfortunate man is sentenced to hang, but his mother gives him a vial of mysterious Oriental poison which produces the "sleep of death." He drinks it and is pronounced dead by the prison physicians. Taking him home his mother revives him and keeps him in a secret chamber in his manor house, now owned by his younger brother, who is living with Nina.

Delores Edgerton, an American girl, is living in the house which her family has leased, and accidentally stumbles on the hiding place of Sir Anthony. The two fall in love but the man's situation keeps him from speaking his mind. By cleverly playing on the jealousy of Nina, who sees that the younger brother has become infatuated with her, Delores leads to a statement which clears Sir Anthony and allows him to resume a normal mode of life. Then he tells the girl of his love, and there is a happy conclusion.

"THE QUARRY"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

THIS is the second of the Selig three reel diamond specials, and will be released on May 27.

Circumstantial evidence is made the theme of a strong drama. Its strength is partly due to the able acting of Frederick Hand in the role of Jim Montgomery and partly to the realistic stagings of the scenes. Wherever possible actual settings are used in developing the plot.

Jim Montgomery, a young mechanic, by purely circumstantial evidence, is convicted of a murder and sent to prison for life. His cell-mate, a hardened crook with a soft heart, aids him to escape by putting him into a box which is to be carted away.

Months pass and Jim disguised beyond recognition, is the superintendent of a large factory and engaged to the daughter of its owner. In the meantime, his old cell mate has been paroled in hopes that he will enable the police to locate Jim's hiding place.

He gets in touch with Jim and promises to find the man really guilty of the murder. His efforts meet with success and he brings forward the culprit in time for the grand climax, but not in time to save Jim's right hand, for at the appearance on the scene of the detective who had discovered Jim through following his mother, Jim plunges his hand into the machinery in order to escape recognition through his tell tale thumb prints which the police had in their possession. With a confession from the real murderer everything ends happily and Jim marries the girl he loves.

Frederick Hand in the leading role is supported by Grace Darmond as the daughter of the mill owner, William Wade as the crook and John Charles as the detective, and Mrs. A. C. Marston as Jim's mother.

"THE WRONG WOMAN"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THERE is a most unusual situation in this story. The characters first meet in India and later come together in England.

A jealous woman is victimized by an unscrupulous man with a result which is much more serious than either of them anticipated. There is enough of a story in the three reels to keep the interest at a high point throughout, besides several strongly dramatic climaxes.

The portion of the action which is supposed to take place on a lonely island in the middle of the ocean is most effectively played. Just the right effect is obtained without carrying things to the extreme often seen in an attempt to portray a desert island.

Mabel Trunelle is seen as the nurse who is changed by strange circumstances from a quiet law abiding and happy young woman to an impostor. George Wright is the villain, whose plans are responsible for the nurse's actions and for the misfortune of Ivy, who is played by Gladys Hullette.

A nurse in an Indian hospital discovers her doctor sweetheart making love to an English tourist to whom he shortly becomes engaged. This girl knowing nothing of the former relations of her lover and the nurse, asks the latter to go home on the same steamer on which she and the doctor are returning to England.

There is a wreck, and the three are stranded on an island. The nurse is told by the doctor that the other girl is dead, after they have quarrelled and she is left behind when they are rescued.

In England the nurse, at the suggestion of the doctor, claims the property of Ivy, who she pretends to be. As the real Ivy's uncle has never seen her she succeeds in her plan. Then Ivy herself appears on the scene after a strange rescue, and finally establishes her identity.

"ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Part Seven)

ALENE'S adventures after escaping from death in the old mill, led her almost to the poor-house. In trying to escape this fate she starts alone for the city, attempting to find Robert Dane, in the instalment entitled "Into the Night."

Clara and Gilbert Jerome thinking all their victims are dead, also start for the city, but their train is wrecked and Clara is killed. Gilbert, uninjured, goes to the city with the silver cup in his possession.

Florence Sackett as Clara gives a very fine impersonation of jealousy, hatred and vindictive revenge, especially in the mill scene where she pushes her victims down and then turns the water on full speed; but now her doom has come.

The train wreck is a wonderfully realistic piece of directing. Real reporters are used in the scene to interview the survivors of the wreck.

"ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Part Eight)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

WHILE Alene is carried to town by a kindly farmer, Robert Dane, by the irony of fate, has returned to Elmhurst seeking her, in the part entitled "In the Wolf's Den."

Gilbert Jerome meeting Alene almost secures her, but is balked by Daisy, a show girl who has had sad experiences of this villian.

Alene becomes a chorus girl while Daisy tries to help her find

ON THE THRESHOLD OF THE DEN

Robert Dane, deciding at last to seek him in his native town. With the show girl gone, Gilbert Jerome inveigles Alene to visit him, promising that Dane will be there. Alene discovering the silver cup asks indignantly why it was removed. Gilbert declaring he takes what he wants, drinks his wine from the cup and falls dead.

Mary Charleson improves with each reel, visualizing as well as acting the child woman with grace and pathos as well as skill. Jack Standing, always versatile, gives as finished an impersonation of the villian as though villians were all he did.

V-L-S-E MAKES POSTER COLLECTION

AS proof that the value of meritorious features increases with every showing of the film, the publicity department of the V-L-S-E is making a collection of posters gotten up by the different exhibitors throughout the country.

These posters are not a part of the regular V-L-S-E paper, but printed matter designed by progressive theatre managers announcing the return engagements for extended runs. In most cases the rebooked feature had previously appeared for two or more days in the same theatre, and the fact that special paper was prepared for its reappearance is pointed to as most convincing proof of the contention of the Big Four, that features of real dramatic value gain prestige by continued exhibitions.

These posters are being used by exhibitors in conjunction with the regular advertising matter for the features, and it is a notable fact that in every instance the length of the second run exceeds the original engagement.

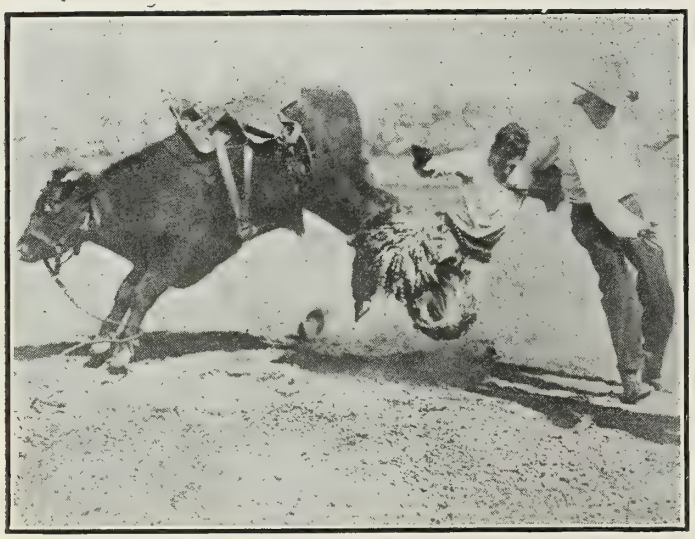
LIONEL BARRYMORE WILL STAR IN LOCKE PLAY

WHARTON, INC., the firm composed of Theodore and Leopold Wharton, which is producing "The Exploits of Elaine" for Pathé, will soon move its activities to Ithaca, N. Y., where a new studio has just been erected on Wharton Park.

A change will be made in the cast of the "Exploits," Lionel Barrymore being added. Edwin Arden leaves the "Exploits" to play in feature pictures for Pathé.

His first appearance will be in "The Beloved Vagabond," which Edward José is making from the novel of the same name by Edward J. Locke. Arnold Daly is returning, for a while anyway, to the legitimate stage, where he will be seen in Bernard Shaw revivals. Pearl White remains.

The nature of the "Exploits" will change from detective stories to society stories laid in high diplomatic circles.



"WHERE COWBOY IS KING"

(Lifeograph—U. B. O.—Two Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BOTH story and film have painted the life of the cowboy as containing a wealth of romance and fascination. But the ordinary yarn pivoting about the carefree westerner neglects to picture his open defiance of death.

The various startling feats of horsemanship performed in the most thrilling western dramas melt into insignificance when compared with the events caught by the camera of the American Lifeograph company. To be explicit, to the tenderfoot easterner and to all those who are not accustomed to life on the plains, this film presents a death defying spectacle in each and every scene.

THE END OF THE BULL-RIDE

The Pendelton, Ore., roundup is an annual event. Cowboys and cowgirls gather from the surrounding country to vie with one another in equestrian feats, which feats are punctuated now and then by the participants attempting to remain upright on a raging bull or buffalo. Curbing bucking bronchos is the sport which receives the greater portion of the space.

A stage coach race is presented in which one of the coaches completely overturns and again rights itself. Then the cowgirls' standing race, one foot on each horse, the trick riding of the men and the many novelty races invest the film with such a thrilling yet carefree aspect that the effect it will create can hardly be measured in cold type.

Pleasing photography brings the scenes out in a clear manner. It is only to be regretted that in a number of scenes, the cameraman, evidently over-anxious to catch every movement of the horse and would-be rider, has swerved his machine too suddenly, with the result that the picture is not firm in these places. But to atone for this pardonable fault are the many breath-taking stunts in the offering that are unharmed by any lack of strict technical observance.

"Where Cowboy Is King" deserves the same prominence in any house that it received in the New York Hippodrome, where it startled thousands for two weeks. Here it was termed a "short feature," a definition which it more than upheld in its giving the audience as much sensation entertainment within its short footage as the five reeler gave in a dramatic sense.

It is said that they own several features of their own and may possibly handle distribution of a program of features under that name, either produced by them or produced by other manufacturers.

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Eleven)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is much more spectacle in this number of "The Black Box" than individual acting. All the action takes place on a desert supposed to be in South Africa and there is nothing to betray the fact that in reality one of our own Western deserts is the actual locale. The scenes, well photographed, are expansive, stretching out as far as the eye can reach.

Several battles are engaged in between the piratical Mongar band of Arabs and other tribes, all of which are marked by daring feats of horsemanship. The excitement which these frays afford is considerable.

Due to these numerous encounters, the development of the story is not as rapid nor as great as is usually the case with each episode.

Craig, who has taken refuge with the Mongar tribe with which he is friendly, suddenly undergoes a change of heart. When Quest's party is about to be shot down by the ferocious members of the band, he intercedes, saying that Quest and the others are his friends.

The detective, Lenora, Laura and the professor are sheltered by the Mongar chief. That night Quest, taking advantage of the momentary confusion caused by a roaming lion, forces

THE ESCAPE OF GUEST AND HIS ASSISTANTS

Craig at the point of a gun to guide him and the rest of his party to the nearest center of civilization.

The professor still continues to appear guilty in the eyes of the spectator.

DESCRIBES HARTE STORIES IN FILMS

THE Overland Monthly, in recognition of the fact that Bret Harte was its first and most famous editor, prints in its June number a twelve-page article on the work now being done in turning his California stories into motion pictures.

Mrs. Josephine Clifford McCrackin, associate editor under Harte in the sixties, has written the account, "Bret Harte in the 'Movies,'" describing the productions finished and contemplated by the California Motion Picture Corporation. The article is handsomely illustrated with halftones from "Salomy Jane" and "The Lily of Poverty Flat."

JOHNSON IS NOT CRITICALLY ILL

ARTHUR V. JOHNSON, leading man and director with the Lubin Players, has been ill at his home in Philadelphia for the past two weeks. Many rumors got abroad that Johnson was so critically ill that he could only live a few days.

"Please tell my friends," said Johnson this week, "that I have had a nervous breakdown—not a very serious one. I have been working very hard for the past few years and have needed a vacation."

"THE PLUNDERER"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

HERE is a man's picture, virile and strong. Yet, just as much as the hero is a man's man, just so much, maybe more, he will appeal to women. William Farnum is Big Bill Matthews, the hero.

"The Plunderer" is a corking good picture; that may be stated arbitrarily without fear of contradiction. In addition to several exceptional characterizations it has a good story, and wonderful camera work and locations. In addition it is a picture produced with very fine motion picture technique. Edgar Lewis was the producer; Frank Kugler the camera man. Many times the locations alone were applauded at the invitation pre-release showing.

Big Bill Matthews and Dick Townsend are partners in the Croix D'Or mine, from which Bully Presby has been stealing for years. When the partners arrive to work the mine, Presby makes all sorts of trouble, dynamiting and so on. Matters are finally straightened out by the growth of a love affair between Dick and Joan Presby. Big Bill leaves the young folks happy and sets out in quest of Lillie Meredith, former proprietress of a dance hall.

Needless to say, Farnum is good. He has one of his rough-and-ready parts and takes a hand in a very fine fist fight with his usual delight. Harry Spingler, as Dick, William Riley Hatch, as Presby, and Claire Whitney, all acquit themselves well. Flavia Arcaro is Lillie Meredith. One of the most compelling parts is that of W. J. Gross, a wonderful type as the old engineer. Tom O'Keefe makes Dave Thompson, the strike inciter, conspicuous.

Words scarcely convey the strength of the outdoor atmosphere, the spirit of clean living and hard fighting, which pervades the entire picture. It is a portrayal of rugged times, done in a big, rugged, yet artistic way—and there you have the necessary ingredients.

"PRO PATRIA"

(Great Northern—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

RECENT developments have made war pictures more timely than ever, but such pictures must be good to meet with real success. "Pro Patria" is a film which, so far as one can judge from newspaper accounts, must depict military operations much as they have been during the past winter in Europe. There is a convincing atmosphere which makes many of the battle scenes and views of troops on the march seem to be portrayals of actual warfare.

Besides the ordinary element of a hero fighting for his country the picture brings out the thought that each side has its brave men, and that once the curse of war is over they can become friends in spite of what has passed. In this way the story suggests the popular Civil War situation of a Yankee officer and a Southern girl.

The scenic effects in the film are of unusual beauty and power. Broad rolling valleys and fir-clad hills with marching columns of men crossing them, and skirmishes taking place give the picture an element which is seldom to be found.

Eileen Wells is engaged to a military attache from a foreign country. War breaks out between her own nation and that of her fiance. Her father and brother go to the front while she goes along as a Red Cross nurse. A traitor makes a plan which will lead to the death of Eileen's father, but her sweetheart, hearing of it, sends her warning by a carrier pigeon which she has given to him. He thus saves the general's life. Later when the war is over he is nursed back to health by Eileen, once more being accepted as her lover.

A splendid series of battle scenes show the course of the war, while the daring exploit of Eileen's brother furnishes some effective portions.

MANITOBA CENSORS ACTIVE DURING APRIL

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Winnipeg, May 19.

J. W. HORNE and S. Clarke, censors for Manitoba, have reported that for the month of April 548½ reels were passed and 53½ condemned, making a total of 602. A whole half reel was lopped off from a certain film.

Out of 183 reels, 460 pieces were cut out for the following reasons: 28 suggestive, 94 sub-titles, 6 holdups, 10 murders, 3 drugging, 2 forgery, 5 stealing, 2 snake scenes, 10 letter, 3 suggestive of murder, 59 shooting, 13 fighting, 28 vulgar, 3 opening safe, 13 robberies, 13 holdups, 2 kidnapping, 3 blackmail, 10 cruelty, 24 threatening with gun, 17 suggested suicide, 11 German war scenes, 10 infidelity, 9 burglary, 5 hiding stolen goods, 10 threatening with knife, 15 gambling, 3 duels, 13 gruesome, 8 disgusting, 5 assault, 4 scenes showing bombs, 9 blasphemy, 1 suicide, 6 pocket picking, 3 boys smoking stolen cigarettes.

For the year ending April 30, 6,192½ reels were passed and 502½ were condemned by the censors, while 1,506 reels had 3,219 pieces eliminated for various reasons.

When this report was made to the license committee, Alderman Davidson, a member of Winnipeg's city council, suggested that the censors were too easy as regards allowing films to be shown, after having objectionable features cut out.

He believed that, if the censors condemned these reels entirely, the moving picture men would soon quit bringing objectionable reels into the city. Aldermen Milton and Davidson, and Frank Kerr, city license officer, were appointed a committee to investigate this phase further.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Avenging Sea." (Biograph. Mon., May 24.)—When the son of the man who had ruined his daughter came to the little fishing village and won the love of the girl who was unknown to him, the girl's grandfather dismissed the youth in a frenzy. That night they eloped in a small boat, but the sea saved them from themselves, and the next morning their bodies were on the beach. A strong drama with a decidedly unpleasant situation. Isabel Rea and Frank Newburg are the principals.

"Captain Fracasse." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., May 24.)—The novel of the same name by Theophile Gautier is the basis of this story. The drama is a fast moving one of the early eighteenth century in France. A penniless nobleman joins a troupe of strolling players in order to be near an actress with whom he is in love.

His marriage to her is made possible according to the standards of the day, when it is discovered that she is in reality the daughter of a nobleman. It also turns out that a fast scoundrel who has tried to ravish her is her brother. Vola Smith is seen as the girl, Isabell, while the title role is taken by Alan Hale.

"Gratitude." (Biograph. Thurs., May 27.)—This is a strong drama of a square gambler in the old days of the West. When two miners save him from lynching they think little of it, but later the man gives his life to save his friends from the loss of their gold dust. The three characters are played by Ivan Christy, Walter Coyle and Joseph McDermott.

"The Candidate's Past." (Biograph. Fri., May 28.)—A political boss seeks to discover something bad in the past of the reform candidate for mayor. He induces his sister to work in the man's office, and she discovers what appears to be a suspicious letter. When she discovers, after turning it over to her brother, that she has made a terrible mistake, she succeeds in recovering it before it can be used. After this she finds further happiness in the honest man's love. Charles Perley and Augusta Anderson are seen as the girl and the candidate.

"Truth Stranger Than Fiction." (Biograph. Sat., May 29.)—The title of this picture is an appropriate one since the events are supposed to be real, and they are much more than strange. The only weak point is the apparent reward which the broker gets for theft. In the cast are Charles H. West, Helen Bray, Harry Carey, Barney Furey and Claire McDowell.

"All Cooked Up." (Edison. Tues., May 25.)—A Wadsworth and Housman comedy in which these two able comedians appear in black face. They become members of a Black Hand gang, but their enthusiasm palls when they are chosen for a bomb throwing act. The bomb with its fuse burning causes much excitement, as no one seems to care for it. A well done and amusing comedy.

"The Man Who Could Not Sleep." (Edison. Wed., May 26.)—Marc Macdermott is seen in this picture as an unjust judge, who has an experience which makes him a kinder and wiser man. Refusing to listen to her plea that she has had no place to sleep and no sleep for three nights, the judge imposes on a woman a sentence of thirty days for vagrancy and impertinence to the court. She tells the judge that she hopes he will never sleep again. Three sleepless nights follow, and they result in changing the judge's view of life entirely.

"According to Their Lights." (Edison. Two reels. Fri., May 28.)—A story of business and the mountains of Virginia, in which moonshiners do their favorite stunt of shooting first and making inquiries afterwards.

Pat O'Malley appears as a young man sent to arrange the purchase of coal lands from an elderly Virginian. He falls in love with his daughter, who is played by Margaret Prussing. A member of a gang of moonshiners thinks the young man is trying to win the affection of his sweetheart, and is only too glad to spread the belief that he is a revenue officer.

He bitterly repents his folly when the mountain girl proves to be the only victim of the shooting. The picture has many beautiful scenes of just the right sort, since it was made in the Virginia mountains. Bessie Learn is seen as the unfortunate poor white girl.

"The Revenue Agent." (Essanay. Fri., May 21.)—G. M. Anderson, Marguerite Clayton and Lee Willard appear in this drama. A girl who saved the life of her lover, a revenue agent posing as a landscape artist, promises to marry a moonshiner when the latter discovers the revenue agent's identity and is about to kill him. The moonshiner, touched by the girl's devotion, decides not to extort the sacrifice and he goes out of her life.

"The Secret's Price." (Essanay. Mon., May 24.)—A drama acted by E. H. Calvert and Lillian Drew, showing how an invention to revolutionize modern warfare, left to a widow by her husband, saves the life of her son and brings her in touch with the man who truly loves her.

"Above the Abyss." (Essanay. Two acts. Tues., May 25.)—Richard C. Travers and Ruth Stonehouse, assisted by a good cast, play this drama. The unfaithful wife of a struggling artist kills herself and the man for whom she had deserted her husband, thereby preventing the same man from ruining the life of an innocent girl whom her husband had grown to love, and also clearing the way for the marriage of this girl and her husband.

"Dreamy Dud." (Essanay. Wed., May 26.)—Dud, with Wag, his faithful dog, visits the zoo, where all the animals vie in picking on them. Many other ludicrous situations make up this reel, which ends with Dud's awakening to find it was all a dream.

"A Bunch of Matches." (Essanay. Thurs., May 27.)—A comedy dealing with old Daddy's efforts to keep the suitors away from his four beautiful daughters. A merry widow comes along, distracting daddy's attentions. The girls and boys make the most of their opportunities and run away to get married.

"The Bachelor's Burglar." (Essanay. Fri., May 28.)—A girl reporter sent to obtain a story on the escapades of a rich bachelor, breaks into his house. The bachelor discovers her and calls the police, but she turns the tables by having him arrested as a burglar. G. M. Anderson is featured, assisted by Marguerite Clayton.

"Vengeance." (Essanay. Three acts. Sat., May 29.)—A prize mystery play produced in conjunction with a story that will appear in the June "Ladies' World." Richard C. Travers and Edna Mayo play the leads, assisted by a good cast. It is a drama of political intrigue, with a love story running through the plot. After many complications and misunderstandings, a corrupt boss is defeated and driven to end his life. The better element wins good government and the hero wins the girl he loves.

"Rivals." (Kalem. Two reels. Mon., May 24.)—Rivals in love and antagonists in battle through the length of our Civil War are the two men in this story. The Northerner, who is likewise the hero, finally successfully overcomes the villainous intrigue of his enemy, thus winning a battle and the girl besides.

This picture was produced by Guy Coombs and is interesting at times, in the love scenes and in the battle scenes, quite a number of which are portrayed, with the assistance of only a few extras. The ending of the picture is rather abrupt and not quite clear. The scene in which the Confederates attack the train is well done.

Filling out the second reel are two short subjects, "A Strange Pet," which illustrates the wilful ways of a tame walrus, and "Among the Snow Clad Hills of Norway," showing the snowing in and the digging out of a train in the country referred to. These subjects are most interesting.

"The Figure in Black." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., May 26.)—A number of robberies having been committed in a hotel, the severest loser sends for a detective, who, aided by his assistant, discovers that the thief is the hotel sleuth.

—This is very interesting all the time as the culprit is hardly suspected until his discovery by the detective. In order to fill out the two reels a great amount of attention has been paid to detail; especially so is this true in regard to the lobby of the hotel, which is most realistic.

While really undeserving two thousand feet of film, this story is made interesting all the time by careful producing and well developed situations. As a detective play it can be ranked with those better than the average.

"Ham, the Detective." (Kalem. Tues., May 25.)—You can imagine how foolishly funny Ham and his assistant Bud make this reel. As detectives they bungle things up in a general way, but succeed in some miraculous manner in bringing the leader of the desperadoes to bay. A good bit of this is funny, enough of it in fact to rank it with the better burlesques. Yet some of it is overdrawn a bit. However, there are laughs thick and fast throughout the reel, and for a farce-comedy it is most acceptable.

"Matilda's Legacy." (Lubin. One reel. Tues., May 25.)—The conventional situations of all slapstick comedies are here presented once more with the resultant hilarity that accompanies such scenes in the neighborhood theatres.

While Fatty and Stubbs are fighting for the hand of Kitty, the village coquette, a board thrown promiscuously hits Seth, the village justice of the peace, and thus trouble is brewed. The justice begins a campaign of reprisal, which, however, instead of reaching the culprits, involves the old maid of the village.

A sudden fortune for her causes suitors to flock to her door, but Seth outwits them all and gains the money (with the lady thrown in) as his portion. The well-known cast includes Mae Hotely, Ed Lawrence, Jerold T. Hevener, Oliver Hardy.

"Nobody Would Believe." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., May 28.)—It is highly sensational, but interesting withal. It tells the story of a reporter, disguised as a country girl, going into the underworld for proof. Her adventures there result in her being almost caught by the white slavers, but she is rescued by two men, both in love with her. In this attempt, the thug heroically saves the girl and the man while losing his own life. The editor will not publish the story for fear "nobody would believe" it. The film is full of thrills for the spectator, with a happy finale.

"Out for a Stroll." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., May 29.)—This comedy was written just for Billy Reeves by Arthur Hotaling. While Reeves is as funny as ever, it seems a pity that a prize fight should be his vehicle just two weeks apart. We would now like to see what justice he could do to other situations. He is capably assisted in his fun making by Bill Polter, Mae Hotely and Patsy De Forest.

"Light o' Love." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., May 24.)—A drama of a fishing village with some attractive seashore settings. Joe and Walt, sons of a retired sea captain, are in love with Beth, the belle of the fishing village. Joe becomes engaged to her and leaves as mate of a sailing vessel. In a nearby port he is ensnared by a man and a woman engaged in smuggling and becomes infatuated with the woman. His sweetheart remains faithful during his long absence until he is captured by an inspector after he had escaped and returned home.

"Two Brothers and a Girl." (Selig. Tues., May 15.—A drama written and produced by Burton L. King, in which one of two brothers who are camping in the mountains saves a girl's life. Both fall in love with her, and she promises to marry her rescuer. He gives her up, however, when he finds she loves the other and is accepting him out of gratitude.

"Mother's Birthday." (Selig. Wed., May 26.)—A mother asks her two married children to dinner on her birthday. They send presents, but both decline on account of other engagements, much to their mother's disappointment. They meet and at the last moment become conscience stricken and decide to surprise her. She is delighted; tears of sorrow changing to tears of joy.

"The Quarry." (Selig. Three reels. Thurs., May 27.)—Reviewed at length in another section of this issue.

"In the Amazon Jungle." (Selig. Sat., May 29.)—A jungle zoo picture laid in the wilds of South America. A young Spaniard and a Spanish half-breed, both in love with the same girl, go on a rubber hunting expedition far up the Amazon. The Spaniard is seized with fever and the half-breed treacherously deserts him. Later he recovers and saves the half-breed's life from the attack of a jaguar.

"Cupid Puts One Over on the Shatchen." (Vitagraph. Fri., May 21.)—This is a Jewish comedy in which a marriage broker, or "shatchen," is delegated to bring a young couple together. Meantime they have fallen in love and eloped, to the dismay of their parents. This familiar story is given a novel twist by its treatment. Wally Van and Nitra Frazer are seen as the Jewish lovers.

"The Starring of Flora Finchurch." (Vitagraph. Fri., May 28.)—When Flora inherits $5,000 she forgets her country sweetheart and starts out to carve a brilliant theatrical career for herself. While the money lasts she manages to keep the show going, but soon finds herself out of funds and an object of ridicule. Then Hirum comes to the rescue. A rather amusing comedy with some clever scenes. Flora Finch and Jay Dwiggins are featured.

"Jane Was Worth It." (Vitagraph. Two reels. Sat., May 29.)—Edith Storey and Hughie Mack are the characters in this pleasing comedy drama. An eccentric bachelor discharges his cook because she does not like his cat. Then he realizes what a fine cook she was and how hard such persons are to find. Meantime the country girl has studied the art of beauty culture so successfully that when the bachelor again meets her he is glad to have her accept his proposal of marriage.

"Mr. Jarr Visits His Home Town." (Vitagraph. Mon., May 24.)—The eighth of the Jarr Family series. This film continues the sprightly and novel adventures of this amusing family. Mr. Jarr takes his wife and small boy to visit his home town, expecting to have a fine time.

His plans, as usual, do not work out as he wishes. A bear escapes from an old Italian about the same time that Jarr starts for a masquerade dance in a bearskin costume. On account of a poor fit he has been sewn into the outfit, and the result is both terrifying and ludicrous. The usual cast is seen.

"The Story of a Glove." (Vitagraph. Wed., May 26.)—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are featured in this clever comedy. Mr. Huggins departs for his annual college reunion dinner, and thinking to remind him of his promise to return home early, his wife puts one of her gloves in his pocket. When he finally does arrive he suddenly discovers the glove, and goes through an elaborate explanation of its presence in his pocket. After it is over his wife shows him that she put the glove there and that it is one of her own. Huggins, however, insists that he will stick to his story.

"Hilda of the Slums." (Vitagraph. Thurs., May 27.)—A girl of natural refinement lives in the slums, and is constantly battling with her environment. Finally her chance comes when she saves the money and probably the life of a western rancher who is attacked by a gang. Through this adventure she finds a love which lifts her from her unhappy life to one in which she belongs. A good drama though not particularly novel. Natalie De Lontan is seen in the title role, and George Stanley as the young rancher.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"A Human Hound's Triumph." (Keystone. Sat., May 8.)—A summer boarding house scramble, participated in by a crook, a disguised detective and two lovers. An elopement causes a violent chase in the end, in which a horse, automobile and motorcycle figure prominently, and in which sidesplitting and daring deeds are performed. A truly uproarious picture with Mack Swain, Harry McCoy and a very pretty girl in the cast. Nothing at all suggestive.

"Crossed Love and Swords." (Keystone. Mon., May 10.)—Ferocious rivalry is responsible for a pile of fun in this reel. The water scenes in which both the men are bent on rescuing the heroine's white poodle, adrift on a board, and in which they risk the sharp teeth of the crocodiles, are most humorous. Louise Fazenda is the heroine, and two most accomplished gentlemen play the other principal parts.

"Ferdie Fink's Flirtations." (Falstaff. Fri., May 14.)—An old bachelor who has a good time with all the young girls in the town finds that none want to marry him when he accumulates his pile. Following this he has an adventure in the city, in which he takes a window cleaner on the ninth floor of a hotel for a maiden in distress. This won't give much amusement as it is poorly introduced and largely padded.

"Mike's Elopement." (Reliance. Fri., May 14.)—Inspired by a story a little boy elopes with a girl playmate, but a band of gypsies they meet cause the proceeding to cease. A fair comedy drama, containing sound child psychology. The leads are juveniles.

"Ethel's Romance." (Komic. Sun., May 16.)—After Ethel has experienced a falling out with her "regular feller," Bill, the office boy, dreams that he proposes and is accepted, but he wakes up to find that the two lovers have made up. There is much that is funny in this reel, which well upholds the excellent standard of the "Bill" series.

HOW DO THE NEWSPAPERS OF YOUR TOWN STAND IN REGARD TO CENSORSHIP? SEE PAGE 36

"When Cameron Passed By." (Reliance. Mon., May 17.)—There is plenty of action in this picture, although the story seems to be more than improbable. A chance passerby sees a girl pursued by a suspicious character. His investigations result in saving her from a forced marriage with one of a band of crooks. Some lively fighting is necessary before he accomplishes this. In the cast are William Williams, Gladdie McDonald, Alfred Krantz and William R. Randall.

"The Electric Alarm." (Majestic. Tues., May 18.)—A young electrician, seeing a railroad trestle blazing just before a train is due, uses his arms to complete the connection in a fire alarm system which he is installing. The shock nearly causes his death, but on recovery he gets a reward from the railroad company. In the cast are Charles Gorman and Lillian Webster.

"Grigley's Wife." (Reliance. Wed., May 19.)—This is a drama of the old West. A visitor in town makes love to a married woman during her husband's absence, and her mother-in-law suspecting that there is trouble brewing sends for the husband. He arrives just in time to see his wife order the man from the house at the point of a gun. After making him drink a toast to "The best and truest wife a man ever had," he sends the coward on his way. Claire Anderson, Alfred Paget and M. C. Allen compose the cast.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 20." (Thurs., May 20.)—The Atlantic fleet drops anchor in the Hudson River; a picture of Elbert Hubbard, who went down with the "Lusitania;" and the war news comprise the most widely interesting scenes in this number. Domestic occurrences of localized interest complete the reel.

"The House That Jack Moved." (Falstaff. Fri., May 21.)—The old political ring attempts to prevent the reformed candidate from running for mayor by changing the city lines, but the young man, informed of their plan by the newspaper owner's daughter, has his house moved, thus discounting their scheme. This contains a good idea, but it is hardly well enough produced to create much laughter. Mignon Anderson and Arthur Ashley are the principals.

"The Refugee." (Thanhouser. Fri., May 21.)—This reel gives an utterly meaningless appearance. A lady traveling on board ship sees the curtain stir in the corner of her room, and thinking a burglar is the cause, summons help. A Frenchman and a German come to her aid and discover the "burglar" is a Belgian refugee. Then follows a story of the manner in which his home was destroyed and the Frenchman and the German look daggers at one another. This is neither funny nor entertaining in a dramatic sense.

"The Huron Converts." (Reliance. Two reels. Sat., May 22.)—Showing the manner in which a Jesuit priest converted a hostile tribe of uncivilized Indians to the Christian belief. A very high class offering, which departs considerably from the beaten path and offers innumerable opportunities for deep thought. Dark Cloud is in the cast. The photography and scenes in this are excellent.

"The Daughter of Kings." (Thanhouser. Sun., May 23.)—An American girl succeeds in completely taking in an English fop, who wants to marry a princess. An abruptly terminating comedy which leaves the conclusion to the imagination. Yet withal it contains some good comedy moments which will allow the entire reel to register a hit. Marguerite Snow and Harry Benham play the leads.

"In the Purple Hills." (American. Two reels. Mon., May 24.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Stay at Homes." (Beauty. Tues., May 25.)—A mutual love for books brings Arthur and Helen together and develops into a love for each other. Both are book worms, and though neighbors, they did not know of each other's existence until a burglar incident acquainted them with the romantic possibilities which lay outside of fiction. Webster Campbell and Neva Gerber play the leads.

"The Reprisal." (American. Wed., May 26.)—A political drama in which the daughter of a corrupt judge saves her sweetheart, the editor of a paper standing for clean politics, from a plot planned by her father to force the editor into suppressing news of a grand jury investigation. Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood assume the principal roles.

"Shorty's Troubled Sleep." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., May 26.)—Shorty misbehaves himself in the town pool parlor and is thrown out. He takes refuge in a prairie schooner, which happens to belong to the stage driver, whose daughter is just starting for the next town with a large shipment of gold. When the wagon is attacked by bandits, Short finds himself forced into the position of playing hero and he saves the day with great gusto.

Shorty Hamilton continues on his glorious way as Shorty, and Elizabeth Burbridge is the girl. Jack Nelson is also in the cast. In its entirety the picture is an excellent comedy, the plot is quite funny, but the situations combined with Shorty's personality put the picture over. The scenes which take place about the pool table, on which trick balls are in use are simply uproarious.

"Hostage of the North." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., May 27.)—An old man who has spent the last thirty years of his life in the Alaskan gold fields, gives his meagre pile to a widow that she may take her child back to civilization. This is a sympathetic subject but from the amount of obvious padding that appears, it seems as if it would make a better one reel offering. The scenes and photography are fine. Walter Edwards is the old man, Leona Hutton the woman and Howard Hickman her short lived husband.

"Her Easter Hat." (Kay-Bee. two reels. Fri., May 28.)—When the father, who mistreats his daughter severely, sees how much she cares for him by her act in protecting him from burglars, he relents and grants her every desire. The locale of this is a coast town and the characters are mainly fisher-folk—habitues of the place.

The various types that are introduced, including the peddler and the father of the girl are realistically drawn, and the correct atmosphere is always conveyed to the mind. The scenes are all characteristic, some of them very beautiful, the last particularly so. There is plenty of action to the two reels, and the story always holds the interest.

"Microscopic Marvels of Fresh Water." (Pathé. Split reel.)—Besides picturing a number of the more interesting forms of minute organisms found in fresh water pools the film shows the methods used to obtain the views.

"Baby's Trumpet." (Pathé. One reel.)—An amusing comedy of an infant terrible, who makes life unhappy for many by the use of a toy trumpet.

"A Stone Age Adventure." (Pathé. Three-quarter reel.)—There is no question about this being one of the funniest and most original animated cartoons yet seen on the screen. At the opening, a stone age man is seen driving along peacefully in his dinosaur cart. A huge beast suddenly appears and pursues.

Just as he catches the hapless cave man, a great flying lizard picks the huge beast up by the tai' and flies away with him. After being dropped in the water the animal returns and captures the cave man again. An amusing series of adventures follow. The cartoon is remarkably well done both from an artistic and a mechanical standpoint. The reel is completed by a short film called "How Building Stone Is Quarried."

"Stock Farming." Pathé. Split reel.)—An Argentine ranch is well depicted in this picture. Although things are conducted on a large scale there seems to be a lack of the "wild and woolly" element of the great Western ranches of the old days in this country.

"Madura and Its Pagodas." (Pathé. Split reel.)—A colored travel picture showing some of the remarkable sights about this Indian city.

"The Falls and Rapids of Swasamundram." (Pathe. Split reel.)—A finely toned scenic picture showing views of a little known river in India. A waterfall view is as remarkable as it is beautiful.

"Tricks of Fate." (Balboa. Two reels.)—Good double exposure and excellent acting mark this drama. An elderly and wealthy couple adopt a baby, who is left at their door. When she is a young woman the truth accidentally comes out, and feeling that she has no right to marry the man she loves she leaves home for the concert stage.

She makes a rapid success as a violinist, but a blackmailer who knows something of her past tells her that she is the daughter of her own mulatto maid. The real facts in the case are then discovered and show that her father and mother both dying on the same day the mulatto had stolen the girl baby and put it on the door-step in order to prevent it from being sent to an institution. Thus encouraged the girl accepts her lover and goes home to a joyful reunion.

"Whiffles Has the Gout." (Pathé. One reel.) This is an amusing comedy from the French studios of Pathé. Whiffles has an attack of the gout, and suffers many agonies in attempting a cure. He finally overcomes the trouble and is once more a happy man.

"An Official Lapse." (Pathe. One reel.)—This is an amusing comedy from the French studios of Pathe. A police chief receives a warning that a noted criminal is probably in his vicinity, and that he must keep a sharp lookout. The crook disguises himself as a woman and amuses himself by flirting with the impressionable police officer.

"Pathe News, No. 25."—Vincent Astor's new hydroaeroplane is given a tryout at Marblehead, Mass.; the U. S. torpedo destroyer Wadsworth is launched at Bath, Me.; war news and latest fashions are welcome. The J. R. Bray cartoon is unusually funny. A different supplement of events makes up the reel, varying for each section of the country.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly, No. 167." (Wed., May 19.)—Various views in connection with the Atlantic fleet, anchored in the Hudson River, and an unusually interesting supply of war news, are given the lion's share of film in this number. The other topics have to do with domestic events gathered from all quarters of the United States, while Hy Mayer's cartoons put an end to the reel.

"The Old Doctor." (Big U. Two reels. Sun., May 23.)—Ben Cohn, who prepared this story for Murdock Mac Quarrie's Company, has furnished the versatile character lead of the Universal studios with a part in which he is given plenty of opportunities to register his most effective work.

Mr. Mac Quarrie well knows how to play the title role, the benevolent, kind and charitable doctor of a country village. It is a character drawn and interpreted with consummate skill, a character which makes the picture most enjoyable.

While the plot of the story is nothing remarkable and is even at times inconsistent, the entire picture will please, due to the work of Mr. Mac Quarrie. His support might have been better in regard to the young doctor and his fiancee.

This young man invades the village and evidently attempts to revolutionize the medical methods of the town, for a time meeting with success, but his eyes are opened when the girl he loves is taken ill with a malady, over which he is powerless to effect a cure.

The old doctor is called in, and the girl regains her health. Thereafter the younger man resolves to respect the opinions and advice of his more experienced brother practitioner.

"One Kind of a Friend." (Laemmle. Sun., May 23.)—The civil engineer, who is at work in India, becomes half crazed with drink and heat, and mistreats his wife so that she decides to leave him.

It is only after the wise counsel of a friend that she returns to her husband, who by her action, resolves to live a cleaner life. There is little that is pleasing in the drunken gyrations of Francis Ford. The attempted Indian atmosphere is rather poor. Mr. Ford can do better than this, much better.

"A Witch of Salem Town." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., May 24.)—Because she employed herbs in effecting the cure of a girl whose recovery had been regarded as hopeless, the homeless girl of Salem is burned at the stake. This drama is laid in the old Puritan days, a period not often portrayed in films, which combined with the freshness of the story in the world of pictures, makes it most enjoyable.

Mary Fuller has a role which she is thoroughly capable of rendering effectively as the misrepresented girl. Matt Moore, Curtis Benton and Miss Hunter also have important parts. Lucius Henderson directed the work, and has made a picture which should do credit to the program of any house.

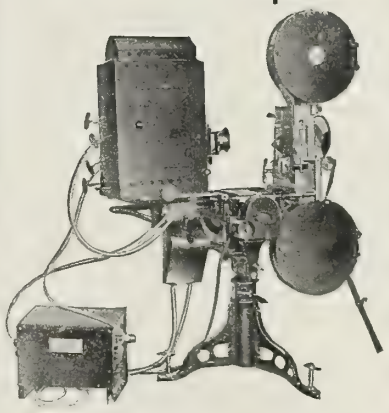
"Fifty-Fifty." (Imp. Mon., May 24.)—The soda clerk in a department store is accused by a customer of stealing her purse, but with the aid of the girl at the candy counter he manages to exonerate himself. King Baggot and Jane Gail are the leads in this comedy, which will heartily amuse.

Strictly speaking it is not a technically good picture, as many of the funny situations have nothing whatsoever to do with the plot proper, but it makes one laugh—which is the main thing. Mr. Baggot sleeping in a bed room fixed up in the window of a department store, and being caught there by the passers-by the next morning is a most humorous bit.

"Hiram's Inheritance." (Joker. Mon., May 24.)—The old maid learns that one of her suitors is to inherit five thousand dollars, so she marries him. Later she flirts with the former suitor, but matters are adjusted happily.

Allen Curtis produced this with a cast including Max Asher, William Franey, Gale Henry and Lillian Peacock, the two first mentioned principals being responsible for most of the laughs in the reel. The picture is just a little too dirty to be enjoyable in some scenes, and there are some others which follow a very familiar plan of slapstick action but in toto the comedy is good, and should be received well.

"Shattered Memories." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., May 25.)—A Memorial Day drama not yet seen for review.



"When Her Idol Fell." (Nestor. Tues., May 25.)—Mrs. Newlywed falls head over heels in love with a great violinist until she discovers he is married, and then she decides that her husband is good enough. There is a lot of humor in this, well brought out by the cast, which was directed by Al Christie.

Lee Moran makes a most comical figure out of the violinist, while Victoria Forde as the infatuated wife and Eddie Lyons as the exasperated husband complete the cast of principals. This ought to take in any house, as there is nothing dirty or vulgar in the reel, and its situations and characters are very comical.

"Trickery." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., May 26.)—The old father desires his son to marry his ward. The family doctor also loves this girl, and introduces the son to an adventuress, with whom he falls violently in love. Afterwards the doctor seeing the sorrow he has brought to the old man, and meeting with no success in his suit with the girl, succeeds in in-

THE MASTER MODEL

Here is a letter worth reading from the Happy Hour Picture Show, of Lockwood, Mo.:

"We have been using the STANDARD for nearly five years and it is still giving us perfect satisfaction. It gives us the nearest to a flickerless picture that can be put on by any picture machine. In fact, it is better in that respect than any other one we have ever seen.

"We once had a special run of films and the owner who had been on the road with them for six months stated our machine put on the plainest and best picture he ever saw since he had been on the road. It has the best adjustment for the arc light, is smooth in operation and can run almost any kind of a film, even the old junkers with only one side with perforations.

"Our only expense for the time we have had it is ten cents for repairs. And when we make a change it will only be for the later model STANDARD."

ducing the son to reconcile himself with the family, by showing the adventuress in her true colors.

This was enacted by Frank Lloyd's company with a cast including Mr. Lloyd, M. K. Wilson, Helen Leslie and Marc Robbins. It is a cleverly conceived story and should please those who like dramas dealing with the intrigue of an imaginary social set.

"Broken Hearts and Pledges." (L.-Ko. Wed., May 26.)—Rivals in love are the causes for a great bit of confusion in this strenuous slapstick. Hank Mann has the principal part and is uproariously funny in those scenes in which he appears, which scenes are not numerous enough. Others in the cast are Neal Burns, Gertrude Selby and Peggy Pearce. Aside from the fact that there is a little too much tumbling this reel is most acceptable.

"The Trail of the Upper Yukon." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., May 27.)—After an almost interminable amount of seemingly useless dickering the boss of an Alaskan town marries a dance hall girl, whose character is rather questionable. There are few redeeming features to this picture.

From the poor continuity of scenes it is reasonable to say that it was directed poorly. Besides the atmosphere of the north has not been brought into the film. The story is weak and ineffectually padded. The action even contradicts itself. The picture is a melodrama and as an example of modern picture melodrama it is very poor. Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joseph Girard are in the cast.

"The Memory Tree." (Big U. Thurs., May 27.)—Two old veterans, members of the opposing armies in the Civil War are enemies, largely through an unhappy love affair. At length the Union man is prevailed upon to ask the other for forgiveness.

He goes to the southerner's house, but discovers that he has passed away. The final scenes in this are most sympathetic. The story, however, is rather poor in construction. It also disregards noticeable details which should have been attended to. Charles Ogle is in the cast.

"Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in the Great Egg Robbery." (Powers. Thurs., May 27.)—This comedy is labeled "Episode No. 1," the first of a series, which judging by this, gives promise of being unusually uproarious. It is by all odds one of the best comedies that Allen Curtis has produced.

Original actions performed by the players, the funny plot, which is a burlesque on a number of serials, and the presence of the reorganized Joker company all help it on to success. Gale Henry is seen as Lady Baffles, Max Asher as the detective, William Franey as the chief of police. There are laughs all the way through this reel.

"You Can't Always Tell." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., May 28.)—A drama with Violet Mersereau and William Garwood, not yet seen for review.

"The Nightmare of a Movie Fan." (Victor. Fri., May 28.)—The young girl idolizes a motion picture star, until in her dream she discovers that he is completely under the thumb of his director.

A very good comedy except for the fact that a few of the incidents of the story are none too clearly put. Interesting glimpses of several directors working in Universal City are afforded the spectator. Beatrice Van is the girl, while Charles Giblyn, also the director, is her idol.

"With Father's Help." (Nestor. Fri., May 28.)—The choices of daughter, father and mother, for a husband, and son-in-law are not identical, but daughter fools her parents completely and marries the man she desires. Old but quite funny. Al Christie produced it. Billie Rhodes plays the girl, and Jack Dillon her lover. Others in the cast are Harry Rattenberry, Stella Adams, Harry Lyons and Neal Burns.

"The Pursuit Eternal." (Imp. Two reels. Sat., May 29.)—A young girl tired of the prosaic life, sees a man with whom she falls in love.

In order to meet him she evolves a plan with her father, brother and friends whereby she is captured by a black masked trio right in the sight of the man. He comes to the rescue, and has to undergo many a trying ordeal before he realizes the joke is on himself. However, he finds himself in love with the girl and all ends happily.

This is an unconventional subject and more than likely to please. It has been produced very well and although slightly illogical, even for its particular kind of drama, it will create a great amount of interest. The photography is most acceptable. Frances Nelson and Curtis Benton are the principals.

"The Amber Vase." (Powers. Sat., May 29.)—The old story of a man—in this case an artist—who refuses to give a girl thief up to the police when she enters his apartment with intent to rob. Instead he passes her off as his model, being fascinated by her. Sydney Ayres and Doris Pawn are the principals in this drama, which will only afford fair entertainment.

"No Soup." (Joker. Sat., May 29.)—The American consul in some province of darkest Africa by rescuing a dog belonging to the daughter of a missionary from the butcher, who is the richest man in the region, wins her heart. A comedy written by Archer McMakin and Roy McCray and produced by Mr. McCray.

Its power as a comedy relies on the ridiculously drawn characters, more than the plot, which is of slight consequence. The combination of the burlesqued African natives and their racial actions adds materially to the film's humorous value. Ernest Shields is the consul. Others in the cast are Ed. Boland and Queenie Rosson.

"A Modern Enoch Arden." (Big U. Three reels. Sun., May 30.)—The girl marries a man she does not love to please her father. Her husbands turns out to be brutal. One day in a rage he kills her father. He leaves evidence that he has committed suicide and departs for the West. After a time the girl marries the man she loves. On the return of the other man, who breaks into her house like a burglar she kills him.

A melodrama that will afford fair interest. It is rather crude, and is produced none too well, but for exhibitors who cater to the lovers of the morbid, it will do very well. Adele Lane appears as the girl, William Dowlan as the man she loves and Edward Sloman as the cruel husband. The scenes and photography are good.

"Their Golden Wedding." (Laemmle. Sun., May 30.)—The old stage door keeper because of pride lets his wife think that he is still the leading man in "The Old Homestead." On their wedding anniversary she determines to surprise him by visiting the theatre. It so happens that on that night the leading man of the company is injured by a fall and the old man is called upon to assume his old role.

This was produced by Frank Lloyd and contains a wealth of heart-interest scenes. Charles (Daddy) Manley and Mrs. Benson are the two leads and render such sympathetic performances throughout the picture that it will surely be greatly appreciated by all who see it. More pictures of this variety would be welcomed.

V-L-S-E OPENS EXCHANGE AT SAN FRANCISCO

THE Big Four, as California exhibitors insist on calling the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., has taken over the entire upper floor of a large building at 986 Market street, San Francisco, and this is being fitted up with all possible speed.

Office equipment has already been installed and business will be transacted while partitions and permanent fixtures are being placed in position. This exchange is located just above the Mechanics building and Pantages theatre building, where several other exchanges are housed, and is but a short distance from the other leading exchanges of the city.

Much attention has been given to its arrangement and appointments by District Manager C. B. Price and local Manager R. Quive. Work on other coast exchanges is being commenced and managers for these are now being chosen. Tom North, formerly manager for the George Kleine attractions, with headquarters at San Francisco, will shortly take charge of the Portland branch.

ALL-CELTIC PLAYERS ESCAPE INJURY IN AUTO SPILL

LAST week President Charles O'Hara of the All-Celtic Company, and creator of the Peaceful Rafferty series of films now being produced by that company, together with Director J. A. Fitzgerald, and a company of players, and Business Manager Gene Teichnor, went over to Centerport, L. I., to make some scenes for a forthcoming release, "Rafferty at the Hotel DeRest."

On the way back the steering gear on the machine went wrong and the chauffeur after vainly trying to right the car shouted for all hands to jump. But they were so tightly jammed together in the car that it was almost impossible to jump and the chauffeur seeing this informed them that he was going to run the machine into a tree and to prepare for the shock.

They did, and just as the machine left the road a Ford filled with children came directly in their path, and for a moment it looked like certain death for the children, for there was no way of stopping the car or guiding it. It was with great presence of mind that the chauffeur succeeded in bumping them safely against a tree. The big tree was smashed to pieces and fortunately all of the occupants escaped without injury.

THE ASYLUM'S BOXING CHAMPION (RAFFERTY STOPS A MARATHON RUNNER—ALL CELTIC)

Bridge Tender Is "Left Hand Hero" in Edison Scene

Candidate for Leather Medal in Boob Contest Almost Spoils Director Nowland's Big Episode in "McQuade" by Stubborn Opposition

"THE Timidity of Bridge Tender 917" would be an appropriate title for the impromptu drama staged on the Boston Post road, on May 14. Director Eugene Nowland, of the Edison company, had planned to put the grand climax on a thrilling picture to be known as "McQuade of the Traffic Squad."

Owing to the stubborn nature of the above mentioned bridge tender the climax was suddenly altered, but the change was merely from a muddy stream to a strawberry field as the ultimate landing place of a runaway automobile. So there will be a thrilling scene for future audiences, thanks to Mr. Nowland's refusal to be thwarted.

The original scheme called for the automobile to dash down an incline leading to the abutment of an old bridge. A plunge into the murky waters of Eastchester creek would be the inevitable result. Bridge tender 917 had watched the preliminary arrangements without a protest, but just before the time to start he lost his nerve and an illtimed telephone message so tied things up in red-tape that a sudden change was necessary.

The representatives of the various trade papers could hardly complain since the postponement led to a lunch at a nearby roadhouse, with Frank Bannon as the genial host. Pat O'Malley, who was slated to ride in the car, was among the hearty eaters, and seemed little worried by the future. His confidence as well as that of James Hardin and William Fables proved to be well founded.

In order to insure the proper thrills Mr. Nowland had a fence constructed at the turn in the road nearest the forbidden bridge. With its three occupants the automobile dashed through the fence and down over a rocky bank into a peaceful strawberry plantation. Magnesium pots gave the desired effect of an explosion, and the climax was done. Because the car did not completely upset the three plucky actors insisted that there be a retake, but Mr. Nowland was satisfied with the scene, and probable suicide was avoided.

Frank Bannon, of the Edison company, was the admiral of the dreadnought motor car which took the trade paper representatives to the scene and back. In the party were Lynde Dennig, Horace Fuld, Miss Smith and John Semler, and Charles Condon, as well as the representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

MOTION PICTURES ON PULLMAN TRAINS MAY BECOME GENERAL

If the present plans of the Pennsylvania Railroad materialize some of their transcontinental flyers will soon be equipped with facilities for showing motion pictures to relieve the monotony of long runs.

The Cameoscope corporation recently gave a demonstration in a Pullman smoker of the adaptability of their projection machine to showing the pictures. Dr. Done Stuart gave a lecture to those present and brought out very forcibly the advantages of moving pictures en route.

The demonstration was given in broad daylight and the pictures were remarkably clear. The compactness and simplicity of the Cameoscope make it peculiarly efficient for this sort of projection where conditions necessitate mobility of apparatus.

The demonstration showed how easily motion pictures can be installed on these trains. There is no doubt of their desirability.

De luxe trains have had all up-to-date things but pictures; and now why not add them?

RODEO PLANNED AT "NYMP" STUDIOS

A real Western Rodeo was given at the studios of the N. Y. M. P. corporation on Sunday, May 16.

Invitations were sent to all the ex and present cow punchers to compete for the cash prizes that was offered. At noon a barbecue dinner was served. The program was planned to take up a greater part of the day, but there was an intermission which made it possible for the visitors to inspect the mammoth motion picture studio. Scenes were taken during the day for the coming production, "Pinto Ben," a picturization of a poem by William S. Hart.

The New Edison Program—3 and 4-reel Features in the Regular Program

A 3-Reel Feature by One of America's Most Successful Dramatists—Lee Arthur. Author of the phenomenal success, "The Auctioneer."

"THE TEST"

Featuring Herbert Prior

Released Friday, June 4th—about 3000 feet. Direction James W. Castle.

Lee Arthur, distinguished dramatist now writing exclusively for Edison films, has written in this feature, "The Test," a theme of universal heart interest. It is marked with all the tests that a good play can stand—full of action that treads upon action, events happening with the force of fate, but grappling in the toils the poor humans who must work out their dramatic existence and end.

As a struggling lawyer weighted in debt who, nevertheless, does not forget the call of a near-to-death friend and, to save the friend's life, steals, we have one of those problems of "Did he do right?" which always add power to a play. He is discovered—dishonored—starts anew and then comes the supreme test.

Herbert Prior gives to the screen a manly and convincing characterization that does not, at any time, lean upon the theatric or over-acted for effect. It will strike home to conviction because his conception of a man so driven by fateful circumstances reflects life in its own rugged power.

The new regular program—Fridays, a three or four reel feature; Wednesdays, a single reel comedy; Saturdays, a single reel drama.

Gentlemen: The two Motiographs we have in the Apollo will soon be running a year and we have never had a shut-down since we started. Everything for the Modern Picture Theatre

THEATRE BUILDING WAVE STRIKES DETROIT

It is surprising the number of new theatres that are yet to be built in the city of Detroit, and suburban territory, despite talk of there being too many theatres. The theatre at Jefferson and Oneida streets, just outside the city limits, is nearing completion and will be opened about June 1. It seats 1,500 and is in every way a most beautiful playhouse.

Contracts have been let to the Schmied-Sisman company for the erection of the new Duplex theatre on East Grand Boulevard, near Woodward, for the Grand Boulevard Theatre company, Detroit. It will cost $75,000, without equipment or furnishings, and will accommodate about 1,800 people. It will be the first Duplex theatre in the city. The opening will take place in the fall.

A new theatre costing $25,000 is in course of erection on First street, Wyandotte, Mich., about 10 miles from Detroit. It will seat 800 people. The owners of this new playhouse are George W. Pearce, Walter A. Pearce and Edwin T. Pearce, brothers. It will be two stories high.

Drury Lane Theatre Progressing

Work is progressing on the new Drury Lane theatre for Frank Drew, in course of erection on Woodward avenue, near the Grand Circus park, Detroit. It will seat 600 people. The company is incorporated for $85,000, Mr. Drew being the principal stockholder.

The new Norwood theatre, at Woodward and Boulevard, Detroit, is about completed and will be opened early in June. Charles E. Raul, confectioner, is the owner. It will seat 1,000.

John H. Kunsky is still working on plans for his mammoth theatre to be erected at Broadway and Witherell streets, Detroit, that will seat about 2,800, to cost $250,000. His new west side theatre at Grand River and Fourteenth streets, Detroit, is being rushed and will be opened about Labor Day. It will seat 1,800 and will cost $100,000.

The Globe theatre, at Grand River and Trumbull avenues, Detroit, is to undergo complete remodeling and enlargement, materially increasing the seating capacity. The alterations will cost about $25,000. LeRoy Bishop, present manager, is president of the Globe Amusement company, recently incorporated for $100,000 to operate the playhouse.

Contracts have been let for the new Stratford theatre, to be erected at Dix and Ferdinand avenues, Detroit, costing $75,000. The building will be 60 by 139 feet in size. The outside will be of terra cotta and brick trimmings. The house will seat 1,100. Frederick A. Schneider is president of the company and William H. Steffens, secretary.

Building in Detroit Active

The Frank Farrington company, Detroit, has been awarded the contract for the building of the new Strand theatre in Grand Rapids, Mich., for A. J. Gillingham, of Detroit. The new theatre is to be ready in September.

The construction of new theatres is also active in the state, new theatres being planned or now being erected in Muskegon, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Port Huron and Battle Creek. A. E. Ireland has purchased a lot in Bessemer, Mich., and plans to erect a new theatre, 37 by 80 in size. He expects to have the theatre operating by September 1.

Plans for the remodeling of the Mystic theatre in Ionia, Mich., are practically completed and the work will soon start.

A fine airdome is to be erected at Collingwood and Delaware avenues, Toledo, Ohio, to be known as the Collingwood Garden. Actual work will start June 1. Interested in the project are J. C. Mullen, E. T. Mullen of the Gem theatre, and August Nex of the Overland theatre.

H. W. Irons has been appointed temporary manager of the Garden theatre, Detroit, owned by John H. Kunsky. He takes the place of A. C. Hoganson, who is seriously ill, indications being that it will be a matter of weeks before he will have completely recovered. Mr. Irons formerly managed the Washington and the Liberty theatres for Kunsky, and also managed the William Penn in Pittsburgh for the Harris Amusement Company. He took charge of the Garden May 7.

Among the Michigan theatres for which designs are being made by C. Howard Crane, architect in the Dime Bank building, Detroit, are: Remodeling of building for Lipp & Cross, Garden theatre, Battle Creek; new theatre for the Schlossman Amusement Company, Muskegon; new theatre for the Saginaw Amusement Company, Saginaw, and a big theatre building and office structure for John H. Kunsky, Detroit.

Drawing Plans for $75,000 Detroit House

E. H. Rogers, architect, 398 Montclair avenue, Detroit, is drawing plans for a theatre building, with stores, costing $75,000, for James Gilbert, of Algonac, Mich. It will be two stories high and will have a basement. The building will be 90 by 179 feet in size, of terra cotta and brick.

A new motion picture theatre costing $3,000 is in course of construction at Paw Paw, Mich. George Peirce is the owner.

Dr. Paul C. Dulitz has been re-elected house manager of the Miles theatre, Detroit; also secretary and treasurer of the company.

The Peoples theatre, at Chene and Leland streets, Detroit, which has not been in operating for many months, was destroyed by fire on May 3, the loss being about $3,000. The house was owned by Kaiser & Smith, brewers. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is believed to have been the work of incendiaries.

Majestic, St. Louis, Opens After $60,000 Outlay

THE Majestic theatre, at 1020-24 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, opened its doors to the public on May 7 with an all picture bill and an audience that was highly satisfactory to the management. The Majestic is probably the largest playhouse on Franklin avenue, which abounds with moving picture shows, and which was the first street in St. Louis to have a neighborhood theatre.

The new theatre seats 1,500, has all of the modern equipments, a large operating booth, with two Powers 6-A machines, rest rooms and drinking fountains on both the balcony and the lower floor, a roomy executive office, a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, a Wurlitzer organ, and all the appliances of an up-to-date theatre.

The McKinley Amusement Company, with John Karzin as president, Leo Apostolos as scretary and A. D. Pappas as treasurer, are the projectors of the Majestic, which, with the lot, building and equipments, represents an outlay of $60,000.

A. D. Pappas is the active manager of the house, and uses special features of the Fox, Paramount and Alliance varieties. On opening day more than 4,000 roses and carnations were given away to the patrons by the management. It has proved an efficient advertising stunt.

Machine Company Incorporated in California

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed at San Francisco of the Miles Motion Picture Machine Company by E. C. Miles, J. A. Sciaroni, C. M. Wooster and G. B. Monk. The capital stock is placed at $1,000,000.

Projection

CONDUCTED BY HERBERT W. ANDEM

No agent is permitted to take subscriptions for Motion Picture News for less than the authorized rates. Have the agent taking your subscription show his letter of credentials and receipt book.—Projection Problems answered.

Problems That Puzzle Projection People

P. T. K., Newark, N. J.—I am using alternating current for the projection arc lamp and use a wire rheostat. The house is to change its supply of power and will now use direct current. Will it be necessary to make any changes in this wire rheostat when I use it for the direct current?

ANSWER.—When looking over the various catalogues of projection machine manufacturers and moving picture supply houses, the catalogues do not state if a wire rheostat is to be used for direct or alternating currents. From these facts alone it is safe to say that there is no material difference when using the same rheostat on either system of electrical power supply.

There is, however, a modification in the separation of the two carbons, and this will cause a change in the total resistance of the arc circuit. When the resistance is changed the current strength varies also. Not directly, but inversely to the resistance, to use a mathemetical expression.

If, in alternating current circuits, the conductor is wound around a magnetic conductor, such as iron, there is very great difference when using the device on either a direct or alternating current supply. When there is an alternating current passing in such a conductor the resistance to the flow of current is from the copper resistance of the wire, as in other circuits, and in addition to this an inductive resistance (measured in ohms) is set up also.

When there is a motor or a transformer in circuit and either not carrying a load, the inductive resistance is much greater than the copper resistance.

A rheostat made of iron in the shape of a grid does not have any inductive resistance. A wire rheostat may tend to set up an inductive resistance but to no practical value in arc circuits. The wire conductor in the rheostat is not wound around an iron core and the value of the self-induction of the wires need not be considered.

Theory of Color in Light Explained

R. M. H., Atlanta, Ga.—I am very much interested in photography, especially so in color photography, and would like to learn more about it. Can you refer me to any books on this subject and where I can find information on the theory of color in light?

ANSWER.—In regard to the latter part of your question the most reasonable theory of color sensation, and the most generally accepted one, is the theory propounded by Dr. Thomas Young in the early part of the nineteenth century, and more recently elaborated upon by Helmholtz.

This is known as the Young-Helmholtz theory, and assumes the retina of the eye to have three sets of cones, one sensible to red light, one to green light, and one to blue light. These three colors—red, green and blue—are known as the primary colors.

When all three sets of nerves are stimulated, the sensation of white light is realized; when excited separately the sensation corresponding to the set of nerves responding is set up.

Intermediate colors are perceived by the three different sets of cones in varying degrees of excitation. So much for the sensation of color within the human eye.

The color of a body is its property of reflecting or transmitting to the eye light of that particular color, the other rays being absorbed. This power may be ascribed as selective absorption.

Properly speaking, color is not a property of matter, but of light. A ribbon is said to be red, but the redness belongs to the light, not to the ribbon.

There would be more propriety in saying that the ribbon has all the other colors of the rainbow, because it absorbs the others and reflects the red. If the red ribbon be placed in a green or blue light, it will appear black because it receives no red rays to reflect.

A body that absorbs very few of the rays is white. One that absorbs nearly all is black. Therefore, black is not a color but its absence.

Objections to Using Camera for Ordinary Photographic Work

H. J. K., Washington, D. C.—I had an opportunity the other day of seeing a cameraman taking a picture and saw him open the camera. The intermittent motion to the film was not the same as I use on my projecting machine. Can you tell me what difference there is for the camera? Can a Power 6-A machine be used for taking pictures?

ANSWER.—There are several makes of motion picture cameras and each uses a different mechanism for feeding the film through the machine. A very popular camera uses the so-called "finger feed." With this type of mechanism a camera can be made much less in weight, which is a very important thing in this line of work. A cameraman would not want to be burdened with more weight than is necessary, especially when his assignment is taking topical subjects.

A negative film has to pass through the camera only once. The wear of the film within the small perforations is not the detriment when using a type of mechanism having reciprocating pin movements as it would be to repeatedly have these pins passing through the same length of film as in projection work.

Hence a difference in the mechanisms of cameras and projectors. A Power 6-A machine head may be used for the taking of pictures after certain alterations have been made. The complete head will have to be encased in a light tight box and provisions made to hold two reels of film.

A take-up arrangement will have to be provided and a shutter with only one open segement, and a photographic lens substituted for the objective lens. It will be entirely more satisfactory to procure a regular camera than to rig up a projector for this work. There are many important conditions to be met.

Diameter of Top Carbon Too Small

G. J. H., Detroit, Mich.—I have a Simplex projector and use 110 volts through a fixed wire resistance rheostat. I use half-inch carbons solid below and cored in the top. After burning the lamp a short time the top carbon gets red most one-fourth of its length, and when it is short the heat runs up to the jaw of the lamp. The bottom carbon does not act in this way. Can you tell me the trouble?

ANSWER: It is very evident from these conditions you are using too small a diameter top carbon for the current strength. Try using a three-quarter-inch cored top carbon and a five-eighths bottom solid carbon. If then the arc does not hold centrally in the crater, use a five-eighth top carbon and one-half bottom.

Devices for Preventing Rewinding

A. T. H., Atlanta, Ga.—I have read of several devices being patented so that a film can be used without its being rewound. Have any of these devices proven to be successful? I would like to know if the rewinding in the ordinary way by using a motor to turn the reel, hurts the film any by running so very fast?

ANSWER.—The idea of not requiring a film to be rewound after projection seems a good one in several ways, and yet it has a very serious drawback. To continually be using a film without inspection for breaks or other defects means that sooner or later you will have a film break while it is being projected.

This not only interrupts a show, but it is a source of danger from film fire as well. To use this method and then inspect the film requires double the work to be done. Hence, it is only in a small way these devices fill the bill as an accessory to motion picture machine equipments.

When rewinding film either by hand or by motor drive it is good practice to have a tension of some kind against the full reel and especially after it has been about one-half rewound. The life of a reel of film will be very much prolonged by doing this.

Running at high speed will not injure a film if this tension is used. Too much tension might do injury but to have just enough tension so that the reel will be firmly wound up will not injure a film, as not to have this tension and the momentum of the full reel will unwind quicker than it is being taken upon the new reel. Then to hold on to one end and wind it up firmly will cause scratches to soon appear, and thus seriously injure the film.

No Operators' Correspondence School

G. L. T., Babylon, L. I.—I am just twenty-one years of age, and I am very much interested in moving-picture theatres. I want to become an operator, and want to know if it is necessary to have a license from the state or town before I can be allowed to run a machine. Can the operation of these machines be learned from a correspondence school?

ANSWER: A great deal depends upon the locality in which you want to operate, if it is necessary to obtain a license before you can be allowed to take charge of an operating room and equipment of projection machines.

In the larger cities the requirements are very exacting in this respect, and you will have to take an examination to prove yourself competent in both electrical connections and dangers from film fires. In the smaller towns there is no regulation for a license, and generally the fire marshal has supervision over these theatres and the operators.

You might profit by asking at one of the theatres in the place where you want to operate as to the local regulations, and may be able to obtain instructions from the operator there. In the larger cities are schools for teaching the operation of motion-picture machines. There is no way of obtaining this instructon by correspondence that we know of.

THE Lears Theatre Supply Company of St. Louis is enjoying a banner year, Sam Lears reports a very large increase in sales in theatre supplies, such as chairs, projecting machines, et cetra.

Frisco Union Picks Delegate for Convention

L. DOLLIVER, of the Moving Picture Operators' Union of San Francisco, has been elected a delegate to the international convention to be held at Chicago.

The local organization now has the largest membership in its history, owing to the men attracted there to accept positions at the Exposition. There are about fifty theatres on the Exposition grounds where pictures are shown, and about ninety regular moving picture houses in the city.

FIRST RUN RENOVATED REELS

Boston, Mass.
Rex Film Renovator Co.,
Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

The Rex Film Renovator which you installed for us some time ago is the best thing the writer has ever come across in this line. It does the work so well that we call our films which have just been put through it "first run renovated." And aside from a very short distance from the beginning and the ending of the film it is indeed "first run" again. I can highly recommend this Renovator to any Exchange man who wants to have his cheaper customers satisfied. Our Exhibitors are now beginning to ask for "renovated" reels, and not for "age," as the Renovator almost entirely eliminates the age objection.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes for your continued success, I am,

Yours very truly,

Feaster Machines Will Have Test for Exhibitors

THE Feaster Film Feed Company has opened its New York offices in the Fitzgerald building, 1482 Broadway, and reports that the business has started in a most flattering way, and that the reception accorded the Feaster non-rewind machine, which it is placing on the market in other large cities throughout the country, has been equaled if not exceeded by the demand in New York. Byron Chandler, president of the company, and Mr. Rollins, the general manager, will both be located in New York from this time on.

What promises to be a very interesting test, especially to big film exchanges throughout the country, is to be held by the Feaster Film Feed Company in the near future. This concern is manufacturing the Feaster non-rewind machine, an account of which appeared in detail in the April 24 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and as one of their principal claims for the machine is that it greatly lengthens the life of a film by eliminating the damage caused by continual rewinding, at present necessary, they are to demonstrate that the claim is well founded by a test before some of the leading film exchange managers of the country.

Two rolls of new film which have never been projected are to be run off five hundred times each one as it is done today, rewinding it each time it is shown. The other film will be projected simultaneously from the same booth through the Feaster machine, and will never be rewound during the five hundred projections, and the difference in the condition of the two films at the end of this test will, it is believed, be so great that the merits of the Feaster system will have been thoroughly demonstrated.

It is the intention of the company to hold this test in one of the large theatres in New York, and every manager in the city will be invited to be present at any time during the week it is in progress. Due notice of the date will be given later.

Bosworth Issues New Paper for "Hypocrites"

BECAUSE of the popularity of "Hypocrites," Bosworth, Inc., has issued a new set of posters, to take care of the demands for paper on this release. This includes two styles each of ones, threes and sixes, and one twenty-four sheet.

The subjects in each case have been changed, now giving four different styles of ones, threes and sixes. As the stock of twenty-fours was completely exhausted on the preliminary order, an entirely new one was designed. This is very unique, in that it shows Truth, her mirror and Gabriel, the ascetic, as well as a scene from the film.

This shows the much discussed scene of the hypocrites who bathe with about as little clothing as the law allows, and yet are afraid to face Truth. It should make a very startling and effective billboard display for those houses which use this method of advertising.

The three and six sheets are also notable in both cases, being accurate scenes from the film, and in all cases a new idea has been followed, namely that of showing Truth and her mirror, with the real scene and the scene which the mirror shows.

The Paramount exchanges have thought so well of this new issue of paper that they have placed orders for very nearly the entire stock almost before the ink was dry.

United Film Exchange Brings Out Pennants

SIDNEY B. LUST, manager of the United Film service office in Washington, D. C., has made up a number of pennants, 36 inches long and more than 12 inches at the widest part, of felt of various shades of brown, blue, red and yellow.

At the base of the pennants is stitched on a shield with the name "United Film Service" in red and white. Along the length are letters of a different colored felt, worked out in the Old English style, which have been stitched on the background. The colors of these letters contrast with the backgrounds, causing them to stand out in relief.

In this way each pennant is inscribed with the name of one of the popular actors or actresses starring in the productions handled by the United Film service. Mr. Lust intends to furnish these pennants to exhibitors using his service at just what it costs to have them made up, with the intention of having the latter offer them to their patrons, holders of "lucky number" tickets.

"Brand Blotters" Will Appear in Papers While Also on Screen

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed between the United Film service and the McClure newspaper syndicate whereby the newspapers in the syndicate will print in serial form the story of "Brand Blotters," by William MacLeod Raine, contemporaneously with the release of the picture.

"Brand Blotters" will be released on the United program on June 14 under the Ideal brand. It will probably be followed by "Crooked Trails and Straight." another MacLeod story, released under the same working agreement with the McClure syndicate.

Fichtenberg Remodels the Picto, New Orleans

THE Fichtenberg Enterprises of New Orleans are remodelling their Picto theatre, in Canal street and enlarging the seating capacity to comfortably seat three hundred more. A different system of incline has been adopted, letting each patron have a clear and unobstructed view of the screen. The improvements under way will give Canal street one of its finest and best theatres at five cents admission.

Rumors have persisted that the Athenaeum, New Orleans' finest and largest clubhouse, will become a motion picture theatre this summer, but as yet no confirmation of the rumors can be obtained.

In Cleveland, Miss., The Lyric has been taken over by H. E. Scott for the American Photoplays Theatre company, operating under the trade name of Aptco. Extensive improvements have been made under the new regime.

A new airdome is being built in Chelsea, a suburb of Memphis, Tenn., by T. J. Babineau and associates. The theatre will open May 5. It seats eight hundred.

The Mound City theatre, Gretna, La., passed to the management of C. B. Gandolfi, of New Orleans, May 1. Mr. Gandolfi is an experienced exhibitor well known to the New Orleans public, and his over-the-river theatre is to be improved and brought up to city standards.

The moving picture theatre at 3418 Dauphine street, New Orleans, was totally destroyed by fire April 30.

John Hazza, for the last two years manager of the Empress theatre, Edmonton, Alta., Canada, and until six months ago manager of the Bijou theatre, has again taken over the Bijou from Albert E. Lawrence, the original manager of this photoplay house, and the pioneer motion picture manager of Edmonton. It is understood that Mr. Lawrence will abandon motion pictures temporarily at least.

Speed Controller Issues Booklet of Endorsement

THE Speed Controller Company, New York City, has issued an attractive booklet containing in addition to short descriptions of the various parts of the Arc Controller, endorsements of the mechanism by the United Booking Offices, Vitagraph theatre, New York; the Strand, New York; the Nicholas Power company, the Precision Machine company, Inc., Claremont theatre, New York; Scollay Sq. Olympia company, Boston; the Eighty-first street theatre, New York, and other firms of importance.

On the first page is a foreword to the exhibitor sounding the keynote of perfect illumination and the best means of obtaining this necessary factor in projection.

Lusitania Slides Prove Popular

THE Novelty Slide Company, New York, has brought out slides of the ill-fated Lusitania. The series give a vivid portrayal of the liner from all angles. Its wonderful construction is shown in hand-colored slides, containing descriptive data.

Wherever shown the slides have proved valuable to exhibitors, who declared that the attendance at their theatres has increased materially in consequence.

CONDUCTED BY H. S. FULD

Musical Program for Two World Film and One Paramount

PHIL H. ALDRICH, musical director of the Orpheum theatre, Flint, Mich., has used with success a program of his own devising for "M'liss," World Film; "The Goose Girl," Paramount, and the "Arrival of Perpetua," World Film. Mr. Aldrich has forwarded a schedule of the scores in hopes of their proving helpful to other orchestra leaders.

Mr. Aldrich declares that he and his associates endeavor to play to the pictures, but find it awkward to switch from one number to another. They find it hard to play in accordance with "the theme system," while using the orchestra, advocated by several writers in these columns from time to time. Mr. Aldrich states that he uses numbers in keeping with the general atmosphere of the scenes and takes them straight through, only cuing the "hurry" scenes. He also plays all waltzes to follow the action on the screen. His programs follow:

"M'Liss," (World Film)

March, "Echoes of Seville," Moret.

Reel I.—"Piervuettes," valse ballet, Smith; "Spanish Serenade," Op. 54, No. 1, Friml; "Der Teufel," waltz, Ascher.

Reel II.—"La Rose Noire" (introduction and No. 1 only), waltz, Aubrey; "Lecrime d'Amour," Barbirolli; Berceuse, Schytte; High Stepper Galop, Boehnlein.

Reel III.—Fascinating Night Waltz, Renyi; Quartette (Rigoletto), Verdi; Hurry, Lake; "Es War Einmal," waltz, Kneckt.

Reel IV.—"Le Fete De Sêville," suite Nos. 1 and II, Tavan; "Eternelle Ivresse," valse, Ganne; "Le Fete De Sêville," suite No. III, Tavan.

Reel V.—No. 4 of same suite; "La Conchita" (for Spanish dance), Davis; "Oriental Roses" (during fire), Ivanovisi; Allegro, Luke; Russian Romance, Friml.

"The Goose Girl," (Paramount Film)

March, "Newport Belles," Ascher.

Reel I.—"Garden of Roses," intermezzo, Pratt; "Gypsy Love," waltz, Roberts; Hungarian March, Liszt; "Gypsy Love," waltz, Roberts.

Reel II.—"Songe D'Autumne," valse, Joyce; "Columbine," scene de ballet, Gruenwald; Hurry, Luke; "Twilight," reverie, Ayer.

Reel III.—"Twilight" (concluded); "Loving Hearts," gavotte, Moses; "O, Promise Me," song, de Koven.

Reel IV.—"L'Amour Tzigane," valse, Roberts; "Oriental Roses," waltz, Ivanovici; Hurry, Luke; "L'Amour Tzigane" (two strains); Nocturne, Op. 9, No. 2, Chopin.

Reel V.—Nocturne (concluded); "Weana G'müath," waltz, Schrammel; "Goodbye," song, Tosti; "Weana G'müath (concluded); "O, Promise Me," de Koven.

"Arrival of Perpetua," (World Film)

March, "March of Marches," Van Praag.

Reel I.—"Dream Faces," reverie, Hollowell; "A Game of Tag" (for girls at play), Trinkaus; "Heart to Heart," melody, Ball.

Reel II.—Serenade, Op. 3, Herbert; "Titania," overtrue, Hildreth; "Rain Drops," intermezzo, Saumell.

Reel III.—Entr' Acte, from Mlle. Modest, Herbert; "Cupid's Caress, valse lenti, Roberts.

Reel IV.—Serenade, Didla; "Dawn of Hope," de Casella; "Sweethearts," waltzes, Herbert.

Reel V.—"Sweethearts" Waltzes (concluded); Romance Sans Paroles, Tschaikowsky; "Forget-Me-Not," intermezzo, Macbeth.

Song and Dance Hit Named After Charles Chaplin

"THE CHARLIE CHAPLIN WALK" is the latest song and dance hit. It is a new fox trot and is captivating all who hear it. No one who cares for dancing can possibly keep his feet still when the music is played.

The idea is taken from the funny Chaplin step, as the comedian is seen in the Essanay comedies. The song is published by the Harold Rossiter Music Company, of Chicago and New York.

Bartola Moves Into Larger Chicago Quarters

THE Chicago offices of the Bartola Musical Instrument company have been moved from the Schiller building to the Mallers building at South Wabash avenue.

The spaciousness of the new offices, which will occupy suite 710, will allow the installation of two instruments for demonstrating purposes.

The suite is now ready for occupancy, but it will be impossible to install the instruments before the first of June owing to the fact that the factory is so far behind in orders.

Many Airdomes Opened in St. Louis May 1

THE Savoy Airdome, next door to the theatre of the same name on Vandeventer and Morgan streets, St. Louis, opened on May 2 with an all picture bill, featuring Marion Leonard in "Romany Rye." The Savoy has heretofore run a mixed program of vaudeville and pictures, but like many other mixed bills has gone over to all pictures this season.

The Paris Airdome, Juniata street and Morganford road, St. Louis, opened on May 12. The Paris is not connected with any theatre; in fact, is so far from any theatre that the people in the neighborhood are sorry that the airdome cannot run all the year round. The Paris is an all picture show, and charges five cents all week, with a feature on Sunday, when ten cents is the price.

How to Make Money

by Lewis J. Selznick

No. 19

This series of articles is planned to make money for you—to show you why my ideas have succeeded—and why they will succeed for you if you will weigh each one carefully. Some of them will sound egotistical. I want them to—it's the only way I can drive home my arguments.

Summer is looked forward to with hesitation by many exhibitors. They feel that it is the dull season and they should retrench. This policy I think is directly opposite to what ought to be.

It is logical that in the good season, people are going to attend moving picture shows in great numbers and will be more easily satisfied with what is on the screen. In the dull season, however, when they would naturally stay away from the shows, people are only going to go when they see some picture of unusual merit. It must be apparent to the live and wide-awake exhibitor that the way to draw people is to put on the very best program during the dullest months, for you can depend upon it, that dull season, or not, if a man wants to see a feature he is going to come, regardless of weather. If, on the other hand, you have a program which is not particularly appealing to him, it is quite possible that he may do as you think he will—stay away.

We have anticipated this need of the exhibitor for the Summer time with an unusually strong program, preceded by advertising with unusual appeal, distinctiveness, charm and with the elements of human interest which will draw the attention of the passer-by, and bring him in through the interest it arouses. After they have listened to the lure of the poster, they will get punch and action, and elements of human interest in the plays—which cannot fail to satisfy even in the hottest weather. CONSIDER THIS CAREFULLY—TRY IT OUT.

Make a World Film night, even if it is your only night of the week and see if you don't get results. This has been tested on some of the hottest days and has proven profitable. To the live exhibitor, using World features and World co-operation, all seasons are "good seasons" and we know that Summer to him will prove as productive and profitable as any of the other months of the year.

As I am to devote a great part of the Summer in the field, actually studying the needs and conditions of exhibitors, so that I can more closely co-operate with them and give them money making films and even greater co-operation than in the past, I shall in the Fall start a new series of this nature gleaned from these experiences.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION FEATURES

LOOK AT THIS MAMMOTH UNIVERSAL PROGRAM CAN YOU BEAT IT ANYWHERE ?

"The White Terror"

A Remarkable Four Reel Imp Drama with Hobart Henley, Frances Nelson, Allen Holubar and William Welsh.

One of the most sensational pictures ever filmed. Startling and dramatic behind-the-scenes exposure of the "cure-all" fakirs. The play discloses how a "medicine" manufacturer fought the establishment of a sanitarium in his home town even to the extent of dynamiting the newspaper which started the movement. This dynamite scene is one of the most realistic pictures ever taken. In spite of every precaution Henley and Holubar had mighty narrow escapes from serious injury in this scene. The love interest is a central feature of the play, and the medicine man is finally brought to the right way of thinking when his own daughter falls victim to the "white terror," and her life is saved by sanitarium treatment. This feature is unique, high class and distinctive, and bears the enthusiastic endorsement of many leading medical authorities.

"In the Shadow of the Pyramids"

Third Installment, Two Reels—of the splendid GOLD SEAL Oriental Series entitled "Under the Crescent."

Princess Hassan, playing the lead, is an American Girl, Ola Humphrey, who became the wife of the eldest son of the present Khedive of Egypt. How she sickened of Harem life; and the unrivalled and never before pictured secrets of the Harem, form the basis of this remarkable series, each of which is a complete story in itself. This third episode shows the attempt of the princess to escape, of her thrilling adventures while hiding in one of the great Pyramids, of her recapture and return to the Harem. Staged with a realism seldom, if ever, equalled in pictures, by Director Burton King.

"The Snow Lady"

A Beautiful Three Reel Laemmle Drama with Brinsley Shaw.

Positively the most beautiful snow and winter scenes ever used as the settings for a photoplay are shown in this thrilling story of the battle for valuable timber property. The pictures were taken at the Saranac Lake at the time of the Winter Carnival, which plays a most important part in the drama. A great big play, with fine acting and swift action from start to finish.

"The Oyster Dredger"

J. Warren Kerrigan in a novel dual role in a strong 2 Reel Victor Drama.

Imagine Warry Kerrigan as a handsome but roughly and picturesquely clad oyster dredger. A wealthy girl, secretly in love with him, contrives through a bogus will to supply him with money and change his station in life. His discovery of this fact and of the duplicity of the girl's guardian, together with the development of a beautiful love theme, makes this a drama of virility and real heart interest.

"Blue Blood and Yellow Backs"

Screaming Big U Comedy with Harry Gribbon, Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris.

A large and formidable Mamma, a bee-u-tiful daughter, a bundle of Kale and a rival suitor give the inimitable Harry Gribbon, lovely little Gertrude Selby, and clever Reggie Morris a corking opportunity for fun that fumes fast and furious. One of the real kind of farcical photoplays. With a good laugh at every foot of film.

"One Man's Evil"

Unusual Western Two Reel Bison Drama with Wm. Clifford and Edna Maison.

Harvey Clay, a stranger in a Western town, quickly makes friends with all the women, but is disliked and mistrusted by the men. His escapades furnish lively times in two families and give the sheriff an unwelcome duty. The action is stirring and the plot is very unusual.

"Into the Light"

Strong Two Reel Rex Drama with Jane Novak.

A gentleman burglar is surprised by a beautiful girl in the act of stealing her jewels. She reads to him a passage from the Bible. Further impressed of the error of his ways at a Salvation Army meeting, he becomes converted and goes West. How he makes a man of himself and eventually claims the girl, makes a strong story full of action and unexpected developments.

All included in regular Universal Program for week of June 14. The best and most varied and only scientifically balanced program.

These Stars Can be Seen Only at Paramount Theatres

Until recently the coming of summer meant the passing of the high-class theatrical season. Not so today. Paramount has changed that.

Paramount has magically transferred high-class drama and comedy from the stage to the screen. Paramount has made it possible for the public to see, everywhere throughout the country, at any time during the year, the most famous plays and the best fiction, in their screen renditions—acted by the most celebrated stars.

Mary Pickford in Plays that give full opportunity for her inimitable art—"Such a Little Queen"; "Behind the Scenes"; "Cinderella"; "Mistress Nell"; Frances Hodgson Burnett's great idealistic story "The Dawn of a Tomorrow"; a most appealing picture entitled "Rags"; and a play that "just fits" Mary entitled "Little Pal."
—Famous Players.

Ina Claire in William C. De Mille's merry comedy of youth, "The Wild Goose Chase."
—Lasky.

Edgar Selwyn in "The Arab," a pretentious production of scenic as well as dramatic interest.—Lasky.

Hazel Dawn in the sprightly comedy favorite, "The Gay Lord Quex"; a new play "Clarissa," and "Niobe."—Famous Players.

Myrtle Stedman in "Wild Olive."
—Oliver Morosco.

Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower"; "The Crucible"; "Gretna Green"; the well-known play "Mice and Men;" and "Seven Sisters," the successful comedy of many daughters and few suitors.
—Famous Players.

Blanche Sweet in "Stolen Goods"; "The Warrens of Virginia"; "The Captive," the successful drama, "The Secret Orchard"; and a picturization of the popular play "The Clue."—Lasky.

Marie Doro in "The Morals of Marcus."
—Famous Players.

Laura Hope Crews in "The Fighting Hope."
—Lasky-Belasco.

Pauline Frederick in "Sold."
—Famous Players.

Leonora Ulrich in the comedy of social climbing, "The Society Pilot."—Morosco.

Victor Moore in "Chimmie Fadden."—Lasky.

Charlotte Walker in "Kindling."—Lasky.

Elsie Janis in "The Caprices of Kitty"; "Betty in Search of a Thrill," and in the laughable "Nearly a Lady."—Morosco.

George Waldon Fawcett in "The Majesty of the Law."—Morosco.

John Barrymore in "The Man from Mexico"; "Are You a Mason?" and in a picture dramatization of Richard Harding Davis' novel, "The Dictator."—Famous Players.

New York itself—the theatrical centre of the world—does not afford a better opportunity to see such an array of talent, and such a list of attractions as the Paramount Program brings to you, wherever you are. Go and see!

Watch closely for the announcement of each of these pictures in your locality. You will enjoy them, every one.

ASSOCIATED SERVICE

WHAT WE ARE

We are an organization composed of eight of the most successful of American Producers. We are not unexperienced newcomers. Our names and productions are well known to the public in every part of the United States and Canada.

Behind us and our intentions there is an invested capital of more than $600,000, in addition to untouched resources totaling thousands more.

WHAT WE INTEND TO DO

We intend to place before the exhibitor a service of twenty-one reels, dramas and comedies weekly.

These productions are to equal and surpass anything heretofore placed upon the market, and we are going to offer them to the exhibitor at a figure lower than he has ever paid before.

HOW WE ARE GOING TO DO IT

Our system of distribution which is direct from producer to exhibitor through exchanges, will eliminate the enormous expenses heretofore thought necessary in marketing film productions.

We intend to put this money where it belongs—part of it in the exhibitors' bank balance and part of it into our film; and not in fabulously high salaries and mahogany office furniture.

George Ade Discovers the Slimmest Princess

It is not The Slim Princess' fault that she is "skinny." Alas! she does everything possible to remedy it, even to the eating of many pickles, which malicious Popova has told her will help because—

Fat is beauty, slimness almost a crime in Morovenia, where the Slim Princess' father reigns in obesity and contentment—that is, contentment in all things save his daughter's slimness. She is the elder child and must, under Morovenian laws, marry before her sister, Jeneka, who is F-A-T and, therefore, beautiful. She is disconsolate until—

Comes one Alexander H. Pike, wealthy and American, whose ideas of pulchritude are occidental and not—decidedly not—oriental. He sees the Slim Princess, admires her svelte, dainty beauty and—American-man fashion—proceeds to win her.

He does not do it until the Slim Princess has made a trip to America in search of a medicine that will make her so fat that she will waddle when she walks. She does not find the medicine, but she does find Pike and happiness.

In "The Slim Princess" Mr. Ade says the Essanay Company has produced the greatest photoplay-comedy it has ever been his pleasure to witness. Through all its 4 acts Ruth Stonehouse is irresistible as the little princess who cannot become fat. She is ably supported by Francis X. Bushman.

All the branches of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay (Inc.) are now booking "The Slim Princess."

Do You Know That King Midas Is Living and Turning Films Into Gold?

Of course you have read of the Phrygian King Midas. He was so wonderfully successful that everything he undertook yielded immense riches. The ancients were superstitious and built up a myth that he was so gifted of the Gods that everything he touched was turned into gold.

But you know and I know that it was business acumen and insight that brought him his great wealth. It is just as true today as it was in the time of King Midas. It is easy for you to make money. It needs only a little insight to know what your patrons want; a little foresight, not only to keep abreast of the times but a little ahead, so that you can meet new and constantly changing conditions; and initiative to discard old time stuff and adopt the best and most advanced ideas.

Essanay has established its business on these three qualities. George K. Spoor, its president, is a deep student of human nature. He has the insight to know what the public wants. Consequently Essanay plays always strike a popular chord. He has seen that the motion picture industry was advancing by leaps and bounds and has had the foresight to look for new ideas. And he has had the initiative to put them into effect. Essanay photoplays were first to meet the new demands; they have passed clear beyond the old time "movie"; they are real dramatizations of the best plays, with a plot and a human problem.

You can be a King Midas. You can turn your films into gold through your box office receipts. You may not have the time to work out all the intricacies of these problems. But you can give the public the very best plays—the plays it wants—Essanay plays. The result spells success, and success means money.

WHO IS THE BRAVEST?

The man who has great physical courage or the timid man, who in a great moral crisis, faces ignominy and death for his convictions? The solution of this problem will be found in

New Picture Producing Policies

SOME vital changes are taing place these days.

You have only to read and study the advertising and editorial page of this and a few preceding issues of Motion Picture News to grasp the import of the big underground movement that is now fully under way.

TWO of the oldest and best-known producing companies make announcements which would have been quite as confusing as startling a year ago—one of a sweeping reorganization, another of a decided change in its policy of releases.

Coincident with these are the advertising announcements of equally old and prominent producing companies, which evidence unmistakably a producing policy that breaks sharply with the old and meets the new conditions in the field of the motion picture.

THE old conditions were those brought about by the effort—always wrong, always destructive of all development—of producing pictures on time, almost ragtime.

The new order of events is that of taking time to make pictures—better pictures and therefore fewer pictures, and therefore pictures fit and destined for longer runs.

TO everyone who has a heart-and-soul interest in the picture and its possibilities, this fundamental awakening must bring a great sense of relief and an equally great enthusiasm.

A sharp line has at last been drawn, and we are face to face with it—a line between that which the public has often rightly dubbed the "movie" and that which those who know its actual and rightful scope call the motion picture.

THE "movie" was a novelty, a representation of most of the life as it was not, a hurried and fanciful presentment of anything that would make a thrill or catch a laugh—and therefore, for the most part, an amusement, designed for the uncritical minority and elected by the majority as something that needed censorship.

The motion picture as we know it now is the most remarkable vehicle yet brought forth for the complete expression of life as it is; it is greater, and should no more be shackled with censorship than the newspaper, the magazine, the book and the stage.

Its full appeal then is to the entire thinking, reading, seeing world.

These are not light words; they are facts, plain business facts.

THE new field of the motion picture is the greater field; and the producer who wants the greater circulation for his pictures must heed the demands of this greater field.

We are altogether too prone to compare the motion picture with the stage.

The stage is but part of the picture's competitive field. People amuse themselves also with books and magazines, and it is to these millions we must appeal with pictures of the same or more intrinsic literary merit.

WE have magazines today with circulations running into the tens of millions. These enormous reading clienteles have been built up only by furnishing the reader with the very best quality of matter obtainable. They can only continue by so doing.

What would happen to these circulations if the magazines were suddenly filled with the stories we have considered suitable for the quick change, quickly made motion picture?

There is but one answer.

The circulation would slump; they would slump right down to the small minority who today are content with inferior pictures.

THE popularity of the feature today is simply the popularity of quality. A feature, utterly regardless of its length, is, or should be, simply a better picture.

We are, through these features, or better pictures, bringing into the picture theatre the millions who never went before.

The feature can no more decline in popularity than better pictures can decline in favor.

But we must make features up to feature quality. We must stop judging them by length and come to the realization that a one-reel feature may be as great or much greater than a ten-reel production, just as short stories are often greater than novels.

THERE will be other realizations to arrive at and adjustments to be made.

But we have at least come to the broad, fundamental realization of Better pictures—

Fewer pictures—
Longer runs.

William A. Johnston.

Vol. XI June 5, 1915 No. 22

"The Colored Gentleman" in the Censorship Woodpile

"THE colored gentleman" is very literally "in the woodpile" in the censorship law the legislature of Massachusetts has just passed.

The history of that law is nothing but the story of the unholy reverence of the white politician for the black ballot.

It is one of the most notorious "studies in black and white" that we have had since the passage of the Levy law in New York State, forbidding discrimination by hotels and boarding houses upon any ground, against creed, race or color.

THE Levy law had many features to recommend it to fair-minded and broad-thinking people.

The Massachusetts censor law has nothing in its favor —not even the sincerity of the negroes—in their official complaint that their race is maligned and outraged by the events portrayed in "The Birth of a Nation," for the present agitation for a censor law and "The Birth of a Nation" made their appearance simultaneously in the Bay State.

IT is too late, at this time, to do anything but call attention to some facts and phases of the case that ought to be as widely known and understood as possible.

Motion picture censor bills have appeared before this session, and during this session, in Massachusetts. But there was never any immediate, living condition to give direction and impetus to the movement, and they died, one by one, or lapsed into a state of "suspended animation."

But the appearance of "The Birth of a Nation" gave the censorship agitators something to work on, something to rally around—and, worst of all, a powerful lever to manipulate the politicians with.

This lever was the negro.

THE "colored brother" was not the one who first took offense at the scenes in the Griffith film.

The ones who started the ball rolling were those members of the white race who love the negro and make his "wrongs (?)" their own, because of the negro's usefulness to them in getting what they want from other members of the white race.

"THE black man's friends" saw and were offended. So they hunted up the negro and informed him that it was his duty to be offended, too. They assured him that his race was being wronged and calumniated by this picture, and urged him to do his duty and defend his racial honor.

Now the negro knew, by experience, that it usually paid him to take the advice of his professional champions. So, with the faculty of his people for inducing any kind of an emotional state, he worked up a very creditable and impressive indignation in no time.

AS soon as his "friends" saw that he was full of the spirit of his part, they led him off for exhibition.

"Well, gentlemen, we've come for our censorship law. Our own arguments have failed in the past to convince you, and this time we've brought an eloquent advocate to speak in our behalf." And with these few words, they waited to allow the significance of the negro's presence to sink into the minds of the solons.

Of course, it was not done in exactly that fashion, nor were such words ever spoken. But that was the undercurrent of the movement from start to finish.

THE censor party and the Legislature had been "playing poker" for more than a year.

The censorites at length drew the "Black Jack" as the winning card, raised the Legislature out of their seats, and won.

So long as there are well-defined stories in circulation regarding the hiring of bands of negroes to create disturbances at the performances of "The Birth of a Nation," we shall refrain from taking any stock in the sincerity of the "colored brother's" racial pride or sensitiveness.

Appeal to the Newspapers From the Censors

STRIKING details of the fight against censorship in Fresno, Cal.—the fight marked by the editorial against censorship printed in the "Fresno Republican" and reprinted on this page two weeks ago—reached us this week.

They prove, beyond a doubt, that an appeal to the newspapers, such as MOTION PICTURE NEWS advocated at length last week, will almost invariably result in a victory for the pictures.

"I THINK our heaviest work," writes the Fresno exhibitor to whom we are indebted for the account, "was done on a monster petition that all the picture houses had circulated.

"It did not take us a week to gather over 6,000 names, and we only slowed up by request, because—well, the agitators were getting snowed under. We used the screen to the limit, too, frequently bringing rounds of applause."

AGAIN we urge exchange men, exhibitors everywhere —Appeal to the newspapers! And through the newspapers to the people.

The motion picture has nothing to fear from the most searching examination the press can give it. No reputable newspaper has yet condemned the motion picture.

The advocates of censorship are continually exploiting themselves in the public prints. It is time the motion picture men fought fire with fire, and did likewise.

Few Film Bills Pass Pennsylvania Legislature

Daix Censorship Bill, "Equal Rights" Measure and a Group of Building Rules Are All That "Get Through" at Harrisburg Before Adjournment—Billboard and Censor Repeal Measures Killed—No Subordinate Employees for Censor Bureau Appointed—Oberholtzer "Dark Horse" to Motion Picture Men

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., May 26.

THE most important session of the Pennsylvania Legislature ever held from the viewpoint of the motion picture business was adjourned finally last Thursday, May 20, with a net result of legislation affecting the industry as follows:

Passage of the Daix censorship bill creating a board of three censors instead of two, giving to film men for the first time the right to appeal to the court from decisions of the censors, reducing the censorship fee from $2.50 to $1 for each film and making a number of other less important concessions to the motion picture interests. This bill already has been signed by the Governor and become a law, and the three censors were appointed, as told in the last issue of the Motion Picture News.

A Victory for the Film Men

Passage of the "equal rights" bill, which gives negroes the same privileges as white persons in theatres, and provides heavy fines for theatre managers discriminating against negroes. This bill is now in the hands of the Governor and he has until June 20 to sign or reject it.

Passage of a group of bills designed to prevent the application of building rules that may be adopted to govern the erection of future theatres, to theatres already in existence in such a way as to require alterations to be made in the latter. These bills also are awaiting the Governor's action.

The above measures represent all the legislation of special bearing on the motion picture business that was passed in the Legislature, which will not meet again in regular session until 1917. There was a victory, however, for the film men in the fact that the measure designed to give cities, boroughs and townships authority to regulate billboards, was side-tracked in committee.

However, the bill that was introduced by the joint legislative committee of exchange men and the recently-organized Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, calling for absolute repeal of censorship, was killed in committee. But there is not the shadow of a doubt if this film men's committee had not done the aggressive fighting it did do in behalf of this measure, none of the concessions contained in the Daix censorship bill, that was adopted, would ever have been obtained. The gains that were made through the Daix measure can without any qualification be attributed to the foresight of exhibitors in forming the aggressive statewide organization in the convention held in Harrisburg just at the outset of the session of the Legislature.

Sensational Fight on Negro Bill

Another bill that never came out of committee was the Stern measure that called for a reduction of the censorship fee to 50 cents a film.

About the negro equal rights bill there figured one of the most sensational fights of the exciting closing hours of the General Assembly. For hours on the final day of the session it was a nip and tuck struggle between the friends and foes of the measure to save or defeat it. Because of the wide interest that was taken in the success of the bill by the negro voters throughout the state, few politicians had spunk enough to come out in open opposition to it. However, some of the devious strategic methods known only to seasoned politicians were resorted to in the final hours in efforts to kill or to save the measure.

Only Hope in Governor's Veto

After the bill had been passed by a big majority in the House, the Senate also passed it by a vote of 33 to 11, but in doing so took pains to amend it so that it would have to be sent back to the House for concurrence. The House got it back on the final day of the session and refused to concur in the Senate amendment which called for the elimination of the imprisonment part of the penalty for violation of the proposed law.

That made the appointment of a joint conference committee of the members of the House and the Senate necessary, and they got together on a plan of adopting the Senate amendment and so reported to the respective bodies.

Somehow, however, in the mix-up, either by error or crafty design, somebody wrote the word "exclude" instead of "include" in the bill in a way that would absolutely have nullified the measure had it gone through in that form. This change in the wording was discovered in time by the friends of the bill; the conference committee had another hasty session and the measure was reported back practically in the form in which it passed the Senate, and it is now in the hands of the Governor.

There are strong suspicions that some of the foes of the "equal rights" plan were trying to "put one over" on the friends of the measure in the confusion of the closing hours of the session, but if that is true they did not succeed, and negroes will have the same rights as white persons in Pennsylvania theatres unless Governor Brumbaugh wields the veto axe on the bill.

Subordinates Not Yet Appointed

The new censorship law became effective last Wednesday, the day the Governor signed it and reappointed the two old censors and Mr. Oberholtzer, of Philadelphia, as the new one. The fees for examining films were at once reduced to $1. While the old rules formulated by the old board have not yet been amended, it is expected that in a few days the chief censor, J. Louis Breitinger, will have prepared another set which will conform with the provisions of the new act and which, of course, cannot be so burdensome to the film interests.

None of the large number of new subordinate employees of the board, provided for under the terms of the Daix act, have as yet been appointed. Harrisburg motion picture men are not acquainted with Mr. Oberholtzer, the new member of the Censorship Board. It is understood, too, that he was not recommended for the place by Chief Censor Breitinger. It is believed that Mr. Oberholtzer is a personal selection of Governor Brumbaugh. How much experience he may have had or may not have had is not known to the motion picture men of this city. Moreover, little if anything is known about him by the Capitol Hill politicians generally.

Governor Brumbaugh has a habit of making independent selections of men for official positions, and so Mr. Oberholtzer is regarded as something of an unknown quantity whose probable course as a censor is viewed by picture men a good deal in the light of a mystery.

HENRY B. WALTHALL SIGNS WITH ESSANAY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 24.

Henry B. Walthall, according to information given out by the actor at the Reliance Majestic Studios this week, has signed a contract with the Essanay company to be starred in their V. L. S. E. features, which will be made in Los Angeles.

It is understood G. M. Anderson made temporary lease for the big studio on Boyle Heights, known as the Old Majestic, which is now being used by the Rolfe company, but will be vacated in a short time when these producers go to their New York studio. The two or three comedy companies of Essanay will work at this studio. Mr. Anderson, who was here recently on his way to New York City, is said to have consummated the contract with Mr. Walthall, which becomes effective immediately upon the completion of the actor's work on present subject at the R-M Studios.

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, May 26.

Thirty members of the Detroit Exhibitors' League held a social meeting and dinner at the league's new quarters, 183 Jefferson avenue, on Tuesday evening, May 11, starting at eleven o'clock.

Business talks were dispensed with, the evening being devoted to getting better acquainted. The affair proved so successful that it has been suggested that the members get together for social purposes only at least once a month. At the above meeting, a Dutch lunch was served, and several reels of latest releases were exhibited on the screen.

NEW CENSORS ORGANIZE AT PHILADELPHIA

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, May 26.

The recently appointed Board of Censors, J. Louis Breitinger, Mrs. E. E. Niver and Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, organized immediately on receiving their appointment. This was made necessary by the fact that, the old law having been repealed, no action could be taken under the Daix bill until the board had met and completed its organization.

Attorney General Francis Shunk Brown called a meeting of the leading exchange men at his office in Philadelphia on Saturday, May 29, to consider matters relating to the Pennsylvania censorship law.

Lasky Will Increase Output in Warm Weather

No Less Than Eight Subjects Are to Be Released on the Paramount Program Between June 15 and August 15

THE Lasky Feature Play company announces that it has made arrangements to increase rather than diminish the number of its releases through the warm weather of June, July and August.

In fact, the Lasky company has determined to release no less than eight of its strongest subjects on the Paramount program between the middle of June and the middle of August, giving in this manner the most impressive guarantee possible of its decision to aid the Paramount exhibitor in every manner.

The fact that the Lasky company determined to release the Farrar productions on the Paramount program only was sufficient evidence of the company's good will and interest in the success of exhibitors.

On June 14 the Lasky Feature Play company will release Edgar Selwyn in the spectacular picturization of his own play, "The Arab," which is the most elaborate and costly photo-drama yet done by the Lasky company.

This will be followed, on June 28, by the fourth picture, in which Blanche Sweet has appeared under the Lasky management, "The Clue," by Margaret Turnbull, a fascinating mystery and detective story. On July 8 Victor Moore, who scored such a notable laughing success in "Snobs," will make his second photo-drama appearance in "Chimmie Fadden," the taking of which has just been completed at the Lasky studios in Hollywood, Cal.

The next offering on July 15 will be the initial photo-dramatic stellar engagement of Charlotte Walker, who will play the star role in a version of the problem drama "Kindling," offered by the Lasky company through an arrangement with E. J. Bowes.

On July 19, Laura Hope Crews, famous for her legitimate dramatic successes in Belasco and Frohman Broadway hits, will make her initial appearance in the Lasky-Belasco picturization of Belasco's famous production, "The Fighting Hope."

"The Puppet Crown," a picturization of Harold MacGrath's novel of the same name to be released on July 29, will be notable both as the second Ina Claire picture and as the first Lasky production in which Carlyle Blackwell, the latest male star added to the Lasky forces, will be seen.

The two productions scheduled definitely for August up to the present moment are Blanche Sweet in "The Secret Orchard" on August 9 and Fannie Ward in "The Marriage of Kitty" on August 16. Miss Ward is to leave New York for the Lasky studios within a few days. Practically all the other subjects in this list are already under course of production.

Siegmund Lubin Plans Radical Change in Policy

His Company Will Employ Stars for All Attractions—Expects to Make Plant Twice as Large—Marie Dressler Signed

THE Lubin Manufacturing company, through its president, Siegmund Lubin, announces decided plans for the betterment of its production in the immediate future.

Althought the Lubin plant is already one of the largest in the world, Mr. Lubin wishes it also to be made one of the very best, and to this end will engage the services of the best artists, actors and producers in the world without regard to price.

This will reverse the present policy of stock companies and increase the salary payroll of actors from $30,000 a week to double that amount. Scene painters, property men and stage carpenters will be imported from New York, and no expense will be spared in an effort to make Philadelphia and incidentally the Lubin company the biggest center of the motion picture industry in the world.

The first actress of note to begin work under this reorganization of the Lubin forces will be Marie Dressler, who, on June 1, will start work at the Lubin plant on a comedy film under the direction of Howard Hansell. John C. Rice and other well-known comedians will support Miss Dressler.

"Philadelphia is to be the home of the best in motion pictures," said Mr. Lubin. "I realized some time ago that my plant, complete as it is, was not turning out as artistic, as distinctive pictures as others were. We have the machinery; we have money and we have the whole world upon which to draw for talent. And this will be our new policy in the future. I have been dissatisfied with our pictures. I want something much better and I am going to get it. I have watched films made by my competitors and I have marveled at their beauty and the wonderful photography. Now, we are going to do better than they do.

"To do this, I shall reverse my policy of years. Instead of making up a cast out of the stock members of the various companies employed by me, I shall cast well-known actors and actresses for the various roles, to obtain that type so necessary to convey the illusion to the auditor. The day has gone by when the photoplay can be staged in any old way, with a scratch cast. Today, the motion picture must be artistic, must tell a stirring tale, be well photographed and have what is known as the necessary 'punch.'"

Mr. Lubin's present acting and directing forces, scattered from California to Arizona, will be reorganized.

San Francisco Branch of League Elects Officers

Initiation Fee Is Waived for One Month—Brisk Membership Campaign Is Under Way—Dues Are Reasonable

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, May 26.

AN enthusiastic meeting of exhibitors was held in the assembly hall of the Pacific building, at Fourth and Market streets, on the afternoon of May 14, and the organization of the new league, which was begun two weeks ago, was made complete.

The tentative list of officers chosen at the initial meeting was made the permanent body, and the constitution and by-laws that had been prepared in the meantime were adopted. The initiation fee has been waived for a period of thirty days, and a campaign for membership will be instituted at once. All of those present enrolled as members and many others have signified their intention of joining. A feature that appeals to all is the low membership fee and the fact that there is a graduated scale, the larger houses paying more than the smaller ones.

Owing to the fact that the various exchanges of the city have announced through the Board of Trade that within a short time payment in advance would be exacted for all film service, the relationship between exhibitors and exchanges was discussed at some length.

A committee was appointed to meet a committee from the Board of Trade to secure, if possible, a modification of the ruling. Five members of this committee are local exhibitors, with two from the State organization, these being H. L. Beach, of Berkeley, and J. Hellman, of Oakland. The other members are Louis R. Greenfield, J. Huff, A. Goldberg, H. J. Gosliner and I. Oppenheimer.

Reading Convention Is Mecca of Keystone State

Exhibitors in All Parts of Pennsylvania Look Forward to Attending League Gathering in That City June 7-8-9—Chamber of Commerce, City Officials and Prominent Business Men Enter Plans of Film Men to Make the Event a Success

Special to Motion Picture News

Reading, Pa., May 26.

DETAILS have just been announced of the elaborate plans for the entertainment that is to be provided for the delegates and others who will attend the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, to be held in this city on June 7, 8 and 9.

Not only are the Reading exhibitors interested, but the Chamber of Commerce, city officials and the most prominent business concerns have volunteered their cooperation. The city will take on the appearance of a holiday.

Every fan will be asked to display the American flag at his residence. This in addition to the bunting and other decorations to be used in the business sections will add to the attractiveness of the exposition.

The entertainment of visiting exhibitors and their friends will be the main feature of the gathering. While the picture men are in business session the Ladies' Reception Committee, appointed by Ben H. Zerr, president of the State League, will have charge of the visiting women. Mrs. J. G. Hansen has been chosen to head the committee. Other members of the committee include: Mrs. Ben H. Zerr, Mrs. Harry J. Schad, Mrs. C. L. Carr, Mrs. Frank D. Hill, Mrs. Frank A. Gould, Miss Deppen and Misses Elsie, Dorothy and Bertha Hansen.

The automobile parade Tuesday afternoon, headed by the Rinegold Band, Monroe A. Althouse, director, will be shown in motion pictures through the courtesy of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, of Philadelphia. Arrangements for these pictures as well as other scenes will be in charge of J. Allen Boone, publicity representative for Mr. Lubin.

Recently James G. Hansen, secretary of the Reading exhibitors, received an interesting communication from the United Film service, stating that Edwin August, supported by Ruth Blair, Iva Shepherd and Bill Bailey, will produce a two-reel photodrama in Reading during the convention, in the presence of the visiting exhibitors. This will undoubtedly prove a unique feature. Ethel Grandin, together with Arthur and Ray Smallwood, also will attend.

The presence of a number of the screen artists from the Metro, World Film and Fox companies has been assured. Through the efforts of the Inter-state Film company, of Philadelphia, the following Universal stars have been promised: Harry C. Myers, Rosemary Theby, Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Mary Fuller. The Lubin company will send a special train with a representation of more than seventy-five.

The Reading exhibitors have arranged for a ball on Tuesday night, June 8, in the Auditorium. This, it is expected, will prove the greatest affair of its kind ever held in the East. Seldom has such an array of leading players been promised for any function outside of New York City.

Following the ball the players will be entertained at a banquet at the Mansion House. This function will be exclusively for the screen artists. The banquet for the exhibitors and their families will take place the following night at the Berkshire Hotel.

The League officers are aiming to make the convention a benefit to the exhibitors from many viewpoints. Matters which vitally affect every exhibitor will be taken up. An exhibit seldom equalled has been arranged. A very few booths remain.

Pittsburgh Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has changed its meeting day from Mondays to Thursdays, as it was found that more of the members could arrange their work better so as to get off for a meeting on that day. The regular meeting days are the first and third Thursdays of each month at 10:30 a. m.

At the last meeting of the organization the following nominations were made, there being no opposition to the names presented: For president, G. W. Sahner; vice-president, William Fritz; secretary and treasurer, James Delves; organizer, Fred J. Herrington, and delegate to the State convention at Reading, H. C. Kliehm.

There is a lot of interest being manifested by the local men in regard to the coming convention, and it is stated that a large number of them will go from this city to the convention next month, so as to see what is coming off and also to invite the convention delegates to hold their next meeting in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh is after the convention, and it is possible that the local exhibitors will make it next to impossible for the delegates to refuse. G. L. McCoy, Jr.

Dorsey Pictures of Orient Are Now Released

The Series, Obtained by the Curator of Anthropology for the Field Museum, Consist of "Picturized Travelogues," and Are Marketed by United Photo-Plays

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, May 26.

AFTER a year of preparation, the United Photo-Plays company has released the first series of the Dorsey expedition pictures. Dr. George A. Dorsey, curator of anthropology for the Field Museum, left last summer with several cameramen for a tour of the orient. They planned to photograph the "never before seen" and to present to the public something of real interest in the way of a travelogue.

The Dorsey party stopped off in Japan first. From there they went into China and they are now in India. After India, they will travel through Borneo, Malay, Ceylon, Burmah, Australia and other countries. This expedition will be completed in sixty reels, and will remain a monument to the efforts of Dr. Dorsey.

The United Photo-Plays company is releasing them in six reel series, of which Japan is the first. This picture began an unlimited engagement at the Studebaker theatre, Chicago, May 15.

Quite a feature of this first set is the harpooning of a whale. This is the first time that the motion picture public has had a chance to witness such a dangerous occupation.

Taking this picture was not only dangerous but difficult because of the uncertainty of the little lake boats used in the work. Nine times out of ten a camera would not have caught the scene. Dr. Dorsey and his men worked a whole week obtaining this thousand feet of extraordinary film.

Lubin Pleased with Reception of Reeves by Public

Comedian Maintains His Stage Reputation as a Funmaker in "The Substitute," His First Screen Appearance for the Philadelphia Producer

THE recent debut of Billie Reeves, the English international comedian and pantomimist, as a Lubin star created a great deal of interest throughout the entire country, and in "The Substitute," his first comedy, the droll acrobat had an opportunity to show at his best his ability as a fun maker. Reeves, who created the famous role of the drunk in "A Night in an English Music Hall," played in all parts of the world, is even funnier on the screen than he was in vaudeville.

For some weeks past Reeves and his own company of acrobatic comedians have been in Jacksonville, Fla., making a series of one reel comedies for the Lubin company. These comedies are released each Saturday, and Ira M. Lowry, general manager of the Lubin company, says he intends to spare neither brains nor money in making them funniest of funny pictures.

In his first comedy, "The Substitute," Reeves does his famous burlesque boxing match with Billy Potter, and his demonstration of a skating exhibition in a fashionable cabaret restaurant is one of the funniest things Reeves ever did.

"The Clubman" follows "The Substitute" on Saturday, May 22, and then in order come "Out for a Stroll," "The New Butler," "Nearly a Prize Fighter," "A Safe Investment" and "Just Like Kids."

Associated Service Will Soon Release Its Program

Bard Says That Exchange Men Approve the Releasing Plan of His Company—Expects to Reduce Cost of Distribution by New System

WITH the arrival early this week of Arthur Bard in New York after a trip from the Pacific Coast the Associated Service, the new manufacturers' combine, inaugurated the campaign which will soon place a weekly program of twenty-one reels of one and two-part dramas and comedies before the exhibitor at a figure which has heretofore been considered impossible.

The Associated is an organization composed of eight of the most successful and best known of the West Coast manufacturers, and are merely re-entering under a new name a field with which their previous experience has made them perfectly familiar. As a step forward in the direction of a more logical and economic method of marketing their product these concerns banded together and will not only produce in harmony, but will also distribute their own film, thereby eliminating the expensive system which up to the present has been thought necessary in the bridging of the gap between manufacturer and exchange.

When interviewed shortly after his arrival, Mr. Bard, who is general manager of the new concern, said in part:

ARTHUR BARD

"During my trip East I stopped at every exchange centre of importance in the country with the exception of those in the South, and much to my gratification found that the oldest and most representative exchange men were heartily in accord with the principle along which we intend to work, and several have already closed up negotiation for the Associated Service in their territories. There were evidences everywhere that the time was ripe for a venture of this kind if it were based upon a legitimate and conservative business basis."

The following remarks by Mr. Bard express succintly and to the point the principles upon which his concern intend to base their operating policy.

"We are in the picture business to make the best pictures that can be made and sell them. Our system entirely does away with the expensive distributing factor because this end of the business will be handled solely as part of our general operations and not as a separate and distinct division as heretofore. The great saving which will be effected will enable us to offer our service at a figure which in the past would have been considered impossible, and in addition be able to put more money into the production of our releases, thereby raising and maintaining consistently our standard of quality."

The market plan devised by Mr. Bard and his associates for disposing of films to exhibitors at the lowest cost will meet with success.

Pauline Frederick Signs Long Contract with Famous

Her Next Play Is "Bella Donna"—Company Will Go to Egypt for Filming of Hichen's Novel in Original Environment

FOLLOWING the triumph in her first screen characterization, as Donna Roma in "The Eternal City," now completing its long engagement at the Astor theatre, New York, the Famous Players Film company has secured the exclusive film services of Pauline Frederick for a number of years.

Under the supervision of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, who directed "The Eternal City" when it was produced in Rome last summer, Miss Frederick will shortly go to Egypt for a photo-production, in its original environment, of Robert Hichen's novel and play, "Bella Donna," in which Nazimova won her first American triumph some years ago.

She will also shortly be presented in a detailed film version of Henri Bernstein's emotional drama, "Sold," to be followed by a comprehensive picturization of the French drama "Zaza."

In the fascinating role of Bella Donna Pauline Frederick should find ideal screen expression of her emotional talents. With the thrilling story itself, the exotic atmosphere of Egypt and the desert, the magic of the mysterious and sinuous Nile, so strangely like the dangerously beautiful and alluring heroine, "Bella Donna" promises much that is valuable as a photoplay, and should even surpass the pictorial and dramatic qualities of "The Eternal City," made by this company.

"Zaza" will undoubtedly make a powerful photo-drama, with its deep heart interest and tense, human appeal. A brief resume of the plot will at once indicate the drama's appropriateness as a vehicle for Miss Frederick.

Zaza, once a little street urchin, becomes a great actress, and, never having known the meaning of morality, gives herself to a man whom she idealizes. But when she learns the man she loves is already a husband and father, her rage knows no bounds, and in revenge she determines to go to his home and tell the dainty wife that her husband is the lover of Zaza, the notorious actress, thus crushing husband and wife with one blow.

But on arriving at the home, the kindness of the wife and the sweetness of the little child completely disarm the savagely primitive Zaza, and she goes away with her secret still untold. Conquering self and sacrificing her own great love, she breaks with her lover, sending him back to the home she had intended to ruin.

PAULINE FREDERICK

Thousands of people who read the novel will wish to see it in a film version. The chief character will make an excellent vehicle for Miss Frederick's talents.

WEAK SPOTS IN A STRONG BUSINESS—XVIII

"Necessity of Adapting the Stage Play and Popular Novel to the Screen Is a Great Problem," Observes Anthony P. Kelly—Another Difficulty Is Changing of Scripts by Directors—The Original Scenario, Prepared Especially and Exclusively for the Screen, Is Bound to Come

THAT the scenario constitutes one of the weak spots of the motion picture industry is one of the points on which practically everybody who has talked on "the weak spots in a strong business" has agreed.

This does not refer so much to the way in which the scenario of the present day is constructed as to the story it tells and its suitability for motion picture work, although many lamentable instances have occurred of subjects produced from a scenario which was weak, technically. The weakness in the stories has been particularly noticeable in the one and two-reel pictures, but now it is becoming more noticeable in features.

Though all have agreed on this point, no one has given any good reason for the existence of weak scenarios nor suggested any remedy. This holds true because very few persons in the industry, especially in the business end, are practical scenario writers.

Kelly Is Qualified to Speak

One of the most consistent of the recognized scenario writers is Anthony P. Kelly, who has been in the scenario departments of Essanay, Famous Players, Fox Film corporation, Universal and World Film, but who, a few months ago, decided to give his time to "free lancing" adaptation work.

Among Mr. Kelly's recent adaptations are "The Man of the Hour," "The Thief," "The Little Grey Lady," "The Ring and the Man" and "Samson." Two original five-reel scripts from his typewriter are now in course of production, as are several other adaptations. Mr. Kelly views the scenario end of the industry from the viewpoint of the practical scenario writer.

"The necessity of adapting the famous stage play and the famous book is the hardest thing with which a scenario writer has to contend," said Mr. Kelly. "By that I mean, of course, the stage play or the book chosen solely upon its reputation and advertising value as a play or book without regard for its fitness for the screen. I could name any number of plays and books which have been produced in motion picture form when they were not good screen stories. Any conscientious scenario writer hates to make an adaptation which he feels will not be good, but what can he do when the manufacturer insists on a particular play or book?

A Scenario Man's Worst Problem

"This is the worst problem a scenario writer faces. The answer is, in my opinion, that the suitable plays and books will soon be exhausted and then will come the day of the original scenario constructed to reach the mind through photography and the screen.

"Another difficulty with which the scenario man must contend is the changing of the scenario by the director. Any director who changes the scenario is no longer a director; he becomes an author. Some directors can revise almost any script and improve it. Others hurt the scenario, when they change it and by so doing they hurt the picture.

"I can name fewer than ten directors who I think are both directors and authors and who should be allowed liberties with the scenario. The others should not, but still they change the script. Then the scenario writer sees his picture on the screen and groans to himself, 'Not a bit like it.'

True Value of Original Scenarios

"The situation is parallel to that of the publishing house. A publisher prints a book as the author wrote it, without making any changes. The burden of the book being good or bad is up to the author. The same situation should prevail in motion pictures.

"I think that eventually this situation will prevail and that the scenario writer, in the script, will give the characters their 'stage business' as well as outline the import of the action and that the script will be adhered to, religiously, by the director.

"The exhibitor should remember that when a motion picture is advertised as written by a great novelist or dramatist that usually the adaptation for the screen was made by a member of the producing company's scenario department.

"Some novelists, short story writers and dramatists are now writing scenarios. Their success is in proportion to how far they forget the technique of the spoken or written word and adopt that of motion pictures. Those who are taking motion pictures seriously and studying their construction will help the whole business by their scenario work. The others will not.

"The difficulties I have mentioned are those of the present. Another one which I think will remedy itself in the future is the difficulty at present of disposing of an unusual, original scenario at its true value. The average short story published in any of the high-class magazines, which has not the earning power of a feature picture, pays the writer considerably more than does the best original scenario at present. The result is that the short story writer sticks to his knitting instead of going in for scenarios, while the scenario writer is holding his best original stories till such time as he can get a higher price than he can now.

"The day of the story conceived and written for motion pictures is bound to come and when it does come, the scenario writer will be as well paid as the present popular short story writer.

"I feel that the most necessary part of the scenario writer's mental equipment is knowledge of the camera, knowing what can be done and what cannot be done by photography. Next to that comes a knowledge of lighting effects. Many scenario writers fall down on writing night scenes and night effects. They seem to think that a man can be photographed half a mile away at night. These are things only to be learned by practical experience in the production end.

"But the greatest trouble now, as I said before, is in the adaptation of subjects unfit for the screen. When the scenario writer constructs his whole picture especially for the screen, outlines the action and the 'stage business' and the director follows the script, then the scenario writer will come to his own. And I think that day is not far off."

Pathé Directors Pick Cast for Two Strong Plays

"The Beloved Vagabond," One of Locke's Most Successful Novels, and "The Galloper," a Richard Harding Davis Play, Will Soon Be "on the Stocks"

PATHÉ has acquired William J. Locke's "The Beloved Vagabond" and Richard Harding Davis' "The Galloper."

"The Beloved Vagabond" is one of Locke's most successful novels and was presented on the London stage by Beerbohm Tree, England's most famous actor. The novel enjoyed a wide popularity in this country and had a large sale. It is a story that is delightfully fresh in plot, and has many tense and powerful situations, relieved by unusually good comedy.

Edwin Arden, who plays in it the part of Parogot, considers it one of the best he has ever enacted. Parogot is a young architect who gives his all to the lady of his ideals, and then finding her faithless, sets forth on a series of vagabond adventures. Mr. Arden and Bliss Milford are the nucleus of a very strong cast, which has been assembled by Edward José, who will produce the picture for Pathé. It will be in five parts.

"The Galloper" was played by Raymond Hitchcock for a number of seasons, and was then made into a musical comedy. It is a highly amusing farce, detailing the adventures of a young millionaire who finds himself compelled to take upon his shoulders the identity of a muchly married war correspondent, Kirke Warren. The story has a Graeco-Turkish atmosphere, and the millionaire while dodging bomb shells and divorced wives goes through many uproarious situations.

Donald MacKenzie, who is to produce the picture for Pathé, is assembling an excellent cast, the members of which will be announced in a few days.

BURLESQUE FIGHT PICTURES MADE IN PITTSBURGH

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 26.

Pittsburgh is in the limelight as a manufacturing centre of motion pictures. The Wizard-Blackson fight is the title of the new motion picture which is the work of Fred E. Johnston, of the Pittsburgh Leader, and it is a burlesque on the Willard-Johnson fight in Cuba.

The pictures were drawn by Mr. Johnson and the filming of the photoplay was done by J. B. Felber in his Pittsburgh studio. Several offers have been made to Mr. Johnston for all rights and title to the picture, and Mr. Felber has taken the picture to New York, where it is being tried out in several of the screening rooms and will shortly be put on the market.

The pictures of the fight are reported to be extremely funny, and some of the quickest action ever screened is said to be found in them. More than 8,000 pictures were drawn to make the reel a success.

Hoffman, Linguist and Crack Solicitor, Gets Prize

Officers of Universal Pick Him from Twelve Candidates for General Manager of All Exchanges—Will Be in Direct Touch with Exhibitors

M. H. HOFFMAN, who has been general manager of the Universal Film exchange of New York for the past year, was last week appointed general manager of exchanges for the company. The officers of the company feel that they have selected the logical man for this exacting office. They admit, however, that the job of selection was one of the hardest they ever tackled, for it is their boast that the Universal has the most remarkable group of exchange men in the world.

The choice lay among some ten or twelve men of long experience, any one of whom would have been fully qualified for the work, but the fact that Mr. Hoffman happened to be located in New York where he would be in closer touch with the executive officers of the Universal turned the scales in his favor without any further debate.

Mr. Hoffman's rise in the exchange field has been very rapid and entirely due to his own efforts and personality, having been successively manager of the Twenty-third street and the Mecca exchanges. He is at once business-like and genial and has always been a personal friend to every exhibitor in his territory. He can talk to each exhibitor in his own language, and in such a cosmopolitan city as New York this implies a familiarity with something like ten languages and several dialects of each one. Mr. Hoffman has never broken faith with an exhibitor.

M. H. HOFFMAN

In assuming his new duties as general manager of exchanges, Mr. Hoffman is particularly gratified to know that he will still be in direct touch with the exhibitors.

Just to show that he was still there as a solicitor, Mr. Hoffman celebrated his last week in the New York exchanges by taking a flying trip through western Massachusetts and Connecticut, in which he added a weekly business to the New York exchanges amounting to four hundred and fifty dollars. The theatres which he signed are all large representative houses, like the Princess, Waterbury, The Bijou, Springfield and the Majestic, Hartford.

Mr. Hoffman feels deeply the honor and the responsibility of his appointment, and wishes it to be distinctly understood that he is at the service of every one of the Universal exchanges. He regards his position as one of service and the more service he can be to every one, the better he will be pleased. Mr. Hoffman has the good wishes of the industry.

Maud Allan to Make Screen Debut with Morosco

"The Rug Maker's Daughter," the Vehicle Selected for Famous Dancer, Will Give Her and Opportunity to Present Three of Her Best Dances

ANOTHER capture of unusual importance for the screen has been announced by Bosworth, Inc., in association with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company, in the person of Maud Allan, the internationally famous dancer.

Miss Allan, who shares with her bosom friend, Pavlowa, the leadership in modern classical dancing, is an immense favorite in London, both because of her natural genius and also because of her popularity with the late King and the present Queen Mother.

MAUD ALLAN

Her hold upon the royal favor largely came about through a little act of graciousness of her own. During the dancer's first appearance in Paris, where her offerings received an historic ovation, she was asked by Mme. Yvette Guilbert to dance at a charity matinee which the latter was organizing at the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt.

Complying gladly with little thought of the good fortune in store, Miss Allan in due time received an introduction to the Princess Murat and Mrs. Hall-Walker, both noted favorites in English court circles, who took a strong liking to the young American girl and who at once made themselves instrumental in securing her the honor of a "command" to dance before the late King Edward VII.

The dancer's presentations so captivated the English monarch that he took a personal interest in her forthcoming London debut, and when through his influence she received a second "command" to dance before both the late King and Queen Alexandra after a dinner in their honor by the Earl and Countess of Dudley, the fortune of Maud Allan was made in the British dominions.

Prior to her London appearance, Miss Allan scored wonderful success in other European cities. In Vienna, the pretty dancer became famous over night. In Brussels the verdict of Vienna was confirmed even more warmly, and word of it spread like wildfire over the continent. A triumphant tour of cities of Germany, Switzerland and Austria-Hungary followed. At Belgrade, she gave four recitals, and Budapest proved a hotbed of enthusiasm. When she reached Paris a little on its mettle at having been held off till the last, the great capital quickly forgave her in the spontaneous Gallic manner and accepted her art with an enthusiasm that knew no bounds. Her successes in Prague, Hamburg and Berlin were duplications of her reception in the other large cities of Europe, and her engagement at the Palace theatre, London, is now one of the traditions in the history of the stage of that noted theatre.

Miss Allan has already reached the Morosco-Bosworth studios and is now at work on her initial motion picture subject, "The Rug Maker's Daughter," a stirring romance of the American-Turkish rug trade, which will include three of her most beautiful dances.

CHAPLIN HEAD IN WHALE'S MOUTH ON WAGON DRAWS 'EM

AN ingenious advertising stunt was recently invoked with excellent results by Manager Frank J. Holland, of the Orpheum theatre, 722 Wabash avenue, Terre Haute, Ind., in bringing to the attention of his patrons a return engagement of Syd Chaplin, the Keystone-Mutual laugh provoker, in the two-part feature, "Gussie Rivals Jonah."

Mr. Holland has long been noted as one of the wide-awake theatre managers of the Middle West by his unique methods of advertising photoplays shown at the Orpheum. In his scheme used to advertise this Keystone feature Mr. Holland has established a precedent that will be hard to beat.

Several days previous to the showing of the feature, Manager Holland engaged the services of a horse and wagon and, with the aid of a carpenter, mounted on it the head of a giant whale, with mouth wide open, out of which protruded the head and shoulders of Syd Chaplin. Across the rear of the wagon, in explanation of the presence of Chaplin in the whale's mouth, was the following placard: "You Can't Keep a Good Man Down."

The wagon, and even the horse, was plentifully bedecked with many colored and attractive banners, a few of which were lettered as follows: "See This Keystone and You Won't Feel Down in the Mouth," "Thursday [the day the feature was shown] Was Always My Jonah Day," "This Is a Whale of a Keystone—Deep Sea Stuff."

Various other unique placards surrounded all sides of the wagon, attracting the attention of not only the populace but the local editors, who gave him and his idea considerable mention in their columns.

"The scheme certainly attracted attention," writes Mr. Holland, "and as a result 'Gussle Rivals Jonah' proved one of the biggest hits of the season, both to spectator and box office."

MAKE THE PATRONS FEEL PART OWNERSHIP IN THEATRE

A RESIDENT theatre which has been able to keep the people of its neighborhood is the Liberty, Washington, D. C., under the management ofth e Biron Brothers. This house uses the General Film program exclusively, including all its features and specials.

"I find that the people like the old screen favorites the best and they are ever ready to see them over and over again. Francis X. Bushman continues to charm as always, as does Gertrude McCoy, Beverly Bayne, Earl Williams, Edward Earle, Alice Joyce, Anita Stewart, Herbert Prior, Bryany Washburn, and a host of others.

"I endeavor to get the opinion of my patrons in forming my program," commented Mr. Biron. Just at this point he greeted a patron who remarked, "I hope you have a better show than you did last night."

"What was the matter with it? I want to please everyone," cheerfully returned the manager, and then the two discussed the pictures of the night before.

"That's the best way to know where your weakness and strength lies," commented Mr. Biron. "Get your patrons to the point of feeling that your theatre is on a co-operative basis. They can help to run it very often, at least so far as the program is concerned."

DEEP SEA DIVER IN LOBBY

DURING the run of the Williamson brothers submarine pictures at the Garrick, a large Chestnut street theatre, Philadelphia, Manager Marks has a deep sea diver in complete diving costume standing constantly in the lobby of the theatre. This stunt attracts much interest and many favorable comments from passersby, and many hundreds are induced thereby to go in and see the pictures.

WHO WOULD REFUSE A FREE AUTOMOBILE?

A MAXWELL automobile to be given away to the man or woman receiving the highest number of votes is the drawing card at the Majestic theatre, Boise, Idaho, this month. The theatre is packed nightly by the friends of some thirty candidates who are selling tickets to get votes.

With each admission a ticket is given, good for five votes. Books containing ten tickets are sold by the contestants on the streets and in hotels. The fact that the tickets are good at any time is inducing many to purchase to help out their friends.

The syndicate putting on the contest, announces that the machine is the 145th given away by them through motion picture show contests, and by this fall they expect to have given away 300. The contest closes May 15.

SPECIAL CHILDREN'S FILMS

AT the solicitation of a committee from the ministerial association, and at the request of the Mothers congress and the Parent-Teachers association, H. S. Clemmer, manager of the Clemmer theatre, Spokane, Wash., has arranged a series of special children's film programs, to be presented on Saturday mornings during the summer season.

These will be in addition to the regular film bookings. The kiddies' show will run from 10 to 11 a. m.

There were 100,000 persons in the parade, and it took nearly four hours to pass the reviewing stand. Essanay took nearly 7,000 feet of film, which was shown the new Chicago officials. The mayor and his aids had the pleasure of seeing themselves in the pictures. The exhibition was given in the projection rooms of Essanay's downtown offices in the First National Bank building.

LUNA TO PRODUCE IN NORBIG STUDIOS

G. P. Hamilton, director of the Luna company, writes from Los Angeles that the company has moved from its old studio to the Norbig studios at Los Angeles, which it has leased for six months, with the anticipation of having the advantage of wonderful outdoor scenery and light for the making of comedies for the United program.

At the end of the lease, the company expects to go to new studios of its own somewhere in the vicinity, and with an enlarged company to support Dot Farley, who is playing all the leads for the comedies, expect to increase their output.

ROTHACKER SPEAKS AT CHICAGO BANQUET

He was introduced by Mr. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park State Bank, and entertained the two hundred real estate men present by a very instructive and interesting illustrated lecture on the advertising and educational value of motion pictures.

Myrtle Tannehill Successful Here and Abroad

Kalem Star, Featured in "When the Mind Sleeps," a Pathetic Study of Arrested Mentality, Is Noted for Faithful Character Portrayals

ONE of the few American artists who can be said to have succeeded abroad where so many of her fellow countrymen have failed is Myrtle Tannehill, who is featured in Kalem's three-act Broadway Favorites production, "When the Mind Sleeps."

This star of the legitimate stage came to Kalem direct from her success at the Longacre theatre, where she appeared in "A Pair of Sixes," one of the few big successes Broadway has known this season. Miss Tannehill is well known to the people who patronize Broadway attractions, and to enumerate these would be to make mention of some of the foremost productions presented in the metropolis.

"Broadway Jones," which scored at the Cohan theatre some seasons ago, is one of these hits. Her work in the role of Josie Richards, opposite George M. Cohan, is still remembered. "Snobs," presented at the Hudson theatre, is still another play in which she scored.

Among the productions in which she appeared prior to her engagement with Kalem were: "Just Out of College," in which Max Figman was starred; "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "The Girl of the Golden West" (on tour) and "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." So pleasing were her portrayals in these productions that Miss Tannehill, as has already been stated, was sent to London, where she repeated the triumphs she had scored here.

Miss Tannehill enacts the role of Wenda, a victim of cretinism, or arrested mentality, in "When the Mind Sleeps." Her portrayal of this pathetic character is said to be a truly remarkable piece of acting. This Broadway Favorites feature, like those which preceded it, will be released in regular service. The date of release is Monday, June 14.

Kane Helps Exhibitors with Lavish Paper Display

Backs Belief in "Prohibition" as a Drawing Card By Bringing Out Nine Styles of Posters, and Other Strong Advertising Matter

IF present indications count for anything, before another month has passed, all available territorial rights on "Prohibition," the big anti-liquor melodrama, will have been disposed of. Robert T. Kane, president of the Prohibition Film corporation, the owner of the feature, says that he has already received offers for every state as well as for a number of foreign countries.

Almost without exception, Mr. Kane says, the offers have been attractive ones, but the actual closing of contracts on a great deal of the territory has been held up until such time as other offers already tentatively made can be officially recorded.

No less than six offers from as many different people have been made for the world rights on the picture, but all of these propositions have been refused because of the company's conviction that the best interests of the moving picture industry, as well as their own best interests, are to be served by the disposal of the rights on the picture in the usual way. One offer for the world promotion of the picture came from newspaper interests in the United States, which represent one of the biggest combinations of capital in the country.

The Prohibition Film Corporation has "gone the limit" in the handling of the big feature which has aroused so much interest, both because of its inherent strength as a story and because of its timeliness. Nine styles of posters, all in several colors, including a twenty-sheet, which is an exceptional "flash," have been provided. In addition there are heralds, slides, photographs, a press book, and press sheets for use in lobby frames.

In and Out of Los Angeles Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 24.

A GRAND free-for-all Rodeo was staged at the NYMP studio, consisting of fifteen thrilling events, all of which was made in the order of a reception to Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the studio, who was able to return for the first time on that day since the recent accident in which he was injured when an automobile turned turtle.

Fully 2,000 people witnessed the events, which were given on the hills overlooking the NYMP studio, and not only the best horsemen of this motion picture company, but many others who had been here to participate in the national event took part. The Rodeo was in charge of E. H. Allen, superintendent of the NYMP studios, and S. C. Smith, assistant director to W. S. Hart. During the fifteen numbers, scenes were made for a two-reel subject, "Pinto Ben," founded on the poem of the same name by Mr. Hart.

The Henry McRae 101 Bison company, accompanied by a number of well seasoned seamen, went to Santa Barbara this week, where they will make pictures around the wreck of the Aggie Norge, the Norwegian steamer which met destruction on the rocks in a recent storm. The wrecked boat was loaded with sacks of barley and beans, and was purchased by the Universal company.

As the cargo became water-soaked it began to swell and crush the timbers of the ship as though by explosives. It is very probable the McRae company will remain in the north for fully two weeks, and an attempt is now being made to secure other boats to use in connection with this. It is understood that several submarines have been secured.

Allen Goes to New York

Eugene H. Allen, business manager of the NYMP studio, has started for New York, where he will spend a week in consultation with Adam Kessal, Jr., and Charles O. Baumann.

Director Charles Swickard and the company of players producing "The Beckoning Flame," went to Tia Juana the first of last week, where they will use settings that are exact replica of East Indian buildings. Henry Woodruff is being featured in this five-reel Mutual Master-Picture. This subject will in all probability be finished this week, and Mr. Swickard and his company will then take up the next feature, "Redeemed from Bondage."

Motion picture dogs at the NYMP studio last week caused delay in production, for they broke into the dressing room of Bessie Barriscale, being featured in the Mutual Master-Picture, "The Mating," and destroyed one of the star's gowns. The particular one had been made especially for this picture, depicting styles of the late nineties, and when this was destroyed there was nothing for Director West to do but to delay scene-making until another dress could be made.

A very elaborate oil painting is being made at the NYMP studio by Clyde Tracy an artist-actor, which will be used in the Washington Mansion scene in the political story, "The Man from Oregon," now being filmed by Reginald Barker.

"The Burglar's Baby," a two-reel human interest story by Richard B. Spencer, is being filmed by Walter Edwards. This, as with a number of characterization plays by Mr. Edwards, gives him the part of a reformed crook forced at first to steal in order to support his family, and later the opportunity for redemption.

"The Ruse" Full of Thrills

"The Ruse," a two-reel Western story being produced by W. S. Hart at the NYMP studios, hinges about a bonfire. In this Mr. Hart appears in his usual role, that of a gun-fighter, and prevents a mine owner being swindled out of his property, and releases a girl from imprisonment at the hands of an underworld gang. The campfire serves to give warning and thus prevents the crooks from being successful. The scenario is by Arthur Johnson.

A pretty drama of small city life, "The Burden Bearer," from a scenario by F. McGrew Willis, is being made by Burton King. This features Adele Lane and has a notable cast of twelve people. The photoplay points out the mistake frequently made by young people by keeping their marriage a secret. In this instance two homes are all but wrecked before a reconciliation is effected.

"The Twelve Superior Gods" is a one-reel drama showing the outcome of hasty action on the part of a juror. This is being made for the Laemmle brand, Universal, and the plot is woven about a hung jury, which ballots for hours, on a murder case. On the suggestion of one, they flip a coin to decide whether the man is guilty or innocent. The photoplay is based upon a similar instance occurring in New York City a number of years ago, following which there was a general shake-up in administrative and judicial circles, and a wholesale prosecution of jurors and court officers.

"My Friend Schneider" has been used as a subject for a two-reel character sketch featuring Murdock MacQuarrie. In this a pawnbroker and loan shark, known for his heartless ways, refers all the needy to his friend, "Schneider," who in reality is himself. Others appearing in this are Miss Lehr, Bob Adair, and Mark Fenton. This company, releasing Big U brands, is just completing a similar production, "A Miracle of Morpheus," in which a cold money-mad miser is brought to see his folly.

Has Nothing on China Shop Bull

Introducing more comedy than did the bull in the china store, a Universial City bear is used this week in the making of the one-reel joker, "The Artist's Model," produced by Robert Daly. Fritzie Brunette appears as the model, Tom Walsh, the husband, and Frank MacQuarrie, the artist. The scenario is by Miss Smythe Addison.

Henry Otto, American director at Santa

LORETTA BLAKE IN A SCENE FROM "11.30 P. M." (Reliance-Mutual)

Barbara, is on a vacation, which he is spending in his former homes, Chicago and St. Louis.

The Mutual Master-Picture, "The House of a Thousand Scandals," has just been completed at the American studios at Santa Barbara, in which Harold Lockwood is featured. This photoplay is from the story of the same name.

Kalem Director J. P. McGowan is putting over an entirely new one this week in "Hazards of Helen" series. In this the heroine will be tied by the villain to the pistonrod of a locomotive and then the power turned on.

The Rodeo given by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce last week served as a setting for a one-reel Albuquerque comedy-drama, filmed by G. P. Hamilton. The story for this was written by Dot Farley about the character of Winnie Brown, who took part in the Rodeo.

In the woman's one-mile relay race about the quarter-mile track, in which Miss Brown changed saddle from one horse to another three times, she won first prize, making the mile in two minutes and thirty-seven seconds. The story deals with an Englishman who came to America, and then because of relatives in his native land deserts his wife and daughter here.

Griffith Goes to Chicago

Later a sister of the Englishman and her daughter meet the brother's daughter, who proves to be Miss Brown. This subject will constitute the first comedy-drama release by the Albuquerque company on the United program, which will be made the last week in July.

THE "DON'T SHOOT" FLAG FOR CAMERAMEN AT UNIVERSAL CITY

The Farce Comedy company of the Albuquerque company, under the direction of Nick Cogley, this week filmed a one-reel subject, "The Veterans and the Widows," with exteriors and some of the interiors made at the California Soldiers Home at Sawtelle. The principals of this company are Evelyn Thatcher, Ed. Harley, and Jake Abrams.

Director-General D. W. Griffith of the Reliance-Majestic studios left for Chicago Saturday, where he went to attend the premier performance of "The Birth of a Nation," which will be given at the Illinois theatre. At this engagement the same prices will be charged as at New York and Boston.

It was Mr. Griffith's intention not to take additional bookings for this subject until the fall, fearing the unfavorable weather conditions would cut the season short; but it was only after numerous urgent telegrams from the Chicago people that this engagement was accepted. It is understood a long time run is promised.

The Universal studio at Hollywood has been secured as temporary producing plant for the Quality Pictures, Inc., for the Metro program, and the production of the first subject was taken up there last week, the title being, "The Second in Command," which will be produced in five acts, starring Francis X. Bushman and Margarita

MEMBERS OF THE MAJESTIC JUVENILE COMPANY AT LOS ANGELES

Snow. This is an adaptation from the successful Broadway play. Supporting Mr. Bushman in this feature will be Helen Dunbar, Evelyn Greeley, and Lester Cunoe.

The producing plant will be in charge of President Fred Balshofer of Quality Pictures, who will remain on the Coast, and the business management will be invested with Charles "Feature" Abrams, who came to the West Coast with Mr. Balshofer and Mr. Bushman. It is understood their present quarters have been leased only temporarily, as it is the intention to remove to the producing plant owned by Mr. Balshofer, now used by the Ideal Feature company, whose lease does not expire until July. Miss Snow arrived Thursday of this week, and took up her work the following day.

The H. C. Mathews company, making subjects for the Universal, has completed "The Healing of Mary Brown," a two-reel child and fairy story. Next, "The Care of Children," a comedy, will be made, which has for its principal character a feature of how children should be reared, theoretically speaking.

The baby daughter of this perfectly proper mother escapes from home and plays with numerous other children. The mother, that afternoon, reads a paper on the incompetency of mothers. As an illustration for the paper a number of slum workers are induced to bring into the meeting a number of children found in the slums. The daughter of the "preacher" is among them. The subject will be complete in one reel. Baby Early and Elsie Albert are featured in these two interesting subjects.

Takes Up "Old Heidelberg"

John Emerson, late legitimate stage star, who has been with the Reliance and Majestic since the first of the year, has been appointed producer, and is this week taking up the filming of his first subject, "Old Heidelberg."

Last year, while under the management of Charles Frohman, Mr. Emerson spent considerable time in Germany familiarizing himself with German customs and details necessary for the successful production of "Old Heidelberg" on the American stage; but the outbreak of the war caused a change in the plans of Mr. Frohman, and the production was indefinitely postponed.

When Mr. Emerson became connected with the motion picture company here, he immediately suggested that a film version of this celebrated piece be made, with the result that rights were secured. The subject will be made in four reels as a M-M picture. Dorothy Gish will appear in the part of Kathie and Wallace Reid plays opposite as Karl.

Two R-M producing companies are this week at San Diego—one which is making scenes for the three-reel Majestic subject, "Father and Son," using the factory of the Savage Rubber Company; the other producing company is that making the "Fox Woman" from the play by John Luther Long. In the former Ralph Lewis and Francelia Billington appear in the leading parts, while in the latter Teddy Sampson, Elmer Clifton and Bert Hadley are the principals.

"The Old Clothes Shop" is being made

DRAMATIC MOMENTS FROM CHAPTERS FOUR AND FIVE OF THE NORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION'S "DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

with Thomas Jefferson playing the part of the old clothes man. This will be completed in two reels. The story deals with two crooks who read of a handsome gift to a society woman by her brother who has just arrived in the city. The crooks endeavor to secure the gift, but their plans are frustrated by the old clothes man and his grand-daughter. Mr. Jefferson is supported by Bessie Buskirk as the granddaughter, a romantic novel reader, and a cast composed of W. E. Lawrence, Alice Field and Vester Perry. The production is in charge of Giles Warren.

Fay Tincher, Mutual Comic brand comedian, is soon to give the screen fans a glimpse of her first prize winning bathing suit in the one reel comic, "When Breezes Blow."

When the M-R studio managers learned Miss Tincher was to take part in the Annual Bathing Day Parade, the one big event of Venice, a story was prepared for this comedy which would permit the display of all the beauty of Miss Tincher's beach "disguise," and also make of this subject a spectacular comedy, not expecting that the Comic comedian would be selected the winner of the contest by the Mayor and four other prominent citizens of Venice who acted as judges.

Hard Hunt for Coal Mine Set

When the event took this unexpected turn much was added to the subject, all of which was filmed and taken part in by the regular Comic players.

"The Burned Hand" is a two reel Majestic subject of heart interest nature, being produced by Tod Browning, with William Hinkley, Miriam Cooper, Cora Drew and W. E. Lawrence in the principal parts. This is a story of a college romance in which the couple are estranged by their parents.

It has a number of highly melodramatic scenes, including thrilling fights and campus escapades which lead up to the kidnapping of the daughter by the father. Miss Cooper has just returned from a long visit in the East.

The absence of a coal mine in or about the film colony region of California has caused many producers to change their scrips, as suitable locations for the exteriors could not be had. Furthermore there is very little coal to be found in California—on the market or in railroad yards—as all depend upon crude oil for fuel.

In the face of these difficulties, the success the Universal producers are achieving in the making of "The Scarlet Sin," a five reel subject featuring Hobart Bosworth, supported by Jane Novak and produced by Director Otis Turner, will seem even more apparent.

When the story was finally decided upon, location men were sent in all directions to secure pictures of mines—gold, copper, and one or two coal—but in all instances the locations were unacceptable.

Sets in Consecutive Order

The Universal company then ordered a complete outfit of coal mining machinery and built its own coal mine at Universal city—and this coal mine town is a city now within itself.

There are the shacks of the miners, the various power developing plants, blacksmith and repair shops, together with scores of railroad tracks and switches, and finally a train load of coal imported across the mountains.

Exterior scenes for a majority of the five reels are laid about the mines where Mr. Bosworth, appearing as a minister, works as a missionary.

O. A. C. Lund, recently added to the producing staff of the Universal, this week began work of filming his first subject, which will consist of five reels, and is from an original scenario, entitled "Just Jim." Harry Carey, formerly of the Biograph, and Jean Taylor have been selected as the leading players.

The story deals with the smuggling of Chinese in to America following the passage of the contraband law, and the players went to San Francisco the latter part of last week where scenes were made along the water front and in Chinatown.

An interior set made entirely of wood and of such size as to almost completely fill the enclosed studio at the Lasky producing plant was completed and used last week for scenes in "Chimmie Fadden," featuring Victor Moore.

The set represents several rooms in a New York City residence—the entrance, lounging room or library, the dining room and pantry—all placed in their regular order so that scenes could be taken in one and show views in either. The walls were composed of inlaid wainscoting with hand decorations above, and there were built in buffets, china closets, book shelves, seats, a grand fireplace, and all were of the massive early English style.

The bonds of friendship existing between the newspaper and moving picture professions were more firmly cemented on the evening of May 13, when the Press Club of Los Angeles acted as host to the members of the Static Club and others affiliated with the film industry, at a Dutch lunch and smoker held in the Press Club's newly-opened quarters on Spring street. The occasion was one of merriment, humorous impromptu speeches by a number of the notables present enlivening the joyous function.

While the event was dedicated to the Static Club, participation in it was limited to the camera men. Directors, actors, scenario editors and publicity managers joined in the festivities and paid tribute to the press as a medium of communication between the studio and the public.

Ray T. Van Ettisch, president of the Press Club, acted as toastmaster, and during the course of the lunch called upon virtually all of the better-known guests to address the gathering.

Among those who responded to toasts were: Otis Turner, Eugene H. Allen, Al. E. Christie, Robert Z. Leonard, Rex de Roselli, Kenneth A. O'Hara, Wm. Uhlman, M. G. Jonas and Rafael Jose Dominguez.

ALL-CELTIC MOVES INTO LARGER OFFICES

The All-Celtic Films, Inc., of 1400 Broadway, New York, producers of the "Peaceful Rafferty" series of one-part Irish comedies on the World Film program, has taken larger offices in the Knickerbocker building, which was made necessary by the big increase in activities of the company, of which Gene Techenor is general manager; Henry Schlatter, vice-president; Charles C. O'Mara, president; and J. A. Fitzgerald, director-general.

DOLLY LARKIN AND WILLAM RYNO WTH MINA

Dolly Larkin and William Ryno are the latest acquisitions to the producing force of MinA films.

Miss Larkin, in private life the wife of George Larkin, also a well-known photoplayer, has been in picture work for several years, during which time she appeared in productions made by the Universal companies, Frontier, Edison and others.

Mr. Ryno, too, has had wide experience before the camera. Six years ago he was a member of the Nestor company, and has since that time been engaged with other organizations.

The two new players make their first appearance with MinA films in "Father Forgot," a single reel comedy which is to be released on the regular program, Thursday, June 10.

WHARTONS WILL MAKE ITHACA PERMANENT ADDRESS

The Whartons, Pathé producers, and the "Romance of Elaine" company left for Ithaca recently with two carloads of scenery and "props."

Among those at the Lackawanna station in Hoboken were: Lionel Barrymore, Pearl White, Creighton Hale, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Wharton, Theodore Wharton, J. Whitworth Buck, and Leroy F. Baker. All were looking forward to their work in Ithaca.

The picture will be made at the fine new property which the Whartons have acquired in Ithaca, and where extensive improvements have been made during the last three or four months. Every facility for making pictures has been provided for, and in the future Ithaca will be the permanent address of the Whartons.

ALL CELTIC STARTS ON FOURTH COMEDY

Director J. A. Fitzgerald and President C. C. O'Hara, of the All Celtic Films, Inc., took a large company of players down to Coney Island to enact exterior scenes for the next comedy of the adventures of "Peaceful Rafferty" series, entitled "Rafferty goes to Coney Island," which bids fair to be a great deal funnier than the last one.

Itala, Now That Italy Is at War, Will Produce Here

Maciste, the Giant Slave in "Cabiria," Will Be Featured in 6-Reel Pictures—$50 Prize Offered for Best Title to First Production

ADVICES from Torino confirm recent rumors that the Itala company is to produce in America. This move was decided on some time ago, anticipating the participation of Italy in the European war, but for various reasons Harry R. Raver, head of the American company, has withheld the information until operations were actually begun and definite statements could be made.

Maciste, the now-famous giant of "Cabiria," will be featured in an important hero-adventure, written by Agnes L. Bain, the author whose stories are well known to magazine readers throughout the country and Americans abroad.

A popular contest for the selection of an appropriate title for the first Maciste production will be held following a private showing of the first sample at which time only representatives of the trade press will be permitted to compete. Fifty dollars in gold will be given for the best title submitted.

A portion of the Maciste production has already been completed abroad. The remainder will be staged in America. The company of Itala players selected for the American engagement includes popular stars of "Cabiria." Many American artists will be used to round out the cast.

Six reels will compose the average length of the new American-Itala productions. Much stress will be laid on the creation of novel scenes and situations, new effects and colorings and the incorporation in all productions of the Itala patented system for securing stereoscopic relief.

Mr. Raver would make no statement as to his probable market for the American-Itala productions other than an expression of confidence in the high quality of his company's films and the belief that they will sell readily.

Mackenzie Pictures on Exhibition at the Lyceum

New York Public Will Have Opportunity to See Animal Films on June 7—The Courageous Huntress Is a Crack Shot

LADY GRACE MACKENZIE has taken the Lyceum theatre for the purpose of giving the first public showing of her thrilling lion, rhinoceros and elephant hunts in the form of moving pictures, with which she has just returned after a long and successful expedition in East Africa.

The modern Diana is the first person to invade the jungle and return with at least one specimen of every known species of big game in the district. In addition to those she brought down with her own rifle, she captured numerous cubs and transported them to this country and brought back with her four miles of moving picture film. These were obtained at a cost of more than $400,000.

It is Lady Mackenzie's boast that her pictures are not only educational pictures of the wild beasts of the jungle in their native state, but that they show in most exciting manner the real action of some of the most desperate hunts after ferocious animals.

Her lion hunt is the piece de resistance and shows a huge African lion charging straight at the intrepid huntress and her male companion. Lady Mackenzie fires and wounds the king of beasts; the man hunter fires and misses.

The performances will consist of a two hour and a half entertainment, accompanied by a lecture and will be introduced in a novel manner, which will be in the nature of a surprise. The pictures will be shown twice daily at 2:30 and 8:30, beginning with the evening performance on Monday, June 7.

PATHÉ OBTAINS RIGHTS TO POPULAR NOVELS

Pathé has added to its list of popular novels for picturization "The Picture of Dorian Gray," by Oscar Wilde, "Nedra," by George Barr McCutcheon, and "Comrade John," by Samuel Merwin and Henry Kitchell Webster.

All of these books have enjoyed such a wide vogue that the features made from them should attract much attention.

Each picture will be presented by a stellar cast, the personnel of which will be announced later.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

NO PRICE COMBINATION FORMED IN NEW ORLEANS

THE newly organized Film Trades Club of New Orleans, composed of seven exchanges, has addressed a letter to every exhibitor in three or four surrounding states, calling attention to the fact that there has been no combination formed for the purpose of raising prices of film service, but, on the contrary, the sole aim is to better conditions and put the industry on a sound business basis and keep it there.

Several extracts of the letter are pertinent:

"Through our organization we have so arranged matters as to give protection to the established and dependable exhibitors from the non-permanent and irresponsible theatre operators. For example, it has been proven that of eighty-seven theatres licensed in the city of New Orleans, an alarmingly large percentage has been operated upon a purely speculative basis by promoters or brokers who expect to make money by the sale of these theatres, not by the legitimate operation of same. This class of exhibitor comes into your locality and, by defrauding as many film exchanges as he can, exists for weeks on business that rightfully belongs to the responsible exhibitor."

Signed: World Film corporation; Mutual Film corporation; United Program Film service of Louisiana; Paramount Pictures; Consolidated Film and Supply company; Pathé Exchange, Inc.; and the Fox Film corporation.

The first frolic of the Film Trades Club was held at Spanish Fort last Saturday night. Tables were placed in view of Lake Ponchartrain, and the merriment did not subside until after midnight. A banquet was served.

DINNER HELD IN HONOR OF NORTH AT SAN FRANCISCO

MEN interested in the film industry of San Francisco to the number of more than fifty gathered at a popular downtown cafe at the luncheon hour on May 15 to bid good-bye to Tom North, who is leaving for Seattle to open a branch office for the V-L-S-E, Inc.

This gathering was one of the largest ever held there and included both exchange men and exhibitors, all eager to pay tribute to the man who in a little more than a year's time made himself the most popular exchange man in San Francisco.

The feature of the gathering was the presentation of a black walrus Boston bag, a traveler's toilet set and a silver headed cane, with articles of a humorous nature, to Mr. North, the presentation speech being made by H. J. Gosliner, of the Edison theatre.

Mr. North went to San Francisco early in 1914 and opened an office here for George Kleine, continuing as manager until the business was taken over recently by Sol Lesser and the office removed to 234 Eddy street. He was one of the organizers of the Film Exchange Board of Trade, and of the Screen Club of San Francisco, and was responsible to a large degree for the success of the Screen Club ball held last fall, having led the publicity work.

Before leaving San Francisco Mr. North was entertained at dinner by the general manager of the Wells-Fargo Express company, the superintendent and special agent of that concern, and officials of the Wells-Fargo Nevada National Bank. He was also the guest of honor at a dinner tendered by the Pals at the Rex Cafe, which was attended by almost one hundred members of the theatrical profession, rounding up a leave-taking such as has seldom been witnessed here.

Upon reaching the Northwest Mr. North will inspect both Seattle and Portland and will determine upon a location for headquarters. It was planned at first to locate at Portland, but it is now considered likely that Seattle will be the place chosen for this important branch.

WORLD FILM ENLARGES TORONTO BRANCH

ARTHUR M. WILBUR and Samuel Fine have been appointed to the sales force of the Toronto branch of the World Film corporation. Both have had valuable experience in the motion picture business, with other organizations.

NEWS OF THE EXCHANGES IN THE QUAKER CITY

THE Metro Film Exchange, of which John D. Clark is president and Wm. W. Betchell, treasurer, has well planned offices at Vine street. In spite of slow conditions generally, the Metro reports large bookings in their territory of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New York on their big features, of which there is one release each week.

Much interest is being manifested in Philadelphia film circles over the One Hundred ($100) Dollar silver loving cup which has been donated by the Metro Film Corporation to the Reading convention. This cup will be the prize given to the best dancer from motion picture circles present at the big ball during convention week. It is expected that some of the "Lubinites," many of whom are experts in the Terpsichorean art, will carry off this trophy.

J. S. Hebrew is fast getting order out of chaos in his new V-L-S-E office at 229 North Twelfth street.

C. E. Shurtleff, formerly special representative of the World Film Corporation, is now with the V-L-S-E in the Quaker City territory and has started on a Southern trip.

Buck, formerly of Chicago, with the Blinkhorn features, has been put in charge of the Picture Playhouse exchange. Mr. Dustin is now connected with the Metro Film corporation.

Employes of the Fox Film corporation in the Polar Wave building, St. Louis, are congratulating their manager, Sidney J. Baker, on his marriage to Phoebe Brown, of Kansas City, on May 11.

HOLDERMAN SAYS BUSINESS IS ON INCREASE

FRED HOLDERMAN, manager of the New York exchange of the United Film service, has returned from an automobile trip through the state, in which he visited the smaller cities having theatres exhibiting the United Program.

He reports brilliant prospects for the future of the United Film service. In Bridgeport Mr. Holderman found that the two houses exhibiting the United program, the Roman and the Arco theatres, were the most popular theatres in the city, and that they were turning people away from their crowded auditoriums every performance.

Mr. Holderman says that he saw a steady stream of people refused admittance during a few minutes while he remained in the box office. The New York exchange man reports growing business all along the line at South Norwalk, Seven Rock, New Haven, Waterbury, Seaworth, Poughkeepsie and the other places he visited.

Lambson, the energetic manager of the Los Angeles branch, together with Harry Leonhardt, the Pacific coast manager of the Fox concern, have been making fur fly at the new branch office and establishing it under Mr. Sheehan's mentorship, as a headquarters for exhibitors.

MURPHY LEADS IN BAY STATE CENSOR FIGHT

FOREMOST in the fight of the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League against the Carstens bill, which provides for a paid censor board of five members and an advisory board of seven unpaid members for the State of Massachusetts, is Fred Murphy, New England manager of the United Film Service, with headquarters at Boston.

He has been quoted extensively in the Boston papers as a live wire film man whose word has authority back of it. The fight has been conducted by the motion picture men against the infringements of their rights by petition and by slides exhibited in their houses telling what detriment the proposed bill will cause.

The Boston Central Labor Union and the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange have passed resolutions in opposition to the bill.

WORLD FILM MOVES SOUTHERN OFFICE TO NEW ORLEANS

SEVERAL important changes amongst New Orleans exchanges have been announced. First and foremost, the World Film's Southern headquarters are on June 1 to be removed to New Orleans. The reason for this, it is said, is that New Orleans offers a much more lucrative field than does any other Southern city. It is claimed that further shifts are to be made before July 1.

E. Auger, New Orleans manager of the Mutual Film corporation, at one time manager for Pathé, succeeds C. W. Sawin, the Southern manager of World Film. Mr. Sawin resigned about three weeks ago, and George Schaeffer, sales manager for the World Film, made a special trip to New Orleans to look after Mr. Sawin's successor. The naming of Mr. Auger is quite popular with New Orleans film men, who have wished him top-notch success in his new field.

Maurice F. Barr, who several months ago was a New Orleans newspaperman, succeeds Carl Bugbee as manager of the New Orleans office of World Film. Mr. Barr will share joint headquarters with Mr. Auger at 834 Gravier street. Mr. Barr's rise in the film game has been rapid, as was his newspaper career in the Crescent City.

M. W. Lawrence, formerly representative of the North American and Thanhouser, has been named manager of the new World Film office in Memphis, Tenn., and begins his new duties about June 1. Mr. Lawrence was handling "The Diamond from the Sky," which is in turn handed to Fred. Goodrow, a former Pathé man.

FOX ENLARGES OFFICES IN NEW ORLEANS

HEADQUARTERS of the Fox company, in the Weis building, New Orleans, are being enlarged to make room for the growing business of this exchange.

S. T. Stephens, the manager, is an exchange man who has jumped into a new field on short notice and has made more than good.

The business turned in by him is very satisfactory.

"The Running Fight" features Violet Hemming, who is supported by a distinguished cast of photoplayers including Thurlow Bergen, Robert Cummings, Robert Cain and W. T. Carleton. James Durkin produced the picture, the length of which is five thousand feet.

W. E. Green is general manager of the Pre-eminent company with offices at 110 West Fortieth street, New York City.

GARDENS OF NOTE WILL SERVE AS VITAGRAPH BACKGROUND

A mingling of the beautiful and sensational interwoven through the thread of a human interest story will characterize "The Turn of the Road," a Vitagraph four-part drama which Tefft Johnson is producing with a cast that enlists Joseph Kilgour, Virginia Pearson, Naomi Childers, Bobby Connelly and Robert Gaillard in the enactment of the principal characters.

Director Johnson plans to take a number of scenes in which the action takes place in the far-famed gardens of a beautiful mansion at Mt. Kisco, N. Y. "The Turn of the Road" will not only serve to introduce Mr. Kilgour and Miss Pearson to Vitagraph pictures, but will be released as a Blue Ribbon feature.

"THE WHITE SISTER" WILL BE RELEASED EARLY

The Essanay five-part production, featuring Viola Allen in her stage success, "The White Sister," has been moved forward on the V. L. S. E. program.

"The White Sister" is now scheduled for release on June 21, and exhibitors will be enabled to put on this picture a full month ahead of the anticipated time.

It is said that when "The White Sister" is seen in its screen form, the beauty of its photography and its dramatic range will be a revelation to the critics.

In these releases an impartial presentation of the military and naval strength of the United States will be shown. The first release this week is based upon the naval division. DOROTHY BERNARD NEW LEAD IN FOX FILM

Dorothy Bernard, a well-known actress of distinctly unusual charm and ability, is the new leading woman selected for William Farnum by William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation. Miss Bernard is cast as Greeba in the forthcoming Fox production of Hall Caine's novel, "The Bondman," in which William Farnum is starred. With Mr. Farnum as Red Jason most of the emotional burden of "The Bondman" falls into Miss Bernard's hands.

Miss Bernard was leading woman of the Belasco theatre in Los Angeles for three years and then became the star of the Columbia Stock Company in Washington. She appeared as star in the New York production of "The Amazons," by Arthur Wing Pinero, and "Lovers' Lane," by Clyde Fitch. Her last stage engagement was with Owen Johnson's drama, "The Salamander," at the Harris theatre. Her first appearance in pictures was with the Biograph company, with which organization she was connected for two years, playing all the important parts in the principal productions of this company. Later she joined the Lubin company, playing all the principal characters in the biggest features put out by this concern. She was seen in support of Nance O'Neil in the William Fox production of "Princess Romanoff," scoring an individual triumph.

DOROTHY BERNARD

WILLIAM WADSWORTH IN A REALISTIC SCENE FROM "COHEN'S LUCK" (Edison)

WILL SHOW REPLICA OF NOTRE DAME IN FOX PICTURE

Keen anticipation and much curiosity is felt over the forthcoming Fox production of "The Two Orphans," which has been written for the screen and produced by Herbert Brenon, the director of the "Kreutzer Sonata" and "The Clemenceau Case." Neither money nor care has been spared to make the present screen version of D'Ennery's drama in which Theda Bara,

HERBERT BRENON AND JEAN SOTHERN IN "THE TWO ORPHANS"

William E. Shay and Jean Southern are starred. Mr. Brenon himself enacts the character of Pierre, the pathetic cripple whose love for the blind girl Louise is one of the moving motives of the drama.

Every one of the massive sets used in the production has been built up with scrupulous care and minute attention to detail, such scenes, for instance, as the streets of Paris, showing the arrival of the two orphans, and the front of Notre Dame Cathedral being built to the exact scale of the original subjects.

The prison of La Salpetriere alone cost $10,000 to build and required in its construction ten tons of masonry work, three miles of canvas, a dozen barrels of nails, four tons of paint, and the services of one hundred carpenters, twenty painters, ten stone masons and a score of electricians.

Besides the stars mentioned the company engaged in presenting "The Two Orphans" contains such notable names as Gertrude Berkley, Frank Goldsmith, E. L. Fernandez, Sheridan Block, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh and John Daly Murphy.

GEORGE KLEINE FINISHES "THE SPENDTHRIFT"

George Kleine's "The Spendthrift," founded on Porter Emerson Browne's Broadway success, was finished by Director Edwin at the Kleine studios last week.

Irene Fenwick, the star of "The Song of Songs," will be seen in a role exactly suited to her talents in "The Spendthrift," supported by two other well known Broadway thespians in Cyril Keightley, who is appearing with Miss Fenwick in "The Song of Songs" at the Eltinge theatre, and Malcom Duncan, long known to theatregoers as a leading man for Harrison Grey Fiske.

"The Spendthrift" has been made in typical Kleine style, with its characteristic thoroughness and minute attention to detail.

4-Reel Kalems for Regular Service Every 2 Weeks

The Features Will Appear on Mondays, Beginning July 12, Under the Brand Name Broadway Favorites, and Star Only Able Players

BEGINNING Monday, July 12, Kalem will issue on alternate Mondays a four-reel feature production in regular service.

The first of the four-reelers will be a spectacular reproduction of midnight at Maxim's, now being made at the big Kalem studio, Cliffside, New Jersey.

Kalem promises a series of novelties that will prove mile-posts in the motion picture business, and the international reputation for novelties possessed by this company presages something genuinely worth while.

All the four-reel pictures will be marketed under the brand Broadway Favorites. In selecting principals from the stage, Kalem will use only actors who can give the same quality of performance before the camera as they have on the stage. Mere reputation in the theatrical business will not be sufficient; ability of a high order must be the keynote.

Kalem has been a pioneer in the introduction of novelties to the motion picture theatre—notably its production of Boucicault's famous Irish dramas, made in Ireland; Egyptian stories produced along the Nile in Egypt; the great masterpiece "From the Manger to the Cross," depicting the life of the Saviour, produced in authentic locations in Palestine and Egypt, and a host of other distinct innovations, including the employment of William J. Burns in a three-reel detective story.

Kalem paid Detective Burns $8,000 for his appearance in this one picture, and it is claimed by the company that this is the largest amount ever paid to a single individual for work in one picture.

SIDNEY MASON IS NOW WITH UNITED FILM SERVICE

Sidney Mason, who will be remembered for his excellent work with Blanche Walsh in "The Resurrection," and also in the role in "The Count of Monte Cristo," in which he played opposite James O'Neil, has joined the United program and is appearing in Empress Photodramas with Joseph Levering and Marian Swayne.

Mr. Mason appears to good advantage in the role of the artist in "The Vivisectionist," a photoplay written by Reverend Clarence J. Harris, which will be released June 2 on the United program. Sidney Mason makes the second "Mason" on the program.

"Life's Mysteries" Introduces 4 New MinA Players

Goldie Colwell, Louis Fitzroy, George Ovey and Jefferson Osbourne Additions to West Coast Producing Staff Working on Release of June 3

FOUR important additions to the West Coast producing force of MinA films were made last week by the engagement of Goldie Colwell, Louis Fitzroy, George Ovey and Jefferson Osbourne to appear in forthcoming MinA releases.

Miss Colwell has been with Selig's western company at Glendale, Cal., for many months, and comes to MinA with a record of some exceptionally fine picture work, particularly in the serial "The Adventures of Kathlyn." She will play feminine leads.

Louis Fitzroy served with the Nestor-Universal for many years and is very well known. He was a member of one of the early Nestor companies, as was Jefferson Osbourne, who, besides, has appeared in features of the Bosworth company and other organizations. George Ovey headed his own company in the heyday of melodrama, but for the past three years has been engaged in picture work with different Pacific coast companies.

The release in which these new players make their debut under the MinA banner is "Life's Mysteries." It is directed by Milton Fahrney and will be released June 3 on the regular program.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

DALLAS COMMISSION DRAFTS EXCHANGE LAW

THE City Commissioner of Dallas, Texas, has drafted an ordinance which sets forth that in no building over two stories high shall there be a film exchange, carrying film in the building; that all exchanges be heated by steam or basement furnace heating; that each inspector have only one reel of film out of a fireproof vault at a time, and each reel must not be over four hundred feet in length.

There are a few other features of minor importance that are being fought by the exchanges.

Exchange Men Call Meeting

The censorship committee of the Motion Picture Trades Club, composed of L. W. Miller, of the Progressive; E. T. Peter, of the United, and Claude C. Ezell, of the Paramount, went to the Municipal building, May 17, to confer with the commission at 10:30, and in talking with the mayor, was told of this new ordinance which would be voted on at the 11 o'clock meeting of the board.

The exchange men immediately called a meeting of each exchange manager in the city to discuss the matter, and they requested the City Commission to wait until complete information could be given them regarding the various disagreeable features. The commission agreed to await further action until May 18, and asked the exchange men to put their recommendations in a written petition.

On that day the exchange men of Dallas discussed the ordinance with Building Inspector Emmins, Fire Chief Magee and City Fire Marshal in the office of the City Attorney.

Each point in the proposed ordinance was brought up and the exchange men made suggestions as to changes, which were discussed from every angle.

Law Film Men Approve

After a session of about an hour and a half, the ordinance was changed to meet with the approval of the film exchange representatives and the committee for the City Commission, and there is no doubt that the ordinance will be passed within a few days by the administration, becoming a law within two weeks' time, which is allowed the exchanges to comply with the different sections of the ordinance.

As approved by the film exchange men, the Fire Marshal, Building Inspector and Fire Chief, it sets forth as follows:

No film exchange shall be in a building of more than two stories of height. (This does not include a building of two stories and basement.)

All film must be kept in a vault, as specified below, except when receiving shipments, making shipments or while being inspected or repaired.

The vault shall be of brick, concrete or hollow-tile, with walls thirteen inches thick, and an approval vault door.

Film may be taken from the vault for inspection or repairing, but must be immediately put in metal containers on the inspector's table, which must be also of metal. Not more than ten reels for each inspector must be out of the vault at a time. The inspector may take one reel out of the metal container at a time.

Only approved electric lighting is allowed for the vault, with wires in conduit and controlling switch on the outside of the vault.

Film exchanges may be heated with hot water, hot air, steam or natural gas, stoves, but system of heating must be approved by Fire Marshal or Fire Chief or Building Inspector.

The penalty for not complying with the ordinance is a fine of not more than $200 for each offense, and each day will constitute a separate offense.

The ordinance affects every exchange in Dallas more or less, but more particularly those in the Andrews building, a four-story structure at Main and Akard streets. Those in this building who will have to move within two weeks are Pathe Exchange, Inc., Apex Feature Service, Progressive Feature Film Company, Dallas Film Company and Picture Playhouse Film Company. In the Busch building the Standard Film Company will be another to move, and the Big Four Feature Film Company will have to move from the Praetorian building.

Joker in Original Ordinance

The "joker" inserted in the original ordinance of having reels of not more than four hundred feet in length has been done away with, the standard thousand-foot reel being permissible.

The objectionable feature of having only one reel out of the vault at a time is satisfactorily arranged by inserting the clause pertaining to the metal container for reels over the inspection tables, in which may be kept as many as ten reels for each inspector at a time.

It is practically certain that all the exchanges affected by the "two-story building" clause will move to the 1900 block on Main street or Commerce street, the next block over, as these two districts contain all the other exchanges and supply houses in the city.

Quick Decision Expected in Fight Film Appeal

IN the case of L. Lawrence Weber against Fred S. Freed, Deputy Collector of the United States Customs in the port of New York, because Freed refused to allow the importation of the Willard-Johnson fight films, Judge Thomas G. Haight, of the United States District Court of New York, refused to allow the appellant an injunction.

The case was at once brought before Judges Buffington, McPherson and Woolley sitting in the United States District Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, who heard the arguments of Weber's lawyers, Messrs. Toune and Spellman. These attorneys based their appeal from Judge Haight's decision on several counts:

1. Photographic film positives imported by the owner, designed to be used for the purposes of public exhibition by him and not for purposes of traffic, sale or commerce, are not commerce.

2. The public exhibition of motion pictures is not commerce, and hence the photographic film positives in this case being "designed to be used" for purposes of such exhibitions are not instrumentalities of commerce. Many previous cases were cited under these contentions and the attorneys argued that, as the films were not shown to be commerce, it was beyond the power of Congress to enact under the so-called "commerce clause."

The injunction was therefore asked for because to consider these films as commerce was unconstitutional, according to the attorneys' judgment. In the equity of the matter Messrs. Toune and Spellman argued that the value of these pictures depended on their immediate exhibition. That a prompt showing would result in profits of between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. But that any delay would decrease their value and that in four to six months' time that would be absolutely worthless. Therefore an appeal to the Supreme Court, which could not be heard until October, would be of no value to the complainant. The conclusion of the argument was that the granting of the temporary injunction would result in no harm to the public; that if there was objection to said pictures in any one state they could be rejected by the censors of such state; that this was the first time the question had been presented as to whether an exhibition by the owner himself of films which he imports and transports is commerce and therefore previous decisions about what was commerce in other matters would not apply in this case.

Assistant United States District Attorney Bodine, who had charge of the case, based his arguments on the many lottery cases in the United States, when the banishing of the lotteries was contested on the grounds as to whether or not it was commerce, and the sale of lottery tickets from one state to another was decided to be commerce. Mr. Bodine argued that this case bore a nearer resemblance to the lottery cases than any other yet before the courts.

The judges reserved their decision, but in view of the importance of haste in the matter, a decision is expected very shortly.

Both sides are confident of ultimate victory in the matter.

Censor Triumvirate Now Rules in Boston

DESPITE vigorous opposition from the film interests, the law providing a Boston motion picture censorship board of three, consisting of the mayor, the police commissioner and the justice of the municipal court, has just passed both houses of the Massachusetts legislature and been signed by the governor.

The law gives the board full power to ban any show for any reason it sees fit. It was framed to suit the opponents of "The Birth of a Nation," which has caused riots and arrests.

Several votes in both houses toward the final stages of the bill's passage were extremely close, in one case a tie being broken by the Senate's president casting his vote against the film men.

But despite all efforts to reconsider the bill it passed the Senate and House and was signed by the governor within a half hour after he had received it on May 21.

This law does not apply outside of Boston. It provides that a majority vote of the board may ban a play. The mayor is known to be opposed to the Griffith spectacle at the Tremont, which has caused all the trouble. Chief Justice Bolster of the municipal court has heard the opponents of the film in open court; he ordered certain parts of the film cut out; but his attitude as to the whole film is not known. Police Commissioner O'Meara has also withheld his opinion.

Protests against the film have been filed with the censor board for a hearing. The petition is signed by Butler R. Wilson, William H. Lewis and J. Mott Hallowell, counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The colored vote, or rather the legislators' fear of it, can be set down as the obstacle which the film men could not overcome in their opposition to this censorship. The legislature has but one more week to sit, and it is not expected that any state-wide censorship bill will be passed at this session.

Women's Missionary Union Against Sunday Opening

A NEW menace to motion pictures has come in the form of the Women's Interdenominational Missionary Union, in Washington, D. C., which has at present chiefly the aim to close motion picture theatres on Sunday. The organization claims that the shows are sensational and tend to attract the minds of children towards murder, drunkenness and other vicious habits.

A series of resolutions, signed by the president, Mrs. John N. Culbertson, and a committee of three, have been adopted. They are as follows:

"WHEREAS, Deeply imploring that in the District at present, there is no law to enforce respect for Sunday, and

"WHEREAS, On that day moving picture shows are open in all parts of the city, with sensational placards displayed, and

"WHEREAS, The pictures displayed are frequently of a sensational character, and tend to attract the minds of children towards murder, drunkenness and other vicious practices;

"Therefore, Desiring to change and improve present conditions, we ask the help and co-operation of all Christian organizations interested in the welfare and betterment of the community in an effort to abate this nuisance and secure whatever legislation may be necessary."

Error Discovered in Illinois Censorship Bill

AN error has been found in the motion picture censorship bill introduced in the lower house of the Illinois General Assembly by Representative Thomas Curran of Chicago. He has promised representatives of motion picture manufacturers that he will offer an amendment correcting it.

The bill as it stands now provides for a charge of one dollar for the first 1,000 feet of film examined by the censor board and one dollar for each additional foot over 1,000 feet. Representative Curran says the bill was intended to read the same as the senate bill on the same subject.

The senate bill provides for an examination fee of one dollar for the first 1,000 feet and one dollar for each additional foot. Mr. Curran will introduce an amendment to make his bill conform with the senate measure.

KENTUCKY CITY PASSES CENSOR ORDINANCE

The City Council of Richmond, Ky., has passed an ordinance fixing a penalty of twenty-five dollars for any theatre exhibiting an immoral picture. No provision has been made in the ordinance for censorship, and just who is to decide when a picture crosses the line is not set forth.

DEPARTMENT STORES CLASH WITH PITTSBURGH EXHIBITORS

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Western Pennsylvania will shortly have a test case in the Pittsburgh courts unless a system now being worked here is stopped. The officials of the league were notified that one of the big department stores of Pittsburgh was running a motion picture show in an effort to attract trade to the store.

The running of the show on other than the ground floor of the building is a violation of the law and as no admission was charged the store did not have to pay any license fee or war tax. It is said several of the big stores in the city contemplate putting in motion picture theatres, and the result is that many of the houses in the business section will suffer as a result.

The matter infringes on the rights of the legitimate houses and the league will take the matter up, and if it is advisable they will place the matter in the hands of their attorney and fight the matter out in the courts.

FRISCO LICENSE FEE IS STILL UNSETTLED

Tax Collector Edward F. Bryant, of the city and county of San Francisco, has filed a statement with the finance committee of the Board of Supervisors, indicating that there has been a heavy falling off in the collection of licenses of various kinds.

He reports that the theatre license is much less than formerly, owing to the fact that so many houses of this kind have been transformed into moving picture houses, on which the license fee is light.

He has suggested that license fees be readjusted and made higher on a number of lines and owners of moving picture houses are watching to see whether any attempt will be made to force them to pay higher rates.

NO CENSORSHIP IN TENNESSEE AT PRESENT

The following telegram disposes of another of the state censorship bills which have been pending in twelve states. The defeat of this measure is due to the combined efforts of the National Board of Censorship and the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Tennessee. The telegram follows:

"Legislature adjourned Monday without passing any legislation affecting censorship of motion pictures."

ILLINOIS BILL AIMED AT RACE PREJUDICE FILMS

Indications are that the Illinois General Assembly will pass the bill introduced in the lower house by Representative Jackson, negro member from Chicago, which bars from the state all films which tend to "incite race hatred or mob violence."

Representative Jackson's bill has passed the house and now is up for action in the senate. It will hit such photoplays as "The Nigger," "The Birth of a Nation," and other pictures supposed to arouse race prejudice.

Exhibitors' Co-operation Is Needed in Censor Fight

Harry Crandall of Washington, D. C., Warns Managers Against Indifferent Attitude Engendered by the Feeling that Manufacturers Are Doing All that Is Necessary—"Unless Exhibitors Wake Up to the Danger and Do a Little Talking Themselves," Censorship Will Gain Ground

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., May 26.

"DO you know," said Harry Crandall, the live-wire exhibitor of Washington, D. C., in a recent interview, "that I fully believe that 90 per cent. of the people who are agitating for national censorship have seldom, if ever, attended a motion picture exhibition.

"It is marvellous, this lack of knowledge of the business that these people show. They set themselves up as competent judges of what should and what should not be. It is the agitation which they cause that leads to the many difficulties incident to censorship, municipal, state and national.

"I happened to learn the other day that there was to be a gathering of members of a certain 'mother's' organization in Mount Pleasant and, although not invited, I determined to attend it and endeavor to enlighten these worthy members in the matter of censorship. Several of the ladies made extended remarks on the need of censorship in the District of Columbia.

"You can imagine our surprise. I was accompanied by Dr. William P. Herbst and Robert Campbell, when one lady in reply to my query stated that she had been in a motion picture theatre about four years ago, where she attended a children's gathering, but had been afraid to go since that time for the reason that the pictures in front of the theatres had an appearance that led her to believe that the exhibitions were not all that they might be.

"She was very much surprised and taken back when I told her that I had exhibited during the week both 'Fairy and the Waif' and 'M'liss,' both of which plays were familiar to her, and she stated that she had no idea that any effort was made to show such pictures as these. She thought all motion pictures were of the blood and thunder type.

Censorship a State of Mind

"President Wilson recently declared that the present bad business conditions were merely a state of mind; I am firmly of the belief that the so-called need for censorship is a similar ailment. I believe I convinced these worthy ladies that there is little need for censorship in the District of Columbia, especially when I offered to run a show strictly for children every Saturday morning, when nothing but children's plays or educational features would be shown. I told them that I would make an expenditure of $15 per week for this purpose and would give them the privilege of selling the tickets with the view of applying the proceeds to any charity that they might select. I was told that my offer would gladly be accepted, but up to this time I have heard nothing further.

"I do not for a moment admit that there is anything immoral about the average picture, but I firmly believe that the censorship of motion pictures in every little berg in the country is inevitable unless the exhibitors themselves wake up to the danger and, following the tactics of the sponsors of censorship, do a little talking themselves.

"I have two suggestions to make. I would advise exhibitors, no matter where they are located, to use every opportunity offered them for bringing the motion picture industry before the people. I would suggest that they scan the daily papers for notices of just such meetings as that which I, Mr. Campbell and Dr. Herbst attended; go before these assemblies and give your version of censorship.

"It is an easy matter to convince fair-minded people of the mistake that they are making in crying for censorship, and you will find in a majority of cases that the people holding membership in such organizations are educated, intelligent people open to reason.

"There are few who are acquainted with the good work now being done by the New York board, and they seem to think that its officials merely look at the title and then sign the film.

"Give them the facts. Start a campaign of education; don't leave the matter entirely to the manufacturers, for it is your fight as much as theirs; you will suffer more than they will in the end.

Saturday Mornings for Children

"My second suggestion is that the more prosperous exhibitors devote an hour or two every Saturday morning to the children. The expense will be small compared with the results obtained, for we can then go before these agitators and say 'We give a show each week for the benefit of the children, and on a day when there is no school that they may have an opportunity of attending—the other exhibitions are intended for adults only.' It is not to be expected that these juvenile shows will be howling successes, but they will serve to give us a good foothold in our campaign. It will give us the opportunity of telling the people that we did our best to meet their wishes by running shows for children, but that they failed to take advantage of them.

"It must be borne in mind that there is no little prejudice against motion pictures brought about in much the same way as in the case of an automobile. You will often notice as you ride by that people will stop in the road and look at you with contempt, as if you are doing something wrong.

"As the people become more accustomed to automobiles, especially in the large cities, this prejudice dies out, and they are accepted as things needed. So it will be with motion pictures, but the fight will be a hard one. It's a case of every man getting on the firing-line and educating his neighbors."

Mr. Crandall was then asked what, in his opinion, would be the greatest resulting evil from censorship, to which he replied: "Let us take a film that has been passed by the New York board. It goes to Philadelphia, we will assume, and there the censors will find some particular part that does not, in their estimation, comply with the requirements of the law, and orders are issued to cut it out.

Hard to Please All Kinds

"Perhaps the depleted part would be entirely acceptable to the Maryland censors, but they in turn find something that they order cut out. It is a pretty hard matter to make films that will be acceptable to all, for there is sure to be some censors who would even refuse to pass a Biblical production.

"Now Pennsylvania cut out something, Maryland did the same, and the film comes to Washington. Perhaps both pieces would not be objectionable to the district board, but something else might, and thus it will be that by the time we get some of the films they will be very incomplete and will prove to be neither amusing nor educational to our patrons, and the result would be that our patronage would soon dwindle."

STRONG CAST IN "THE GREAT RUBY"

"The Great Ruby," the Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, which is now being made into a feature production by the Lubin company, under the direction of Barry O'Neil, promises to be one of the most remarkable photoplays ever filmed by the Lubin company.

The play is an ideal one for the screen, and the director has a wide latitude for the many big scenes. Mr. O'Neil is taking full advantage of this fact and is sparing neither money nor time in getting the desired results.

The company that is putting on "The Great Ruby" includes Beatrice Morgan, Octavia Handworth, Eleanor Barry, Frankie Mann, Jeannette Hackett, George Soule Spencer, Peter Lang, Chauncey Keim, Walter Hitchcock, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Howard M. Mitchell, Charles Brandt, James Farrell, Douglas Sibole, Richard Wangemann, William H. Turner, George S. Trimble, Bernard Siegel, Alan Quinn, Clarence Jay Elmer, James Cassady, Walter Law, Ruth Bryan, George Clark and Edith Ritchie.

HOPP HADLEY AND HIS HUPP

Hopp Hadley, who handles advertising, publicity and diplomacy for the United Film service, has recently acquired an automobile which seats a maximum of between one and three passengers. He got it on Saturday and on Sunday took all the family but the canary out for a ride.

The first time a traffic cop stopped Hopp and made him get off the sidewalk he was so excited he stalled his engine. Just the same it's a regular automobile.

Film Opening for Americans in Cuba Is Excellent

Harry Raver, Who Went to the Little Republic to Direct the First Showing of "Cabiria," Is Enthusiastic Over Screen Prospects There

CUBA offers virgin territory for American-made motion pictures, according to Harry R. Raver, who has just returned from Havana where he spent several weeks. The object of his visit was to direct the opening of "Cabiria," but he also spent considerable time looking over film conditions there.

"I spent my spare time seeing motion pictures while I was in Cuba," said Mr. Raver on his return, "and I did not see a single American-made picture. Cuba has a total of 160 motion picture theatres of which twenty-six are in Havana. Some of the best in Havana are the Cine Prado, which seats about eight hundred persons; Maxim's and the Galathea.

"Then there is the Pairet theatre, where "Cabiria" was shown. This seats about three thousand persons and was the largest in Havana till the National theatre was built. "Cabiria" ran two weeks at the Pairet, doing good business, and is now being booked all over the island of Cuba by Raphael Galvan, a prominent Cuban film man.

"In many ways the island of Cuba offers excellent opportunities for American film men. Not only is it untouched by American pictures, but the exchange and exhibiting ends of the business are open to improvement.

"One company, Santos y Artigas, has a practical monopoly of the exchange end. The majority of the pictures I saw were European Pathé, Gaumont and Eclair. Other European concerns completed the bill.

"The exhibiting end is not at all up-to-date. Every theatre has an old Pathé machine with an open machine head and no take-up box. In fact the machines have no reel boxes. The film is hung over a peg and run through the machine into a bag. It is always entirely exposed and often the native operators smoke in the booths.

"The method of putting the shows in is not in accord with our ideas. A thousand-foot picture will be cut up into five or six parts. The operator shows part one, then he shows five or six advertising slides. Then he shows part two and so on. When the film is completed a big gong is rung and the spectators all have to get out. If they want to get in to see the second picture they must pay another admission. Most exhibitors there give three shows a night. A man who wants to see the whole show must spend thirty cents, ten cents being the standard admission price.

"I met Mark Dintenfass down there. He is opening up an exchange to handle Universal pictures. He met innumerable difficulties in securing office space, but had leased suitable space when I left.

"If any American wants to live in Cuba he will find a fertile field in the film business there."

"Melting Pot" Is Attractive State Rights Offering

Screen Version of Zangwill's Stage Success Will Be Seen at the Hippodrome, New York, on May 30—The Trade Invited

"THE MELTING POT," in which Walker Whiteside is starred by the Cort Film corporation, is to be the main attraction at the Hippodrome next week, beginning Sunday, May 30, and arrangements have been made to take the film production of Israel Zangwill's great play to the big Sixth avenue playhouse under the best of auspices.

To this end, Manager Tauber of the Hippodrome has been working with the Cort forces in the creation of a lot of interest in the picture, especially in New York City, although now, as in the past, the Hippodrome is drawing a goodly percentage of its patronage from the country at large, or such members of outside communities as visit New York by the tens of thousands every day.

As announced in the "News" a little while back, John Cort, president of the Cort Film corporation, has arranged that all exhibitors may have an opportunity to see the film and judge of the effect that it will have upon the average motion picture patron.

The first evening of the showing at the Hippodrome will be marked by the attendance of a large number of theatrical and stage people who will be present to honor Walker Whiteside on the occasion of his first screen appearance. Mr. Whiteside will be present and will see himself in pictures for the first time at the Sunday performance.

Music plays such an important part in the development of the story, as was true of the stage version of "The Melting Pot," that a special orchestration for the picture has been prepared and is being rehearsed with the picture by the big Hippodrome orchestra this week. This effect will be heightened materially by the appearance of a symphony orchestra of one hundred men in the concert scenes.

Much has been said about "The Melting Pot" because of Mr. Cort's determination to sell the picture on a state rights basis and, for this reason, if for no other, there has been a great deal of interest manifest on the part of exhibitors and exchange men. The picture has been screened in black and white print for Mr. Cort and the men associated with him in the making of the picture.

PLAN RECEPTION OF SELIG FLYER IN WESTERN CITIES

Word has been received by the Selig Polyscope company that the leading newspapers of the Western cities to be visited by the Selig Movie Flyer in July, especially those in Denver, Salt Lake City, Ogden, Utah, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, St. Louis and Colorado Springs, are planning receptions for the writers and other tourists who will make the trip.

REINA VALDEZ MADE AN IDEAL DIRECTOR

Reina Valdez has been appointed a director at the Ideal studio, Hollywood, Cal., where she is the leading lady as well. She will direct and star in a short society drama, "The Road Home," written by herself. It will be produced in a few weeks.

REINA VALDEZ

Miss Valdez, although she has played the leading parts in many plays, both on the screen and behind the footlights, has never, for the past few years since she first appeared in motion pictures, lost sight of the fact that she wanted some day to become a directress.

"The Road Home" is bound to attract much attention when it appears.

DAVIS IS NOW DIRECTOR FOR FOX

Will S. Davis is the latest producer of note to enlist under the Fox standard. Mr. Davis, who hails from Philadelphia, brings with him to his work a ripened knowledge of the photoplay art which he has perfected by six years of producing with the foremost film concerns of the country.

Before entering the motion picture field Mr. Davis was a well-known dramatic star and stage director. He has produced successes for the Frohmans, Klaw & Erlanger, Harrison Grey Fiske, George M. Cohan and other equally well-known managers.

Mr. Davis' first picture experience was with the now defunct Yankee concern, which he left to join the Ramo ranks. After this came an engagement with the Edison company, followed by a period of directing for the old Biograph. Mr. Davis then re-joined the Edison company, later to sign with the Universal, for which he has produced some striking features. He writes all his own script, and estimates that since he has been in the motion picture field he has hammered out upward of seven hundred scenarios.

Mr. Fox has assigned Mr. Davis to the direction of an important forthcoming release, the title of which is not yet ready for announcement. Mr. Davis, however, is busily engaged at the present time in securing his locations and engaging his company.

RUTH ROLAND CREATES STIR IN "WHO PAYS?"

Young Actress of Talent, Starring in Pathé-Balboa Series, Began Her Stage Career at the Age of Six in Little Lord Fauntleroy and Attracted the Attention of Belasco—Her Rise Has Been Rapid—Is an Accomplished Sportswoman in More Than One Pastime

RUTH ROLAND, the beautiful and highly talented motion picture actress who is starred with Henry King in the Balboa-Pathé "Who Pays?" series of twelve original heart interest dramas is a remarkable young woman.

Her name has been prominent in theatrical circles for many years, notwithstanding the truth that she is just now in her twenty-second year. Her debut on the stage was made when she was four years of age and throughout the West, particularly along the Pacific coast, she was known as "Baby Ruth."

As a child she was regarded as a wonder. While playing "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the age of six in San Francisco, she attracted the attention of David Belasco, who pronounced her the very best child actress he had ever seen. She continued her infantile triumphs until she was eleven, when she was sent to a private school to complete her education.

She finished her school days and at sixteen returned to the stage under the chaperonage of an aunt. As an ingenue her success was even greater than that scored as a little girl. Always adorable, dainty and sweetly vivacious—as the portrait in this issue indicates—her personal charm was accentuated by extreme cleverness. She was equally at ease in comedy or drama. She sang and she danced and performed innumerable cute stunts that made her a distinctive feature for any bill.

An Accomplished Horsewoman

Ruth Roland is all girl, but she rides a horse as if she were born in the saddle. She runs an automobile. She boxes, fences, plays tennis, football and baseball. She swims, swings Indian clubs and bowls. She is a crack shot with rifle or pistol, and has won a number of prizes at archery. These multiplied accomplishments could not long escape the demand for her services in motion pictures. The Kalem company had the good fortune to "discover" and place her upon the screen. This was four years ago, and since then she has made tremendous strides. In the beginning she appeared in Western and Indian plays. Then the humorous streak in her was disclosed and she was featured in a long list of highly successful comedies. During the last few months she was with the Kalem company the management starred her in a series of detective dramas, but by this time she began to think of the wider field which her experience justified her in entering.

December first she signed a year's contract with the Balboa company to appear, first in the twelve dramas embraced in the "Who Pays?" series, and then in a number of big special features.

In the seven three reelers of the "Who Pays?" series which have been completed, Miss Roland has demonstrated her right to be classed with the foremost motion picture actresses of the day. In "The Price of Fame," "The Pursuit of Pleasure," "When Justice Sleeps," "The Love Liar," "The Feminine Law,' "Today and Tomorrow,' "Houses of Glass," and "Blue Blood and Yellow," the public will see her at her best.

Her method, which follows the recognized school of dramatic repression made distinguishable from other forms by Julia Marlowe, Maud Adams, Ethel Barrymore and Viola Allen, is free from visable technique, but at the same time conveys her meaning so unerringly that the simplest child can understand the thoughts that are passing through her mind.

Gives Her Best in "Who Pays?"

Ruth Roland has no need for the spoken word. All of the moods that belong to human emotion respond readily to her call. The highest development of the motion picture art is represented by her in a manner so refined and so cultured that all must admire her work.

Throughout the "Who Pays?" series Miss Roland has given each role she has impersonated the very best that was in her, and that is saying a great deal, because there is no actress before the camera who surpasses her in beauty, in physical magnetism, in personal appeal, in actual ability or mobility of temperament.

She is so exquisitely feminine that she attracts women as well as men, and while the entire world has bestowed unstinted praise upon her, she has never been spoiled. She has a remarkable mind and a kind heart, and these attributes, coupled with genuine histrionic skill, make her one of the most desirable stars in motion pictures.

Colonel Selig Adds More Animals to His Jungle-Zoo

Four Elephants, Purchased from the Robinson Circus, Swell the Number of Light Footed Tango Dancers to Eleven and Will Delight Los Angeles Visitors

WILLIAM N. SELIG, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, has purchased a quartet of elephants from the John Robinson shows, and now will have nine elephants trumpeting at the Selig Jungle-Zoo. Like "Toddles," the "wise old elephant," the quartet of newcomers are trained performers.

Col. Selig, who is now at Los Angeles, has expressed his pleasure over the appearance of what is said to be the greatest institution of its kind in the world. Improvements are nearing completion under Mr. Selig's enthusiastic supervision.

A steam shovel has been in action to complete the landscaping, while a great property building is going up. It is needed in addition to the great storage space already in use, for new directors and new stars who are making their appearance at the Selig Jungle-Zoo.

Every visitor to Los Angeles now is escorted to the Selig Jungle-Zoo, one of the sights of the Pacific coast.

Mr. Selig, in an interview of recent date, said: "Don't overlook the importance and worth of the one, two and three reel productions. There will always be an important place for single and double and three reel plays in film programs.

"While it is true that feature film productions have made great strides during the past year, and that we are bending every resource in order to make our Red Seal plays finished productions in every respect, yet you can say that our single reel productions are not being permitted to suffer.

"During the past few months we have engaged a number of versatile directors and stage artists, and many of these will devote their talents particularly to our one, two and three reel pictureplays. No time nor expense will be spared in improving and holding the regular Selig Pictureplay program up to and beyond the standard. We shall not be satisfied with standing still, we must and will progress.

"I wish to call especial attention to our Diamond Specials in three reels, released every Thursday in the regular service of the General Film Company. We appreciate the encomiums we are receiving on the merit of these three reel Diamond Specials. They were originally planned as feature productions, but are to be released in the regular channels. You may quote me as saying that they are away above the average.

"Our Red Seal plays in four or more reels are to be made, we hope, the very last word in spectacular plays. All-star casts, high-class stories and technical skill are combined to make these productions acceptable."

MABEL NORMAND REFUSES VAUDEVILLE OFFER

Mabel Normand, feature comedienne with the Keystone Film Company, was approached by a representative of the most powerful vaudeville organization in the United States last week and an offer of thirty weeks' engagement at an enormous salary was offered.

Miss Normand was unable to accept, as she is signed up on a contract with the Keystone company and receives a salary that is quite sufficient to make vaudeville temptations of little account to her.

Dear Sir:-I had the honor to become identified as a contributor to your valused publication some months hence and have watched it forge to the front by leaps and bounds. When I first became interested in its success I found that the exhibitor almost to man, in this section was wedded to the older journals, but within in the last few months The News has become an absolute necessity to many men in this section who consider it the best publication in the trade. Its searching logic which gets down under the hide is the punch. No less than three raad men for coast exchanges have taken occasion to praise the News within the past week in the course of conversation in my office and one of them only yesterday observed that it "is the best paper in the trade". The Arizona friends of the publication certainly increaing.

DALLAS, TEXAS, May 19, 1915.

Gentlemen:

Traveling on the road for the Texas Paramount Pictures Company as a Dallas, Texas salesman I have an opportunityto hear comments on your splendid weekly which I buy regularly en route and I find pleasure in telling you that the exhibitors are united in expressing the opinion that they would just as soon do without the advertising matter that goes with their films than miss an issue of the Motion Picture News. All of it is interesting and I can say that I read it from cover to cover.

I am a recruit from the New Orleans newspaper field and I certainly like the change. I have worked as a dramatic and vaudeville critic on the daily Picayune in New Orleans and find this helps me in placing contracts, being familiar with the plays. If you care to use any part of this letter, you may do so because it may be the means of helping you to become even stronger in the field because I am telling the truth when I say that the exhibitors in Texas literally "Swear by the Motion Picture News".

Yours for continued success,

Phil J. Reilly

—and we have hundreds of letters like these. They come in every day, from every State in the Union. They say Motion Picture News stands first; and they make the most remarkable exhibit ever presented by any trade journal. SEND YOUR ADVERTISING MAN TO SEE THEM.

Gotham Film Makes Big Strides in One Month

Its First Release, "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan," Sets Pace for Future Quality of Pictures—Personnel of Concern Insures Its Success

AMONG many New York concerns in the moving picture business which have made material strides in a short time is the Gotham Film Company, 1600 Broadway, New York City. The actual incorporation of this company, which is capitalized at $500,000, took place on April 24, less than a month ago, and since that time the concern has not only released its first picture, but has made arrangements for the marketing of its productions throughout the United States and Canada. The majority of the exchanges handling the Gotham features are owned directly or indirectly by the Gotham Film Company, of New York.

MARSHALL W. TAGGART BETTY MARSHALL WILLIAM A. SWEET

Just lately the concern took a five-year lease on the eighth floor of the Mecca building and purchased outright the entire equipment formerly owned by the Sawyer company.

The studio of the Gotham Film Company is located at 237 Lafayette street, New York City, and is equipped with four mammoth stages and the concern is using a combination of lights which are giving exceptional results without "make-up."

The first release was "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan." Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, played the leading male role. Betty Marshall, billed as the Gotham Fashion Plate, played opposite Ritchie. Miss Marshall's success in the first picture is so decided that the Gotham Film Company closed a contract with her to play the feminine leads in all its productions.

It is the intention of the company to have the best obtainable male talent play opposite Miss Marshall in all their future productions.

The picture itself, while giving ample opportunity for Ritchie to display his fighting ability, does not tend to be vulgar, as a pretty love theme is cleverly twined round his career.

The second release will be a picturization of "The Trade Secret" by Alfred Peate, a story that recently ran in Munsey's "All-Story Weekly." It will be a five-reel feature in which the well-known actor Frederick De Belleville, now starring in "A Celebrated Case" at the Empire theatre, will support Miss Marshall. In addition to these there will be a cast of over two hundred people.

The Gotham company is releasing one feature of four or five reels each month and the Gotham program is now making arrangements to release a four or five-reel feature every week.

Marshall W. Taggart, the president of the Gotham Film Company and the Gotham Program, Inc., is new to the film business, his activities heretofore having been confined to the theatrical and advertising businesses. He is gradually acquainting himself with every detail of the business, and is surrounding himself with the most competent men in the business.

Clarence Schottenfels, vice-president and sales manager of the Gotham Film Co., Inc., has been six years in the film business. He was with Carl Laemmle before Mr. Laemmle formed the Universal company. Before going with Laemmle Mr. Schottenfels was with the Reliance and in the manufacturing business for himself. He was also with World's Special Features and the Kinemacolor Company; prior to that with Canadian Bioscope Company.

William A. Sweet, secretary and treasurer, like Mr. Taggart, is new to the film business, but he has had long experience in financial and business circles. He is an officer and director of various corporations, and in addition to his active services with the Gotham Film Company, he is also treasurer of the Hardman Rubber Tire Company of New York and New Jersey.

Mr. Sweet is known in business and banking circles as a safe and conservative man and his handling of the finances of the Gotham Film Company has amply justified this opinion.

Closely affiliated with the Gotham Film Company, and in fact located in their offices, is the office of the New York Gotham Film Exchange and the New Jersey Gotham Film Exchange. These two companies are under the management of Charles L. Brookheim, formerly proprietor and owner of the See El Bee films and also formerly treasurer of the University films. Mr. Brookheim has combined the See El Bee of New York and New Jersey in his Gotham Film Exchange under the respective headings of New York Gotham Feature Exchange and New Jersey Gotham Film Exchange.

ANNA LOGAN IS DAUGHTER OF PENNSYLVANIA STATESMAN

Anna Logan, who played the part of Ruth Woodstock in "The Governor's Boss," is the daughter of the Honorable John H. Landis, of Pennsylvania, ex-superintendent of the mint at Philadelphia, and former member of the House of Representatives and Senate of Pennsylvania..

Before beginning in pictures, a year and a half ago, Miss Logan was with Marguerite Silva in "Gypsy Love" and Marie Tempest in "A Thief in the Night." In films she has worked for the Famous Players, Pathe and Biograph.

In addition to a natural aptitude for stage and screen work, Miss Logan is well grounded in fundamentals, holding diplomas from the First Pennsylvania State Normal School, the National School of Oratory and Emerson College of Boston.

ANNA LOGAN

SCREEN CLOTHES COST MORE THAN STAGE WARDROBE

Kathlyn Williams, star of the Selig Western stock companies, is authority for the statement that a film wardrobe costs nearly three times as much as a stage wardrobe. Especially is this the case when an actress appears in one and two-reel picture plays.

Exit Hammerstein's Victoria; Enter the Rialto Theatre

Famous Vaudeville Theatre Will Be Transformed Into a Photoplay Palace Par Excellence, According to the Plans of S. L. Rothapfel, Who Will Be Managing Director—Crawford Livingstone and Felix Kahn His Bankers— House Will Be Remodelled from Top to Bottom—Will Be Home of New Ideas in Exhibition

THE finest theatre in the world devoted to the presentation of motion picture plays is to be erected on the site now occupied by Hammerstein's Victoria, at 42nd street and Broadway, New York City. That at least is the promise of S. L. Rothapfel, who leaves as managing-director of the Strand June 5. Mr. Rothapfel, in his new venture which will bear the name of The Rialto Theatre he has associated with him Crawford Livingstone and Felix Kahn, the New York bankers, who have given him an absolutely free hand in the carrying out of his unique ideas.

Only the outside walls of the old house will remain, and they will be so hidden under unique decorations as to make their former appearance only a memory. The entire auditorium will disappear; in fact the work of demolition is now progressing. The Rialto will be absolutely fireproof, and will have the distinction of being one of the few houses in existence open on all sides, and so arranged that its entire audience can be on the street in the smallest fraction of time imaginable after a performance. The entire seating plan will be changed as well as the proscenium arch and stage.

There will be one immense balcony, built on the cantilever principle, and every seat will have a complete view of the stage.

So far as the ventilation is concerned, by the system to be installed an absolutely even temperature may be maintained at all seasons of the year.

Orchestra of Thirty Six Musicians

An orchestra of 36 soloists will assist Mr. Rothapfel in his presentation of picture plays, and yesterday the perfected plans were presented to the company for a pipe organ which is to be installed, and which the makers say will be the largest ever put into a theatre anywhere in the world. There will also be installed the finest efficiency system ever projected for a playhouse. Mr. Rothapfel is the originator of the idea of a courtesy system among his employees. He drills them personally, directs their activities himself, and during his management in New York City he has so thoroughly impressed his staff that he has never had a single complaint from patrons of any discourteous treatment.

On the theatre staff will be a well known New York physician and two trained nurses, who will be in charge of a thoroughly equipped emergency hospital installed in the theatre. There will be a new contrivance, which has been thoroughly tested and which this company controls, for the rapid and expert handling of crowds through efficiency methods and quick ticket selling and handling.

Mr. Rothapfel is vice-president and general director of the Rialto Company, and is to be in complete charge of every detail of presentation, lighting, music and effects, so that he will be enabled to put into effect many novel schemes to which he has given months of thought. Among his cherished possessions is a loving cup and a letter from David Belasco in recognition of his presentation of "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Good Little Devil" and other of the Belasco plays made over into pictures.

Complete Change with Each Production

For all of the fast pace that he has set, Mr. Rothapfel says he has not even struck his real gait as yet in the presentation of moving pictures. Without divulging too much of his plans it may be said that with every new presentation of pictures in the Rialto the house will undergo a complete change. This will be brought about by lighting effects, scenery, decorations, incidental music and singing which will be changed for each new production, and yet in every instance this will be made subservient to the presentation of the picture itself.

To effect this, rehearsals as thorough as those to which any great theatrical company is subjected will be gone through. Mr. Rothapfel originated this idea, and a thorough musician himself he not only selects the music but conducts the orchestra on such occasions. He also directs every gradation of lights and makes the sketches for his scenery, so that the presentation must be perfect at the dress rehearsal.

Proud of Being "Screen Purist"

"I believe I can say that I have lifted motion picture presentation to a higher plane," said Mr. Rothapfel, "and the Rialto is to be the apogee of my efforts. I am going to do things at the Rialto as yet undreamed of, and my plans show that the old Victoria when completed will be the most conspicuously beautiful structure outside and inside in America. To have brought such men as Mr. Livingstone and Mr. Kahn into motion picture presentation is in itself no small achievement.

"I have been accused of being a screen purist, and I am proud of the distinction. I have never allowed a picture to be presented under my management that I wouldn't have my wife and my children see, and what's more I never will. As strongly as I believe that a thing of beauty is a joy forever, so strongly do I condemn sensationalism of any sort, and I believe that I have demonstrated that it has no place in art. I think that has been part of my success. That I have been able in seven years to graduate from a small mining town to my own theatre in New York gives me the right to believe in my own theories."

Victoria Cross Winner Figures in Kalem Dance Film

Captain Wallace McCutcheon, in a British Foot Regiment, Posed Before Camera to Teach Tango Steps by Aid of Motion Pictures

FEW newspaper readers accorded more than passing attention to the dispatches which mentioned the fact that Captain Wallace McCutcheon, of one of His Majesty's foot regiments, had been decorated with the Victoria Cross, promoted to his present rank and commended by the British Government, because of conspicuous bravery on the field.

Had exhibitors and photoplay patrons been aware of the fact that the Captain McCutcheon mentioned in the dispatches, and "Wally" McCutcheon, who, with Joan Sawyer, figured prominently in the Kalem company's "Motion Picture Dancing Lessons," are one and the same, they would have scanned the items with special interest.

Captain McCutcheon and Miss Sawyer, for a time instructors in dancing to the members of the Four Hundred, were among the most popular interpreters of the modern dances. As the result of this popularity, the two were engaged to give lessons in the tango, maxixe, hesitation and the turkey trot before the motion picture camera. When issued by Kalem under the title of "Motion Picture Dancing Lessons," over a year ago, these picture took the country by storm.

Shortly after the war broke out, Captain McCutcheon left for England, where he offered his services to the British Government. The fact that he had had considerable experience in the National Guard of New York made him a valuable recruit, and McCutcheon was enlisted in the British army.

"GODDESS" POPULARITY SHOWN IN 1,000 PRINTS

Unqualified success has greeted the Vitagraph serial "The Goddess," which features Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, judging from the concrete returns in the way of sales.

That more than 150 prints of "The Goddess" are being booked in Chicago and more than 100 prints in New York was the information given out at the Vitagraph offices when asked about the success of the picture. A total of about 1,000 prints is being handled by the General Film offices the country over. This is probably the largest number of prints ever yet sold in this country of any one picture or serial. The figures given here are the number of prints sold of the first chapter and include many cases when extra prints were ordered.

To keep up to the number of prints handled it has been necessary to increase the amount of posters ordered. It has been necessary to order new paper twice for the first chapter.

CONVENTION ENTHUSIASM PLEASES CORY

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Cal., May 24.

Following his recent trip to New York City, M. E. Cory, vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, returned to San Francisco by way of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Chicago, Omaha and Denver, visiting many exhibitors and members of the trade in general in reference to the National Convention to be held in California during July.

Mr. Cory was most pleased with the results of his numerous visits and voiced his opinion on the coming convention as follows:

"I find the local exhibitors, exchangemen and members of the trade in general very enthusiastic concerning the San Francisco convention. Throughout the country many exhibitors have joined their respective State leagues during the past few weeks, evidencing unusually great interest in the work of the organization.

"For the convention nearly the entire amount of floor space has been signed up; this fact and the enthusiasm of the trade throughout the country has assured a large attendance."

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America has opened offices in San Francisco and a committee appointed to handle the business of the convention. A widespread publicity campaign has been started for it is the intention of Mr. Corey and his associates to reach every exhibitor in the United States.

FAY TINCHER WINS BATHING SUIT PARADE PRIZE

Fay Tincher, the Mutual comedienne who so long has played Ethel, the stenographer in Komic productions of Paul West's "Bill the Office Boy" series, won first prize (fifty dollars) in the Bathing Suit parade at Venice, Cal., recently. Her bathing suit was modeled on the black and white striped dress which has helped make Ethel famous.

Miss Tincher won over a host of other contestants who passed down the broad beach walk in electric chairs. Among them were most of the motion picture actresses in southern California.

The judges were Mayor Edward Gerety, Dr. J. Mitchell, Professor W. K. Thornbury, Judge Leo Long and John Wilson. Miss Tincher's suit was in the 1915 style, a little too large to go into a vanity case, and just large enough to escape the wrath of the Women's Reform league. When Miss Tincher appeared, driving her runabout, she was greeted with cheers. Her success instantly proved popular with the crowd.

DETECTIVE AUTHORESS IMPRESSED WITH FILM DRAMA

Anna Katherine Green, authoress of "The Millionaire Baby," the Selig Red Seal play in six acts, released May 31, intends to earnestly enter upon the profession of photoplay writing. She says she sees great possibilities in the newer field of literary endeavor.

Anna Katherine Green is, in reality Mrs. Charles Rholfs. Her beautiful home in Buffalo, N. Y., is probably as unique a home as one will find. The architectural design is from the authoress' own sketches. The furnishings are all from the shop of Mr. Rholfs.

Mrs. Rholfs says the idea for the great mystery story, "The Millionaire Baby," was suggested to her by Edward Bok, the editor of the "Ladies Home Journal."

Films Supplant Speaking Stage in Oklahoma City

Eight Screen Theatres, Five Charging Five Cents Admission and Three Asking Ten Cents, Ready for Close Competition This Summer

Special to Motion Picture News

Oklahoma City, May 26.

A NEAR revolution is taking place in the motion picture situation in Oklahoma City which, within the next few weeks, either will prove that this locality is one of the best screen theatre cities in the entire country, or the changes will prove very costly to the theatre owners and managers.

Two weeks ago the Metropolitan theatre was changed from stock to five-cent motion pictures, showing nine reels of feature films, including Famous Player, Keystone and such productions as "Neptune's Daughter." None of the pictures were first run in this city.

Today the Olympic theatre, remodeled by A. M. Goldstandt, was opened as the Strand, a five-cent house showing Mutual Master pictures and other features.

On June 1 the Folly, now a combined vaudeville and picture theatre, will drop the vaudeville and become a five-cent screen house. The Folly features the Metro corporation productions.

On the first of June H. G. Eastman will take over the lease on the Airdome and open that house with regular release and feature pictures. It probably will be a ten-cent house.

The Empress, using Paramount service, and the Lyric, where the World Film corporation productions are seen, will continue as ten-cent theatres and the Majestic and Dreamland will continue five-cent houses, giving the city eight film theatres, five five-cent and three ten-cent shows.

In the past no theatre ever made money in Oklahoma City showing at five cents, which indicates that competition will be decidedly keen during the coming summer months, the poorest months of the year for theatrical business in Oklahoma City. Fred E. Tarman.

RUSSELL SMITH GOES TO FAMOUS PLAYERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, May 24.

Russell B. Smith, who has been assistant to Frank E. Woods, manager of the department of production of the R. and M. companies since they came to Los Angeles early in 1914, severs his connection with the close of this week's work, and will depart for New York City in the early future, where he has accepted the editorship and management of the scenario department of the Famous Players company. In the new position it will require of Mr. Smith that he practically originate a new department, as his new employers desire him to install one that will be along radically different lines from the plans followed by the Famous Players in the past. The scenario department of the Famous Players company, it is understood, will be located in New York City, in connection with the business office, regardless of where the producing companies are located.

Mr. Smith is a very well known scenario writer, having entered this field of endeavor following a number of years as newspaper and magazine writer. He has been very active in upbuilding the profession, and is at the present time secretary of the Photoplay Authors League of America, and business manager of "The Script," the official publication of the league devoted to matters pertaining to photoplays.

VITAGRAPH BEGINS WORK ON "THE CAVEMAN"

Work on "The Caveman," in which Robert Edeson will be supported by Lionel Adams, Charles Eldridge, Fay Wallace and Lillian Burns, was started last week at the Vitagraph studio. The production, which will be one of the most pretentious that the Vitagraph company has ever turned out, is taken from the play and the book of the same name by Gillette Burgess. It will be in six reels.

The title role in "The Caveman" is one of Mr. Edeson's favorite parts and which he starred in successfully for several seasons both on Broadway and on tour.

Arrangements have been made by J. Stuart Blackton, to utilize the steel works at South Bethlehem, Pa., for several scenes, H. C. Frick having offered the use of the entire plant to Mr. Blackton in making the picture. It is said that this will be the first time that a moving picture camera has invaded the works where there is such a great deal of construction work being carried on. Theodore Marston, the director, has arranged to have scenes taken in the construction rooms where the steel for the big guns is made.

DIRECTOR CAPELLANI'S FAMILY REACH AMERICA

The news of the Lusitania tragedy brought a wave of horror to the many folks at the World Film studios, as the wife and family of Albert Capellani, the new French director, now with the World Film, were en route to America.

They were on the Rochambeau, which left France only a day or so before the Lusitania sank, and everyone was wondering if the French liner had met with any submarines. The family arrived safely on Wednesday, May 19. The next day Mr. Capellani resumed work on the William A. Brady photoplay, "The Face in the Moonlight," in which Robert Warwick is starred.

For several days after the sea catastrophe, Mr. Capellani was so worried that he was unable to work, and not until his family were safely in their new home in Cliffside, was he able to start again on his premier American picture.

ESSANAY ADDS CARTOONS TO REGULAR RELEASES

Essanay has now included in its regular release programs a new feature that bids fair to be a tremendous success. This is a series of cartoons. The characters are brought to life and move across the screen just as real people.

Dreamy Dud and Joe Boko, originated by Wallace A. Carlson, are the funniest caricatures that have appeared for years. Dreamy's many adventures with his dog Wag would set a deacon to roaring with laughter.

There is an intense human element in these cartoons, and they hark back to the adventures of boyhood days that every man has been through and every woman recognizes in her son or brother. There is a wealth of humor in them that appeals to all.

The first Dreamy Dud adventure is "A Visit to the Zoo." On the same reel, released May 26, he appears with Wag in "An Alley Romance." On June 9 you will see "Dreamy" "Lost in the Jungle," while old Joe Boko shows Ping Bodie a thing or two in "A Close Shave."

"LILLIAN'S HUSBANDS" NOW COMPLETED BY NORTH

Director Wilfrid North has just completed a three-part comedy for the Vitagraph company entitled "Lillian's Husbands," in which the dimpled Vitagraph star, Lillian Walker, is featured. "Lillian's Husbands" tells a story of a girl, who, in a spirit of adventure, writes her dead father's former business partner, her guardian, whom she has never seen, that she is happily married.

A letter announcing his coming to meet her husband starts complications, and her search for the right kind of a mate and strenuous efforts to keep her supposed husband and guardian apart, keeps the fun at concert pitch, until the real husband in the person of her guardian, whom she marries unknowingly, straightens out the tangle. "Lillian's Husbands" will be released as a Broadway Star feature with an initial showing at the Vitagraph theatre, New York City.

WILL STAGE FOX HUNT FOR "DIAMOND"

Stunts continue to stud "The Diamond from the Sky," the American continued photo-novel. A pack of hounds, especially trained, are at the American studios and the players will begin at once rehearsing an old-fashioned Virginia fox-hunt and steeplechase through the nearby fields and woods.

During the action of the scenes there will be many narrow escapes of falling from the thoroughbred steeds and an occasional accident, in which the rider narrowly escapes being trampled to death.

Judging from the nerve-straining events which have already appeared in the picture and the promise of still more thrilling ones to come, this production will stand among the films in which numerous astounding incidents happen throughout a natural and logical story without the slightest shadow of improbability.

UNIVERSAL BEAUTY CONTEST WON BY RUTH PURCELL

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., May 26.

The winner of the Washington "Times" beauty contest, conducted in conjunction with the Universal Film Manufacturing company, has been announced. Ruth Purcell, employed in the office of the American Federation of Labor, was the successful contestant.

Miss Purcell has been the recipient of many gifts and letters of congratulation, as she was selected by art critics from several hundred photographs. Perhaps the greatest surprise came in the form of a "lingerie shower" by her office associates, which provides the winner with about all such necessary apparel for her trip to the coast.

The young lady is also in receipt of a letter of congratulation from H. H. Van Loan, representing the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. According to the plans the various winners of the nation-wide beauty contest will leave Chicago on June 6, to enjoy the time of their lives to the Pacific coast, the San Francisco and San Diego expositions, and most of all the visit to Universal City, where they will take part in motion picture making. Miss Purcell is enthusiastic over the prospects of the journey.

MISS JUSTICE SERIOUSLY ILL

Maibelle Heikes Justice, author and scenario writer, has been dangerously ill in Los Angeles over the loss of her only sister, Mrs. R. Delno Shymer, a victim of the "Lusitania" disaster. Miss Justice journeyed West in order to be present at the filming of her story, "Chronicles of Bloom Center," which is to be serialized by the Selig Polyscope company.

Miss Justice contemplates returning to New York as soon as she is fully recovered, so that she may be with her mother, who resides here. Miss Justice made many friends in Los Angeles who join with the entire film world in feeling the greatest sympathy for her in this deep sorrow.

Boy Scouts See Lady Mackenzie Animal Pictures

Lads Observe with Interest the Various Phases of African Life Revealed in Showing of Film at Freeport, L. I., Last Week

AN interesting entertainment was given this week by Lady Mackenzie, the woman hunter, to the Boy Scouts of America. Lady Mackenzie, who has just returned from a big game hunt in East Africa, where she secured several miles of film depicting thrilling hunting scenes, was requested by A. C. Hottenroth, of 313 S. Bayview avenue, Freeport, L. I., to show the members of the troop in that vicinity those parts of her African pictures which might be of educational value along Scout lines.

Lady Mackenzie gladly complied and offered to appear at the entertainment, which was to be staged in Mr. Hottenroth's large garage, and explain the pictures herself. At the last moment, however, she found that her social duties would prevent her going and she was confronted with the problem of securing a lecturer at short notice.

Philip Mindil, Jr., volunteered to take her place—a lad of fifteen, whose father is her business manager. Philip, Jr., had never seen the pictures, but it was arranged to run them off for him late in the afternoon preceding the entertainment.

The Boy Scouts showed great appreciation of the pictures, noting particularly those scenes having to do with every day life of the natives, such as cooking and grinding corn. The boys are trained in these things and followed the pictures and the lecturer with marked attention.

The pictures shown did not include the sensational hunting scenes, such as the lion charging over Lady Mackenzie and the charging rhinos. These are to be saved for the Broadway opening which will occur in a short time. These pictures depend for their support upon the tense, gripping scenes of a big game hunt in which sure-shots slay ferocious wild beasts at close range to the camera.

Monthly Dinner of Chicago Reel Fellows Is a Success

A Number of Unique Films Shown to Guests—Watkins Gives Entertainment at Press Club—Woodward Devises Attractive Posters

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, May 26.

THE May monthly dinner of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago was held at the Hotel Sherman on Wednesday evening, May 19. The entertainment consisted of several reels of films, including the one taken at the Washington Birthday ball.

L. E. Stinson, general manager of the Safety Projector and Film Company, furnished one of its new model home projecting machines for the showing of these pictures. This machine is operated by a high-power tungsten lamp instead of carbons, thus allowing the film to be stopped without danger of fire and allowing for trick work such as running the film backwards.

Among the guests present at the meeting were Frank Miner, comedian for the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation; Wilmuth Merkyl, the new leading man for the United Photoplays Company, and Mr. Miller, attorney for the Universal Film Company.

F. R. E. Woodward, who has charge of the publicity operations of the United Photoplays Company of Chicago, has put out some remarkably attractive matter in the form of heralds and posters exploiting the Dr. George A. Dorsey travel pictures. The art work is excellent and produced in highly colored striking poster style. It is decidedly distinctive, and he is to be congratulated upon the results of his efforts.

M. G. Watkins, of the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation, gave a very interesting entertainment at the Chicago Press Writers' Club, Friday evening, May 14. With the assistance of Frank Miner and the associate players of the American Standard Company, the occasion was made a great success.

RIDGELY BEGINS ANOTHER THREE PART FEATURE

Edison Director Richard Ridgely, producer of "The Wrong Woman," "The Deadly Hate" and "The Van Rellers," besides most of the southern features, has started work an another three-part feature.

TROPICAL DAYS FAIL TO WILT FOX PLAYERS

The company sent to St. Augustine, Fla., by William Fox to screen in the sub-tropical clime the exotic scenes for "The Vampire," based on Gabriele D'Annunzio's "La Gioconda," has met with a very warm reception from the hospitable St. Augustinians. On the day of their arrival the thermometer registered 98½ degs. and stayed there for some two days.

Mrs. and Mr. Henry Muller, proprietors of the Hotel Marion, at which the company is stopping, placed Mr. Muller's 85-foot motor yacht, Hilda, at the disposal of Frank Powell, the director of the company, and Sam Kingston, the business manager. The scenes of "La Gioconda" call for many situations on the beach in filmy costumes and the company combined business and pleasure at a bathing resort called Summer Haven by cooling plunges into the surf.

In the company besides Miss Bara, the star, are Doris Hayward, formerly a Lubin star, who plays Sylvia Settala; Jane Miller as Francesca Doni, sister of Sylvia; Paul Duse, who plays Lucio Settala; Robert Wayne, as Lorenzo Gaddi; Victor Benoit, as Cosimo Dalbo; Edward Durand; Elaine Ivans and the symbolic character of La Sirenetta, and three-year-old Jane Lee, as Little Beata.

This child's actress' remarkable work in "The Clemenceau Case" will be recalled by all who saw that production. The scenes of the picture have been largely made at the Villa Flora, belonging to Dr. Garnett, of St. Augustine, who kindly placed his beautiful mansion and grounds at the disposal of Mr. Powell and his company.

Scenes were also made at the Hotel Ponce De Leon and at the Hotel Alcazar. La Gioconda provides a splendid Vampire part for Miss Bara, who has specialized in sirenic ladies. In the play, as prepared for the screen, La Gioconda wrecks the lives of several men, including a famous artist, and finally meets with a sensational end.

"PLAYING DEAD" FINISHED BY DREW

The Richard Harding Davis story "Playing Dead," recently purchased by the Vitagraph company, has been picturized by Mrs. Sidney Drew and is now in course of production under the direction of Sidney Drew, Mr. Drew playing Jimmie Blagwin; Mrs. Drew, Jeanne; Donald Hall, Proctor Maddox, and Charles Wellesley, Carlton Adams, and will be released as a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature in five parts.

As the character portrayed by Mr. Drew is that of a millionaire clubman and society favorite, he made arrangements to have the action in the interiors in private houses, clubs and on steamships, where richness of furnishings and ornamentation breathe the atmosphere of unlimited wealth.

At the crux of the story, where Jimmie Blagwin disappears from the transatlantic liner, Mr. Drew enacted and photographed the scenes in what is known as the J. Pierpont Morgan suite on the St. Louis, of the White Star Line.

Theodore Wharton Is Graduate of the "Legitimate"

"Elaine" Producer Gained First Experience as an Actor in St. Louis in 1895, Later Playing with Sothern and in Augustin Daly's Stock Company

THEODORE WHARTON, Pathé producer and maker of "The Exploits of Elaine" whose name is known wherever people see good pictures, is like so many men in the business, a graduate of the "legitimate." He is a native of Milwaukee, but was raised in Texas, where for nine years he was treasurer of the Dallas opera house.

THEODORE WHARTON

Feeling that life would be more interesting on the stage than "counting the house," he joined the Hopkins Grand opera company as an actor in St. Louis in 1895, and remained with that organization for two reasons, when he went with E. H. Sothern. His next engagement was with "The Sporting Duchess," after which he was transferred to Charles Frohman's Empire theatre company, which at that time was famous for the number of stars it developed. In 1889 he joined Augustin Daly's famous stock company, and later managed "The Great Ruby." Then he became assistant treasurer of Hammerstein's Victoria theatre, which position he held for five years, leaving it to manage Hanlon brothers' "Superba."

Wharton was first attracted to motion pictures in 1907 when he began writing scenarios, with what success was proven by his selling twenty-eight of his first thirty scripts to the Edison company who then made him scenario editor and studio supervisor.

When Pathé Freres established their American studio he went with them and became their first director. Since that time with the exception of short intervals he has been associated with Pathé, first as director and now with his brother, Leopold, as producers for Pathé. "The Exploits of Elaine" is the latest of their work.

Winter Sports Staged in Vitagraph Comedy

"Love, Snow and Ice," Now Showing to Large Houses in New York, Presents Pictures of Life in Adirondacks as Elopement Background

A DIVERSITY of subjects, every one a feature, will characterize the program arranged for the Vitagraph theatre for the week commencing Sunday, May 30. The Broadway star feature, "Love, Snow and Ice," a three-part comedy of merry chases and winter sports, with scenes laid in the Adirondacks, is the feature that heads the program only on account of its greater length.

"Love, Snow and Ice" was written and produced by Wally Van and enacted by Mr. Van, Nitra Frazer, Albert Roccardi and Donald MacBride, who were ably assisted by participants in the Ice Carnival and parade at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

An elopement serves as the theme for "Love, Snow and Ice," while a pursuit on skates and skiis and by sleigh, toboggan and ice boat adds the thrills that are scenically background by remarkable winter scenes and exterior and interior views of the beautiful ice palace during a masqued ball. The action is swift and the comedy fast and furious.

"The Goddess," the Vitagraph serial produced by Ralph W. Ince, that has taken New York City picture fans by storm, has the initial showing of the succeeding chapters, in two parts, on Sunday, one day ahead of the regular release, and this is attracting capacity audiences. For the week commencing Sunday, May 30, Chapter Four of "The Goddess" will be the second feature of the program and will introduce several new characters that further the adventures of Celestia (Anita Stewart), an angel from heaven, and Tommy Barclay (Earle Williams) on their arrival in New York City.

"STOLEN GOODS"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHATEVER appeal this drama contains is due largely to the star of the picture, Blanche Sweet. While rendering a peculiarly unanimated performance in the role of Margery Huntley, she successfully brings out the sympathy and pathos of the character. For this reason, if no other, the story will awaken keen interest.

In reference to locale, the story embraces both sides of the globe. Starting in New York, the scene shifts to Belgium and then back to America, in California. Those scenes which are laid in Belgium, in and around the hospital, are noticeable for their realism. No little fighting is shown, while an extremely large number of bombs are continually bursting in the air, creating a most natural effect.

Dirigibles floating in the air are exhibited on the screen once or twice. While they can safely be classed as products of the property man's brain, these scenes are good. The photography and light effects are excellent here and all through the picture.

THE FRENCH AND BELGIANS LEAVE THE CITY

The support furnished Miss Sweet is not of the usual Lasky standard, especially in regard to certain minor parts. However, the named cast gives performances of consistent merit. Cleo Ridgeley appears as Helen North, the kleptomaniac; House Peters as the American Red Cross surgeon; and Sydney Deane as Mr. North; Theodore Roberts and H. B. Carpenter are cast as foreign army surgeons, but appear in only a few scenes.

Previous to the European War, Margery has been arrested for stealing, through the conniving of Helen, a guilty kleptomaniac. Having served her prison term, Margery goes to Belgium as a nurse. One day, among the refugees that come to the hospital, Margery recognizes Helen. A bomb bursts near the hospital and shatters part of it. Margery believes that Helen has been killed, and soon afterwards returns to America, to take her place in the family of a guardian whom Helen had never seen.

Things run along smoothly for a time after this. Margery meets the physician with whom she was associated in Belgium. But on the day that he proposes Helen returns to claim her rightful place. However, the doctor, being a broadminded gentleman, his discovery of the girl's deceit makes little difference to him.

In dramatic construction the story is pleasing, but at times neglectful in the matter of the observance of small details. Margaret Turnbull is the author, while George Melford directed the production.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

HARRY R. RAVER is back from Cuba, where he directed the opening of "Cabiria."

Joe Farnham and Phil Klein are due back soon. They were scheduled to sail from England May 26 on the Philadelphia.

"THE BUILDER OF BRIDGES"

(Frohman-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE work of authors of recognized ability, whether or not the theme is of an unconventional nature at the present time, is noticeably pleasing to witness when transferred to the screen. Take the case here, "The Builder of Bridges." This drama was penned by Alfred Sutro, whose plays have reached immeasurable success both on the stage and film. The subject combines most pleasing and admirable construction with a theme, which has had the good fortune not to be overworked by scenario writers of the present day.

One can pick a number of instances during the development of the plot that in customary pictures appear exaggerated. For instance, the weak-willed clerk's act of stealing, and Thursfield's denunciation of his fiancee, are well "motivated" and realistic occurrences, whereas these very events often appear forced, if not introduced in the correct manner.

The story is based on a girl's self-sacrifice for her brother. Arnold is employed in the office of a bridge contracting company. He embezzles a large sum and is unable to return it. Dorothy, his sister, learning of his predicament, goes to the builder of bridges intending to plead with him. He, Thursfield, falls in love with her. Later he discovers her brother's crime and willingly covers up the deficit from his own pocket. Subsequently he discovers that this is all the girl desired at first and he leaves her. But later both realize their true love for each other and the picture closes happily.

C. Aubrey Smith appears in the title role. His performance is most pleasing throughout. We would like to have seen more of him, as before the last two reels he has few scenes in which to display his ability. The girl is Marie Edith Wells, who makes a very pretty and appealing figure. Jack Sherill, as her brother, overacts, all his scenes calling for heavy emotional performances. Miss Kate Meek, G. W. Anson and Edward Mawson have important parts.

The direction of the picture, handled by George Irving, is praiseworthy. The settings and photography are fine. The bridge construction scene and again the office scenes are noticeable for their realism. The detail is not to be criticized except for the fact that evening papers are not usually read at the breakfast table. The Frohman Amusement Corporation have produced a worthy successor to "The Fairy and the Waif."

BALBOA HEAD CONFERS WITH COBE

ANDREW J. COBE, president of Alliance, and H. M. Horkheimer, the president of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, who arrived in New York recently from the Pacific Coast, have held a number of conferences to determine the subjects to be made by the Balboa company for release on the Alliance program.

Mr. Horkheimer was gratified with the reception that "Beulah" was accorded in every part of the country.

"THE SILENT COMMAND"

(Laemmle-Universal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHETHER or not this feature possesses the faculty of convincing its audience, or merely thrilling it—for the two properties often go alone as well as hand in hand—depends entirely upon the audience itself. The picture is based on hypnotism, extreme mental suggestion, in which some persons will believe and others prefer not to. Before the former class the picture will present a strong, convincing and realistic story, before the latter its realism will be lacking, but they will not fail to be highly entertained by it.

Such being the case it is safe to assume that the four reels comprise a feature, concerning which there will be little doubt as to its success, despite the fact that the plausibility of the theme may be questioned.

In brief the substance of the plot is as follows: A young girl affected with paralysis, is operated upon and cured by a physician, who also makes a practice of hypnotic suggestion. Years later, wishing to secure the girl for himself, he attempts to hypnotize her into killing her father.

In the morning her parent is discovered dead, and although the girl knows nothing of the matter, she is accused of the deed through circumstantial evidence. At this her fiance, a lawyer who is also somewhat of a telepathist, sets to work and succeeds in discovering the real murderer in the person of the doctor's servant, who committed the crime while under his master's influence.

Such is the story and as picturized it makes a most engrossing subject. The climax is effectively built up to always keeping the spectator in the greatest suspense. The mysterious influence which always accompanies such a story rules throughout these four reels with an iron hand, and combined with the well conceived plot has the effect of arousing every bit of interest that the spectator possesses.

Robert Leonard, who wrote and directed the subject, as well as playing the father of the girl, may be justly proud of his completed work. The settings are appropriate, the photography good, purposely dimmed in some instances. He has used closeups effectively, and they would be even more powerful if merely a few were effaced from the film. As the father, Mr. Leonard is excellent.

Ella Hall is exactly the type for his young daughter, as she invests the role with her youthful personality that is sure to attract sympathy. Harry Carter plays the villainous doctor with all his old-time vim and understanding, while Alan Forrest as the lawyer-lover is as good as ever. Mark Fenton completes the cast of principals as the coroner.

"THE DARKNESS BEFORE DAWN"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IT seems a pity that as one theme strikes the popular fancy, the plot should be almost duplicated a short time afterwards by the same company.

In this picture the essentials of "The Blessed Miracle" are repeated, although in justice to the author be it said, there are several new elements introduced, and it makes an interesting story.

Instead of the triangle there is a quadrangle which gives the chance for a big scene when the husband and would-be seducer meet. So big was it, in fact, that Joseph Kaufman, who directed the picture and played Dr. George Elliott, actually had two of his teeth knocked out by Earl Metcalfe, playing the cad, Carson, to a realistic climax.

THE HUSBAND BECOMES SUSPICIOUS

Ethel Clayton has her usual part of the sweet wife (wronged in this case by circumstantial evidence), with a chance for plenty of emotional acting to which, as always, she does full justice. The part of the "other woman," Rose Lewis, a young widow, is well played by Octavia Handworth, a recent and excellent addition to the Lubin staff. My only objection to the two women (which is surely not their fault), is that they are both of the same attractive blond type and so not good foils to each other.

The story goes that Dr. Elliott, loving Rose, fails to propose on discovering her penchant for cocktails and cigarettes, the habit of her set. His heart is caught on the rebound by Elsie Moore, whom he marries.

Carson having ruined Elsie financially and unsuccessfully tried to ruin her morally, threatens, when he meets her as Mrs. Elliott, to show her husband some falsely compromising evidence, unless she accedes to his demands. Rose still loves Elliott. Here the complications arise.

They are only solved at the very end, when Rose, arising above self, sends the Doctor back to Elsie on learning that the stork is on the threshold. After the darkness of jealousy and suspicion, a happy dawn arises for the reunited family.

"BROTHER OFFICERS"

(Cosmofoto Film—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"BROTHER OFFICERS" was the feature at the New York Strand theatre, during the week of May 16. It is one of Harold Shaw's productions made in England, and while not centering around the European war, as many of the London Film company's offerings have, it is exceedingly interesting.

Bannister Merwin, whose name has become familiar to American exhibitors by his previous stories for the English concern, prepared the scenario for "Brother Officers" from Leo Trevor's play. It is a very good story and makes a very good picture. While not exceptionally original, taken as a whole, the construction and pleasing tenor of the situations lend to it a decidedly refreshing appearance.

Although the picture's main theme is dramatic, sufficiently so in fact to separate it from the comedy-drama class, there are many excellent bits of comedy coming in the first stages of the picture. Noticeably humorous is Hinds' debut into the elite circles of the English army. Combined with the sub-titles falling in the same part of the picture, written in English slang, these scenes are genuinely laughable.

The story is based on the great friendship of two officers who served in the British army. Hinds comes from a poor family, while Pleydell is very well off. Pleydell, in turn for Hinds having saved his life in the service, invites him to his house, and in time he becomes very much the gentleman. Pleydell is engaged to a girl whom Hinds also loves, and when the latter learns that his benefactor is greatly in debt to a gambler he sees his chance to replace him. But after a long struggle with himself his better side triumphs and he threatens the gambler with exposure of his crooked ways unless his departure is hasty.

Regarding the photography and scenes, they are very good. The night scenes are noticeable for their realistic appearance. The interiors conform with the action of the picture in every case. As Hinds, Henry Ainsley proves himself a capable comedian and a fair dramatic actor, while Gerald Ames, as Pleydell, gives a consistently good account of himself. Charles Rock does very well in the heavy role of the gambler, while the Dean, another comedy role, is most ably interpreted by Frank Stanmore.

"THE RESOLVE"

(American—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

SKILLFUL production makes out of what would ordinarily be material for one reel, a most interesting two reel picture. A girl known to the world as Mrs. Stevens Brooks, lives in elegance with her supposed husband, a wealthy author.

IN THE END HE PAYS

One day by chance she runs across the true wife of Brooks, and driving back to her home she prepares to leave the man who for years has wronged her. While writing her farewell note, the various incidents leading up to her present life are skillfully brought out by fade-ins and double exposures.

As the note is finished, she hears a shot and rushes downstairs to find that the deserted wife has shot the man for whom the note was intended.

This is an entertaining drama of the kind made popular by the play "On Trial." It is well enacted by Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood in the principal roles. Winifred Greenwood is particularly attractive as the wronged girl. The photography is clear throughout and the settings are well staged.

"BLUE BLOOD AND YELLOW"

(Pathé-Balboa—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

OFTEN a moral is best driven home by a slight exaggeration of the arguments or incidents used to illustrate it. A more thoughtful attitude can be created when the consequences of folly are pictured at their worst. For that reason the element of extremeness in this, the seventh of the "Who Pays?" series, is quite in place. Merely as a matter of good management it seems doubtful whether the most hardened villain would make love to his secret wife's sister. The risk would be too great.

SOCIAL POSITION WINS THE DAY

The problem which is presented in this drama is that of the so-called blue blood person, who is in reality a yellow thing, and the girl, who thinks that an elaborate family tree is essential. There is no attempt to dispute the obvious fact that in many cases a young man is a better young man because of a good family back of him, but the youth who, because of distinguished ancestors, sets himself up as a superior being, is exposed by the tragedy of the heroine's life.

The girl has two suitors, one a real man, but the son of a bricklayer, who has struggled to success, the other a worthless scion of a once distinguished family. Dazzled by the social position of the latter, the girl marries him, although his only reason for the match is to get hold of her fortune.

Learning that the estate will be lost if the marriage is known before the bride's twenty-fifth birthday, the husband induces her to keep it secret, and under the protection of this secrecy, makes love to his wife's younger sister. He proves himself a hound in other ways, and is finally discovered. His wife says she will get a divorce and marry the real man, but her husband threatens to involve the good name of the little sister if this is attempted.

Thus the young wife faces a life with a man who is repulsive to her, and her lover is left with no hope of seeing his love fulfilled. In a roaring melodrama the hero would of course kill the husband, but these pictures aim to portray real life, and so the tragic story comes to its close.

PLANS INNOVATIONS FOR LOS ANGELES THEATRE

THE Palace theatre, at Forty-seventh street and Moneta avenue, Los Angeles, has been sold by A. Corensen to Lewis Stutz. Mr. Stutz is now planning a number of innovations for the theatre which will add to its popularity.

"THE COWARD"

(Essanay—Three Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

"THE COWARD" is a drama, the success of which depends upon the acting more than any other factor. Sheldon Lewis in this, his first Essanay picture, interprets the principal character with strength and ability such as to insure its success over any other obstacles.

The rest of the cast, including Nell Craig, Ernest Maupain, Peggy Sweeney and Frank Dayton, are all well chosen for their various parts and all acquit themselves admirably. The staging is consistently good, and while the photography in a few scenes is slightly below the standard, this defect does not in the least detract from the interest of the film.

The story shows the life-long efforts of an inherent coward to overcome this defect of character, which he knows to exist within him. It crops out when, as a poor bill collector, he is about to commit suicide after losing all his savings and some of his employer's money, betting on the races.

The girl, who prevents him from shooting himself, afterwards becomes his wife, but when she, two years later, falls in love with the doctor who has saved the life of their baby daughter, the coward, his heart crushed, quite meekly consents to a divorce.

In after years the doctor loses his fortune and afterwards his life, leaving his family penniless. The coward, on the other hand, has met with business success and is now a rich man. His daughter, seeking employment, becomes a stenographer in his office, neither his nor her identity being known to the other. One evening while they are alone, he tries to force his attentions upon her and receives a tongue slashing which arouses him to battle with and finally overcome his cowardly instincts.

He goes to her home to humbly apologize, and there meets her mother, whom he at once recognizes as his former wife. They are re-united and it ends happily for all concerned.

"THE FAILURE"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

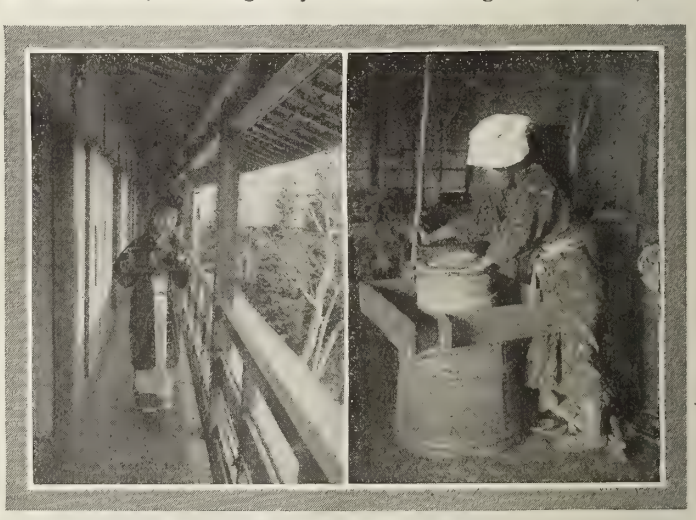
TRAGEDY of the most pronounced sort runs through this picture, and culminates with the suicide of the hero, who, finding life no longer of interest, destroys the enemy who has ruined him, by this act. As is inevitable in a drama of this sort, a large amount of emotional acting is necessary, especially in the case of the leading character. This role, which is that of a young newspaper man, is played by John Emerson, who handles the many difficulties of the part in a commendable style.

Another important member of the cast is Olga Gray, who is seen as Rose, the actress, a woman who represents a vampire type, although her victim suffers only indirectly through her actions. Wahneta Hanson appears as the reporter's wife, and A. D. Sears as the villainous theatrical manager.

A theatrical manager insults a reporter's fiancee, and later the newspaper man gets a chance for revenge and prints a story of the producer's methods with girls which compels the man to leave town. When he goes he sends the newspaper man a note, promising revenge and stating that he would kill him if he had a chance.

Three years later the manager returns and discovering that his enemy has written a play, pretends friendship and considers the production of the work. Instead he steals it, and produces it before another manager to whom it has been sold can put it on. He also manages to get the author framed up as a thief, and sent to the penitentiary.

Tom, the innocent convict, manages to escape, but finds that his wife and baby have both died. By a threat he forces his enemy to meet him in a saloon. There he takes poison, slips the bottle into the man's pocket, and as he dies accuses him of poisoning him. He shows the police the letter threatening his life, and the story closes with the death of the unfortunate man, and the assurance that the villain will hang. The drama was written and produced by W. Christy Cabanne.



"JAPAN"

(United Photoplays—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

SIX reels of most pleasing film, so interesting that one does not realize he is being instructed as well as being entertained. This describes the first series of the Dr. George A. Dorsey travel pictures which are being released through the United Photoplays company of Chicago. At present this series is running at the Studebaker theatre in Chicago, and causing most favorable comment from those who have viewed it.

The beautiful scenery of Japan's mountains, forests and lakes, the life in its partially modernized cities, the quaint customs of its inhabitants, are caught by a discriminating camera man, and with the aid of surprisingly good photography are produced most realistically on the screen.

It is very interesting to see how pearls are gathered by the native divers off the shores of the island. It is even more interesting to see the harpooning of the sperm whale—a piece of really remarkable photography—and to see how these monstrous animals are cut up and prepared for the market.

While no story runs through the six reels, plenty of human interest is evident, enough to hold the audience's attention and keep them from being bored.

"THE TEST"

(Edison—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

MODERN business offices are the scenes of most of the action in this drama, which shows the efforts of a man to live down the stigma of a serious mistake. As so often is the case, he is hampered by the efforts of a jealous crook, who attempts blackmail. With this somewhat ordinary situation a a good drama has been built up by careful construction and good acting.

Herbert Prior plays the difficult role of the lawyer's clerk who sacrifices himself for the sake of his friend. His nemesis is another clerk in the office, a part taken by Frank McGlynn. The newspaper man, for whom the clerk steals money, is portrayed by John Sturgeon. Charles Sutton appears as his employer, and Bessie Learn as his niece.

Because he has already drawn some salary in advance a clerk in a lawyer's office does not wish to ask for more money, but needs it for a friend who has to go West to save his life. He steals the money and is detected.

On telling his story the employer gives him a year's probation in which to return it and dismisses him. Later another clerk of dishonest habits is discharged. He reaches the Western town where the first man has succeeded in making good, partly through the help of his former employer's niece, who lives there.

The newspaper man, now recovered, is the editor of a local paper, and helps his friend in his campaign for the office of district attorney. Having stolen the signed confession made by the candidate at the time of his theft he attempts blackmail, but the girl cleverly obtains the paper before it can be published. The hero is elected to the office, and wins the hand of the girl, who has helped him to win out.

"HOW CALLAHAN CLEANED UP LITTLE HELL"

(Essanay—Three Acts)

REVIEWED BY T. S. MEAD

CORRUPT municipal politics furnishes the plot for this Selig Diamond Special, which will be released on June 3. Thomas Santschi is the predominant character, and his interpretation of the role of John Callahan, a fearless, upright police captain, is most realistic in its strength and virility.

Although the brunt of the acting falls upon Mr. Santschi, he receives suppor from an able cast which is increased as occasion demands, by a large number of supernumeraries who add realism to the politic rally, dance hall and other scenes characteristic of the part of a large city represented in the picture.

Captain Callahan incurs the displeasure of the machine by refusing to release one of the boss' henchmen, who had been arrested for pocket picking. His punishment is a transfer to Little Hell, the toughest district in the city.

Making the best of the situation, he sets out to do his duty by cleaning things up, seemingly against unsurmountable odds. His efforts are bitterly contested by the boss of the ward, who, failing to bully or to buy him into submission, purchases the mortgage which Callahan had laid upon his home to meet the expense of a costly operation necessary to save the life of his only daughter.

The boss is only prevented from turning the family into the streets by Callahan's friends, who loyally come to his assistance. Soon after an unsuccessful attempt is made to assassinate Callahan, he wins the loyal friendship of one of the worst characters in the section, and the story ends with the defeat of the boss. Callahan is now supreme in the ward which is known no longer as "Little Hell."

"THE BLACK BOX"

(Universal Special—Episode Thirteen)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE plot undergoes little development in this chapter, entitled "Tongues of Flame." The locale is still the cowboy camp and the Mexican saloon, where Craig has taken refuge from Quest. The action is very interesting despite the short halt in the story's progress. The mysterious pair of hands is still at work. Who they belong to is yet to be discovered, but the professor seems to be the most likely owner.

GUEST AND CRAIG COME TO AN UNDERSTANDING

It will be remembered that in the preceding chapter, Lenora sustained a severe fall from the half sawed bridge. It develops, when she has been brought back to the camp, that she will be confined to bed for a long time. In the meantime, Craig, across the border, is living more or less of a peaceful life among the Mexicans.

A telegram comes to the camp for Craig, in care of the professor. It reads that his (Craig's) sister has died leaving him the care of her daughter, who is to join him in New York.

Quest takes this message to Craig and informs him that he will allow him to go and meet his daughter, safely establish her with some friends, if he will then turn himself over to the police. Craig agrees to this plan and starts for New York.

Quest also attempts to catch the same train, thinking it safer to keep the other man within his sight, but through the treachery of the armless hands, which set his alarm clock back an our, he is too late to make the train.

"THE WIVES OF MEN"

(Biograph—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is one of the Biograph Western offerings concerning life in a construction camp. In addition to a wealth of interesting scenes the picture contains a heart-interest story very well acted by the cast.

The picture is melodrama and should be classed with the better subjects of this variety. The blast superintendent of the construction gang is a confirmed inebriate, and mistreats his wife and the men under him.

On the arrival of the new engineer matters are somewhat altered. Through the kindness of the man's wife the sufferings of the wife and child of the drunkard are slightly alleviated.

Then a time comes when both the women give birth to children. The child belonging to the drunkard is healthy, while the other soon dies. In gratitude to her benefactors, and to shield the child from the brutalities of her husband, the woman consents to part with her baby so that the engineer's wife may recover with possession of her normal faculties.

When the inebriate learns of this he attempts to kill his boss, but when about to shoot him, he himself is shot down by a man whom he had terribly mistreated. This is rather gruesome but fully entertaining.

"MAN AND HIS MASTER"

(Biograph—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CAPITAL versus Labor is by no means a theme uncommon in motion picture dramas. Perhaps its familiarity is one cause of its periodical production by many companies. But at any rate, in "Man and His Master" the Biograph company has produced a story based on Capital versus Labor that should provide a very good half hour's entertainment.

SHE REPORTS HER FATHER'S DISAPPEARANCE

The construction of the drama results in the picture being most sympathetic. We are given the stony-hearted factory owner, his charitable daughter, who delights in relieving the suffering of the workers, and the factory foreman, champion of his men and also in love with his employer's daughter.

Of course the employer is antagonistic toward his employee, thinking him too low in life to marry his daughter. So nothing remains but to have the boss cast in a position by which he can discover for himself the suffering of the poor.

He is rendered powerless by a sudden stroke of paralysis and is taken in by an Italian. The foreign family interests him, and when fully recovered he raises everybody's wages and allows his daughter to marry the foreman.

Jack Drumier is cast as the father, Louise Vale as his daughter, Franklin Ritchie as the foreman, and Mary Malatesta and Victor Rottman as the Italians. The picture has been produced fairly well, with seemingly an accurate amount of attention paid to detail. The photography is good.

"THE INVENTOR'S PERIL"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

THIS scenario by Adrian Gil-Spear provides two reels full of interest, excitement and suspense—in a word it is a series of thrills.

Two inventors figure in the perils caused by a third inventor, who in a crazy delusion thinks he has been wronged by Marvelli, the great genius of the world. John Alden, the young inventor, meets and consults Marvelli at the house party of Mrs. Baldwin, who is trying to catch John for her daughter Lola.

A wireless phone is being perfected. When John retires to his island home while Marvelli works alone in a loft on the Baldwin place, the crazy Michaels has his innings. Stopped in his attempt to murder Marvelli by Lola's accidental entrance, he next almost kills her, but in the end she is saved by John, who thus makes himself the maniac's intended victim.

The test of the wireless therefore becomes a matter of life and death. It works in time to bring rescue. Mrs. Baldwin is made happy by John's love for Lola. Marvelli rejoices at the perfection of another invention. Joseph Smiley does some fine directing here, as well as capably acting Marvelli. Lulu Leslie and Jack Standing are wonderfully good in their big scene where Lola shares his peril, and he fastens her outside the window on a wire tied to his waist.

Another realistic scene is the crash of the motor car on the rickety bridge and its fall in the waters below, where Michaels drags Lola through a hole cut in the top of the car.

John Smiley gives a splendid impersonation of the maniac. Florence Williams acts the scheming mother to the life.

"THE EXPLOITS OF ELAINE"

(Pathé—Episode Twenty-two)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

ORIGINAL as are the incidents in each episode of this serial, surprises are always to be found in the latest instalments. This one, which is known as "The Opium Smugglers," is no exception, and in addition to the clever work of Craig Kennedy there are some thrills which will have any audience on the edge of their chairs.

Wu Fang, beaten in every direction by Kennedy, decides to have a terrible revenge on Elaine. He kidnaps her chauffeur and substitutes one of his own by a simple trick. When she starts for the country she is taken by a back road, and captured by two Chinese of Wu Fang's gang.

The criminal's plan is to turn the unfortunate girl over to the captain of an opium smuggling ship which is just on the point of leaving for China. Her fate would thus be worse than anything that Wu Fang could devise at home. The girl is locked up in a cabin and Wu Fang's final instructions are to kill her if there is any chance of her escape.

Meantime Kennedy has been searching Chinatown for Wu Fang and, falling in with a friend in the U. S. Secret Service, joins him in running down the opium smugglers. Their warehouse is raided and most of the men captured. Just as the raiders are on their way home in a police launch, Elaine remembers the wireless telephone in her suit case.

PURSUING THE OPIUM SMUGGLERS

This device is Kennedy's latest invention, and he has told her that with it she can communicate with him anywhere. She succeeds in reaching him by the instrument, and at once the launch is in pursuit, guided by a lantern which Elaine holds from her cabin window. Discovering the pursuers, the captain tries to kill Elaine, but she eludes him and is soon safe in her fiance's arms on the police launch. The regular cast continues its usual excellent work.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Fifth Chapter

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

THE sudden and mysterious disappearance of the Diamond from the Sky in the preceding chapter, leads to fast action and strange happenings in this instalment. As was suspected, Luke Lovell was the thief, but seeing himself in danger of capture by the police, who have followed him, he drops the necklace and diamond into a mail box. He then allows himself to be taken before Detective Blake, who, being unable to prove anything against him, is forced to let him go.

Meantime sheriffs have arrived to arrest Arthur, but Hagar aids him to escape. By a burst of speed he manages to find safety in a freight car on a moving train, while the officers believe that he has gone in the opposite direction.

Hoboes in the car compel him to change clothes with them, but as he is in evening attire this is to his advantage. After traveling some distance Arthur drops off the train and obtains work on a farm. The hobo wearing his clothes is mistaken for him and placed under arrest.

Meantime the postman collecting mail from the box has dropped the diamond into his mail sack without seeing it. Becoming caught in the cloth, the necklace is not discovered until the mail sack falls from a wagon on which it is being taken with others to be repaired.

An Italian organ grinder finds the diamond, but while sleeping under a tree his pet monkey takes it from his neck and hides it in a bird's nest. This concludes the chapter.

The usual cast is seen, and the acting and settings continue to show the excellence which has characterized them from the start.

"ROAD O' STRIFE"

(Lubin—Episode Nine)

REVIEWED BY IRENE PAGE SOLOMON

IN this number the dramatic interest of the whole serial is rising to a climax. Daisy, the show girl, finds Dane without difficulty at Elmhurst. Together they journey back to town, and finding Alene has gone to Jerome's house, rush after her, reaching there just in time to see the dead body of Jerome taken in charge by the police.

THE BUTLER TELLS HIS STORY

Alene is accused of the murder and locked in a cell, and there we must leave her until next week. Rosetta Brice, as Daisy, the reformed show girl, shows herself as much at home in the good part as in the adventuress for which she is usually cast.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

(North American—Fourth Chapter)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FOLLOWING the thrilling events in the preceding chapter, the action in this instalment returns to a more usual course. The adventurous career of the Diamond from the Sky—if a gem may be said to have adventures—continues to be as lively as ever. At the conclusion of the second reel there is considerable doubt in the minds of the spectators as to the whereabouts of the remarkable stone.

The stream in which Arthur fell when his automobile shot off the cliff in the preceding chapter happened to be near the gypsy camp of which his mother Hagar was the queen. He was discovered by Esther and taken by her and his mother to her wagon, where he recovers.

Hagar, learning that her son is a fugitive from the police, who want him on a charge of murder, tells him the real story of his birth and the way in which the Diamond from the Sky became his.

Arthur leaves for Richmond, where he pawns the famous jewel owing to his penniless condition. With Blair he goes to a society ball, where he discovers the diamond in the possession of Vivian Marston, an adventuress posing as a respectable society girl.

Hagar, Esther and Luke Lovell attend the ball as fortune tellers. While Vivian is resting in an alcove an arm stretches out through the curtains and the diamond disappears. There is no indication as to the identity of the thief, although suspicion rests on Luke Lovell.

"WIFE FOR WIFE"

(Kalem-Broadway Favorites—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

WILMUTH MERKYL, who has been seen in many Broadway productions, plays the leading part in this feature, that of Edward Walton, a young landowner. The action is laid in the days of slavery in the South.

George, a slave, resolves to revenge himself upon Edward for the death of his wife, Susie, a pretty mulatto girl, thereby taking "a wife for a wife." Richard Singleton, who coveted Edith, Walton's wife, was the real cause of Susie's death, but he laid the blame on Edward.

Richard calls upon Edith one night and embraces her against her will. When Edward returns home suddenly Richard shoots him, the wound depriving Edward of his reason. When Edward is out of his mind Richard calls again. The sight brings Edward to his senses and, taking a sword, he kills Richard.

Then George, the negro slave, tries for his revenge. He is about to allow a poisonous snake to bite Edward when Edward tells him that Richard was the real cause of Susie's death. The mulatto relaxes his hold and is himself victimized. Edith enters, to find George dying and Edward bound. Edward, freed, tells Edith of how both had been victimized and vows to make amends for his lack of faith in the future.

The story is melodramatic and very well produced. Regina Richards is Edith; Robert D. Walker is Richard; Mary Kennedy is Susie, and John E. Mackin is George. Nell Tarrin, Mary Taylor Ross and Henry Hallam are also in the cast and do very well.

"THE MAN WHO BEAT DAN DOLAN"

(Gotham Film—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS, the initial production of the Gotham Film company, introduces Willie Ritchie to screen followers. The number of people who follow the fortunes of pugilists is large enough to insure "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan" considerable attention, when it is announced that the lightweight champion of the world appears in the leading role.

To exhibit a picture in which a prize fighter stars without showing a fight, would be something like showing a ship without water, so for the benefit of the ringside followers a genuine bout is brought in, during the latter part of the picture. It is very good, and the knockout looks like a real one.

Playing opposite Mr. Ritchie is Betty Marshall, sometimes colloquilly known as the Gotham Fashion Plate. Others who appear in the cast are Lew Ritchie and William Vaughn. Neither of the leads are excellent exponents of the dramatic art.

The picture is an adaptation from a "Saturday Evening Post" story written by Helen Van Campen. The photography is fair, except in the fight scene.

For those who desire to see a renowned prize fighter in a picture, "The Man Who Beat Dan Dolan" is the required article.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE WILL NOT BECOME FILM THEATRE

WHEN the Boston opera company went into banqruptcy recently and the word went out that the Opera House interests were dealing with New York people, it was expected that this fine structure would be devoted to pictures in the future.

But this expectation seems to be unfounded, for the Shubert interests, it is now reported, will take over the house, not for the legitimate drama or the pictures, but as a workship in preparing their larger productions.

EARLE WILLIAMS AND ANITA STEWART IN SOME RECENT CHAPTERS OF "THE GODDESS" (VITAGRAPH SERIAL)

CELESTIA IN HER NEW DRESS TIMID AMONG STRANGERS A PLAYFUL MOMENT

"THE GODDESS"

(Vitagraph—Chapter Two)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE first two reels of "The Goddess" were practically preliminary in their entirety. Whereas the second chapter introduced Anita Stewart and Earle Williams, the stars of the continued photoplay, the two reels in hand find them on most intimate terms with one another.

With a beautiful almost spiritual charm does Miss Stewart invest the role of Celestia, the girl reared in the lonesome woods, instilled with the idea that she is to reform the world. Her type of beauty is especially appropriate for this character, and with a display of versatility Miss Stewart has succeeded in fully adapting herself to the extraordinary characteristics of "The Goddess."

On the other hand, Mr. Williams as Tommy Barclay is a most suitable opposite. As the worldly wise young man, who on a hunting trip encounters Celestia with all her unsophisticated charm Mr. Williams interprets a difficult role with his accustomed skill.

Much of the action in this number is humorous, much of it almost pathetic, and all is fascinating. The situations that confront the girl, who has lived for fifteen years without meeting a man, when she at last emerges and encounters such an animal are fraught with moments of comedy that create spontaneous laughter.

Little if any real consequence happens until the last few scenes when Stilleter, the hypnotist, is at last able to again bring Celestia under his power. He takes the momentary advantage created by Tommy who for a time abandons his charge and goes for a swim. When Celestia sees Stilleter approaching she calls for Tommy to come out, and then wonders why he refuses to help her. Of course Celestia is unaware of the fact that the iron clad laws of society forbid Tommy from emerging when his every article of wearing apparel is hanging on a tree.

To date, the acting is not to be adversely criticised, neither is the story nor the production. The scenes in this installment are all wooded mountain locations pleasingly photographed.

"BRAND BLOTTERS"

(Ideal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY CLIFFORD H. PANGBURN

FOUNDED on the novel of the same name, this is a stirring melodrama of cattle thieves in the old West. Effective scenery and rapid action add to the film's strength, with the result that the interest is well sustained throughout.

The head of a band of cattle thieves and bandits is a suitor for the hand of a ranchman's daughter, who does not suspect his true character. Seeing that his rival is favored, he steals some of his clothes, and by appearing in disguise, leads the girl to think that the honest man is the cattle thief.

Shortly afterwards he kidnaps the girl's father and an Eastern capialist as well as the girl herself. He holds them all for ransom. Several attempts to rescue them are frustrated, and finally the honest man is captured. The bandit is about to hang him, but agrees to let him go if the girl will become his bride at once.

He goes back on his word about freeing his prisoner, but the man escapes, and after a desperate fight drowns the criminal in a mountain stream, as he is returning from the home of the minister who has performed the wedding ceremony. Thus he finds happiness at last, and the girl realizes what a hero he has been all along. The other members of the gang are captured by the sheriff's posse.

JACKSONVILLE COMPANY TO BEGIN BIG FEATURE

Special to Motion Picture News

Jacksonville, Fla., May 26.

THE Reliable Photo Play company will begin work on a spectacular feature film within the next two weeks. They have secured several well-known artists who will be featured in coming productions. The staff is very large and the departments are complete in every way. The company will make dramatic features for the present but is going to form an extra stock to put on comedies shortly.

The company has not decided as yet just where the new studio will be located and for the present is using a temporary one in the centre of the city. The commercial department is very busy making some advertising pictures. King Morse is business manager and Lucien Lambert is chief director. Charles Kelly has charge of the photography and Robert Stevens is the assistant director.

The Lubin company left for Atlantic City on the 16th and will remain until the studio is remodeled.

The Kalem company is quite busy taking exteriors, having been held up by bad weather for almost two weeks.

TOPICAL FILMS SECURES FLEET PICTURES

HANS BAADER, general manager of the American Industry Motion Picture Producing Company, 109 East Eleventh street, New York, has secured one thousand feet of interesting motion picture views of Uncle Sam's navy, which has been on review in New York harbor for the past two weeks.

Besides close views of the United States ships Wyoming, New York, Texas, Delaware, Florida, Kansas, Virginia, submarines and torpedo boats, Mr. Baader successfully photographed at close view, President Wilson and his staff at the head of the gigantic Naval Parade which was held on Monday and Tuesday, May 17 and 18.

Intimate studies of Admiral Fletcher, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, show these great men reviewing 8,000 American sailors.

The president's yacht, the Mayflower, is clearly shown and close views of scenes on board were successfully photographed.

Remarkable motion pictures of the ships taken at night show the myriad of lights with which the fleet is illuminated, form a beautiful part of this topical release.

The Topical Film Company has secured the exclusive American selling rights on this subject.

WEATHER HOLDS BACK LOUISVILLE AIRDOMES

THE Sanders Amusement company has opened a new airdome in Crescent Hill, Ky. All of the airdomes in Louisville and vicinity have gotten away to a bad start this year on account of the weather during most of the month of May being rainy or cold, and the attendance, except on a few dates, has been light.

NEWS OF THEATRES THROUGHOUT NEW ENGLAND

THE Goldstein Amusement Company, of Springfield, Mass., is constructing a motion picture house at Hampton Beach, N. H., to seat 700 and be ready for use June 1.

E. J. Caren, of the Star theatre, Manchester, N. H., has leased a new theatre in Concord, N. H.

An open air theatre is being constructed in Oldtown, Me., directly opposite the Penobscot Indian reservation. It is called the Pastime. H. J. Thibodeau is business manager and E. E. Boucher owner.

The Strand, seating 2,400, is to open within two weeks in Providence, R. I. As there are no exchanges in that city the rivalry for the service among Boston exchange men is keen. The theatre will run only first class stuff, eighteen a week. Another feature of the rivalry is that all the big services are now represented in Providence.

The Nautical Gardens and Crescent Gardens theatres at Revere Beach, Mass., have been opened for the summer season.

The Dreamland in Boston, the Gem at Winthrop, Mass.; the Union Hall at Gloucester, Mass., and the Star in Foxboro, Mass., have been closed.

The Broadway in Somerville, Mass., has changed its name to the Winter Hill.

The opera house at Bennington, Vt., which, at the order of its owner, who recently died, has never shown a film, will go into motion pictures June 1.

The Queen at Pennacook, N. H., has closed after a run of two weeks only. Pennacook is close to Suncook, which already covered that field.

Motion picture houses which cater to the summer trade in Maine are opening for the season. The two big houses at Old Orchard, and the Holland at York Beach, will open Memorial Day.

First Daily Change Theatre in Bay State

Within the next two weeks there will open in Oak Bluff, Mass., a motion picture theatre which will present a daily change of program, the only such theatre in Massachusetts. The town is a famous summer resort, and another unusual feature of its new theatre will be the admission, 25 cents. Manager Egleston has made arrangements to show films furnished by the World, Fox, Metro, Paramount and Alliance, giving a day to each, and filling in with the United. The house seats 700.

Tom Murray, of the Empire theatre, Holyoke, Mass., is rebuilding the house, which was burned down recently, and will change it into an airdome.

INTERESTING FILM REVIEWS

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Buckskin Shirt." (Biograph. Mon., May 31.)—A Western prospector and a little boy in the East figure in this effective story. The prospector fights off a band of outlaws to save a buckskin shirt which he has made for the small boy back in the East. Irving Christy is seen as Whistling Sandy, the hero.

"The Maid o' the Mountains." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., June 1.)—The regulation moonshiner and revenue officer story, with a mountain girl far superior to her class as the heroine. A variation is provided in the disappearance of the girl after she becomes the wife of the wealthy Northerner, and their subsequent chance meeting. Louise Vale and Franklin Ritchie are the principals. Others in the cast are Edward Cecil, Kenneth Davenport, Jack Drumeir and Charles Bennett.

"The Heart of an Actress." (Biograph. Thurs., June 3.)—In order to bring an estranged rural couple together an actress on a vacation flirts with the man, and then laughs at him. In his disillusionment he returns to his former sweetheart. Of course the actress really loved the man herself, but made the sacrifice for the other woman, who had sayed her life. The cast includes Frank Newburg, Madge Kirby and Isabel Rea.

"Her Dormant Love." (Biograph. Fri., June 4.)—A strong Western story of a young wife who falls in love with her husband, and having done so takes a desperate chance in order to save him from danger at the hands of an outlaw. The cast consists of Charles West, Claire McDowell and Harry Carey.

"For Her Friend." (Biograph. Sat., June 5.)—A matchmaking woman is a bit careless about her methods and unconsciously leads her husband to suspect that she is too much interested in another man. He finds out his mistake in a way which makes him appear more than ridiculous. The cast consists of Charles Perley, Augusta Anderson, Violet Reed and Robert Nolan.

"The Dumb Wooing." (Edison. Sat., May 29.)—Two stuttering suitors seek the hand of a fair lady. Each finds his agitation is so great when he starts to propose that he decides to try a proposal by sign language. The girl thinks the two men have gone crazy. They nearly do when they have to stand by and see a third person win the prize for which they have been striving. Maxine Browne and Raymond McKee are in the cast.

"Cartoons in the Barber Shop." (Edison. Wed., June 2.)—Short pieces of comedy scenes in a barber shop serve to connect the sections of very excellent animated cartoons which make up the greater portion of the film. Dr. Bear nails down a leopard's spots when the animal calls for treatment. Another very good section is called "One Hundred Years of Fashion Slavery." Raoul Barre is the artist.

"A Chip of the Old Block." (Edison. Sat., June 5.)—A melodrama of a scheming mother who plans a marriage of brilliance for her daughter. The polished suitor selected by the mother turns out to be a thief. Augustus Phillips and Marguerite Prussing are the principals.

"The Longer Voyage." (Essanay. Mon., May 31.)—An ambitious man goes on a yachting trip with a millionaire broker. He learns that his wife, of whom he has lately become indifferent, is the only woman that the millionaire had ever loved. He returns home with a new appreciation for her, but in his absence she has undergone a serious operation which proves fatal.

"The Coward." (Essanay. Three acts. Tues., June 1.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"The Fable of the Intermittent Fusser." (Essanay. Wed., June 2.)—Through high school and college Walter was an inveterate fusser, but when his father set him to work he was so filled with business that he had no time for the fluffy gender. At forty he was known as a good business man but all the fair sex had passed him up. Then he met Violet, a half portion, aged eighteen. She did not know who was President, but she was a cutey to look at. She landed him without a struggle, and now he is a proud father.

"Sophy and the Faker." (Essanay. Thurs., June 3.)—A Snakeville comedy showing how a magic electric belt enabled Sophy's husband to beat up two men who had been making love to Sophy. Harry Todd, Victor Potel, Ben Turpin and Margaret Joslin appear in the cast.

"The Clutch of Circumstance." (Essanay. Two acts. Sat., June 5.)—This picture contains some beautiful Tennessee mountain scenery, and is acted by a good cast, including E. H. Calvert, Lillian Drew, Betty Scott and Jack Meredith. It shows how a mountain girl thwarts the plot laid by her former sweetheart, an unscrupulous lawyer at the State capital, to get his rival, the son of the governor, out of the way. The action is exciting, and it is filled with many tense situations.

"A Railroader's Bravery." (Kalem. Sat., May 29.)—Helen frustrates a gang of wiretappers in this exciting chapter in the "Hazards of Helen" series. She uncouples the engine from a freight train and pursues the gang after she has discovered their plan of action at considerable risk.

The gang members flee on a gasoline speeder, but Helen gets them just the same. Incidentally she reforms Henry, the former relief operator, who fell into bad company when he joined the gang. As usual the daring of Miss Holmes is the chief attraction. There are thrills aplenty and an interesting story.

"Ham in the Nut Factory." (Kalem. June 1.)—One of the best of the always good "Ham" and "Bud" comedies. The two comedians become keepers in an insane asylum. After many trying encounters with the patients they are pursued by one of the fiercest. Exhausted they fall to the ground, expecting to be killed. But the patient catches up to them, taps them both playfully on the shoulders and says, "Tag, you're it."

"The Secret Well." (Kalem. Two reels. June 2.)—Marin Sais and an all-star cast are seen in this thrilling drama. Miss Sais plays Netty, a special investigator in pursuit of a moonshine gang.

The most thrilling scenes come when Netty is suspended by a rope from a high window and the members of the gang threaten to cut the rope if the police try to arrest them.

Lesan, one of the policemen, saves Netty's life by a daring trick. The police, freed from the fear of endangering Netty, capture the moonshiners after a terrific battle. Arthur Shirley plays Lesan. Frank Jonasson, W. H. West and Thomas Lingham are also in the cast.

"The Bell of Penance." (Kalem. Fri., June 4.)—A Carlyle Blackwell, Alice Joyce re-issue, in which there is some good horseback riding by Blackwell in the role of the American lover. Alice Joyce in her impersonation of the Spanish senorita has a great chance to show her natural aptitude for the languid, and leaves nothing to the imagination. The interior settings are very good, especially that of the sentencing of the American to "do penance that all may know." A good story and good acting throughout.

"The Human Chain." (Kalem. Sat., June 5.)—This latest of the "Hazards of Helen" is surely above the average release in that it is replete with thrilling situations. Helen in the role of the station agent does some great diving and swimming stunts, to say nothing of mounting a moving train, and, climbing down from a railroad bridge over the hanging forms of two other men swinging from the bridge, a veritable human chain.

There is an exciting race between a launch and train, all because of a registered package that was in Helen's charge, being secured by three crooks and finally re-captured by Helen. The photography is excellent.

"The New Butler." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., June 5.)—Here Billy Reeves is giving us an entirely new departure from his preceding impersonations, and it is also the first release in which he is supported by a large company who add to the general hilarity. From the time Bill is engaged as butler until he has to give up his job, willy nilly, there isn't a peaceful moment in this picture.

When Bill finds the master flirting with the maid, the situation is in his hands, and he carries it through all sorts of comical adventures, ending at last in an unwilling descent through the dining room ceiling, right on to the table where a dinner party is in progress. An indignation meeting results and Bill is hustled off the premises, and forced to hunt a new job. The company comprises Mae Hotely, Chas. Griffith, Amy Forrest, Johnny Doyle, Patsy De Forest, Billy Potter.

"The Decoy." (Lubin. One reel. Fri., June 4.)—The familiar tale of a "tenderfoot" being almost taken in by two Western sharpers and saved at the critical moment by the inevitable girl. In this case the daughter of the chief sharper is Robert Smith. Flo has been used as a decoy by her father, but falling in love with Bert Sheldon warns him and helps him escape, in spite of his Eastern sweetheart. In the end she reforms her father, a compensation in some measure for her hopeless love.

"His Pipe Dream." (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 1.)—One of the popular cartoons all audiences are now clamoring for. Rastus, after carefully filling his pipe and settling down to a good smoke, has a wonderful vision of himself as rich, as a successful prize fighter, as a hero aiding a maiden in distress; finally, after running all over the universe, he finds himself her accepted suitor. Alas! 'tis only a dream.

"The Actor's Boarding House." (Lubin. Split reel, with "His Pipe Dream." Tues., June 1.)—Slapstick from start to finish with no plot, but only Pat Rooney's acrobatic stunts as excuse for its being, this comedy shows nothing new. The pranks of Rooney and his pal with the dancer, tragedian, trombone player, landlady and other types, will doubtless amuse those who like this class of diversion.

"The Blood Yoke." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., May 31.)—A drama produced by E. J. Le Saint from a story by Catherine Henry. It tells of the love of a man for a girl who, unknown to anyone but her guardian, has negro blood in her veins. When the girl and the man are told of this, the latter first turns from her. His love conquers race prejudice, but the girl will not consent to the marriage.

"Polishing Up Polly." (Selig. Tues., June 1.)—A comedy by Maibelle Heikes Justice in which Polly after inheriting a fortune goes to the city to live with some supposedly rich relatives. Her country lover arrives upon the scene and elopes wtih her just as she is about to be married to the snobbish son of the family to save them from financial ruin.

"Red Wins." (Selig. Wed., June 2.)—An interesting and touching drama showing how a little girl of the slums supports her two baby brothers, and rising above her sordid surroundings marries a rich man. Well acted by Elsie Greeson and the children in the juvenile roles.

"Beautiful Belinda." (Selig. Sat., June 5.)—June settings, savages and wild animals make this an unusual and interesting comedy, though the humor is at time rather silly. It deals with a bug chaser's infatuation of a girl from her photograph. He thinks she has been kidnapped by savages, and after a perilous chase is much disappointed to find he has rescued an insignifican dog instead of the girl he loves.

"Mrs. Jarr's Auction Bridge." (Vitagraph. Mon., May 31.)—The ninth of the Jarr family series by Roy McCardell. Mrs. Jarr gives what she thinks will be an exclusive affair at Hay Corners. but Uncle Henry and a potent punch order otherwise. A good picture in an excellent series. Harry Davenport and Rose Tapley are as usual seen as the Jarrs.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Miss Fatty's Seaside Lovers." (Keystone. Sat., May 15.)—Roscoe Arbuckle dons the regalia of an heiress and succeeds in causing great commotion in a seaside hotel. Mr. Arbuckle also directed this, which is uproariously funny from start to finish as the Strand audience well testified.

"Three Roses." (Thanhouser. Sun., May 16.)—A drama based on the theme of a daughter estranged from her father by marrying against his wishes, and reunited through the influence of her little daughter. Some bad errors in the matter of costumes mar the effect considerably.

"He Wouldn't Stay Down." (Keystone. Thurs., May 20.)—A man, likewise a villain, inveigles friend Ford Sterling to feign suicide so he can collect the insurance money, and also get Ford's wife (Minta Durfee). However, things take an unexpected turn, and Ford is really thought dead, until a fisherman pulls him up from the bottom of the harbor. Another good Keystone. It seems that Mack Sennett is going stronger than ever.

"For Better—But Worse." (Keystone. Sat., May 22.)—Harry McCoy appears in makeup, and is sidesplittingly funny all the way through. A very funny plot adds to the interest of this film, which contains many original stunts. That pretty Keystone comedienne appears again.

"The Rivals." (Komic. Sun., May 23.)—This is one of the most clever child comedies seen on the screen in some time. Three youngsters are rivals for the favor of a little girl.

The fighting boy has little trouble in disposing of his studious rival, but is beaten out by wealth in the form of a boy with a two-seated "push-mobile."

The studious boy wins out in the end while the two others are fighting, by a daring rescue of the heroine from a burning powder magazine. The acting of all the child players is unusually good. They are George Stone, Violet Radcliffe and Carmen de Rue.

"Eleven-thirty P. M." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., May 23.)—Excellent construction, setting and acting, combined with a strong detective story, make this a picture of decided merit. When a wealthy man is found murdered his daughter's sweetheart, whom the dead man has ordered off from the place, is accused.

The print of a mangled hand in some mud serves to identify the real slayer and save the innocent man. The guilty person's story results in an acquittal. In the cast are Al Filson, Eric von Ritzau, Loretta Blake, George Walsh, Sam De Grasse and Curt Rehfeld.

"The Cliff Girl." (Reliance. Mon., May 24.)—When it comes to a choice between the wild little girl of the mountains and his suspecting fiancee the geologist decides on the former. A fair story produced rather crudely, since much of the action as pictured is not well "motivated." The scenes and photography are very good.

"A Rightful Theft." (Majestic. Tues., May 25.)—Fierce rivalry exists between the villain, who holds a mortgage on the town church, and the deacon for the widow's favors. The deacon triumphs in a novel manner. While old in plot several unconventional situations and appropriate acting unite to make this reel a most pleasing drama with a very clever comedy element.

"Fairy Fern Seed." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., May 25.)—Through the treachery of a false friend the mother and her estranged daughter who married against her parents' wishes are never reunited. Years later her two twin grandchildren are brought together, ostensibly through a dream indulged in by the children and the old lady.

This is rather a disagreeable offering as the act of the false friend is inhuman in the first place, and her appearance in the rest of the picture is most repelling. The Thanhouser twins are introduced in the final scenes. The double exposure work is good. But the theme lessens the value of the entire film. Peggy Benke is in the cast.

"The Deadly Focus." (Reliance. Wed., May 26.)—A novelly constructed yarn depicting the manner in which a gunsmith reaps the benefit of his own misdeeds and meets death by a contrivance he had arranged for his assistant. This reel produces an unusually large amount of suspense, while its out-of-the-way situations lend to it a refreshing appearance.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 21." (Thurs., May 27.) Of national interest are the two events in which President Wilson figured while in New York City. He is shown reviewing the Atlantic fleet's land parade, and later the fleet is shown passing out of the harbor—two truly inspiring sights. The Harvard-Cornell track games are entertaining, while war scenes and a few other events that transpired in our own country complete the reel.

"It's an Ill Wind—." (Falstaff. Fri., May 28.)—A clothes line on which hang a number of articles of wearing apparel blows away from its posts on an apartment roof and sails over various sections of New York City, finally landing in the room of a poor family.

An original comedy which should go very well in the small towns that clamor for New York views. It is to be regretted that the negative is streaked with black in many of the scenes. However, the double exposure work is well executed, and the reel as a whole is most pleasing.

"Little Dick's First Case." (Majestic. Fri., May 28.)—A juvenile comedy in which the kids play detective, but meet with little success. This is good for those who like the child comedies.

"Gasoline Gus." (Komic. Sun., May 30.)—One of Ed. Dillon's choice comedy selections based on rivalry and the jitney bus. Chester Whitey, Elmer Booth and Fay Tincher carry the important parts. This may best be described as a thrilling comedy, as some of the stunts performed by the bus and the principals aided by trick photography are very startling. There is much that is original in this, which really is an excellent comedy.

"Out of Bondage." (Majestic. Two reels. Sun., May 30.)—The escape of a thief's daughter from her environment is the theme of this strong drama. Dorothy Gish does fine work as the girl.

The others in the cast are F. A. Turner, Walter Long, Richard Cummings and William Hinckley. A thief forces his daughter to marry his partner, but later tips off the police and sends the man to jail in a spirit of revenge. He takes his daughter to the country in the orange growing district, where he becomes an orange thief.

The girl's husband escapes and comes to the place, where he and the father kill each other in a revolver duel. The leather case holding her marriage license stops a bullet and saves the girl's life. Then she finds real happiness with a young orange grower.

"The Angel in the Mask." (Thanhouser. Sun., May 30.)—By the brains and quick wit of a girl living in the same boarding house the country boy is freed from an accusation of theft. This is interesting but improbable to the extreme, but this fact is counterbalanced by the nicely worked out story. Marguerite Snow and Boyd Marshall lead the cast.

"The Resolve." (American. Two acts. Mon., May 31.)—Reviewed at length in another part of this issue.

"Little Chrysanthemum." (Beauty. Tues., June 1.)—A young Japanese girl adopted by an American family learns that their son whom she has grown to love is engaged to another girl. Home-sick and disappointed she stabs herself. Displays clear photography and excellent technique. Neva Gerber and Webster Campbell play the leads.

"The Girl of the Sea." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., June 1.)—A reporter discovers that his orphaned sweetheart is heir to a large fortune, but we are in the dark as to whether she gets it or not. This contains the elements of a good story, but the ending is unsatisfactory in that it is not definite.

The direction has been rather poor in some places, while in others it is very good. For instance, people don't catch twelve inch fish in the surf, and again the snow stuff is bad, while on the other hand the newspaper office is the best we have seen in the films.

A short subject featuring Helen Badgley fills out the second reel of this. As the granddaughter of a grouchy old man she teaches him how to be charitable. This is called "The Baby Benefactor," and is a delightful little comedy drama.

"The Golden Rainbow." (American. Wed., June 2.)—A pretty story showing how the baby brother of a girl in a Western mining camp uncovers the plot which one of the rivals for the girl's hand had concocted to place the blame for a theft of gold dust upon the other. Vivian Rich, Harry von Meter and Jack Richardson are seen in this picture.

"The Conversion of Frosty Blake." (Broncho. Two reels. Wed., June 2.)—Frosty Bill is a gambler with few principles save trust in his own personality, which is fiercely domineering when perturbed. So when a much despised Sky Pilot lands in the godless Arizona town Bill immediately sets to work against him.

But the minister's powers are underestimated by the gambler, for in his sermons he makes Bill think of his boyhood days when he was the fond and obedient son of a staunch father and mother. Thereafter he supports him.

A day comes when Bill gets into a scrap with the Horned Toad from the next settlement. The Toad shoots at Bill but the parson receives the shot in his heart. He dies, but he leaves the whole town, including Bill and his girl, much reformed.

This is another William S. Hart picture, in which Mr. Hart renders the same yet magnetic and sympathetic performance as in other pictures of his direction. Louise Glaum is the girl and Charles Ray makes an appealing figure out of the minister. Lawlessness is predominant in all the scenes. The action is continually rapid and the interest never falters. The photography is clear and distinct throughout.

"Scales of Justice." (Domino. Two reels. Thurs., June 3.)—The wife of the busy judge encourages the attentions of another man. One night while she is in the company of this gentleman her husband returns unexpectedly. The lover exits via the fire escape, at the bottom of which a burglar has just murdered a policeman.

The escaping man is accused of the crime, but the judge knows the truth. He is confronted with the prospect of committing an innocent man to prison or laying bare the scandal regarding his wife, but he is saved from either alternative by the burglar confessing at the eleventh hour.

This is very strong, the final situation being most tense. The acting throughout is very good and the direction is praiseworthy. Walter Edwards is the crook, J. Barney Sherry the judge, Clara Williams his wife, and Frank Borzage the lover. The photography is good and the scenes appropriate in every sense.

"The Guiding Light." (American. Fri., June 4.)—Beautiful scenes of craggy shores and tumultous surfs produced by perfect photography make this a more than ordinarily good picture. The young wife of a lighthouse keeper induced to run away with a man from the city, risks her life by plunging overboard from a yacht to swim back to the lighthouse in order that there be a light to guide her husband home.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News, No. 38."—A reel of much interest, although almost exclusively devoted to happenings in this country. Some very fine views of the Kentucky Derby and a good animated cartoon are strong portions. For the various parts of the country scenes of local interest are added.

"Pathe News, No. 39."—The most important feature of this reel is the part showing the commanders of the Allied armies, at the front. This is the first of the pictures taken by Pathe for the French government to reach this country. In addition to news items from this country there is a fashion section, and a good animated cartoon of Col. Heeza Liar's latest exploits.

"A School in New Guinea." (Pathe. Split reel.)—An unusual sort of scenic picture showing life at a mission station in this great island of the Orient. In effective Pathecolor.

"Jaypore, the Rose City." (Pathe. Split reel.)—A Pathecolor scenic film of this famous city of British India. Interesting and instructive.

"The Police Dog." (Pathe. Three-quarter reel.)—This is one of the fine animated cartoons depicting the remarkable adventures of a police dog. In this story an Italian organ-grinder is using his tame monkey to rob a bank. The police dog goes on the trail, and after an exciting chase rounds up the monkey at the same time that his master captures the thief.

"Lonesome Luke." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Tad, the cartoonist, is the author of this comedy, but it is lacking in the originality which characterizes his drawings. Lonesome Luke is forced to take the place of a tame bear which is to perform with a lion in a country town. He decamps in his bearskin costume, and much excitement results.

"The Vanishing Cinderella." (Pathe. One reel.)—The familiar story of the girl reporter who starts out to interview a difficult subject, and in the course of the assignment tumbles into a romance. Well acted and staged.

"The Japanese Mask." (Pathe. Three reels.)—Made in the French studios of Pathe this picture is characterized by the elaborate settings and fine scenic effects always produced there. The story hinges on a Japanese mask, the tradition being that whoever gazes at it will die a violent death.

Two army officers are rivals for the hand of a girl. One of them is a crook and succeeds in having his rival sent to a military prison on a distant island. The innocent man escapes with a comrade who is subsequently killed. By changing clothes the other man leads the officers to think that he has died.

He also obtains some hidden treasure from directions left by his dead comrade. Thus wealthy and safe from arrest he returns to find that his rival has married the girl. Confronting the man he accuses him of his many crimes, and the shock is so great that the villain commits suicide after a long look at the fatal mask. The other man demolishes this terrible ornament, and thus the picture closes.

UNITED FILM SERVICE

"The Mystic Well." (Gaumont. One reel.)—Two imposters are discovered and forced to drink their own "mystic well" dry. Since the mixture of stuff in it is extremely filthy the comedy is rather unpleasant.

"The Word." (Lariat. Two reels.)—The leader of a band of highwaymen in the West reads a Bible in the loot, and the memories of his youth which it arouses lead him to go to a revival meeting. He thus avoids arrest, but surrenders voluntarily. He reforms and becomes a farmer and peaceful citizen. Later he imitates Jimmy Valentine by using his experience as a bandit to obtain money when some must be had at once.

"Man and the Law." (Ideal. Two reels.)—One man on a jury sticks out for acquittal in the case of a man being tried for murder. To convince the others he tells his own story. It is the familiar one of a country girl ruined by a city man. The girl was the juror's sister, and only the hand of Death saved the teller from himself being a murderer. The story is so convincing that a favorable verdict is returned.

"Aunt Matilda." (Luna. One reel.)—A Western picture in which some cowboys dress as cowgirls in order to help two of their number to elope with Aunt Matilda's nieces. The comedy is of the semi-slapstick sort and rather mildly humorous. Dot Farley plays the title role.

"Amateur Night." (Starlight. One reel.)—A typical Starlight picture. Two bums seek the living which they think the world owes them, by appearing as prize fighters on amateur night at a fistic club. The wildest sort of slapstick and rough-and-tumble work runs through the picture.

"The Near Capture of Jesse James." (Luna. One reel.)—A girl reads a Jesse James novel just as she is going to sleep. The rest of the film shows the adventures which she and her mother have in her dreams as two feminine bandits in the wild West.

"The Picture on the Wall." (Premier. Two reels.)—A fairly good plot in this drama is hurt by wretched construction and carelessness in other ways. For example a close-up which is used in rapid succession with a distant view shows the hero wearing a vest which mysteriously disappears in the distant view.

Besides this, there are at times too many close-ups. A jealous suitor on being rejected intercepts the letters which the girl writes home after her elopement with a young engineer. Later he goes to the city and wrecks her happiness by compromising her in her husband's sight. Of course the estranged couple and the girl's father are all brought together at the end of the story.

"Canned Curiosity." (Pyramid. Two reels.)—Edwin August and Ruth Blair are featured in this comedy. In order to prove the curiosity of their feminine friends two men send them carefully wrapped packages containing tin cans full of cigarette smoke.

Although marked not to be opened, all are at once investigated. Seeing that they have been fooled the girls fill the can with various sorts of smoke and send them back. Since the smoke in one of the cans is the same sort put into it the sender thinks he has discovered a woman who is not curious. An absurd, but fairly amusing story.

"Stepping Westward." (Ideal. Two reels.)—Lovers separated at the outbreak of the Civil War are brought together forty-four years later and are married in spite of difficulties which are put in their way. The drama is well acted and has pleasing settings.

"Love's Strategy." (Gaumont. Two reels.)—The son and daughter of business rivals fall in lóve much to their parents' disgust. After a foiled elopement they succeed in marrying by making their fathers think that the match will result in the inheritance of a fortune. Fairly well acted, and with an interesting plot.

"Heinie's Millions." (Starlight. One reel.)—One of the regulation Heinie and Louie slapstick pictures. Heinie and Louie strike it rich and proceed to spread their new found wealth about a large hotel. The film is of the most extreme rough and tumble type, and poorly done.

"Almost Lucky." (Superba. Split reel.)—A hobo steals an overcoat, and later runs away from a policeman who is trying to hand him a wallet which he supposes he has dropped. He throws away the coat, but it falls into the arms of another knight of the road who is soon discovered and the coat returned to its owner.

Trick photography and tiresome chases make up most of the footage. On the same reel is "Mixing the Cards," a comedy in which little sister changes the cards in the birthday gifts sent to her sister by her father and two suitors. As one of the latter has substituted a pipe for his rival's gift the result is rather surprising to everyone.

"Oh! You Mule." (Superba. Split reel.)—Medicine intended for a mule is accidentally given to a sick man, who at once goes out and eats grass and behaves in other ways as a mule should. A veterinary surgeon cures him. On the same reel is a very short comedy entitled "Copped." It shows the adventures of a hobo who steals a policeman's clothes while he is swimming and arrests him when he comes out. His fun is short lived as another officer soon appears.

"The Spider." (Grandin. Two reels.)—A mysterious burglar is getting away with some surprising thefts, and an amateur detective attempts to solve the problem. He discovers that the thief is his own fiance, but she has merely been amusing herself, and testing the detective ability of her sweetheart. Ethel Grandin is seen in the principal role.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Shattered Memories." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., May 25.)—A drama concerning the Civil War produced by Robert Leonard. In theme the offering differs decidedly from other pictures laid in the same time. A romance is rudely interrupted by the outbreak of the war.

While in service, Jasper is rendered unconscious by a blow on the head given him by a spy. When the war ends he does not return. He wanders about the country and is taken in by the spy who struck the blow. His mind still unbalanced, the Southerner discovers his identity after some forty years, and returning with him to his home town on Memorial day, the sight of his aged sweetheart restores his memory.

The originality of situations and incidents give this entire picture a most refreshing and pleasing aspect. It keeps one interested every minute of the time. The battle scenes, of which there are quite a few, are most realistic. The whole is well photographed. In the latter stages of the picture, showing many scenes in which the two old people are much in the foreground; the make-up is the only poor point in the picture. Ella Hall is seen playing opposite Mr. Leonard, while Harry Carter appears as the Southern spy.

"Animated Weekly, No. 168." (Wed., May 26.)—The opening of the racing season at Belmont Park, N. Y.; an automobile race in Columbus, O.; gun practice at Sandy Hook, N. J.; and the public school tooth brush drill in New York City are the most interesting features in this number. A large quota of war scenes have been selected for this week, while Hy Mayer holds his usual place in his usual way.

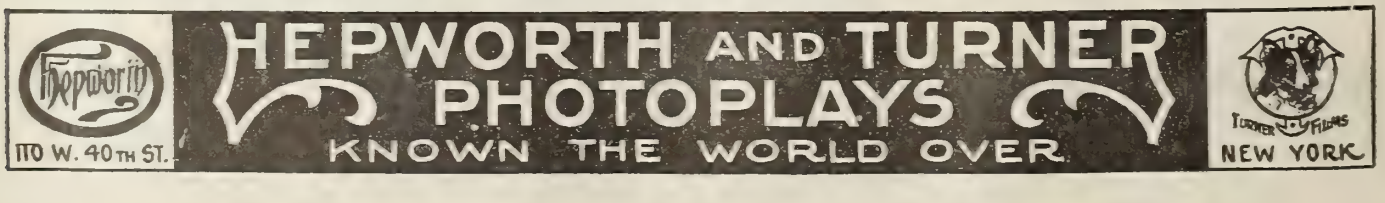
"The House of a Thousand Relations." (Victor. Two reels. Mon., May 31.)—The married couple are disgusted with boarding and try housekeeping, but their many relatives soon give this brilliant idea a huge black eye, and back they go to the boarding house.

We remember having seen this story many, many times in pictures, yet never with such suitable direction, humorously developed situations, and last but not least containing subtitles that are good for many laughs in themselves. Harry Myers produced the picture, playing opposite Rosemary Theby in the cast. Both do good work and are aided by a large cast playing the relatives in a most humorous style.

"The Alibi." (Imp. Mon., May 31.)—A man whose purse is empty plans to cast his wife's friend in a compromising position with her and so obtain money by blackmail. All goes well and the wife disarranges her hair and clothes to accuse the man when her husband enters. But the other man discounts all her words of a struggle by showing the husband and others the long ash on his cigar, proving that there was no struggle.

This is a novel ending to an interesting story, but should have been made clearer by a title. William Garwood is the man and Violet Mersereau the woman who attempts to compromise him.

"Hearts and Clubs." (Joker. Mon., May 31.)—An actor volunteers to get his friend into his house past his henpecking wife by dressing him as a woman applying for a position as a maid and bringing him in in his trunk. This is a fair comedy containing a lot of action not relative to the plot which does not appear until the reel is half over. Ernest Shields, Ed Boland and Buck Conners are three very funny drunks, and their antics in the first scenes of the picture are comical, much more so than the rest of the offering. Roy McCray directed this from a scenario by Tom Forman who appears in a small part besides.



"Under the Crescent." (Gold Seal. Two reels. First Chapter. Tues., June 1.)—Reviewed at length in a previous issue.

"Too Many Crooks." (Nestor. Tues., June 1.)—An eloping couple are mistaken for a pair of crooks by the detective and his aides, and consequently are chased through the streets, over house tops and on board ship, until finally they have a chance to explain; then the real ones are caught.

The prolonged pursuit over the house roofs is funny in its entirety, and the other scenes run these a close second. Lee Moran has the character comedy part of the detective and presents a comical appearance throughout the picture. Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon are the elopers.

"The Force of Example." (Rex. Tues., June 1.)—The young man reading of a dope fiend who murdered his sweetheart dreams that he does the same thing. Ben Wilson plays in this, supported by Dorothy Phillips and Joseph Girard. The story is rather foolish, but at the same time contains scenes of a tense nature. It is a novelty and may be appreciated by the admirers of gruesome offerings.

"The Silent Command." (Laemmle. Four reels. Wed., June 2.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Heart of Cerise." (Rex. Three reels. Thurs., June 3.)—One of Joseph De Grasse's offerings adapated from a play. The young leading lady of a stock company playing "Camille" having sipped too deeply of the bubbling wine takes refuge in a nunnery.

On her return to the company her lover and the rest refuse to believe her story and she becomes an outcast. She becomes a teacher, and at length is arrested for keeping school without a license. Her old lover appears at her trial, which turns out to be ultra-dramatic.

The judge is the man who has caused all her sorrow. His many cruel deeds are laid bare by the girl and her now reconciled lover, and all ends happily.

Pauline Bush, appearing as Cerise, has been offered a role of varying emotions to interpret. In the first part of the picture she is wild and gay, then later she becomes disheartened and sad. Her acting in both stages is to be commended. Joseph De Grasse himself plays her lover, while William Clifford is cast as the heavy. The scenes and photography of this are not to be criticised.

"A Life in the Balance." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., June 4.)—The old town doctor dies. His widowed daughter, whose child is ill, will not allow the new physician to examine the girl, because of a hatred incurred against him when he first started practising in the town in opposition to her father. Finally the young man forces his attentions on the child, locking the mother in the room, with the result that her eyes are opened.

King Baggot appears as the younger doctor. His popularity will perhaps overshadow the mediocre aspect of the rest of the picture. Arline Pretty is the girl. The subject gives one the impression that in one-reel form it would have been much better.

"The Judgment of Men." (Victor. Fri., June 4.)—Evidently a plea for woman suffrage, which paints all men as scoundrels. It is rather far fetched yet contains many touching scenes. Mary Fuller appears as a girl who, with her baby, has been deserted by her husband. She attempts suicide but is rescued by the police and jailed for causing the death of her child. All the way men are emphatically pictured as to blame.

"When They Were Co-Eds." (Nestor. Fri., June 4.)—Clandestine meetings are not encouraged by the janitor of the co-educational college, who rules the students with an iron hand. One of Al Christie's best burlesques with most humorous farcial situations from end to end.

Lee Moran as the janitor cuts a funny figure in every scene. His alarming nonchalance in entering the girls' bedroom at midnight is uproarious and done in such a way as to be not the least offensive. Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde are the lovers. Every scene in this is good for a laugh.

"The Smuggler's Lass." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., June 5.—This drama is laid in Ireland and is most remarkable for its scenic and photographic beauty. The plot is not really deserving two thousand feet of film, yet it is the artistry and clarity of the well chosen exterior locations which will carry the interest throughout the entire length of the picture.
